Most of the credit goes to Mack Sennett for the actual conception of the subject. It could have come from no other brain, unless it might have been a man like Eddie Cline. It is a story of a man entering the war. It might be a brief account of the story of "The Big Parade." At proper intervals throughout the war the soldier finds himself in the situation and the situation better than a song. The musical accompaniment is provided by a three-piece fife and drum corps whose blasts are those of a symphony orchestra.

The drum corps follows Gribbon all over Europe, and it seems to be intended to die. Gribbon's contribution to the musical at that point is a new war song. It is so effective that all the firing squad drop their guns and reach for handkerchiefs that will catch their tears. The prisoner returns to his trophy.

The finale is his scene with 3,000 soldiers. Both Germans and Americans join in a gigantic ensemble. They slap their thighs and raise their voices in the collective strains that has ever been brought to the screen. It is a clean piece of satirical fiction that sets a new record in the making of talking comedies.

THE BIG CHEESE

AN AESOP SOUND FABLE — No. 22

Pathé

Originality and amusing cartoons rate this one high among animated shorts. The touch and pugnacious looking dog lords it over the whole of dog town, turning pianos into accordions and tossing them out of windows. When the big battle with the cat champion comes along, the spectators lose their tempers after the fiddler. He is heard to Cromatopatuated music in the ring. Enough good laughs and old twits are included to make this a neat shot on the bill anywhere. Running time, 8 minutes.

AUDIO REVIEW No. 43

Pathé — Sound

This is an interesting review, opening with some exceptionally fine views of Gibraltar, on the southern coast of Spain. An indication is given of the mode of life of the inhabitants of the place, with the most effective scenery shots being those from the fortified galleries of the rock fortress. "Planetarium" pictures an odd shaped tower like a spire of which is exhibited the entire solar system on a dome. The heavenly bodies are reflected through a photo-telescope of enormous power and clarity, and are said to occupy the same positions on the dome that they do in the heavens. It makes an unusual and interesting feature. Several of the homes of the extremely wealthy which locate on the Via Venti City, conclude the review. The castle-like structure of Charles M. Schwab, and the old Wendell Mansion, which is a residence of $1,015,000 and is now worth $3,085,000, are featured in this portion of an excellent audio. Running time, 9 minutes.

ANOTHER NICE MESS

HAL ROACH COMEDY

MG M — Sound

Laurel and Hardy take over a mansion. The brothers trying to convince, stage this with an almost impossible series of situations; and yet, what the difference. It is partly slapstick, the remainder uncommonly good gags.

Thelma Todd, a reliably good actress for comedy roles, adds to the humor of many of the sequences. She plays the part of a good looking woman who wishes to rent the house occupied (but not owned) by the comedy team.

For one reason on earth Stan Laurel presupposes himself out as a butler when the callers ask to see a butler. For no greater reason he paxes himself off as a man engaged to request a maid. That is how foolish and unnecessary the plot is. But yet the thing is dain funny.

In the preview, a character, The Big Theatre whooped and shouted at the gags that were given the screen by the two comedians under the eagle eye of Director James Parrott.

TRAFFIC TANGLE

A FOLLY COMEDY

Pathé — Talking

Nat Carr buys himself a new car, and takes the family out camping, but a traffic officer and two motorcycle policemen prevent him from getting very far. A good gag is shown when Carr's dialog in the role of Mr. Gimberg is quite amusing and his actions are equally so. Two very interesting Billings, contribute their share with an ease rather unusual in child actors. Dot Farley is the wife who says the right thing at the wrong time to complicate the plot, while Bud Jamieson is the traffic officer who takes the falls and helps Nat Carr register most of his comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.

AUDIO REVIEW — No. 37

Pathé — Talking

This number of the Review opens with a little propaganda for the wellknown exponent of the "absurd" culture, the Englishman. He is pictured at his home near Enfield, N. J., and speaks for a few minutes on the value of good health, the theme being that a man is as old as he feels. Then, for some reason or other, he sings "When the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold," accompanied by the piano by his daughter. Excellent color tone in green is achieved in the hit called "Cleopatra's Flower," which exposes the world's newly discovered island Egypt on the waters of the Nile. The scenic effect here is very fine.

THE GLORY OF SPAIN

No. 5 — VAGABOND ADVENTURE SERIES

Pathé — Talking

Tom Terris features a Spanish bull fight in the latest of the Vagabond series. Plenty of fast action, with a punch finish to the fight when the bull tosses the matador and he is carried out, should carry this number over with the patrons. Panoramic and closeup shots of the enthusiastic crowd in the amphitheatre add to the effectiveness of the picture. From here, the Vagabond series leaves the Valencian village and its beautiful gardens, where excellent photography ends the feature pleasantly. This has some real action. Running time, 10 minutes.
J. C. Jenkins—His Colym

Dear Herald-World:

We don't want to be considered as a press agent for the Fox organization. We are not. We can't be a press agent for a dog fight, and the Fox organization don't know that there is any such guy in the world as we are. We're here nevertheless and we are going to put into practice what our father hammered into us when we were a kid; viz., always give credit where credit is due.

Fox has made some bad pictures, everybody knows that and so does Fox, and Fox is going to make some more bad ones and Fox won't admit it, but we will and save Fox the humiliation. Now from the foregoing you have no doubt concluded that we are not very strong for Fox, but that's because you are not as well acquainted with us as you should be, and you ought to be ashamed of yourselves for neglecting so important a duty, for to know us is as pleasant a sensation as scratching yourself against a post when you have the seven-year itch, and the most of you know how that feels.

Some time ago we made the statement in this Colym that the Fox organization was entitled to adopt the Buick slogan, "When Better Pictures Are Made Fox Will Make 'Em." Since then we have seen "Sunny Side Up," "They Had To See Paris," "High Society Blues," "On Your Back," "The Lone Star Ranger," "So This Is London," "Common Clay," and a number of others, we are still sticking to the statement. And now comes along "The Big Trail" and "Up the River." We haven't seen "THE BIG TRAIL" yet, but we have seen "Up the River," and that is what we want to tell you about, so as to carry out our father's teachings.

"Up the River" is a picture built around a prison story and is (played in the main) by convicts in the penitentiary. In fact, the most of the action takes place within the confines of that institution, and from this year we will conclude that each spool of film will be packed with rough stuff that will make your wife and daughters wonder why you brought them to see it. But such is not the case, no, indeed, Abner, such is not the case, for John Ford, the director, localhoster that he is, and there isn't an offensive expression, nor a nasty suggestion in the entire picture. We will take off our hat to John Ford and shoot 18 holes of golf in our B. V. D.'s if necessary to prove our contention that John Ford has directed the best prison comedy that ever came to the stage or screen. Now, we could make it stronger than that, but it isn't necessary. What we hope is, that the Fox organization, as well as all other producers, will learn from this picture that what the public wants is clean entertainment, and if they do, John Ford will be entitled to a monument that will make the Statue of Liberty look like an asparagus stalk.

Turkey, as "Louie," is a lovely, tough whelp (if there could be such a character), and you will like him in spite of the fact that he is up for ten years. Warren Hyneman, as "Danemora Dan," is a mixture of that, horse thief, porch climber, fence and everything else you can think of, except a bigamist. He is up for life when he ought to have been hung, but when you see him you will vote him about the best guy you know of.

Claire Lake, as Judy, got in bad by trusting too much in a lowdown whelp who was so slick he could teach a Sunday school class and get away with it. Judy was such a sweet, lovable character that at times a little salt water will trickle off the end of your nose and you will cry for yourself for crying at a criminal.

Humphrey Bogart, as Steve, was in love with Judy (he'd have been a champ if he hadn't been), and he had been "framed" and sent up by a court that had never heard of the Chicago system, and that's how he came to be in the penitentiary. The girls will all fall for Steve.

The billing says that Joan Blondell and Sophy would steal a red hot cook stove, and we guess she would. Anyhow, she could steal us at thirty miles an hour, but we don't think she would have been able to do it until after dark. It was the easiest stealin' she ever had. William Collier, Sr., as "Old Pop," is the manager of one of the prisoners' ball teams, and you ought to see the ball game they stage in the penitentiary yard.

When you see this picture, and if you don't like it, don't say anything to us about it or you will start a helluva argument. What we are interested in most is whether or not producers of motion pictures will learn anything from this picture. If they do, that monument for John Ford won't be half tall enough.

Some scientist made the statement that cannibals won't eat people who use tobacco in any form. Well, who wants to give up smoking just to please some durned low-down cannibal, anyhow?

Up at the Orpheum theatre last night we saw a picture they called "A Lady Surrenders," with Conrad Nagel and some other folks and two or three women. The picture was well named, all right, for about all one girl did was to surrender. She carried a white flag around with her and every time Conrad saw it he ran over to her and captured her, and then would engage a kissing match that would start a fire between the tomcats out in the alley.

We saw more of the Jones family out on the golf grounds Tuesday than we supposed there were in the whole world, and every guy in the bunch claimed his first name was Bobby. The committee having the tournament in charge made the serious mistake of giving us too big a handicap. When we walked out on the grounds with a brassie, mushie and putter, we heard one of the committee say, "Give that old guy plenty of handicap, he can't play this course under a week, anyway." So they did, and we came home with the best prize in the bunch, and since then that committee has been threatened with violence. Whenever they give us a handicap it makes us feel just like stealing cheese from a blind sow.

Ted Mendenhall, Paramount manager, drove a ball in a sand trap at 3:30, and at 6 o'clock he phoned the office to send out a spotlight and six lanterns, and the record shows that he made that hole in four hours and twenty-seven minutes.

Micky Larson of Oakland, Neb., wouldn't play because he said when he left home he promised his wife that he would be very careful of his company.

Bill Bowker of Dunlap, Ia., came out to the grounds with a long-handled mallet and said he understood we were going to play croquet. Bill is awfully strong on croquet.

When Bob Greenblatt went to drive off at No. 1, somebody made some remark about Universal service and Bob defiled his club and the argument was on—and was still on when we left the grounds at night. We are betting on Bob.

Denny Dunlop was still wading Papio creek looking for a ball he shot off of No. 1 tee at 1:55. At No. 3 tee Charley Williams, president of the MP T O, left the grounds because he said it was too great a strain on his religion, and Earl Miller spoke up, kinda nasty like, and said that was the first he knew he had any. It was a great game and we'd like to tell you more about it, but George says to ring off, and when George says to ring off, he means ring off. Well, anyhow, we'll betcha that that committee has learned something about handicaps.

Remember Youth or Lose B. O. Of Tomorrow, Declares Baker

Universal Buys Three More Broadway Play Successes—Weather Delays on “Fightin’ Caravans” Requires Substitution of McLaglan for Gary Cooper in Paramount’s “Dishonored”

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—In the present day swing toward sophisticated product, the producers must not lose sight of the juvenile audience, warns C. Graham Baker, associate executive of Universal. He declared that to permit the youth of today to lose its fondness and appreciation of motion pictures will imperil the box office prosperity of tomorrow. He urged the advertisement of pictures having a special appeal to children.

“It seems advisable, more particularly now,” he said, “that pains should be taken by both producer and exhibitor to inform their patrons of pictures which are particularly attractive to the little ones. They cannot afford to let the adolescent tastes die down the motion picture from its list of preferences, and there are a hundred other interests to engage them.”

Del Ruth in East

Through the courtesy of Warner Brothers, Roy Del Ruth will be permitted to direct “Mendel, Inc.” for Paramount, it was announced this week. Del Ruth already has departed for the East and will make the picture at the Paramount Long Island studios.

U Buys Three Plays

Three stage plays of the current Broadway season have been added by Carl Laemmle, Jr., to his list of picture play purchases during the past month. “Apron Strings,” “The Up and Up” and “Many a Slip” are the vehicles. Six original stories, now being written by the Universal City staff scenarists, soon will go into production.

Three English pictures and four foreign versions are in production at the moment. These are “Dracula,” with Bela Lugosi; “Resurrection,” with Lupe Velez and John Boles; and “The Boudoir Diplomat,” which is a special.

Dorothy Christie Added

Dorothy Christie, blonde screen beauty, has been added to the cast of “The Modern Wife,” which Holbert Henley will soon direct for Universal. Genevieve Tobin and Conrad Nagel are in the feature roles. Miss Christie recently completed “Playboy of Paris” with Maurice Chevalier.

McLaglen in “Dishonored”

Because of weather delays in the shooting of “Fightin’ Caravans,” on location for Paramount, Gary Cooper will not play in “Dishonored.” To wait for him to complete the product would cause a serious delay in the production schedule and Victor McLaglen, of “What Price Glory” and “The Cock-Eyed World,” has been picked for the role by Paramount executives. He has been loaned by Fox.

Paramount Busy

Paramount is busy. Acquisition of four new stories and plans for the launching of six feature pictures during the next 30 days at the Hollywood and New York studios were announced by B. P. Schulberg, managing director of production. In addition to the six soon to start, eight are now in production and another eight are being edited.

Craft Leaves Universal

Following a period of many years association with Universal, William J. Craft, director of a score of box office successes for that organization, this week tendered his resignation, to take effect immediately. During recent years his successes have included “The Little Accident” and “Painting the Town.”

They’re Co-featured

Walsh, Bankhead, most popular American actresses in England, and Clive Brook, one of the most popular English actors in Hollywood, will be co-featured in Frederick J. Jackson’s comedy, “Her Past,” for Paramount. Production will be started in January.

But What Did He Do the Next Day?

(Hollywood, Nov. 6.—There are more ways to eliminate a bowwow than choking him with butter—and there is more than one way to salve a cop—at least this cop. A noted seller of screen stories proved it here the other night when two policemen stopped him for a traffic violation.

He never got as far as the police station.

One of the policemen, who had been insisting on taking him to the jail, pricked up his ears, forgot all about making a pinch, and said:

“Drive on, buddy. I’ve just written a story and I’ll be in to see you tomorrow about selling it.”

Wants Old Names But New Faces?

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—The production manager and a director were discussing the casting of a certain role in a current production soon to be shot at one of the major studios:

“How about so-and-so for it?” suggested the director, naming a man not well known on the screen as yet.

“No good,” said the production manager. “He hasn’t a box office name. We want box office names.”

“Well, then,” pursued the director, “how about so-and-so for the part? He’s been a good drawing card for years. Let him win the girl in the picture.”

“Can’t use him!” snapped the production manager. “He’s never played a part where he won a girl! He always lost ‘em. The public wouldn’t stand for it.”

“It’s all very clear to me now,” replied the director, with a puzzled expression on his features, “you want old names with new faces.”

Foreign Director with Keen Ear Solves Sound Problem, Says Paul Stein

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Foreign directors face no handicap in American talking pictures, providing they have an ear for languages and sound, according to Paul L. Stein, Paramount director, who is guiding Constance Bennett in her new starring picture, “Sin Takes a Holiday.”

Born in Vienna and a product of German stage and films, Stein speaks English with a decided accent. Yet he is able to coach players in correct pronunciation and accent.

“My ear is more adaptable than my tongue,” Stein explained. “I learned correct English when I was a boy, but my stubborn tongue never was able to acquire the accent of the language. At the same time, I can recognize the faults of others.”

Tom Mix III; Believed Ailing from Old Injuries

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Tom Mix was rushed to the hospital Monday and preparations were made to operate on the noted equestrian. His ailment, physicians and surgeons said, was a result most likely of injuries he has received in several years ago in accidents which occurred while making motion pictures. The case is a mysterious one, however, they said. A series of laboratory examinations and X-ray pictures are being made to determine how the trouble may be remedied.

Metropolitan’s Gateman Dead

HOLLYWOOD.—Edward Baker, known to thousands as the gentle gateman at Metropolitan Sound Studio, died suddenly at his home October 29, following an attack of acute indigestion.
What Would It Be For Two Specials? (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—One Clune, RKO director, when asked how he covered:

"When I direct slapstick comedies, call me Eddie Clune.

"When I direct just ordinary program features, Edward Clune is my name.

"But when it's a special production like 'Hook, Line and Sinker,' call me Edward Frances Clune, Esq., if you please."

Foreign Version of Each English Dialog Film Is Metroscope

50 Foreign Talkers on Schedule: Majority In German, French and Spanish (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Production of foreign language pictures on the basis of past Hollywood English versions will be under way within a month at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios it was announced this week by Arthur Loew, in charge of foreign operations at the studio, now here for a conference with Louis B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg and other production executives. There will be 30 foreign versions during the coming year under this schedule. There are 46 foreign workers now under contract and there are about 15 more on the way to Culver City to begin work immediately. The foreign versions will be more than double production at the studio and probably will involve a construction program.

The majority of the foreign versions will be in French, German and Spanish. Both feature length pictures and short subjects of all kinds will be reproduced. Permanent stock companies, complete in themselves from scenario writers to cutters, will be organized, according to Loew.

"Un six months ago the percentage of houses in other countries wired for sound was small," Loew declared. "But now, in South America particularly, there has been a tremendous jump in sound installations. "For a while foreigne were glad to hear the voices of English stars speaking English language, but this has made them realize that the product be given them in their native language and that each person in the east act his part properly.

"Many noted American stars can be used in foreign pictures because of their versatility in the matter of language," he said.

Gavin Gordon May Get Role in New Garbo Film (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Because of his success in his part opposite Greta Garbo in "Romance," Gavin Gordon may again appear as her leading man in her next M.G.M. product, according to a statement from Gordon's representatives. Since "Romance," Gordon has been featured in "The Silver Horde" and "The Great Meadow."

RKO Plans Year and Half On Shooting of "Creation" (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—According to announcements made this week, RKO plans spending a year and a half shooting "Creation," now under preparation at the studio under the direction of Harry Hoyt.

Mormon Film to Be Produced In Fort Lee Metropolitan Plant

Nancy Carroll Production Starts Soon at Paramount Studio—Clara Bow Completes "No Limit" Sequences—Board of Review Picks Five of Eight Vitaphone Varieties (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A Mormon picture is understood to be ready to go into production at the Metropolitan Studios located at Fort Lee, New Jersey. The title is reported as "Corianton" and the producers are believed to be operating under the name Corianton Company. Actual filming is scheduled for next week at the plant west of the Hudson river which is rented out to producing companies as their needs require a location which the Jersey studio can provide.

Paramount at its Eastern studio in Astoria is still marking time till next Monday when the Nancy Carroll picture goes into production. Following the filming of a short subject, "The New Religion," on regular 35 mm footage, Arthur Loew is proceeding with a 65 millimeter wide film. This is understood to be entirely for the purpose of notifying the results obtained with the new method. No plans have been made for the release of this subject, though the standard Paramount product will be distributed in the ordinary manner.

Philips Holmes in East

Philips Holmes has left Hollywood and is due back in New York very soon, to play opposite Nancy Carroll in "Stolen Heaven." This will be the first picture to be made in the East by this star, who is the son of Taylor Holmes.

Charles Ruggles already has reported for work on the Long Island film, following personal appearances in Boston and other cities. He has been assigned a feature part in "Strictly Business," the Claudette Colbert starring vehicle scheduled to go into production very shortly under the direction of Dorothy Arner. His last work in the East was in "Rhinestone High," completed several months ago.

Clara Bow Returns to Coast

Clara Bow is on her homeward way to Hollywood, following the completion of filming of the New York sequences of her next picture, "No Limit." Mary Brian also has returned to Hollywood, playing the ingénue role in "The Royal Family," filmed at the Astoria studio.

At the Warner Vitaphone Varieties studio in Brooklyn, three more short features have been added to the list of productions already run off this season. "On the Job," which was directed by Roy Mack, has for its cast Ed Cudee, Frank Orth, Florence Vernon and Walter Dreher.

"Major to Order" features Eleanor Sholer, Paul Macdon and Bob Lynn. Alf Goulding directed from a script by Burnett Herschey of the studio scenario staff.

Board Selects Five Varieties

Only Minor Changes in Sound Recording Likely For a While, Says Dreher (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Revolutionary changes in talking picture sound recording are not in sight, according to Carl Dreher, chief of the sound department at RKO. Dreher, who has just returned from New York City following conferences with R.C.A Photophone engineers, declares that the present system of sound-recording seems likely to continue indefinitely in its general effects.

"Contemplated improvements are but minor to the system as a whole and are designed to improve quality and lower production costs," Dreher said.

He named the greatest improvement in sight was a portable R.C.A Photophone which would make it possible to record sounds and dialogue in inaccessible places, where ponderous booths and recording trucks could not be taken.

Warner Office Building on Coast to Cost Half Million (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Warner Brothers, although their plants are at a standstill at present, are expanding their theatre holdings. It was announced this week that they are constructing a height limit office building at the intersection of Wilshire boulevard and Western avenue at a cost of more than $500,000. The entire production organization soon will be concentrated at Burbank.

Will Rogers to Star for Fox for Two More Years (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.—Following pre-views of "Lightnin,'" Will Rogers has been given a new contract with the Fox Film Corporation under which he will appear in Movietone productions for the next two years. A Connecticut Yankee soon to go into production, will be Rogers' last picture under the old agreement.
The Sound Box

HOLLYWOOD.

Mr. Ernie Rovelstad, Quigley Publishing Co., 407 South Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Ernie:

Am I having a nice time in this town? A question to ask me! I could kill somebody. Probably the one big reason I left New York was because I got sick and tired of their digging up the streets. Eighth Avenue in New York has been a first line trench since 1927.

I came here and what did I find. A whole town. Nothing ripped up, no holes in the ground, a nice, entire city. And what happened, I ask you? The minute I set foot in Hollywood they start digging. Millions of riveters, all under my window, tearing up perfectly good streets all day and all night.

What's the matter with these people. The streets were all right. Are they digging for oil? And the way they're digging! First, they hire a thousand people to dig on one block. In three hours they have dug ditches twelve feet deep and put red lights and signs, "Get out here," written very crudely, all around the trench. Now, with the place dug up so prettily, they immediately fire nine hundred and ninety-seven of the men, and start fixing the place with three persons. One of these is the foreman, another is the timekeeper, and the other has the shovel but no badge. And he'll always be lighting his pipe.

The noise and dust is one thing, but they fix you nastier than that. You try to turn on the faucet in the morning—nix, no water. You go outside and beg the watchman to turn on enough to give the goldfish, and what does he do? He says for you to buy a cat. "Why a cat," you ask him. "Won't the cat want to eat?" "The cat can eat the goldfish," he says.

You get home from a hard day's work and press the button for electricity. No luck. There's no one outside, the watchman is drinking beer five miles away. You finally steal one of the city's red lights and undress by that, going to sleep with the happy thought that you'll be sent to jail for robbery the first thing in the morning.

Telephone service is the first thing cut off. It seems they're afraid you'll put in a call for help. But the monthly bill goes on, yes sir, you're a subscriber. If you only had a telephone you could call up and stop the service. If you could only cross the street you'd go to the drug store and buy a stamp so that you could write a letter to the telephone company telling them to call off the service. But you can't cross the street.

Does anybody know of any place where there's no Chamber of Commerce; where they're not building new streets, or reservoirs, or laying car tracks, or repaving sidewalks, or stringing telegraph poles, or putting up street lamps—where there's a city that's perfectly content to snooze along just the way it is, without improvement?

Wire, don't write this department. The department will be standing on the corner of Vine and Melrose, on the right side of the street, just where he's been standing since May. Doggonit, I can't cross the street. I'm waiting for them to fix it.

Respectfully,

NORMAN KRASNA.

Clinton Wunder Starts Academy Good Will Trip; Schedule of Talks Ready

ABOUT FACE

"I don't give a damn whether I end up in a sanitarium or not, as long as I make a success of 'Resurrection' for Edwin Carewe. He forced me to take the part of Natasha Mas- lova after I had refused three times. I didn't think I was equal to it and to tragedy."

Lupe Velez speaking—the fiery little Mexican whose comedy and tragedy charts with Chase until Don Fairbanks selected her in "The Goncho." Lupe Velez, who came out of Mexico at 14 and now at 20 is essaying one of the greatest roles ever written.

She has just finished a rehearsal with the kindly and gentlegruff, the gentle and yet driv- ing Edwin Carewe. Tears were streaming down her cheeks, marring her makeup.

"I don't have to make myself cry," she told me. "Not in the part I have to play. I mere- ly have to think of the girl I'm portraying—the tragedy of her life—and I cry naturally."

"I am a misfit among a misfit country girl. Following that I can to repay Eddie for what he has done for me and what he is doing. I used to be a claque. Now, I'm not trying to be an actress instead. Eddie has lived this story for many years—as a silent picture it was one of the greatest pictures ever made."

"Now he's making a talking version. He has chosen me for the lead. No matter what happens, I'm going through with it. The part almost has killed me—it's the most difficult I've ever undertaken—but it is the only one I've ever enjoyed. The only one which has meant anything to me."

Lupe, the firey one, selected by Carewe because she has the hot Latin temper and the spark of flame which the part of Maslova needs, has had a hard row to hoe, although today she has a home in Beverly Hills, automobiles and servants. She is the daughter of an opera singer and a colonel in the Mexican Army. At 14, she shook the dust of the little Mexican town of San Luis Potosi from her feet and found a job as a shop girl.

Carewe is delighted with the work she has been doing in the production, which is costing Universal a cool million. For the silent ver- sion, which Carewe directed with Dolores Del Rio and Rod LaRogue in the leads, the in- vestment was approximately $35,000.

"It may seem peculiar and unusual that I've twice picked Mexican girls for a Russian role," Carewe said. "The reason is that they have more of the divine spark than Americans or those from across the Atlantic. They have an ability to live parts and to portray them."

"I had six women selected for the role, but I wanted Lupe. When she refused me twice, I was broken-hearted. I finally won her over, however, and she has developed so rapidly that even I, knowing her tremendous ability, am amazed."

One job which Lupe has faced is that of changing her voice three times in the course of the picture. She has at first the voice of an unsophisticated country girl. Following her seduction by the prince, the role being played by John Boles, her voice is that of a vodka-drinking princess.

In the end, she must speak with the dead accents of a broken woman.

"I've the greatest combination in the world for the making of an excellent picture, and I'm more happy about the situation than I've ever been before," Carewe barks.

"The stage can get away with an evening of sparkling dialog," he said. "There are perhaps five outstanding legitimate stage producers who each year are sold mainly through brilliancy of lines."

"The 407 has been here; however, we must do about 600 pictures. Dialog is bound to be weak, and we must bolster it with pantomime, which is the true art of the motion picture."—CHURCHILL.

SOUND REPRODUCTION

F. H. RICHARDSON on PROJECTION

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 61.—(A) Explain in full detail just why a hydrometer reading indicates the exact state of charge and discharge of a storage battery, (b) to what is battery trouble almost invariably due, and (c) whether or not it is possible to abuse batteries by neglecting them, without causing damage to the batteries themselves and to sound results.

THE CAPITAL CITY OF FILMDOM

[Until further notice, all communications to this department should be addressed to F. H. Richardson, 43—28 Thirty-ninth place, Long Island City, N. Y.]

LOS ANGELES.

Our next stop is what might be termed the high spot of the trip—the capital city of Filmdom. And right here in the beginning let me also compliment the motion picture projectionists of Los Angeles. When they start to do anything, they do the job right. We were entertained by the lads in the same hotel which was headquarters for the A convention—that is to say, we had two magnificent rooms in that great inn, with meals provided. What time we were permitted to spend in those two rooms, however, didn't amount to much, except when we were asleep.

Immediately after our arrival, we were taken in charge by Business Manager T. H. Eckerson and President Earl Hamilton of the local No. 150. It seems that the matter of entertainment had been delegated to Mr. Eckerson, who, let it be said, both knew his job and did it well.

Among other things, we visited the Ashcraft plant and several of the large theatres. One of the projection rooms visited, the Panthages, Hollywood, is the finest, most complete projection installation I have ever viewed. (A description of it was published in last Better Theatres.) Another remarkably pleasing example is the Paramount Public, which is in downtown Los Angeles. It is eight years old, but the room is entirely out of the ordinary. Its walls are of brown tiles about four inches square, separated by perhaps three-eighths of an inch of mortar. The ceiling is of rough plaster, finished in a very pleasing dark blue. The floor is of cork, laid in squares of about five inches. It shows almost no wear at all after eight years of use. It is a very easy floor on the feet.

Chief Projectionist Hamilton (president of the Los Angeles local), has a private office fitted up with a large mahogany desk, easy chairs, etc. In fact, the plant is as complete as you would expect to find in any of the newer large deluxe theatres. Also, I might add that the brown walls, blue ceiling and brown floor gave a remarkably pleasing aspect to the room. Oh, yes, I almost forgot to say that the switchboard is of white marble veined in gray. It is set in the rear wall, where it is highly ornamental and, of course, equally useful. The ventilation of the room is taken care of by a separate blower fan. There are three Super-Simplex projectors, a Fernogramsizer F7, and other equipment including what is a marble-lined toilet and wash room and a well equipped workroom. Hamilton is assisted by George Evans, Earl Bauer, and Ray Connors.

Bluebead School Resumed

Well, gentlemen, here we are again with a Bluebead school question, with which this "school" of sound-projection is resumed. For the benefit of our many new subscribers, I will say that in the Bluebead School, from one to four questions are asked each week, to which answers are very desirable. The best answer will be published four weeks after publication of the question. In the event no correct answer is received, I will answer the question myself, or have some sound or projection work done, with a laboratory supply the answer.

If your answer is incorrect, no one but we will know it, so come on, gentlemen, set in the game and let's see how far you can go. Address all answers as follows:

F. H. Richardson, 43—28 Thirty-ninth place, Long Island City, N. Y.

During the evening we went over to the famed Chinese theatre in Hollywood. We really went to the Chinese to renew acquaintance with the inventor of the Weaver Douser, F. E. Weaver, who is chief projectionist at that theatre. The projection room is rather crowded with equipment. It has three Super-Simplex projectors equipped with the new Ashcraft "600" super-high intensity lamps. The lamp house almost hides the projector. The sound is handled by Western Electric equipment. The sound is on a separate film, which is run on a "dummy." The consensus of the Chinese theatre projection staff and those projectionists of other theatres in which this method is used, is that it is a decided improvement on the method in which both the sound and the picture are reproduced from one film, which opinion I endorse.

The projection staff of the Chinese consists of F. E. Weaver, chief; R. D. Babcock, Dave Koskoff, Al Lick and Art Schroeder. I might add, as a bit of interesting information, that the projectors are equipped with a small blower fan from which the air is conveyed through a flexible metal pipe ending at the top of the cone plate, whence the air passes down over the aperture. In the opinion of Chief Projectionist Weaver, this has the effect of removing fully 75 per cent of the heat. The installation is very simple, not at all costly and is highly effective. Some of you old department fans may remember that this particular thing was recommended by me many times in past years. Equipment manufacturers, however, did not adopt the suggestion, and as a result they have suffered great inconvenience from the war, which projector mechanism frames and parts, and the industry has sustained huge losses in film, to say nothing of the box office losses caused by injury to the show. As a result of bucked film, all of which might have easily been averted had my suggestions been heeded years ago.

I was present at the Los Angeles meeting, including a goodly number of theatre managers, and, I was informed, significant owners and officials attended. After the show, I gave the audience to be both interested and receptive. Also, the opinion was expressed by union members and officials afterward, that the thing had distinct value to both projectionists and exhibitors of Los Angeles.

"Way up in San Francisco I had been told about R. H. McCullough, Supervisor of Projection of Fox West Coast Theatres, which covers the entire territory west of the Mississippi river. I was told that if I got in touch with McCullough on arrival in Los Angeles, he could open all motion picture gates in that city. Later, B. A. Entwistle, Los Angeles business representative, spoke words of praise of this same individual. Later still a phone message came from McCullough, and it was arranged that he, Friend Daughter and myself take dinner together. We have just returned from a three-hour trip in Friend McCullough's company, and I heartily endorse brother Eckerson's opinion. In McCullough we have one of the finest men to be found in the whole field of projection.

McCullough showed me something which I had never thought to be possible. He is projecting a picture at the Fox Carthay Circle theatre here in Los Angeles with a 25-degree projection angle, and there is no distortion of the picture at all. The plan was worked out by Supervisor McCullough because of the fact that when they installed wide film in that theatre, they found the distortion to be so great that it could not be projected at that angle. It would cost around $5,000 to move the projection room downstairs, so Supervisor McCullough got himself busy and evolved a plan which entirely eliminated the distortion, and that at absolutely small expense. To the front of the projection lens he attached two ten-degree prisms, the thick side down. The bottom of these prisms are hinged, but the top may be moved together or farther apart, and the top prism is allowed to lower the top of the picture, or raise the bottom, according to which prism is moved. There is no effect set up, with regard to definition

3 More Officials Are Added to Staff Of RCA Photophone

Charles J. Ross, executive vice-president of RCA Photophone, Inc., has announced appointment of three new officials to positions with the company. E. J. Schneider, formerly with RCA Victor and the Radio Corporation of America, has been named comptroller. J. M. Knaut will be general auditor and H. D. Colvill assistant general auditor. The two latter men have been with the company for a number of years.

E. E. Peek Put in Charge Of Sound Installations For Film Speaker Plant

The Film Speaker Company in Oklahoma City has engaged E. Eldon Peek as sound engineer. Peek was formerly in charge of the electrical research laboratory at Oklahoma A. & M. College, Stillwater.

He is said to be an authority on sound, amplification and acoustics. His articles in scientific journals have gained considerable recognition.

Miles Reproducer Issues Pocket Size 1931 Catalog

The Miles Reproducer Company has issued a new 1931 pocket size catalog in addition to its standard M50 and M51 catalogs, recently published. The pocket size sales number covers dynamic horn units exponential trumpets, horns, baffle, microphones, microphone stands and other accessories.

Berliner Acoustic System At the Capitol in Chicago

The Capitol theatre in Chicago is being equipped with the Berliner Acoustic System. This is one of the principal theatres in the Coston Circuit.

Another recent installation was in the George M. Cohan theatre in New York, where British International is showing its English releases.

25 Scientific Films, 6 Talkers, Shown at Medical Congress

Evidence that motion pictures are rapidly establishing themselves as valuable vehicles for scientific study is found in the fact that 25 different films were presented at the recent annual meeting of the American College of Surgeons in Philadelphia. Seven exclusive-ly motion picture programs were given. Six of the 25 films shown were talkers.

William F. Kruse, head of the educational department of Bell & Howell, Chicago, says films have arrived at a point not only of widespread use but of official recognition. He points out that Dr. William Ernest Miles, noted British surgeon, gave motion pictures splendid recognition when he showed his three reels of 16 mm. film depicting the technical employed in the cancer operation bearing his name.

RCA “Mobile Talkie” Truck Shows U Film In British Theatres

RCA Photophone and Universal Pictures are cooperating on a project in England which makes it possible to show Universal’s “All Quiet on the Western Front” in unwired theatres.

Photophone engineers have devised a sound truck carrying two portable RCA sound sets. The machine travels from town to town. All specials by Universal are to be shown in this manner.

The body of the truck is mounted upon the chassis of an English motor truck which has an electric generator coupled to an electric motor on the rear axle. The body is specially designed, 27 feet long and of sufficient height to carry 12-sheet posters on either side. It houses two RCA Photophone Small Theatre types of sound reproducing apparatus. The exterior of the van is painted royal blue and the interior yellow.

Neth Offers Series of Foreign Talkers to Vary Entertainment

A step toward greater variety in entertainment has been taken by Neth's State theatre in Columbus, which has undertaken the presentation of a series of all-dialed foreign attractions. Films to be shown under this policy include talkers in French, Spanish, German, Italian, Polish, Swedish, and Portuguese. The State is located adjacent to the campus of Ohio State University, giving it a good field from which to draw patronage to such pictures.

The first of the foreign talkers, a French version of "The Big Pond," has already been presented. Two short subjects, "Molesson" and "Clinique Musial," are also in French, augmented the feature.

John McCormick, manager of the State, reports an excellent turnout. Only one performance was shown. The series of foreign programs will continue through the winter, with a performance every Saturday at 10 a.m.

Newspapers have been unanimous in their acclaim of McCormick's plan, reviewing "The Big Pond" just as they would a new American attraction. Articles were carried commending the plan.

Henri Faubert, French consul agent, was a guest at the performance.

The Ohio department of education is cooperating in the introduction of the foreign pictures at the State.

Another house operated by the Neth circuit, the Genoa, has equipped 50 seats with head phones for the hard of hearing. Robert O. Gluck, manager, has been equipped with the headphones. To date he has 495 names, including visitors from as far as New York and St. Louis, besides people from many Ohio cities.

The headphones are the Audiphone system, connecting with the Western Electric sound equipment.

A list of coming attractions at the Eastern house is posted in the reading rooms of the Genoa, and the results of the campaign on the issue of Hearing. Members frequently organize theatre parties. There is no advance in prices for users of the headphones.

operating or anything else, by the addition of the prisms.

In company with Brother McCullough we visited also the Fox Wilshire theatre, a new deluxe theatre just opened not very far from Culver City. The Wilshire has a most excellent projection room, which provides a projection angle of only 13 degrees. The room is not entirely finished. Projectionists in charge are El Fienstien and Rodney Bacon.

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA—The most southern of Columbia's large cities, lies by the sea, having excellent bathing beaches, plenty of beautiful gardens.

First, Mr. Metcalf, who was a most agreeable host for the evening, took me over to the Fox theatre.

Everything was decided cleanly. In the back of the room was a Frigidaire water system. All port shutters are counterweighted, with a safety hook to keep them from falling. I noticed all the cue sheets were held in black music racks, in each of which a light was placed, to be used when needed. These racks were, in turn, suspended from a wire that ran from one end of the room to the other, so that each could be placed in the most convenient position for use.

The Spreckles theatre is managed by Jack Edwards. I am told this theatre won the EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD Plaque for having excellent sound. The projection room is small. It has been enlarged some but still is none too spacious. It is very poorly ventilated. The San Diego meeting was attended by all the projectionists in the territory as well as by several of the managers—perhaps by them all. I am not certain as to that. The San Diego theatre is a progressive one. I have always liked the men of that city.

OUT OF San Diego we had good roads across the desert to Phoenix. Something like sixty miles of them are of gravel.

Tucson was reached about noon on the second day. We were received by Walter Burroughs, secretary of the local, and his wife, who is an author. We were taken to see a most interesting mission something like 300 years old. We there met a most delightful priest, who showed us around and made the trip even more interesting than it would have otherwise been.

Tucson has five theatres, one of which is closed for repairs. Albert D. Stetson, district manager for the Fox interests, has charge of the Fox theatre, which is the finest in the city. Its projection staff consists of San Koutas, Walter Burroughs, Albert Runkle and Don Freiling, who is swing man for the Fox and Fox Lyric.

The Fox Lyric, managed by Oliver Thompson, has something I have not seen for quite a while, namely a Powers projector. Both the sound and the picture were excellent. The projection staff is composed of H. O. Sarrel, G. Martinez and Lee Frankew.

The Plaza theatre is managed by Nick Diamos. Its projection staff is B. E. Groons, Richard Yrigoyen (you may do the pronouncing), Mike Soussine and George Diamos.

The Opera House is managed by Frank Drachman. His chief projectionist is Aurario Buna, who is the most practical idea. He has a Strong lamp from which he has removed the negative carbon holder and has substituted a solid glass piece. Peerless lamp from which he has removed the reflector and substituted a Strong reflector. His claim is that the results are much better.

Osuna has made another change. As it is now equipped with the Peerless mold and attachment to the Simplex, it is impossible to remove the belt wheel and gears without first taking the mechanism off the stand. Osuna drilled screw holes in which screws could be placed to hold that part of the mechanism casing below the belt-wheel bracket to the bottom side of the hole through which the driver shaft goes. The idea is to enable the projectionist to remove the lower left part of the mechanism casing, swing the driver up and close it. As soon as this is done, the feature may be removed without taking the mechanism off the stand. The assistant projectionist of the Opera House is Dave Koutas.

There were men at the meeting from both Douglas and Nogales, and let me tell you, that some distance from here, shows up much better. Of course, all members of the Tucson local were there, and be it said to their credit. All the managers were also present.

EL PASO, TEX.

WELL here we are, 'way down here in the state of New Mexico, where most of the buildings have been adobe and the vegetation principally sage brush, cactus and ocotillo, which are not native. The film is a thoroughly modern, up-to-date entertainment... Right in the beginning he said, "The Plaza being the best example. It was opened two weeks ago and is managed by C. S. Friaus. It is a beautiful building.

The sound in this theatre is more than ordinarily excellent. The enunciation is clear and perfect, which is something that cannot be said of all theatres and indeed of all sound一向. The sound is produced on the screen by A. O. Yonge, chief projectionist, who is president of the local in El Paso. He is assisted by T. J. Stuttard and S. W. Richard. I compliment these gentlemen on the excellence of their work.

The condition at the Pulpix L. & A. is, in some respects, very poor. The auditorium has a great deal of reverberation. I was advised that an attempt was made to eliminate this, but it was not a success. Another fault is due to the fact that the current to the projector light sources is supplied by a very old Hertner upright transverter. This machine is too small for the work it is called upon to do.

While in El Paso I called on George G. West, president of the International Amusement Company, which owns theatres in Mexico and El Paso. I was much welcomed by General Manager Rafael Calderon, whom I found to be not only the most pleasant gentleman but also a progressive executive. Right in the beginning he said, "I have your Bluebook. It has helped me a great deal. I read your department every week. It is very helpful." This is a real compliment, coming from the general manager of a large corporation. I had also the pleasure of meeting A. J. Petit, assistant to General Calderon. I enjoyed my visit with these gentlemen immensely.

General Manager Calderon accompanied me again to one of his theatres. In it I found another case of a motor generator that is too small. This is the second theatre is San Diego. Mr. Sanchez is chief projectionist, and Jose Porres his assistant.

In the Colon theatre I saw something which General Manager Calderon said had "saved the day" for many theatres patronized by Spanish-speaking people. In the Colon they project the English titles of silent pictures in the usual way. In slide carrier position they have a metal arrangement of stereopticon, by means of which a roll of gelatin may be moved down through the light beam. On this roll the English titles are written in Spanish. The typewriting is single-spaced, about the width of a slide and of whatever design the title needs. When a projectionist stands by this stereopticon all the time, and when an English title is flashed on the screen, it is immediately translated in Spanish and appears immediately below the English version. The thing is very cleverly done. It adequately solves the matter of translating English motion picture titles.

The titles are, of course, typewritten on the gelatin face of the roll of gelatin. When the roll of gelatin is then placed in the metal carrier, at the top of which is a carrying spindle, with a handle below it, and a screw pin of means by which the projectionist may rotate it, thus pulling the gelatin down as desired.

Six Nations Represented in Stage Weddings
For Seattle Fox’s Anniversary

Six stage weddings, representing as many nations, were used by the Fox Fifth Avenue theatre in Seattle to commemorate its fourth anniversary. A celebration of such ambitious proportions required a good deal of organizing and involved many teachings.

The first difficulty that presented itself was the securing of couples of different nationalities. An advance publicity campaign in the local papers, and also the foreign language publications of the city resulted in many more couples desiring to get married in the unique fashion. There were many more than could be taken care of. The nationalities which won representation were the Scotch, German, American, Irish, Italian and American Indian, in the order of their appearance.

Newspapers Cooperate
After the acquisition of the main participants, the newspapers of the city backed up the theatre with 100 percent cooperation in the form of special publicity space, special stories in their news columns, pictorial sections and included feature write-ups such as articles on the art of the American Indian. Jim Clemmer, manager of the theatre, crashed the pictorial section of all the papers when he “chaperoned” the six couples to the County-City Building and purchased the licenses and received the best wishes of another - Senator’s showman, Mayor Frank Edwards. During the week that the weddings occurred the Seattle Times devoted space in its pictorial rotogravure section no less than six times.

Merchants Donate Gifts
The cooperation of innumerable merchants was easily forthcoming. A chance of displaying merchandise before the eyes of theatre patrons and sharing in the advertising and publicity accompanying the campaign was one not to let go begging. Gifts were secured (six of each article) from merchants such as the Goldsmith Jewelry who donated six diamond wedding rings: Weisfeld & Goldberg, jewelers, and Ben Tripp, who contributed splendid gifts as well; Standard Furniture Company; Pipe & Taff, sporting goods; Joyce’s restaurant, six wedding supper packages; Walter Stoudt, six sets of photos; Harry Perkins Shoe Shop, six hosierly orders; O’Neill Florists, bridal bouquets; Fisher Flour Mills, and other firms.

Theatre Buys Licenses
The theatre’s share in making the celebration an unqualified success consisted of purchasing the licenses, paying all incidental expenses such as costumes, fees, and bestowing of substantial gifts in addition to a major gift such as a dining room set or a radio or a wrist watch to each couple on the final day of the weddings.

The initial wedding was that of the Scotch couple who promised to love, honor and obey. The German and the English weddings followed Friday and Saturday. There was more presented on Sunday. The Irish and Italian were staged Monday and Tuesday. The grand finale consisted of an American Indian paganant wedding. From all reports and comments, the latter was the most spectacular and interesting. The newspapers concentrated on giving the most publicity to the presentation of the Indian ceremony three days before the actual occurrence and the news items were devoted to an explanation of the colorful Indian wedding rites as well as articles on the arts and sciences of Northwestern tribes.

38 Indians Come for Ritual
A delegation of 38 Indians, attired in full regalia of their tribe were brought from the Tulalip Indian reservation, transportation paid by the theatre. Among the notables present were Chief Wa-Cah-Dub, more familiarly known to the Northwest as William Shelton, chief of the Snohomish tribe; Princess Se-Home, wife of Chief Wa-Cah-Dub and daughter of the chief who bequeathed Se-Home Hill to the City of Bellingham; and Jimmy Williams, chief line defendant of old Chief Seattle. Their histories were all played up to advantage in the daily sheets.

After the final curtain had descended on the Indian wedding, all six couples were taken to Joyce’s Restaurant where they were given a sumptuous feast, partaking of many of their national dishes.

Merchants Help Advertise
Ballyhooing played its part as well as an extensive advertising campaign pursued by the Fox theatre. The aforementioned restaurant set up a wedding awning over the street sidewalk which carried monster placards announcing the time, place and nationality to be featured each day at the theatre. The theatre was lavishly decorated with artistic banners and foys and stage decorations. Also appropriate music for each nationality was played by an orchestra.

As a consequence of this elaborate outlay of exploitation talent and advertising efforts, the theatre again enjoyed an exceptionally brisk week, culminating in a sell-out on a Wednesday evening for the final wedding presentation. It was noted on the various evenings that many friends of each couple were present, many of whom had never before been listed as patrons at the theatre.

Ted Champion and Jack Sampson were in charge of the exploitation.

Hunt “Handsomest Man” for Showing Of “King of Jazz”

William Hendricks, manager of the Smoot theatre, Parkersburg, W. Va., set his city agog when he staged a contest in connection with “King of Jazz” to find the town’s handsomest man.

The idea was purely a gag stunt, conducted with the cooperation of the local Lions club. It was based on a telegram purported to be from Jeannette Loff, asking the club to locate the city’s handsomest man. It resulted in a lot of good mouth-to-mouth advertising.

Another feature of the campaign was a contest for local bands. This was held at the front of the house and carried inside by means of the house microphone. Several bands entered the contest and Hendricks received a good deal of publicity, as well as a full page of cooperative ads.

City Helps Rebuild House
Razed by Fire in Mansfield

The city council is aiding in the rebuilding of the Madison theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, which was razed by fire. The Scareb Amusement Company has already signed for a lease on the house and construction is being financed from the rentals, which are paid in advance.

The theatre will seat 1,500, with 900 seats on the main floor. John Eberson is the architect.
Louisville Observer Tells What Theatregoers Say and Think

What does the theatregoer think and talk about? And what goes on at the theatre that you don’t read about in the papers? A Louisville observer describes some of these things in the following story:

Operators of suburban theatres develop numerous good ideas from time to time for enlivening the volume of business, but there are also a number of places in which they are falling down.

For instance a woman remarked recently that she had trouble in getting her small daughter to go to bed on Friday night, and the child was afraid that she would dream about a scary picture she had seen on television that evening at a neighborhood showhouse.

Pick Bill Carefully, He Says

In view of the fact that Friday and Saturday nights are big nights for the children, especially in the suburban or neighborhood theatre, it would seem that the management should be very careful in picking bills for the week end of school holiday nights, with an especial appeal to children, or at least pick them carefully so that there would be nothing in them to scare children.

The writer recently heard a 14-year-old boy complaining that he didn’t like the shows at a certain suburban theatre, because they were all “blamed love pictures.” Of course such pictures would probably have been looked upon in a different light by the 14-year-old girl, but children don’t need to have their imaginations played upon to make them believe they are seeing things.

Many suburban theatres fail also to have telephones, with the result that it is impossible to find out what the bill is, and how much it costs, without going to the theatre. The policy of distributing handbills, carrying the shows for a week, or two weeks, throughout the entire neighborhood is of course good, but in this day of autos, the bills frequently are not distributed nearly as far as patrons come from; are often misplaced, and there is a many a time that the phone in the box office can be used to advantage, and in making extra headlines for the management.

He Asks Patrons’ Opinions

Some smart managers, one in particular, who made a big success of a suburban house, before he went into the downtown bigtime, used to station himself in the lobby in the winter, or at the door in the summer, and talk to a lot of his patrons as they were leaving, ask them their ideas regarding the bill that had been shown, and ask them for suggestions. He received many good ideas, not only from parents and young folks, but even from the children. He knew their likes and dislikes, and how certain bills appealed to them, and this in turn greatly aided him in booking his bills.

There are always people of high intelligence in the neighborhood, and who are excellent critics. Some of these not only think of how the bill suits their own tastes, but give it consideration from every angle, and especially from the angle of the child.

The manager remarked that he got some very good information from a newspaper woman, who would candidly tell him that a picture was too heavy, too fluffy, or what not. She was married and the mother of several children, and highly intelligent. Her advice meant a great deal to him.

Putt-Putt for Show Juveniles

A miniature golf course will be installed in the Kaye's theatre, Mt. Gilead, Ohio, for the use of children only. Griffith Granger, manager, plans to have a series of such games for juveniles and expects to draw added patronage by this new advertisement.

Flower Shop, Book Store and Jewelry Tieups Exploit Film

The Publicity staff in Detroit utilized the feminine angle in Norma Talmadge's 'DuBarry, Woman of Passion' to exploit the picture when it came to the United Artists theatre there. Tieups were obtained with flower shops, book stores and jewelry stores.

A display of silverware, valued at $10,000, was displayed in the windows of Warren and Company, jewelers, together with fitting a black and white sill from the film. Each photo had been faceted, calling attention to the fact that "DuBarry" was being shown at the United Artists.

Two dozen roses, especially named 'The DuBarry,' were displayed in the lobby of the theatre, with a credit card for Breitmeyer, the florist, who changes the flowers daily to keep them fresh. Five thousand sample boxes of "DuBarry" face powder were given to women patrons as they left the theatre, together with a small folder on "DuBarry" preparations.

The inside back cover called attention to the next attraction at the theatre.

Half a dozen book store windows carried special book displays, with fitting card announcements. Each tieup was affected without cost to the theatre. This included the printing of the announcement on the back of the small "DuBarry" folders.

Joe Franklin Promotes Cooperative Ad Section

Joe Franklin, manager of Keith's theatre, Ottawa, Ont., tied up with local merchants in promoting a cooperative ad page in newspapers for the picture "Good News." The "Good News" message appeared in each ad. A contest was included in the stunt, whereby readers were invited to find scattered italic letters throughout the page.

Town Asks Talking Films: So Theatre Installs Sound

The Oxford theatre, Oxford, Ohio, has installed sound equipment after Edward E. Keene, manager, was for a time besieged with requests for it. The town's population is made up almost entirely of college students. Keene's theatre is said to be the smallest in Ohio to have sound equipment.
Another collection of representative advertisements selected for consideration by theatre men. The ads are numbered as follows: 1, Strand, Dayton; 2, Rialto, Cincinnati; 3, Mary Anderson, Louisville; 4, Castle, Chicago; 5, Orpheum, Portland, Ore.; 6, Fox, Seattle; 7, Strand, Albany; 8, Venetian, Racine, Wis.; 9, Broadway, Portland, Ore.; 10, Loew's Warfield, San Francisco; 11, Orpheum, Spokane; 12, Mikadow, Manitowoc, Wis.
A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

[Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. They may be lifted as a whole or in part and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.]

Stanley Elkin, general manager of the Indiana and Ritz theatres, Indiana, Pa., reprinted the following editorial from a local newspaper in a souvenir publication issued upon the opening of the new Ritz house:

Your Education

It has long been a mooted question as to whether reading or travel is the better educator.

We have always adhered to the opinion that travel is the superior method of learning descriptive facts of a country. By reading one learns only the things that attracted the attention of the writer, but by seeing places one sees all that is there. He sees all the writer saw, and also sees all the writer missed.

It is exactly the same with moving pictures. When one sees pictures of scenes, moving pictures of scenes, one sees all that passed before the camera—nothing is missed.

The value of the moving picture is, as yet, underestimated as an educator. When the whole people learn that they can see as much of a tropical jungle for the price of a ticket to a "movie" as they can see by spending hundreds of dollars in actual travel, the full worth of the movie will be understood.

No picture has a "ham" actor. The camera may take pictures of a "ham," but they are good, true and faithful pictures of him. If the acting is of the "ham" variety, it is not the fault of the camera, but is the fault of the actor before the camera.

When the public fully realize these facts as to moving pictures, those pictures will be appraised at their true value.

In the Indiana and Ritz theatres the people of this locality have modern theatres fully equal to the playhouses of the great cities, and the pictures put on are the finest in the land.

When one learns from a movie, one may rest assured that it is not filling the mentality with "knowledge that ain't so."

As the days pass and people learn that what they learn from a moving picture is the exact truth, and is a part of a liberal education the movies will be a lot more liberally patronized.

In the matter of "movies" and "talkies" the largest cities on earth have nothing at all on Indiana.

Thanksgiving

When the Pilgrims first celebrated Thanksgiving day in New England, there were only three things to do. They could eat, rest and be thankful that the Indians had not gotten their scalps yet.

Today we celebrate Thanksgiving in pretty much the same way. But there are no murderous Indians to worry about, except on the screen.

Today we still eat turkey on the last Thursday in November and everybody has something to be thankful for, just as the Pilgrims had. But people don't sleep on Thanksgiving day anymore. Instead they rest while they see a motion picture.

We are prepared to show you an entertaining program on the screen of the Indiana Theatre November 27. Special shows have been arranged for the day and several short pictures on subjects in keeping with the occasion will be shown. We invite you.
Window Tieups and News Stories Plug Fox's "Big Trail"

Tieups with drug stores, manufacturers of beauty aids and newspapers were employed to publicize "The Big Trail" when it opened at McVicker's theatre, Chicago.

Sixty-five windows were obtained through arrangement with the Max Factor beauty aid concern, while 14 Walgreen drug stores carried similar displays. One of the Chicago newspapers carried a serial story of the play which ran six days. Thirty-eight other stories were obtained in city and suburban papers.

The personal appearance of several Fox executives at the opening was one of the important events. Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox, and J. R. Grainger, director of sales, were among the officials present. John Wayne, a star of the picture, made a stage appearance and gave interviews to all critics.

The first showing was advertised as a "pop-up preview." There were both invitational and paid admissions. Popular demand led the management to open the theatre at 9 a.m. each day.

Nine radio announcements of the film's opening were made over station WIBO. In the way of posters, there were hundreds of 1, 2 and 6-sheet posters distributed.

A sound truck, with arc lamps, siren and the public address system, was another part of the promotion.

S. B. Soble is manager of McVicker's.

Edward R. Solomon, of the Publicity department, was in charge of the exploitation.

Publix in Detroit Greets
Mitzi Green at Station
With Fleet of Baby Austins

Mitzi Green, the juvenile screen star, received an "austin welcome" when she came to Detroit for a personal appearance at the Michigan theatre.

Milton Herman, of the Publix exploitation department, had a whole army of Austin automobiles surrounding her relaying when they arrived at the Michigan Central station.

There was one car for each person in the party. Mitzi's auto headed the procession, and a motorcycle escort led the way through the business district. Several of the men acted as "chauffeurs" at the disposal of the star throughout the week that she played at the Michigan.

Two Ottawa Exhibitors
Aid Rotary and Kiwanis in Drive for Charity Funds

Two Ottawa, Ont., exhibitors were prominent in community endeavors during the latter part of October through tieups with local civic clubs.

Joe Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's theatre, who is also a director of the local Rotary club, helped sponsor the Rotary show at the little theatre. Ray Tuhman, manager of the Imperial and Regent houses, acted as master of ceremonies for a Hallowe'en party given by the Kiwanis club in the Ottawa Auditorium.

Approximately 3,000 attended.

Both functions were for charity purposes.

Pathe Makes Radio Tieup

Pathe has arranged a nationwide radio hook-up to exploit "Her Man." Another tieup has been made with a national concern manufacturing beauty aids. The latter is to help distribute 25,000 posters bearing stills of Helen Twelvetrees, star of the film, on which the name of the picture will be prominently mentioned.

Contest for "Fresh Air Taxis" Brings Old Autos to Granada

Streets about the Granada theatre in South Bend, Ind., were transformed from peaceful driveways to roaring thoroughfares when prizes were offered for the best "fresh air taxicabs" in connection with the showing of "Check and Double Check."

Fords, Chevrolets, Buicks, cars of every description, but all of them old, headed for the Granada. Only cars that could rattles permitted in the contest. Notre Dame university is located in South Bend and, naturally, contributed its share of college autos.

The stunt was an exceptionally appropriate one, for Amos 'n Andy drive one of the "fresh air" taxis in the film. There is no need describing the interest it aroused.

$50 in Prizes Offered

Prizes amounting to $50 in cash were given the winners. An award of $25 was presented for the best duplicate of the Amos 'n Andy "fresh air" taxi. Another $15 was given for the most collegiate-appearing machine representing an original and new design of fresh air taxicab. Two more prizes of $5 each were given for the entries offering the next best in an unusual type of fresh air taxi.

The Granada is also conducting another interesting contest in conjunction with the RKO Palace, a local clothing store. The idea is to pick the South Bend citizen who is to make a trip to Los Angeles with the Notre Dame football team for the game with Southern California.

A Vote for Every Penny

For every penny that a customer spends at either the clothing store or one of the other theatres, he is given one vote. The winners gets a free trip to Los Angeles to see the Notre Dame-Southern California game. The next three will get free trips to the Army-Notre Dame contest in Chicago. Merchandise from the clothing store and passes from the theatres are among the other prizes.

The stunt has attracted almost unlimited interest in South Bend. Although the contest has barely started, one of the candidates already has 19,000 votes.

Setz Takes Over Warners' Ohio; Builds New Marquee

Setz Enterprises, Inc., has taken over Warners' Ohio theatre in Sandusky and placed Leslie B. Shuler in charge as manager. Shuler will also act as advertising manager for the other Setz theatres in Sandusky, namely, the Plaza and State.

The Ohio is to be equipped with a new marquee and will have a new picture policy, the program to change on Sundays, Tuesdays and Fridays.
Theme Song Broadcast Is Good Puller for Indianapolis Palace

Broadcasting theme songs of pictures has become one of the popular methods in exploitation. Such programs, naturally, hold the greatest appeal for music lovers, but a new popular song will also carry attraction for almost every one else who has a radio

J. F. Flex, manager of the Palace house, Indianapolis, promoted two 10-minute evening broadcasts over Station WSBM on Wednesday and Friday night prior to the opening of "Doughboys." The air programs included playing of the theme song "Sing," as well as several other numbers, most of which were wartime melodies. Remarks on the picture were interspersed by the announcer, who mentioned interesting facts about Buster Keaton, star of the film.

To give the radio station its due share of publicity, Flex ran a trailer for a week prior to the broadcast with the announcement: "Tune in on the Indiana Power & Light Company's Station WSBM, Wednesday and Friday evening at 6:30 for special broadcast of the screen highlights from Buster Keaton's battle of laughs, 'Doughboys.'"

A hookup was also made with a newspaper for a limerick contest which ran four days. The rhymes all pertained to the picture. The prizes included 50 pairs of theatre tickets.

Another feature of the campaign was a tieup with an automobile dealer who carried window displays showing a still of Buster Keaton standing beside a Austin car. The still was enlarged and mounted on cards that carried theatre copy. In addition, one of the bantam cars was employed in the street ballyhoo. For three days it traveled through the city, its sides covered with copy on the film.

Opening of House Is Marked by Civic Fest in Stockton

When the new Fox California theatre, Stockton, Cal., was opened, the whole town and surrounding country turned out to make the affair a gala one and to honor Manager N. O. Turner, who was previously in charge of the Fox State there. Manager Turner realized that there would be no difficulty in filling the new house the first night, and for many nights following, and accordingly devoted special attention to the entertainment of the huge throngs which could not get into the playhouse.

An open air show at the civic center ran from seven o'clock until midnight, with bands, drill corps, street dancing and entertainment from the theatre presented through the medium of loud speakers. El Brendel and Margorie White were on hand from Hollywood and divided their time between the theatre and the open air show.

The two local daily newspapers outdid each other along the line of publicity and each brought out special theatre sections of sixteen pages filled with writeups of the new house, Fox West Coast Theatres and the advertising of well-wishing business houses. George Roesch, of the San Francisco office of Fox West Coast Theatres, was in charge of the special publicity, leaving Manager Turner to work out plans for the civic celebration with the mayor of the city.

Celebrate Second Anniversary of Fox With Special Show

A mammoth birthday cake was prepared for the festivities at the second anniversary celebration of the Fox Oakland theatre, Oakland, Cal. Frank Newman, manager, billed a number of added attractions for the week in addition to the usual program. The birthday cake was on display in the lobby.

Newspapers were free with publicity during the week, commenting on the importance of the house to business in Oakland.

Manager Newman announced statistics at the anniversary fest which he had compiled on the theatre. His figures show that more than 400,000 persons have attended performances at the Fox Oakland during the past two years, with 250,000 children included in the list. An estimate of out-of-town patrons is placed at 100,000. The midnight shows, offered every Saturday, are credited with having done much to help the house's business.

A guest book kept at the theatre contains names of visitors from Australia, England, Canada, Italy, Hawaii, France, Germany and Spain.

Three theatres in Elwood, Ind., have concocted their own scheme of maintaining interest in both their shows and local football games. Through a tieup with a newspaper, the Mack, Alhambra and Princess houses give tickets to persons figuring out the correct score on games. A large number take part and the paper publishes the names of the winners. The same stunt may be used for the basketball games.

Paramount Leases House

Silver and Turberg, who have, for a number of years, operated the Palace theatre in Hamilton, Ohio, have leased the house to Paramount, which organization is at present building a large theatre in that city and another at Middletown, 12 miles distant. Both are to be ready for opening next April, it is reported.
THE SHORT FEATURE

"Indians Are Coming" So Popular U Is Producing Three More Serials

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Universal’s new Western serial, “The Indians Are Coming,” in which Tim McCoy is starred, seems to be exerting a marked influence in bringing children back to the motion picture theatre, according to figures given out by the company.

In two theatres alone, the Pasadena, in Pasadena, Calif., and the Orpheum in Omaha, Neb., 8,000 youngsters crowded about the doors waiting for showtime. In New Rochelle a parade of hundreds of children was staged by the Proctor theatre in conjunction with the showing of the serial.

Newspapers in many cities have cooperated in the effort with several sponsoring special matinees. It is reported third of the attendance children weekly are seeing the serial at the Brooklyn Paramount, which has never before looked this type of picture.

Universal is producing three other serials, following the success of “The Indians Are Coming.” They are: "The Spell of the Circus," with Francis X. Bushman, Jr.; "Finger Prints," starring Edna Murphy and Kenneth Harlan, and "Heroes of the Flames."";

Now It’s 70 Papers For U’s Newsreel; Two More in Tieup

Universal Newspaper Newsreel has signed for the talking reporter alliance two more papers, making the total 70 dailies. The Columbus Dispatch of Columbus, and the Idaho Statesman of Boise, are the latest additions.

This is said to be one of the greatest pluses in motion picture history, with an estimated circulation of 10,000,000 copies and a reader interest calculated at 30,000,000.

Embassy Newsreel House Celebrates First Anniversary

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—On Saturday, November 1, the Embassy Newsreel Theatre, Broadway’s innovation one year ago, celebrated its first birthday. An average of 30 subjects a week have been shown for the past 52, with 14 screenings daily. Computation indicates that 1,500 subjects have been flashed on the screen during the year before approximately 2,000,000 people.

The Fox Hearst Corporation, producers of Fox Movietone News and Hearst Metrotone News, have more than 60 sound trucks scattered throughout the world for the purpose of gathering important events that are of interest at strategic points. These are cut and edited and shown at the Embassy in a program which lasts between 45 and 30 minutes, with the theatre open from 10 in the morning to midnight. The weekly average attendance has been estimated at 30,000.

It is understood to be the only theatre of its kind in the country, and officials have reported that practically unaffected by the ordinary fall to which most picture theatres are subject at the box office at certain periods, the Embassy has made it possible, according to executives, for the theatre to close its books for the first year in a substantial profit, despite the cost involved in production.

MUSIC AND TALENT

Crowds Flock to Hear Ted Lewis

Sings His Old Favorites and Twirls His Hat

Chicago Oriental Does Rushing Business—Presentation Simple but Effective

Ted Lewis in person drew them in at the Chicago Oriental during the past week. Each audience resolved itself into a responsive group that seemed to beam when “Is Everybody Happy?” floated out over the footlights. They got the same kick out of watching that somewhat battered top hat twirl in a hazardous fashion, and land with accuracy upon Ted’s noble pate that they get every time he appears. And although there was nothing spectacular or pretentious about the stage show, everybody seemed to enjoy it, especially the songs which one invariably links with Ted.

While Ted was in evidence throughout the whole performance, and gave about everything he had to put over, there was still room for a little applause for the other members of the “cast.” Charles Whittaker, who might be called a bit of chocolate lightening, gave an excellent account of himself, as did Eleanor Brooks, who put on several very individual dances. The Seven Revelers did their usual nice work in singing, “The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise,” and then swinging into “Here Comes the Sun.” Ted sang a chorus and the Revelers hummed a rather catchy “background” for his singing. Alice McLaughlin did a rather pretty ballet dance which appealed to the audience.

The numbers which seemed to draw out the most acclaim from those assembled, numbers which Ted put over as Doctor Lewis, dispenser of sunshine, were “Tiger Rag,” (Ted and his clarinet) and “My Baby Just Cares for Me.” “On the Sunny Side of the Street,” “Sweetheart of Sigma Chi” and lastly “Happy Days.” The small town band on the Fourth of July went over in good style, an essentially Lewisonian style, it might be said.

UNIFORMS FOR HOUSE ATTACHES

COSTUMES FOR STAGE PRESENTATIONS

BROOKS 1437 B’way
N. Y. City
Miss Evans wears a costume of green, white and silver. Slightly A white gown with silver edged bodice and flare skirt, trimmed at the hem in white feather plumes, is worn sukaree in front of a drop in which blue alternating stripes of black and silver are the color motif.

Jean Maddox and Florence Clark present what pur- The stage show opens with the appearance of a port seems to be an impromptu duet on the “Life of Frank Stever before a background of Paris in which Ar any and Any. A dream in front of a drop in which the dance will be flooded with the light, where the stage would seem to be a scene with the orchestra leader. A dance at the close of the act has one of the girls dancing literally while seated upon the floor, carrying herself across stage.

Singer Frisse, his mariachi band from the tropics and a boy protege singer are favorites among the acts. The band includes five xylophones and a bass violin in the background and Singer Frisse himself has a xylophone and what he calls his vibraphone center front. Spanish effects are noticed in the white, low collared skirts of the band members and the lamp posts stageback. A special arrangement of “Anchors Aweigh,” “El Chombo,” recorded in Central America, with beautiful pizzicato in bass violin accompaniment. The audience is asked for suggestions for selections and “Fox, Breakfast” seems to have a lot of fun splashing around with a dummy dressed as a man. An- other scene is that of the girls in ballet costumes tune to the tune of “Body and Soul.” The colored spots are used very effectively here.

Dick puts the band through “My Baby Just Cares For Me,” in great fashion. This is one of the best numbers they ever have done and the applause is tremendous.

The star of the offering is none other than Olive Borden making a personal appearance. Olive does a little dance, talks a little and cuts up with Powell. She is proving quite charming and making many friends here.

Zastro and White, two men and two girls, do a flashy and well-looked at number which is a good old standard. They are well done and fast and should tone up any program.

The band—(And Helen) —the Powell puts it, “you can easily tell which is Helen because she stands next to Mary)—are two crossing girls whose dances are both镍 and good. The girls are giving a good band.

Dick comes “I Don’t Tell Her What Happened to Me,” following which he plays the number on the saxophone. Then Dick scores a big hit when he shows the packed audience something they have been waiting for when he goes into a tap dance, which he puts over in A No. 1 fashion.

San Francisco Fox

The stage show at the Fox this week is all wet, literally speaking, featuring Leilie Myer, America’s aquatic champion, in Phantom and Myer’s “Foun- tain of Youth Idea.” Leilie is assisted by a bevy of bevy of beuties, seven of them to have a lot of fun splashing around in the big tank on the stage and the public is guaranteed a good act suggesting when An- nette Kellerman made the rounds in vaudeville.

Walt Roemer and the Fox Concert Orchestra present ““Schubert Revival” a symphonic piece featuring “Serenade” and airs from the Unfinished Symphony. Two organists assist in bringing out harmonious effects.

The stage show opens with the appearance of Frank Stever before a background of Paris in which can be seen the Arc de Triomphe, Eiffel Tower, Black Cat and other landmarks. He is in the garb of a director of tours and sings of what is to be seen in Paris, with bag-laden American tourists helping out the chorus, at the same time offering some wittily dancy steps.

Barten and Young offer a number described as “all in fun” but much of the offering centers on selling a member of the orchestra a shrunk, with variations. A revision of this act would improve it. Masked girls in spangled and rather daring costumes dance to the “Overture to Orpheus” and re- ceives a splendid hand, the offering being out of the ordinary.

Ed. Chaney, in full evening dress and hat, offers what promises to be just another tap dance but develops into an exhibition of eccentric steps. Bob and Jack do a turn with banjos and end with the inevitable tap dance.

Frank Stever, in old time costumes, sings about Madame Pompadour and a bubbling fountain in an exquisite garden setting and one by one girls in flowing robes walk in the pool and come out attired in swimming suits. They offer an exhibition of funny diving, making frequent changes of water costumes, and finally parade in the costumes worn on their first entrance into the pool. The act closes with a dive into the tank from a trapeze high above the stage.

Philadelphia Earle

Week Ending November 7

The stage bill at the Earle this week, a musical review “Oh, Uncle,” is a distinct departure from the usual but is hardly as diverting as some previous shows.

The overture “Favorite Melodies of Favorite Composers” is very creditably given by the Earle Concert Orchestra led by David R. Ross. Jay Mills, special master of ceremonies, contributes two violin solos and some clever dialogue which en- liven the show considerably.

Lockhart and Dooley and Johnson and Ducker fur- nish the comedy in the review and some of their suffering is good through the action of the skit as a whole. The Dave Gould Girls can always be depended upon to hold up their end of a show and this is no exception. They put on a lively drill ccd in abbrevi- ated policemen’s uniforms and later contribute a society dance, half dressed as girls and half as men. Two jugglers, presumably Arthur and Morton Havel, do some-thing different with what appear to be bottles of milk and the two are also extremely clever in juggling hats of all sizes and description.

The high light of the evening is the gorgeous stage setting used for the wedding scene in the final act of the comedy with beautiful stained glass windows and all the paraphernalia of an elaborate church wedding.

Omaha World

Week Ending November 6

Eastman and Howell, darktown funmakers, open a five act vaudeville program this week. One wears street clothes and the other white jacket with large logo-mo-nute sleeves, shush hat and bure, clumsy shoes. They play a small portable organ, violin and uke, and clown considerably. The play and song “Lovin’ in the Lurch” and “Go Home and Tell Your Mother,” a bit of minstrelsy closed the act.

Limericks Edwards is wabbily knotted act imitating largely a drunken man. There is a trap door at the side of the stage. Edwards walks behind it as though it led to stairs going down. He affects slurred speech and dances. He is much applauded but utter not one syllable.

By BOBBY MELLIN

Chicago can boast of two of the foremost harmony arrangers in the United States for surely no one can deny that Paul Chab, who arranges all the harmonies for the Famous Chicagoans, and Eddie Freman, who does the names for the Wanderers Quartette, are noted in the world. Listen in to the programs of both of these great quartets on any station which is hooked by the NBC Artists' Service, and you will be amazed by the treble arrangements of the master minds that make these vocal quartettes.

What's in a name? Bill Barth, star of the Key-stone and "Take Me and Alice," has had reason lately to believe that sometimes a name in a given market of the Chicagoans, and Eddie Freman, who does the voices for the Wanderers Quartette, are noted in the world. Omaha Paramount

Kenneth Grahame and Grace Moore.

An interesting event of the week was the presence of Mrs. J. P. Hurlburt, who opened a new short subject feature, "The Blue Awry." The motion picture is a vehicle for the well-known song and dance team of Dorothy Lull and the Eight Stooges. Miss Berle, a clever singer and dancer, and a few of the Eight Stooges, some of whom have already tired of their talking before it was over.

The program was introduced by James Burke, a talented composer who has written several songs. The piece, "Dancing the Blues Away," was performed by Dorothy Lull, who put in a splendid performance. The audience was enchanted by thecture, presented by the Nebraska Symphony Orchestra, featuring the well-known dancer, Bobby Ray. The program was introduced by the famous vaudevillian, Milton Berle, who is known for his humorous and witty remarks. The audience was thrilled by the performance of the Eight Stooges, especially the dance of Dorothy Lull, which was applauded by all.

Paramount Publix Opens

New Staten Island

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—the Paramount Publix Corporation has just opened its newest up-to-date film palace in the heart of Staten Island. This is the Staten Island Paramount Theatre, located in Stapleton, and seating 2,500. It is a commodious modern house with all the latest features typical of the metropolitan chain of Paramount Publix.

The initial offering was "Monte Carlo," the Ernst Lubitsch talking picture featuring Jack Buchanan and Jeanette MacDonald. The "human element" was a hit taken care of by the persona of Betty and Joan, who offered a program of singing starlets at the twin conclusion. The film was shown in the afternoon by Miss Ruth MacKay, who has been appearing in short subjects for the past few years.

This number in the Broadway Production THERE’S A CROWD was a sensation on the other side and it looks like it will enjoy the same success in this country. A terrific dance tune that will do well all over the radio. Words by Edward Heyman, Robert Sour. Music by John W. Green.

WASTING MY LOVE ON YOU” — (Remick Music Corp.). — A fox trot love ballad by two great writers. A good line and some good lyrics. Commercial of course. Words by Edgar Leslie, movie by Harry Warren.

WHEN YOUR HAIR HAS TURNED TO SILVER
(I Love You, Same) (Morris) — By Charles Tobbins and Peter De Rose. An old fashioned ballad of the type that this firm has been very successful with. The public seems to be buying these songs and this might be another.

ONLY A MIDNIGHT ADVENTURE” — (M. Witmark & Sons). — Just a midnight adventure and then she is gone. That’s the thought in this song. A pretty melody goes with it. Lyric by Edgar Leslie, music by Seymour Simons.

YOU’RE SIMPLY DELISH” — (Robbins Music Corp.). — Featured in the Metro picture THOSE THREE FRENCH GIRLS. This number has an excellent dance tune and very cute lyrics. Looks commercial too. Lyric by Arthur Freed, music by Joseph Meyer.

SWEETHEART OF MY STUDENT DAYS” — (Leo Feist, Inc.). — A beautiful number that brings back pleasant memories. Of course we have all had our love affairs during student days. This number is getting a big play and looks like a big seller. Lyric by Gus Kahn, music by Seymour Simons.

WONDER WHERE MY CINDERELLA CAN BE” — (Universal Music Co.). — A tune that is different and strong and really well good. It looks like this is the best song Universal has ever published. Music by Leo Handaya, lyric by Bernie Grossman.

ORGAN SOLOS

HENRIETTA KAMERN (New York, Long’s 175th St.) offered a “Singing Lesson” as the title of this week’s program and introduced with an explanation (via mike) of the all-comedy program, short show and that the first lesson would be a simple melody for them to sing. Just two songs were offered this week, namely: “Sing Something Simple” and “East Side West Side.” Both songs were lustily sung by the audience, and Miss Kameron was given a good reception. Incidentally, Miss Kameron’s beautiful soprano (this week’s being a perfect lace, trimmed in green, with an enormous green bow in back) are the talk of the filmpjes set in this neighborhood, and we will join in by saying that she makes a beautiful appearance at the organ.

BETTY AND JEAN (Baton Island, N. Y. Paras- mount) presented, as their inaugural program at the twin consoles, a special commercially “slug” novelty entitled, “Hey Staten Island.” Riding into the spotlight, as the slide proclaimed them, the Misses Betty and Jean, dressed in beautiful pink and blue evening gowns, bowed to the tremendous ovation given them by the audience. Special, lyric slides introduced each as they placed for their individual slides and then they played a special dozen of “Greetings, etc.,” to the tune “I’M Yours,” following this with a chorus of “I’M Yours” for the audience to sing. This neighborhood must, undoubtedly, have been starved for singing and letting out their emotions, because the audience seemed as if they had been doing it for years. Two more choruses, one “Little White Lies” and the other, “Betty Co-Ed” brought the program to a finish. The young ladies both make pleasing appearances at their consoles, sing and play well, and will no doubt become very popular here.

HAL FRIEDMAN (Dorchester, Mass., Publix Morton) presented, as his solo this week, a pleasing and timely and novelty, “Answer To The Unemployment Blues.” He introduced this with a special version to the tune of “New Kind Of Love,” called, “I’ve Brought A New Job To You.” Hal followed this up with this same line about worrying to “Beautiful You.” Then the gang name, “By all the Stars Above You,” a special compote-to-writer to “Give Yourself A Pat On The Back” and then a special chorus of “Sandpiper Of The Street” (the audience singing the first line, whistling the second, laughing the third, etc.). To close, Hal offered an original parody on “Little White Lies,” orally telling the audience to sing this song the way a soldier would have done it during the war. Hal introduced it as the “Grunting Song” and entitled it, “These Little White Lies That Little Man Made” with hit with the audience that they were still applauding into the feature picture that followed. Hal has a style of “no” playing to get even and the way all sing for him, proves his popularity and that he pleasing them.

JOHNNY MITCHELL (Pittsburgh Enlight) calls him semiprofessional organist,” and features several parodies on the subject of political elections. There is one called “Buy, Buy, Voters,” to the tune of “Hey Rye Blackie.” This was entangled as the politician’s theme song, “Little White Lies.” This organist gets a laugh as well as applause. Johnny plays “Here Comes The Sun,” following it with a parody, “Here Comes The Son,” the words of which are about the young son of the family come home intoxicated. Then there is another “wet and dry” parody, “Be A Reformer,” to the tune of the title of “Happy Days.” Another good one is “My Baby Just Cares For Me,” with a knockout last line as follows: “My baby just three weeks old.” All in all, Johnny has one of his best organs packed with humor, and the audiences are smiling in great shape for him.

HERB KERN (Jersey City, Fox Studio) is billed as Guest Organist at this house. His first program here was entitled “A Lecture on Apocalypse.” He was the first to introduce the management and then orally (via mike) brought that necessary close contact to the audience, with a talk on book-in-

THE VOICE OF THE INDUSTRY

LETTERS FROM READERS

Likes His Special Apparatus

We started with talk-on-September 8, and opened with Smiling Irish Eyes (F.N.), a very nice picture, well acted but with the Irish brogue a little hard to follow. Courage (W.B.), is very good. No, No, Nanette (F.N.), is very well acted and pleased the patrons. On the Border (W.B.), is far-fetched but it sure took the people's fancy. Talking greatly improved Rin-Tin-Tin pictures. Son of the Gods (F.N.), has wonderful acting and a good story but it only pleased 50 per cent. Some said very good, others said a big piece of cheese. Gold Diggers of Broadway (M.M.G.) is excellent in every respect. The Drake Wrangler (Sono-Art), is a dandy comedy for the small townsies, sir. It will sure tickle the farmer patrons.

My outfit was made especially for me by the Radio Industries of Canada and Winnipeg, and I cannot speak too highly of the workmanship and service of this company. Mine is a portable outfit and I have to travel over all kinds of roads, and when an outfit can stand the hard usage I have to give it—well that must be good. Another thing I like this company for—is that their word or promise means something. They have kept their promise every time—A.C. Digney, Detroit theatre Circuit, Carberry, Man., Canada.

Says P. J. Held:

Good Success with Film

IT HAS BEEN SOME TIME SINCE I sent in any report on a swarofoon sound and have been for the last eight months. I installed film only and have had very good success with it. Conditions are not so good in this vicinity at this time, business is below normal, but all businesses are about the same. I give all my profits, still waiting the ship, still waiting the ship, changes a week, and hope that conditions will change. Missing Metro, First National, and Paramount service, trying to give my patrons the best shows possible.

Praise for Maynard

HERE ARE A FEW PICTURES I WOULD LIKE TO REPORT ON. Song of the Saddle (U), with Ken Maynard, who is a bang-up good Western star when they give him the stuff. I have been a Maynard opera, but have never run one till this one. Universal must have known they were not giving him any more and this picture was made. All talking and about one reel of action do not make a Western, and an audience craves action in a Western. It is not the worst picture in the world, but when Universal has a good star I don't see what the yen they have for not putting them where they belong. This concern made a program of errors all through last year, with the single exception of their Westerns, and the are slipping on these. So it looks like a break for Maynard that they did not re-contract him. Too bad, he is a wonderful bet in good Westerns, but not the kind that "Son of the Caballero" is. Columbia theatre, Columbus, Ohio.

Presented Before Large Crowd

WE WISH TO THANK YOU FOR THE Award of Merit, the beautiful bronze plaque. Our theatre is equipped with RCA Photophone and we think it the best on the market, and we are praised for our excellenl sound. This plaque was presented to the theatre before a large crowd and they were delighted that this small town should be honored by receiving this award.

Again thanxing you—Dodge and Baker, Hi-lan theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore.

Too Much Snow!

MAY I GIVE YOU MY OPINION on some pictures just played? Show Boat (U) probably was a good picture in its day but did not do much here. Just got by. Let Us Be Gay (M.G.M.): good. Bevery sophisticated comedy which was very well liked. Should be advertised as starring Marie Dressler. Was rained out, so did not do much on it. Montanna Moon (M.G.M.): most of the crowd liked it, some didn't. Looked for big business on this feature and exploited heavily, but was sadly disappointed, as a dirty blizzed spoiled business. Did not gross expenses. Hollywood Revue (M.G.M.) is another high-priced picture which failed to gross expenses. Well liked by those who came to see it, but the roads are blocked with snow, so apparently we are up against it for the winter.—B.R. Johnson, Orpheum theatre, Kerrobert, Sask., Canada.

Lauds Schaffner Players

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS OUR house has been playing Neil and Caroline Schaffner Players in the fall and a week in the spring. During the entire week of each and every performance, we have packed our house. So much so that this stock company has become an institution in our locality. Any kind of praise or commendation that you would care to make in your publication would be appreciated, as we feel that these players are entitled to same.

In fact, we have become so impressed with this company that the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa have arranged to book this organization for the coming year—Lester P. Martin, The New Circle theatre, Circle Amusement Company, Nevada, la.

Souls Thanks in Rhyme

WE RECEIVED THE BRONZE PLAQUE about two weeks ago, and of course it is only proper and fitting that we try to thank you for same. But when we try to find words to describe our appreciation we find that they all fall short. So we are quoting the following jingle which will serve as good as any to express our sentiment:

"There's nothing to these words,
"But the meaning is grand,
"We're just thinking of you,
"To beat the band."

We would not be without the Exhibitors HERALD-WORLD for several times the subscription price—Lee Guthrie, Rogue theatre, Wheeler, Tex.

Mounted on Compo Shield

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER! BUT frankly, I waited until I finished my advertising campaign before acknowledging the receipt of the beautiful "Mark of Honor" plaque, which arrived last week in good shape, and all I can say is that it is a "thing of beauty and a joy forever" and to say we are proud of it is putting it mildly. I had the cut and reader inserted in three newspapers and have the plaque mounted with suitable lettering on a large compo shield, I also had Filmack make me one of their excellent trailers and this is shown at every performance for a week or ten days. It is little thoughtful things like this and the car plate that keep the HERALD-WORLD the showman's bible.

Again thanking you for this honor I am, with sincere good wishes, very sincerely—E.H. Reiffield, Manager, Iowa theatre, Bloomfield, la.

On Display in Lobby

RECEIVED THE AWARD OF MERIT plaque and wish to thank you. It is now on display in our lobby. Yours very truly—Beatrice Oell, Bailey theatre, Oakdale, la.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

HAPPY days are here again, if we can judge by the activity and the smiles which greeted us on our last trip along the Row. Every other door, it seems, had a tag on it giving the location to which the concern had moved, or else the new occupants were in old places, busily engaged in getting settled. And in the exchanges, well—the United Artists looked like a theatre lobby, a veritable holdout of exhibitors.

The Coston office is now installed in its new quarters in the Warner Building, M & M Film Exchange has moved across the street into the Universal building, fifth floor, Educational moves down into the old M & M offices on the third floor shortly, National Screen has taken over the space occupied by the M & M—we'll just have to call this about all for the moving end of it, or there'll be a grand muddle.

As for the exhibitors haunting the street, there were flock of them, and the salesmen were all happy because they were buying films. A number of the exchanges were looking for a record week, and we sincerely hope they weren't disappointed.

The first day that the Amos 'n Andy film showed at the State Lake theatre, two rather distinguished gentlemen spent most of the day rambling in and out of the doors, but they were not given undue notice by the throngs that were clustered about waiting to get in. It's unusual, but the reason they weren't noticed is because they didn't have their makeup on. That seems strange, but it won't seem so when we tell you that the two were Correll and Goshen, who were getting the reaction of the crowd from every possible angle.

From the reception that the picture got, we should imagine that they were rather pleased.

And following "Check and Double Check" comes the Radio Pictures wide film picture entitled "Danger Lights," featuring Louis Wolheim. Those who have seen it pronounce it remarkable, especially one scene that shows the approach of a train from a point about two miles away. What impressed them most was the clarity of detail in the picture.

Good Luck, Charley

The friends of Charley Loewenberg and they are many in the Chicago territory will be sorry to learn that Charley, after years of service with Universal in the capacity of Director of Publicity and Exploitation in various branches of that company, is no longer connected with it. The Row won't seem quite the same with Charley gone, but no doubt we'll hear from him now and then.

He can well point with pride to his record with Universal over a period of years. He won't be the first to apologize of being a past master in the by no means gentle art of publicity and exploitation. It is known throughout the movie production industry. His handling of "Snookeys," the two and one-half year old comedy star of Universal, during the tour of this infant screen prodigy about three years ago is remembered as somewhat of a sensation.

Through Charley's clever stuff, this baby probably received more publicity than any other child of that age, especially connected with the industry, and there is no doubt that it even transcended that accorded many adult stars. Finishing up the tour by crushing plenty (and when we say plenty, we mean plenty) of newspaper space through the medium of selling President Coolidge the idea of being photographed with Snookeys, holding him in his arms on the lawn of the White House, Charley certainly strutted his stuff.

Not only the president, but other notable, including Mayor Walker, Mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia, Babe Ruth, Rogers Hornsby, posed with the little "guy," and the newspapers ate it up. Somehow or other, we can imagine that presidents, mayors and star baseball players all look alike to Charley when he is out on a publicity hunt.

His recent campaign on "All Quiet on the Western Front" in this territory, Detroit and other key points, were put over with that Loewenberg touch which seemed to make the name of the man and the picture almost synonymous. "Blackbird"? Oh, he handled the campaigns for "All Quiet." Before coming to Chicago, Charley was division manager of Universal's 11 theatres in the Cleveland territory and also division manager of the Universal houses in Indianapolis.

However, all quiet is something that Charley never is, and so now we have the pleasure to announce that he is connected with the Fox organization, with headquarters in Milwaukee.

We regret to see him leave Chicago, and we know many others who feel likewise, but if he's gone, that's all there is to it, and we wish him the Best of Luck.

Frank Young was suffering from a rather severe headache when we dropped in to see him the other day. He said he had it before we came in, which was mighty decent of him. However, Sunday before last he ran up to Milwaukee for a drive, and while there he called on Sid Schuster, who has been laid up for some time in a plaster cast, the result of an automobile accident. Sid, who is a salesman for Columbia, is getting better rapidly, and the doctor told him that he would be out of the cast and at home eating dinner on Thanksgiving day. We'll bet that was pretty sweet news.

The Parkside theatre, which has been closed for some time, has reopened, we understand.

"With Byrd at the South Pole' played this theatre three days. Receipts the third day were 250% greater than the first. It was brought back for two days. The gross on the second day of repeat engagement equaled the biggest day of its run."
—Rialto Theatre, Champaign, Ill.

"The Byrd picture ran at this theatre four weeks and a day. The last day, Wednesday, was biggest Wednesday of the run. Pulled to make room for other pictures under contract."
—Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

"We did 50% over top business on Byrd. Broke our policy to repeat picture and did better than average business the second time."
—De Kalb Theatre, Decatur, Ga.

"Byrd broke our high gross record, formerly held by 'Wings,' by 25%.
—Denman Theatre, Girard, Pa.

"Byrd is only picture we ever brought back for repeat engagement. Highly successful.
—Sewickley Theatre, Sewickley, Pa.

"In spite of two runs on Byrd in Daytona already, we are bringing picture back for a third."
—Daytona Auditorium, Daytona, Fla.

"With Byrd at the South Pole' is the outstanding motion picture of the century."
—Flem D. Sampson, Governor of Kentucky.

"'With Byrd at the South Pole' did wonderful business here, topping 'Cocoanuts.'" —New Dodge Theatre, Dodge City, Kas.
WITH THE INDUSTRY’S GREATEST!

"Byrd did twice as much in this town as the highest grossing picture we ever played."
—Palace Theatre, Kinsley, Kas.

"Played very profitable return engagement on Byrd and regard it as one of most satisfactory pictures we ever ran."
—Colonial Theatre, Bluefield, W. Va.

"On account many requests from public we will play repeat engagement of ’With Byrd at the South Pole.’ Unquestionably finest picture we ever ran."
—Trimble Theatre, Mt. Sterling, Ky.

"In spite of extreme heat, this picture increased gross every day of run. Wonderful."
—Hippodrome Theatre, Newport, Ky.

"In our opinion, the standout picture of the age."
—Capitol Theatre, Frankfort, Ky.

"Byrd brought people to our theatre that rarely come. Hundreds saw it twice. We want a return run."
—Troy (O.) Amusement Co.

"No picture ever won such widespread praise and talk here. People stopped me on the street to rave about it. HAVE PLAYED IT THREE DISTINCT TIMES, ALL TO FINE BUSINESS."
—Rialto Theatre, Eldorado, Ark.

"Broke all records suburban Memphis theatres and marvelous throughout Lightman circuit."
—P. S. Wilson, Memphis, Tenn.

Tears, heart-tugs, sobs for the ladies.
Story of a girl singed by love. In 1900 such a girl would have had a "bad name." In 1930 she's just a girl to whom only one thing counts, and that's love. She's modern.

Wonderful outdoor recording in the far North. Picture goes the gamut from the night clubs of London to the wild wastes of Canada.

A Tower Of Strength Welded by Unprecedented Production Accomplishments. More Big Hits Than Any TWO Companies Can Offer!
The advertisement above appeared in trade papers in September and October. Now read how Western Electric answers the first six questions.

Answering of these questions ... to help you make the most profitable decision!!

QUESTION 1
Will I get regular service by thoroughly trained engineers to maintain high quality and prevent costly breakdowns?

ANSWER 1
Three years' actual operating experience has proved that obligatory preventive service for talking picture equipment is essential in maintaining patronage at most profitable level—essential even with apparatus of highest possible quality.

E.R.P.I.'s standards of service—maintained through regular inspections by 753 trained engineers operating in 279 territories—have proved a definite economy to the industry.
QUESTION 2
Has the company enough installations to support an efficient nation-wide service organization for the 10-year life of the contract?

ANSWER 2
The cost of selecting, training and maintaining a corps of engineers capable of delivering the highest standard of preventive service can be justified only by a company having a large number of installations.

E. R. P. I.'s 5000 installations—a number rapidly increasing—assures exhibitors of this essential service for the 10-year life of the contract.

QUESTION 3
Has the equipment a proved performance record of less than one interruption per thousand shows/in several thousand theatres?

ANSWER 3
Program delays and breakdowns cause losses in returned admissions or disappointed patrons. E. R. P. I.—by reason of its obligatory service which anticipates and prevents trouble—has reduced interruptions to 1:20 of 1 per cent of actual performances.

QUESTION 4
Will a real stock of spare parts be available nearby and a service engineer on call for immediate emergency service during all theatre hours?

ANSWER 4
If trouble comes, speed is essential.

Most of the 5000 theatres in the U. S. A. now equipped with Western Electric can be reached by expert assistance with a supply of parts within an hour.

This help comes from over 200 service points—engineers available day and night—$500,000 stock of parts at 38 branch headquarters.

QUESTION 5
Will the patrons of my theatre be satisfied that the quality of reproduction is the best and equal to that in de luxe theatres?

ANSWER 5
The public, by making comparisons, sets up its own standards. It sets them for the theatres it selects for its entertainment.

All the principal de luxe theatres throughout the world are Western Electric equipped—setting the standard for talking picture entertainment.

Small theatres equipping with the Western Electric Sound System can match in every way, the high quality found in de luxe houses—and so get their share of the increased profits from talking pictures.

QUESTION 6
Will I get engineering supervision of my installation equal to that in de luxe theatres?

ANSWER 6
Theatres differ in architectural design and acoustics—necessitating expert engineering in each case to provide a profit-making installation.

The Bell Telephone Laboratories—the birthplace of the talking picture—surmounted all the difficulties incident to the successful operation of talking picture apparatus under varying conditions.

This vast store of experience comes to you through the same engineering organization responsible for over 7000 correct installations throughout the world.

M P T O A CONVENTION

RULING ON PLAGIARISM

Editorial

Future for Independent

"THE progressive independent has as great a future as anyone in the industry. I did not feel that way a year ago."

Sidney R. Kent, keen observer of the trend in the motion picture business, made this statement during the course of his address at the M. P. T. O. A. convention at Philadelphia. His entire talk was filled with interesting facts and opinions. His discussion of the position of the independent theatre owner, particularly, will be widely read and commented upon.

As the months pass, Mr. Kent believes that many of the small theatres, now owned by chains, will revert to the independent operators who are alert and progressive. The independent, he points out, cannot be satisfactorily replaced in small communities by a fifty dollar a week chain manager who has no interest in the welfare and future of the town.

While this opinion has been frequently expressed in the past by men in all branches of the industry, coming from Mr. Kent it takes a new significance.

Anyone whose faith in the future of the industry has faltered will do well to study Mr. Kent's entire address. He believes that the new contract is the best and fairest yet drawn. He believes that the industry is able to handle sound intelligently, now that it is getting back to the fundamentals which made the silent pictures so successful.

Lightman Re-election

RE-ELECTION of M. A. Lightman as president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America assures the organization of having a man of vision and understanding at its helm for another twelve months.

Mr. Lightman has accomplished a great deal for the association which he heads, but his more valuable service to the industry is his contribution to harmony among the various theatre owner factions, making possible joint action on the important questions between the distributor and the exhibitor.

- - - -

Laemmle Anniversary

AN event of signal interest to everyone in the industry will be the celebration of Carl Laemmle's twenty-fifth year as a producer of motion pictures at Universal City during the month of February.

Hundreds of theatre owners, who have been planning to visit Hollywood "some time," will undoubtedly delay their trip to be in Los Angeles so as to be able to participate in Mr. Laemmle's birthday party.

- - - -

Increased Exports

THE report of the Department of Commerce on American motion picture exports for the first nine months of 1930 is gratifying.

It shows an increase of approximately nine million feet and a value increase exceeding $700,000 over exports for the corresponding period in 1929. The United States shipped to all markets of the world during the 1930 period motion pictures with a declared value of $6,198,703.

A Burdensome Ruling

SEVERAL months ago, F. A. Tilton, third assistant postmaster general, issued a ruling that bannings consisting of hand lettering made either with an ordinary brush or with an air brush are "first class matter and chargeable with postage at the rate of two cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce."

As time has gone on it becomes apparent that this ruling is a serious blow to the entire motion picture business, particularly the smaller theatres which are not big enough to maintain their own staff of artists.

The difference in the cost of printing bannings parcel post, as was permitted before this ruling, and as first class mail, is so great as to be practically prohibitive.

Firms which specialize in this class of work for theatres and which have built up businesses of national size are hard hit. It appears, unless the ruling is changed and modified, they will be compelled to limit their activities to their immediate community, where such products can be delivered by messenger.

William Horwitz

WILLIAM HORWITZ, who a few weeks ago was known to few people in the business outside of the state of Texas, has succeeded in becoming a national character almost overnight.

Elected president of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, he was assailed by his fellow theatre owners in Houston for blocking the proposed zoning plan for Houston. A day or two later, he astounded the entire industry by printing advertisements calling for state censorship in Texas, dragging in the name of Abram F. Myers, president of the Allied States Association, as favoring it.

C. C. Pettijohn in addressing the M. P. T. O. A. declared that Horwitz' advocacy of censorship is simply a move to counter his rebuff in attempting to get unfair protection for his theatres. His fellow theatre owners in Houston say that he obtained the presidency of the Allied of Texas for the same reason.

It appears that whoever dragged Horwitz out of his obscurity will do well to return him to it.

Eleventh Annual Convention Called Great Tribute to M. E. Comerford—Fireworks of Other Years Absent
By JAY M. SHRECK

CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS, PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13—M. E. Comerford in years to come and during his reminiscent moments can look back on the eleventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America as one of the finest tributes ever paid to an exhibitor for his service to the organization.

The Philadelphia convention was a tribute to Mike Comerford, and it brought to this city for the daily sessions and banquet national personages, men outstanding both in public life and in the film industry. Fireworks did not develop, as many had forecast, so consequently only the presence of the oldtimers in organization circles carried one back to the days when the oratory of Sydney S. Cohen, James J. Walker, J. C. Ritter, Al Steffes and others made newspaper men regret that their shorthand had been sadly neglected.

Checking back over the three days, one finds the convention highlights:

- Sidney R. Kent’s statement that many of the smaller theatres in chains will revert to progressive independents.
- Harry M. Warner’s offer to donate the Sunday gross from the company’s 72 theatres here to an unemployment fund if the independent exhibitors will support him in the undertaking.
- A resolution directing President M. A. Lightman to take what action is necessary for reduction of service and parts charges by Western Electric and RCA Photophone.
- Ratification of the new standard contract and arbitration rules which came out of the 5-5-5 conference in Atlantic City.
- Re-election of Lightman in order that during the next twelve months he may complete the work which he started on assuming the presidency a year ago.

On November 19 a decision will be reached in New York which will determine whether exhibitors of the union, regardless of whether they are affiliated or unaffiliated, or whether members of the MPTOA or Allied States Association, will save more than a million and half dollars annually on print and disc shipment charges.

This important subject was presented to exhibitors by Love B. Harrell, secretary of the Southeastern Exhibitors organization, who accompanied Willard C. Patteson to Philadelphia.

On November 19 railroad express executives will meet to consider a reduction of 75 per cent on return charges. It is estimated that express charges on film shipments today total $10,000 daily. It is proposed to save 75 per cent of half of that total, which is the return charge. That would mean—saving of at least $4,000. Credit for discovering the possibility of this saving is given by Harrell to J. H. Butner of Educational’s Atlanta exchange.

In view of the importance of this matter, leaders submitted a resolution, which was adopted, urging that the “organization undertakes to induce all its members, (Continued on page 25 column 1)

Fox Earnings Running Ahead of Last Year; Expect 5 Million from New Films: Clarke

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film Corporation has issued a statement to the effect that Fox earnings for this year are running ahead of last year. His statement is as follows:

"Fox Film Corporation earnings are running ahead of last year to date and there is no indication that they will not continue to do so for the entire calendar year. The company has five completed pictures for release and a conservative estimate of net earnings for these five pictures is $5,000,000.

It was pointed out that "The Big Trail," recently released, will probably gross better than $4,000,000. This picture was produced at a cost of $1,500,000.

Committee Ending Work on Awarding Herald-World Plaque

With applications closed November 1 for the Herald-World plaque for good sound reproduction in theatres, the Committee on Awards begins work this week concluding its final investigations and preparing its report. The Committee on Awards, which selected as chairman Robert E. Sherwood, motion picture critic, editor, author and playwright, has been functioning for thirteen months.

Preliminary figures indicate that the plaque has been awarded to at least one theatre in practically every state in the Union, in every part of Canada, and a number in foreign countries.

Depending upon the time needed to check up on the last applications received, the committee expects substantially to close its work.
Producers Must Fight to Hold Foreign Market, Says Laemmle

Companies Overseas Working Overtime on Own Product, He Declares—Calls Wide Film Still Experimental—Gratified at Mention for Nobel Prize for Universal’s “All Quiet”

(Hollywood, Nov. 13.—Universal, during the coming year, will concentrate on the development of perfect foreign versions of talking pictures to maintain the world market which the company has built up, Carl Laemmle, Sr., declared this week in an exclusive interview with representatives of Exhibitors Herald-World. Laemmle declared that foreign markets will be lost to American producers if they do not make a definite bid for them and offer good products.

He pointed out that since talking pictures had made their bow, foreign producers, with a headstart because they understood their own languages better than American producers, were working overtime on their products.

“I do not know today whether, in pursuit of development of French, German and Spanish talking pictures, we are making money, losing it, or breaking even,” he said. “That must be determined in the future. In the meantime, we are virtually forced to continue with our foreign work and to improve in America, if we expect to hold our markets.”

He said that the American product must be “so well that foreign exhibitors would be glad to have it above all else,” and that if American producers found, after this, that they were losing the markets, they would pull them up.

Wide Film Experimental

Laemmle refused to comment on wide film, stating that so few houses were equipped for it that no definite reaction from the public had been obtained.

The Universal wide film product is known as Magnachrome, and the only experiment which has been conducted, according to Universal executives, is with one two-reel picture. Laemmle has shown considerable interest, but has made no definite statement pending the outcome of the wide film controversy which still is raging along the Hollywood and eastern fronts.

“We are driving ahead with what we have on regulation film,” he said.

Asked about the fact that dozens of exhibitors in Europe and in Australia had mentioned him in connection with the awarding of the Nobel Peace Prize for the year, as the result of the production of “All Quiet on the Western Front,” Laemmle said that he was “distinctly gratified.”

“Since I entered motion pictures, almost twenty-five years ago, I have fought to cement international relations through the medium of the motion picture,” he said. “I have done everything within my power.

“When the time came to produce ‘All Quiet on the Western Front,’ my son and I were faced with a dilemma. Everyone advised against it as a box office attraction, and many of the things they said about the production were unfavorable. We disregarded box office considerations and decided it would be well to give it to the world as a message of peace, and nothing more.”

Laemmle also expressed himself as being gratified to receive the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, given to him at the annual dinner of the organization last Wednesday night. The trophy was presented by Louis B. Mayer.

“It went to Laemmle because he, in the eyes of the Academy, achieved the highest attainment in motion picture production for the year by producing ‘All Quiet on the Western Front.”

Biography to Appear by February

During February, Universal City plans to celebrate with each year of Mr. Laemmle’s association with the motion picture industry and, in connection with this, the biography of Laemmle, written by John Drinkwater, the noted British playwright, poet and biographer, will appear. Material for this biography was gathered by Dave Bader, on special mission.

Drinkwater cabled from London that he had finished the work last week, and that the manuscript would be in Laemmle’s hands within another fortnight. This means that the interesting and inspirational biography will be presented to the public during or before the BIO.

“I hope that the biography will be interesting and educational, and that in addition it will be a protest to those who, at times, on the journey through life, have reason to pause and doubt themselves and their future,” Laemmle said.

Nickel Shows “Unfair Competition” Charges Allied Unit in Michigan

(Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—The Nickel Theatre Owners of Michigan have filed suit in the Circuit Court in Detroit to enjoin the Allied Unit of Michigan from showing moving pictures in more than five of its theatres. The suit is based upon the fact that the Allied Unit is charging an admission of 10c for the privilege of seeing moving pictures, and that a nickel admission is a violation of the state’s pure food and drug laws.

Topical Pictures of National Life Ok’d

(Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—The M P T O convention approved a suggestion of President Lightman that they should further their work by producing a series of short, topical pictures. The proposed films are to be devoted to the various phases of the national life and the progress of the United States. The films will be produced in cooperation with the state and local organizations of the M P T O.

(Toronto, Nov. 13.—Before “The Big House” was passed by the Ontario Board of Censors, Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, Canadian M G M distributor, was required to insert a sub-title announcing the prison character in the picture did not apply to English-speaking countries other than the United States. The board indicated that the feature represented prison life in any country but possibly the States.

Musicians Agree on Terms with Theatre Provided That (Albany, Nov. 13.—The Musicians’ Mutual Benefit Association of New York, which represents the professional musicians of the State, issued a statement on November 10 that it would enter into a new agreement with the Motion Picture Theatres of St. Louis on the terms submitted at the recent New York conference with the national heads of the theatres provided that the contract gave the musicians the same rights as the theatre owners to cancellation.

This one-way clause is said to be the chief obstacle to agreement and has been asked for by the number of musicians to be employed in any theatre.

Samuel P. Meyers, president of the St. Louis local union of musicians, and William A. Williams, business manager, who issued the statement, announced that the musicians are willing to resume negotiations with the theatre owners at any time.

A paragraph of the announcement follows:

“We, the Musicians’ Union of St. Louis, would agree to accept this contract which would give the musicians the same right and protection afforded the theatre managers under such contract; which is fair and equitable should allow both parties the same rights and privileges; if the manager has the right to cancel his end of the contract, that is, discharge the musicians after a few weeks’ notice, then the musicians on the other hand should at least have the same right to give a few weeks’ notice.”

J. F. Wallace, Manager of Albany R K O House, Dies

(Albany, Nov. 13.—Joseph F. Wallace, for many years manager of various theatres in this city and died last night of an illness of six days, caused by acute indigestion.

He was born in Albany and entered the theatrical field as a bookkeeper for the Leland, then owned by the late F. P. Proctor. Later he became treasurer of Proctor’s Gran theatre in Albany, and later assumed management of the house, having that capacity through Proctor’s ownership and then continued as manager when R K O took over the theatre a year or so ago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—It is denied by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers that the U. S. Supreme Court has refused to decide whether it is legal to play copyrighted music in theatres without the copyright owner’s consent, as was stated in a news story from Washington in the Herald-World of October 25.

According to J. C. Rosenthal, general manager of the society, the facts are that judgments were rendered against the several Texas theatre owners referred to in the Washington story, and these judgments were upheld by the court of appeals. It was the latter’s affirmation of the judgments that the supreme court refused to review, according to Rosenthal. Judgments were for $250 for each violation on which conviction was obtained.

Laemmle Increases Advertising As Aid In Drawing Patrons

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has announced a decided increase in the company’s advertising appropriation in an effort to combat the general business depression now affecting the motion picture industry.

Laemmle stated: “For first time in several years Universal pictures have uniformly made money for exhibitors at the box office, yet in the face of this sensational success we are increasing our advertising so much that it amounts to kicking the budget out of the window.” He expressed belief that the only way to break open hoards of wealth accumulated in the past few months of hard times is to “apply pressure of the stiffest, possible advertising campaign.”

Universal plans an increase of advertising space in trade papers, newspapers and in every other form of medium. Laemmle concludes his statement, aimed at exhibitors, with the advice to “advertise and advertise.”

Plagiarism Cloud Is Removed

Leaders Realize Production Field Would Have Tremendously Limited If Court Had Upheld Claim

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The decision handed down on November 10 by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, deciding in favor of Universal Pictures in the $3,000,000 plagiarism suit brought against the company by Anne Nichols, producer of “Abie’s Irish Rose,” in connection with the Universal pictures, “The Cohens and the Kellys,” is receiving the close attention of the entire industry.

Note how famous picture attorneys as the third such case in the legal history of the industry, this suit has been termed a crucial case because of the fact that it sets a definite legal precedent for the future in the matter of pictures produced which may bear some resemblance to a story or play.

The decision has the effect of clearing Universal from the cloud which had hung over the company and its pictures since the March, 1926, in connection with this picture. At that time papers were served against Universal Pictures by Carl Laemmle and Harry Pollard. Universal was defended by Siegfried F. Hartman, its general counsel, who was assisted by former governor Nathan Miller, as trial attorney. Trial started in December, 1928, and continued until January 11, 1929. A decision in favor of Universal was rendered on May 14, 1929, Judge Goddard entering his decree in July. Appeal was taken in October of that year and was argued on October 30, last, resulting in the recent decision.

During the four years before the settlement of this case, Universal is understood to have spent nearly $250,000 in the defense, only $10,000 of which, under the America legal system, can be recovered. It has been noted that the $10,000 counsel fees awarded Universal established a record for such proceedings in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Would Limit Production Field

Behind the keen interest with which motion picture producers watched this case was the realization that if the ground for plagiarism claimed by Miss Nichols’ attorneys was allowed by the court, the field of production on the screen would have been tremendously limited. Universal was also the defendant in the two previous legal battles, both of which were won by the producing company at a cost, it is said, of several hundred thousand dollars. The first of these, which was carried to the federal court of the United States, was against the Motion Picture Patents Company, involving the use of certain types of film in motion picture machines. The second case resulted in the Court of Appeals upholding Universal’s contention that in the dissemination of news in a motion picture newsreel, the producing company should be protected by the constitutional freedom of the press.
Quigley's Proposal of Exhibitor Aid At Studios Wins Commendation Suggestion of Establishing Rotating Committee at Hollywood Available to Producers Is Fine Idea, Writes Philip Rand

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY'S suggestion of establishment of a rotating committee of exhibitors available at Hollywood for consultation with producers for the betterment of motion pictures is winning widespread commendation from exhibitors as a factor toward complete cooperation in improving the popular appeal of productions.

"This is a fine proposal," writes Philip Rand of the Salmon, Idaho, theatre, adding: "If such ideas as these or others along the same line appeal to you exhibitors reading the magazine, won't you please write to the Herald-World and express your sentiments?"

Following is Rand's letter:

"I wish to congratulate Mr. Quigley on his editorial in the November number. He hits the nail squarely on the head when he says 'The only problem confronting the motion picture industry is the question of product—the quality of the product.'

"Exhibitors are unanimous in their desire for big hits. The people are shopping for their entertainment; fair pictures bring out only fair attendance, and fair attendance does not pay at the box office."

"Fine Proposal," Says Rand

"Producers of course are anxious to please the public and to make pictures that the public wants, but, as Mr. Quigley states, the producers, in ascertaining what the public wants, do not go far enough away from Broadway and the box offices, nor to a sufficient number of independent exhibitors over a wide area.

"Mr. Quigley suggests a rotating committee of exhibitors at Hollywood available for consultation with producers. This is a fine proposal. I had suggested in a previous letter that the Herald-World send out a questionnaire to exhibitors and to publish the results. Probably Mr. Quigley's idea is the better.

Urges Expression of Sentiments

"If such ideas as these or others along the same line appeal to you exhibitors reading the magazine, won't you please write to the Herald-World and express your sentiments? "We need more box office attractions. Won't you help get behind this and perhaps we may work out some favorable solution."

German Film Industry

"Annoyed" by Sarcasm Of Harassed Critics

[By special correspondent to the Herald-World]

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—Repeated attacks of the press upon the new domestic productions resulted in adoption of a resolution by the Spitten organization, directing body of the German film industry, condemning the attitude of the Berlin lay press reviewers and expressing the producers' and exhibitors' "annoyance at the sarcastic reviews." The critics have answered by forming an association to protect their interests against the attacks and their attitude remains unchanged. A typical statement on the condition of German talking pictures was made in a recent issue of the Berliner Tageblatt as follows:

"People who make such pictures are the same who grumble against Russian art, who want to keep embarrassing foreign competition through contingent carriers, and who take care that one hardly gets a chance to view the fine new talkers produced in America, France and Russia."

The patents war still continues and about 200 exhibitors who installed Kinoton sound equipment are the latest victims of legal entanglements. Although Kinoton successfully defended its patent rights against Klangfilm in the High Court some time ago and the Court of Appeals has reversed the judgment, the latter court found Kinoton guilty of illegally using Lichtenstein's patent rights in some of which are owned by Klangfilm. It is believed that Klangfilm will now ask for damages.

World Premiere of Spoor Depth Film in Chicago State-Lake

RKO's State-Lake theatre in Chicago has been chosen for the world's premiere presentation of George K. Spoor's third dimension film. The picture to be projected with the new film in RKO Radio's "Danger Lights," with the first showing scheduled to take place on the evening of November 15.

Spoor's invention is called "Natural Vision," a system by which not only height and width, but also depth are portrayed on the screen. A wide screen will be used. The third dimension device was perfected by A. P. Spoor and P. John Bergren, engineer and physicist.

The projected picture is said to retain all the natural beauty and proportion of the original objects photographed, eliminating the flat, shadowy black and white images.

New Building Erected—Production Will Still Be Separate—Ad Departments Will Be Separate (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Following the announcement of the consolidation of the Warner Brothers and First National sales forces, Jack L. Warner has issued a statement to the effect that the executive headquarters for all Warner Brothers, First National, and Vitaphone productions will be centralized at the First National Studios in Hollywood, Cal.

Since his arrival here several days ago, Jack L. Warner, in charge of production for the producing company, has been in conference on the plan.

Publicity Departments Merged

Hal B. Wallis and C. Graham Baker are to be co-executives in charge of production for First National pictures, and D. P. Zan-uck will have a similar position with respect to Warner Brothers' releases. It is understood from Warner's statement that the production units of the two companies will be kept absolutely separate and will function as two distinct organizations, though the cost of the establishment of an operating department to be headed by William Koenig with the title of studio manager. His position will entail supervision over the physical and mechanical details of production for both companies.

A new building has been erected on the First National lot to house the executives. Warner stated that in thus consolidating the executive headquarters in one location, he may best take advantage of the excellent facilities of the First National Studio, which has come to be known as one of the model motion picture plants of the industry. The studio occupies an area of 1,075 acres.

Co-executives Named

The publicity, advertising and exploitation departments of the two companies have been merged to take effect Tuesday, November 16.

S. Charles Einfeld, the present advertising and publicity director of First National, will head the combined organization. A. P. Waxman, head of Warner Brothers publicity, has been promoted to publicity counsel for Warner interests and will engage in special work concentrating on promotion of Warner Brothers product in New York and throughout country in the capacity of manager of the newly formed roadshow department.

This consolidation does not affect present staff personnel of either company.

Butterfield House Is Opened; Better Times Seen in Gross Returns

(BAY CITY, MICH., Nov. 13.—The Bay theatre, formerly the Bijou, and now belonging to the W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., was opened this week having been almost wholly rebuilt. The contractors left only three walls standing, putting in an entirely new front and completely readjusting the house into a motion picture theatre only. The seating capacity was increased from 750 to 1,050. Also, the Lansing theatre, rebuilt, has opened its doors.

"It is reported that the gross revenues of the 80 theatres which are included in the Butterfield interests are on the increase."

leaders as expressed in the resolution that such a reduction would result in an increase in return shipments by express.

Kent’s talk from the floor of the convention was straight from the shoulder.
The general manager of Paramount mixed no words in discussing the industry’s problems which have been met and problems which must be faced in the future.

Although it has been understood generally that Publix would eventually unload some of the smaller theatres which acquired in its expansion program, his statement that "many small houses are going back to progressive independents," was the first official acknowledgement of the trend in circuit ownership. Kent in his frankness astonished his listeners on several occasions.

"The progressive independent today," he said, "has as great a future as anyone in the business and I didn’t feel that way a year ago.

He advised caution in adoption of wide film, declaring that he did not believe that the time was ripe for its introduction.

Referring to wide film, television and other developments, he declared that he considered it unwise to "push them down the public’s throat.

"I laughed heartily at his introductory remarks when he said that "five years ago I wouldn’t have had the nerve to get up and talk before you exhibitors unless I could make a fast get-avy.

Kent is of the opinion that sound is adjusting itself rapidly insofar as production is concerned. His thought is that production forces are getting back fundamentals of the silent picture, using "sound only as an accessory.

"The new contract," he holds, "is the many things and some can be improved.

pictures that are a bit strong, to put it mildly. We have had several instances in out company where we expended mildons on clean pictures and got nothing but filmy, lousy support from the public. Take

He stressed here the necessity of producing pictures which will bring youth into the theatre.

Ask Action on Service Charge

Important in the business transactions was adoption of the resolution directing Lightman to confer with Western Electric and RCA on the service and part charges which are held by exhibitors to be excessive.

The time during the discussion of this subject there was every reason to believe that the fireworks of old were again sputaneous. Walter Vincent, Jack Miller and Willard Patterson, three great campaigners, started the ball rolling, with Ed Kuyken-dahl of Mississippi expressing some definite oppo-men were becoming order takers and charged anything they pleased. He said further that when he installed equipment and it finally the service charge of $20 or $30 a week would come down as the equipment increased.

He said that this charge remains the same, he added.

Kuykendahl sustained him and said that if there ever was a time when the reductions promised by Western Electric were necessary it was now. Now is the chance, he said, for the company to prove its sincerity.

Patterson defended Western Electric saying that the money spent in research should be returned into consideration, to which Miller replied that when he paid $14,000 for his portance to the exhibitor, Kent held.

Home talking pictures, he thought, should not be sold in competition to the exhibitor.

companies named.

Lightman Cites MPTOA Service

Lightman on Monday read his report of the year's activities. After reviewing all that had led up to the new standard contract conferences, he said, "It's a matter of saving money."

"Let it be said now that the Motion Picture Owners of America offered many constructive thoughts and in most instances got what we wanted. Our records can clearly show that.

"The thought I tried most to convey," he continued, "was that our organization stands for service—first, last and foremost. We are not going to hold any place that we were not invited. Oklahoma City invited me over. They were neutral. At their last meeting they voted to become members of our organization. And let me say here that four other strong state organizations are considering joining us, and the line thing about it is that it came from them and not from us. We trust our work is impressive and convincing enough to bring these units into our organization."

Tax Peril Demands United Front: Pettijohn

Says Zoning Will Rid Exhibitors of 14 Months Waiting

Ridicules Horwitz’s Claim That Myers Backed Him in State Censorship Plea

By CHARLES S. AARONSON

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—If 5 per cent of the taxation legislation due to come up before 44 state legislatures, after the first of January, is passed, the motion picture industry “might as well kiss itself goodby,” C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the M. P. D. A., told the opening session of the eleventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

With most states in vital need of taxation revenue to meet current institutional appropriations, he said, the motion picture industry has been brought under the attention of legislators by the “foolishly paraded dollar sign” and the flaunting of figures for salaries and productions in press and public.

“The conversion from silent to sound and talking pictures has cost the industry in the neighborhood of $500,000,000, according to Pettijohn, and the amortization of that tremendous sum will require from 10 years to 30 years in the case of some companies. The change, however, was a vitally important stimulus to the industry at a time when it needed it most, serving to save it from a worse situation than that in which it finds itself at present.

“In January, February and March of 1931,” stated Pettijohn, “the industry will face a situation unprecedented in its history, and optimism must be put out of mind until the spring.” The industry will not live, in his opinion, if it is forced to pay in taxation a sum which in all likelihood would amount to $300,000,000 a year throughout the country.

“There has never been a time in the history of the industry when it was more necessary for producer, distributor and theatre owner to stand shoulder to shoulder in a united front in an effort to cope with the serious situation now facing the motion picture business.”

“The time has come,” Pettijohn declared, “when the fellows who want to tear down have got to be put in the rear where they belong. This business is not a racket!” The answer is to make good pictures which can be played at a reasonable profit to the producer and exhibitor, and, in the opinion of the speaker, it can be done.

On the subject of zoning, he expressed the belief that there are only three important points which cover the situation thoroughly: first, pictures; second, theatres; and third, play dates. The average exhibitor is interested in knowing what pictures he can get, how much he must pay for them, and when he can expect to show them.

Points to Varying Condition

As for the first of these problems, he held that it is merely a matter of the number of companies producing and the number of pictures they make following closely the economic law of supply and demand. Price always will be a case of bargain and sale in purchase in much the same manner as in the sale of any commodity, he said.

Much can be done on the subject of play dates and both the sincerity and motives behind any attempts to attack this serious problem have been questioned, stated Pettijohn. There are in the United States as many as in which different conditions exist, he said, with a number of examples of unfair protection and unfair advantage by those in whose hands lies the greatest buying power.

He himself, he said, found several places in the United States where small exhibitors were forbidden to show pictures for 10 months after pictures after they had closed first runs.

“It is possible in this business,” said Pettijohn, “for films to get to the most modest theatre in the country within a period not to exceed seven months.” There is a big advantage to both the public and the exhibitor in early showing of features, he continued, and there is no reason for any exhibitor waiting one year or more for his pictures.

He stressed the point in this connection that the exhibitory cannot stand still, and expressed the belief that every territory in the country will have to cope with the same result that there will be no spot in the United States where an exhibitor will have to wait 14 to 16 months.

Pettijohn reviewed the situation in Houston, Tex., in which William Horwitz insists, according to the speaker, in playing pictures 40 and 50 days after the premier in Houston at a 5 and 15 cent admission.

The exhibitors of the city were justified in the objection they raised, he said, but Horwitz became president of the Allied Exhibitors organization of Texas and immediately released a newspaper advertising campaign in which he accused producers of being behind in release pictures and called for state censorship. (These advertisements are reproduced on page 37.) This, according to Pettijohn, has made a move on the part of Horwitz countering his rebuff in an attempt to gain unfair protection. Horwitz had claimed that Abram F. Myers, president of Allied and Pettijohn’s action in securing the necessity of censorship.

Pettijohn said, in this connection, “I can no longer continue the statement that those who make the pictures, and those who make them, that we are continuing a step ahead in the character of our screen productions. Only in that direction lies the largest measure of self-service; it is only by this means that motion pictures can contribute most to the life of this age. An art that lives for the day spreads the seeds of its own decadence. An art that ceases to move forward is as good as dead.

Growth Based on Social Aims

“Every time that the industry produces a better picture it is laying the foundation for a broader public appeal. Every time that an exhibitor shows a better picture, it is ensuring the permanence of his success. For the true measure of success is not necessarily your gross this week or next week, but where are you going to be two years, or three years, or five years from now?”

“Do me the future growth of the industry is inseparably joined to the constructive recognition of its social responsibilities. Few organizations have made such a statement.” Censorship, he continued, is ten times more serious since the advent of the talking pictures, by reason of the sound-on-film method, than it ever was in the case of the old silent. Censorship, in Pettijohn’s opinion, is the greatest problem, and the necessity has arisen for censorship from within the industry rather than from without.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—An industry better able than ever to aid business toward a restoration of public confidence and prosperity, was the way Will H. Hays characterized the motion picture industry in a letter to the MPTOA convention. Unable to attend the convention, Hays sent the following message to President M. A. Lightman:

“Dear Mr. Lightman: It is with sincere regret I must inform you that I now find it impossible to accept your kind invitation to attend the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, November 10-12. Try as I would, I could find no way of getting from business trip to the Coast during that period. However, I would like to deliver, through you, a brief message of greeting to the members of your organization.

In Best Position to Help

“The motion picture industry of the United States, I believe, has never been in better position to contribute by its own soundness to the restoration of public confidence and of national prosperity. Today, perhaps more than ever before, the responsible members of the industry, and all the branches of its service to the public, are working shoulder to shoulder in the solution of common problems. Product, distribution, and service are marching in close step.

“By the progress made in developing the entertainment, artistic, and informative values of the screen, the industry is creating the basis of a new prosperity. It is a tribute—both to those who show pictures and those who make them, that we are continuing a step ahead in the character of our screen productions. Only in that direction lies the largest measure of self-service; it is only by this means that motion pictures can contribute most to the life of this age. An art that lives for the day spreads the seeds of its own decadence. An art that ceases to move forward is as good as dead.

“Many time that the industry produces a better picture it is laying the foundation for a broader public appeal. Every time that an exhibitor shows a better picture, it is ensuring the permanence of his success. For the true measure of success is not necessarily your gross this week or next week, but where are you going to be two years, or three years, or five years from now?”

“To me the future growth of the industry is inseparably joined to the constructive recognition of its social responsibilities. Few organizations have made such a statement.” Censorship, he continued, is ten times more serious since the advent of the talking pictures, by reason of the sound-on-film method, than it ever was in the case of the old silent. Censorship, in Pettijohn’s opinion, is the greatest problem, and the necessity has arisen for censorship from within the industry rather than from without.
Say Independents Can Handle Legislation Best

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—The trend of several talks was that "it is good business" for the affiliated and independent exhibitors to be associated in one organization, for the independent is in a better position to handle legislation.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.

BROADWAY went on a rampage this week and leaped the Hudson and Delaware Rivers to settle down at Ninth and Chestnut streets in the Quaker City for the annual confab of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc. * * *

The place was the Benjamin Franklin Hotel and there wasn't one complaint on service. Even the house stenches were regular.

Off-the-record honors went to Oscar Hanson, Al Selig and Joe Rivkin of Tiffany, the triumvirate which last week staged one of the film industry's greatest parties with New York. Do they know their parties? Ask a couple of hundred exhibitors, film salesmen and press representatives.

The Benjamin Franklin could have used a dozen more elevators Monday night. M. A. Lightman’s dance on the mezzanine and Hanson’s twelfth floor rendezvous kept the “lift” boys busy. They automatically stopped at two floors.

One of the priz jokes of the convention was told by Arthur Hirsch and corroborated by Jack Miller. It concerned Al Capone, who, it seems, has projection equipment in his Chicago hotel suite. Here a few days ago, according to this story, one of his men went to Paramount for a picture. “What picture do you want?” asked the booker or whoever was handling it. “Man slaughter,” replied Al’s right hander.

For no good reason—or maybe there was—people this country over have had the wrong slant on Major General Smedley Butler of the Marines. He has been analyzed in his own words when he said at the convention banquet that these opinions all developed “while I was in the Philippines,” referring to the period during which he was brought here to “clean up” the town. Between five and six hundred men and women flocked to the banquet that they had him wrong. After hearing him talk and after meeting him one can readily understand why he is a Major General in Uncle Sam’s Marines.

May we say the following in the true spirit of friendship and as a tribute to a man who deserves it: M. A. Lightman is one of the finest personalities in the motion picture business. Cooperating with him in directing the national organization is a man who is held in the highest respect by the producers, the distributors, the affiliated and the unaffiliated exhibitor, and that man is M. E.—and though we are his junior we would rather call him Mike Comerford.

The esteem in which Mike Comerford is held in official and civic life can be compared only to the esteem in which a person is held in the house next door. The convention this week has been a tribute to him.

Southern hospitality will make itself apparent on November 30 and December 1 at the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, when the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee meet. Jeff Norman will be in charge of all convention arrangements. See Jeff.

Gar O’Neill of Pathe, does not realize the trouble he caused the trade press. Everybody stopping at the Benjamin Franklin outside of the industry, that is—wanted a set of his beautiful prints on Pathe star photographs, and for some reason all these people came to the trade press. It is an even bet that Gar’s prints got the widest circulation of any accessories in the hall.

Trolllers played their important role in captivating the convention. Pat Gurny was kingpin in the National Screen Service booth, with every registrant wearing his freshest carnation each day, aattaching delegate for Advance Trailer Morton Van Praag of Advance had a charming dispenser of red and white Rosettes at each session with the banquet thrown in.

It was our pleasure to meet again William Smale of American Seating, with whom we spent many pleasant hours a year ago at Memphis. We learned for the first time that Bill was one of the survivors of the North Shore wreck in Chicago and for several months had lain at death’s door.

This convention brought new faces into the National Exhibitor Organization. Among these were R. X. Williams, of Oxford, Mississippi, secretary of the Tri-State Theatre men; R. E. Christiansen of the LaSalle Theatre, Chicago and Van Huying of Kayese—and not to forget Ed Kuykendahl, who has many pronounced opinions on the problems of the small town exhibitor.

In stating this convention brought new faces into the exhibitor organization, we neglected the name of J. Harold Cohn, one of Mike Comerford’s most promising young men. He was a member of the important Pennsylvania delegation which assembled two men without whom no convictions would be complete—Bill and Jerry Cadoret.

“We’ll always have politics in our business”—Comerford.

Every one knew that once you got Frank Walker on his feet he could talk, but it was not until after his remarks at the convention that the reason for his splendid oratory was disclosed. He is an attorney.

The dance Monday night and the banquet and dance Tuesday night were made more pleasant by the presence of three charming women—Mrs. Lightman, Mrs. Blechele and Mrs. Oscar Hanson, the latter coming over from New York to be present Monday night at Oscar’s glorious party.

No one was busier during the convention than Jay Emanuel, whose duty it was to see that the clockworks ran smoothly. ABly assisting him was Paul Greenhagh.

“Europe wants pictures made in America.”—Comerford.

Irving Lesser of General Talking Pictures was called on Wednesday at the open forum with the question of whether he thought he had the right to come to the convention. He said: “I have been asked to tell why I came to the convention. I’ll tell you. I came home to have a good time and I have not been disappointed.”

Kansas and Western Missouri set their own little record with all presidents of the organizations since its inception, barring one, in attendance. Dick Liggett, Morton Van Praag, Dick Blechele and E. Van Huying comprised this unusual aggregation.

It would have been a pleasure to have had Jack Miller at the open forum but unfortunately it was necessary for him to rush out Tuesday afternoon so that he might be in Chicago Wednesday when 20 fire ordinance cases were on the docket.

Walter Eberhardt, who forgets business care for the next few weeks so that he may get the lowdown on Rome, Paris, and London, was an interested spectator Tuesday when a resolution complaining of Western Electric’s service and part charges was offered. It looked like fireworks for a while, with Jack Miller and Willard Patterson supplying the powder, but Walter had saved the day by offering the suggestion that RCA be included in the resolution.
$589,848 Contract to R C A
For Navy Sound Equipment
Apparatus. Built to Navy specifications, to go into Battleships, Shore Stations—Will Train Men to Handle It —Largest Single Order
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—R C A Photophone has been awarded a contract involving $589,848 for the installation of sound equipment in ships and shore stations by United States Navy Department. This is said to be the largest single order ever placed for sound equipment and was awarded R C A as the result of bidding which opened October 31.

The contract calls for apparatus to be built according to Navy specifications with delivery starting April 1, 1931, 30 battleships, 60 cruisers, 120 destroyers and the more important shore stations bring the total installations to 300. Arrangements are now in negotiation with 12 producing companies for a supply of pictures. Enlistees are to be trained to handle the equipment.

The closing of the contract marks the entry of sound on a large scale in the educational program of the Navy and follows the recent installation in 60 Army posts.

Charles J. Ross, executive vice-president, R C A Photophone, said: "We are extremely gratified that the Navy department has selected R C A sound equipment for the entertainment and instruction of officers and men who constitute this arm of national service. To have been accorded this recognition, following competitive bidding with other manufacturers and following exciting tests by the Navy, is a tribute which any manufacturer in the field might be proud of. This latest, and we believe the greatest single contract of its kind ever made has given our sound equipment a most substantial endorsement. I am confident that those of the equipment for educational as well as entertainment purposes will do much to establish the scale and importance of pictures as non-instrumentality of training and education."

Marie Dressler Rehired
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Marie Dressler, star of "Min and Bill" and "Anna Christie," has been engaged on a new long term contract by MGM. She has been given a straight comedy part in the new picture "Reducing," in which she is paired with Polly Moran.

U A Circuit Earns $1.18 on Common for Year Ended Aug. 31
Net Income $869,631 After Interest, Taxes, Etc.—Total Assets $2,069,511—No Loans
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—United Artists Theatre Circuit Inc. announces its financial report for the year ended August 31, 1930, a net income of $869,631 after interest, taxes and provision for depreciation and amortization. This compares with $1,113,572 shown in the previous annual statement, which included the profit realized from sale of minority interest in the P. C. T. Circuit of Great Britain.

After deducting $280,000 for preferred dividends on the 40,000 shares of 7 per cent convertible preferred stock there remains $589,631, equivalent to $1.18 a share on the 500,000 shares of common stock.

Cash stood on December 31, 1930 at $1,750,548. This compares with cash and call loans of $1,238,973 a year ago. Total current assets on December 31, 1930 were $2,069,511, and current liabilities $313,001. There were no bank loans. Consolidated balance sheets for the years of 1930 and 1929 give the following figures. In the matter of assets, theatre investments (1930) $6,544,869, (1929) $6,748,352; cash (1930) $1,750,548, (1929) $1,238,973. As to liabilities, common stock and surplus (1930) $2,396,978, (1929) $1,807,340; 7 per cent preferred (1930) $4,000,000; (1929) $4,000,000; theatre mortgages and purchase payments (1930) $2,188,222, (1929) $2,771,430.

It is understood that the management has under consideration plans for conservative expansion.

Brokenshire Signs Two Year Picture Contract
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Norman Brokenshire, well known radio announcer, has just signed a two year contract with Pictorial Cyclopedia, Inc., with offices at 630-9th Avenue, New York City. Pictorial Cyclopedia will produce 26 Talk-O-Graphs for 1931 with the personality of Norman Brokenshire in each one.

Week Ending November 12
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Following a series of daily declines in the market on the heels of the election returns, shares took an upward course and on Tuesday showed considerable activity in reaching higher levels, though in amusement stocks the results were mixed. Eastman Kodak was up 2¾, General Electric 1, but A T & T dropped 3¼, Loew's, Inc., 7-8, Paramount-Publix 7-8, Radio 4 and Warner Brothers 1½.

A gala event of the fall season on the coast, and one entirely in keeping with the Warner Brothers’ program of theatre expansion was the breaking of the ground for the new Warner Beverly Hills theatre at Wilshire Boulevard and Canon Drive. Jack L. Warner, Jr., son of the vice president in charge of production for the company, breaks ground with a gold-plated spade.

Louis B. Mayer of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has presented Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, the gold statuette for the finest screen play of the 1929-1930 season, the picture being “All Quiet on the Western Front.”

George Arliss was the honored guest at the recent opening of the New Victoria Cinema in London, where his most recent picture for Warner Brothers, “Old English,” was the feature of the programme. In the group are, beginning at the left, C. M. Woolf, Isadore Oster, A. W. Jarrett, George Arliss, A. E. Newbould and Mrs. George Arliss. The opening was attended by notables from all walks of life.

New York City. End of the line. And so Harold Lloyd bounds out (yes, you’ve guessed it) “Feet First,” in such a hurry was he to review the first showing of his recent picture for Paramount—well, we’ve already told you the title.
A distinguished group pose during a leisure moment for the cameraman at the Universal studios. Reading from the left we have Monta Bell, director; Erich Von Stroheim, who is noted both as a director and actor; Carl Laemmle, Jr., general manager of the Universal Pictures corporation, and Robert Harris, head of the scenario department at the studios in Universal City.

Bold, bad men of the far, far west (originally from Africa) in town of a Saturday night to try their luck at—we might say gambling. The Tiffany Chimps are seen here in a scene from the comedy, "The Little Covered Wagon."

Herman Rosse, Universal's art director, has been awarded the first prize for motion picture art direction during 1929-1930 by the Academy for his settings in the picture "King of Jazz."

Andy Clyde has evidently gone in for the study of bicusps, and although the way in which he is gleaning his knowledge may not be particularly scholarly in appearance, it nevertheless is determined. The title of this new Educational-Mack Sennett comedy is "Don't Bite Your Dentist," and playing in the picture with Andy is Daphne Pollard and Patsy O'Leary. We somehow don't envy the patient under Andy's scrutiny.
Ramon Novarro looks very much at home in a director's chair. The popular MGM player assumed the role of director and star in the making of the Spanish and French versions of his most recent picture entitled "Call of the Flesh."

Sam Wood, director of MGM's "Within the Law," couldn't find his star, Joan Crawford or his featured player, Marie Prevost, on the sound stage when he was ready for them, so he took a look outside and there they were, deeply engrossed in what Helen Wills was telling them about some of her exploits in the game which she has mastered. The problem in this picture (not very hard) is to find those mentioned above.

A life staked on the turn of a hand, a man and a girl bartering for a life, the life of the girl to a suave gambler or the life of a man to the girl who loves him. This is one of the tense, very tense, moments in First National's picture, "The Girl of the Golden West," which features the beautiful Ann Harding. Seated around this table, with a blizzard raging outside, is Ann Harding, James Rennie and Harry Bannister.

Blissfully unaware that anyone is even near them, seen Lawrence Gray and charming Marilyn Miller, star of the musical comedy, "Sunny," which is being "put to pictures" by First National.
World Boosts Its Purchase of Our Pictures Nine Million Feet

American Distributors Sold All Countries 210,000,000 Feet of Film During First Nine Months of This Year, Figures Show—140,000,000 Feet With Sound

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—American motion picture distributors increased their total exports to all parts of the world nearly nine million feet during the first nine months of 1930, according to preliminary figures just released by C. J. North, chief of the motion picture division of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The total for the period was 210,037,969 linear feet, with a value of $6,168,703, as compared with 201,137,429 feet, valued at $5,449,491, during the corresponding period of 1929. The largest portion of this increase is represented by positive films, which totaled 201,320,492 feet with a value of $5,549,206. Negative exports also increased to 8,717,477 feet, valued at $1,001,898.

Most of Footage With Sound

The figures do not show that the film exported during the 1930 period, 5,208,810 feet of negatives, and 132,259,381 feet of positives, of American pictures, either talking or synchronized.

For this period, exports to Europe reached the unprecedented total of 93,537,- 222 feet of motion pictures, this section of the world becoming by far the best market for American producers, the former leaders being Great Britain and the Far East, having taken less than previously.

United Kingdom Biggest Buyer

Of the European countries, the United Kingdom was by far the best buyer of American film product, importing nearly 10,000,000 feet more than it did during the first nine months of 1929. France, which stood ninth in the 1928 period, and seventh in 1929, went to second place in world standing during the 1930 period, taking 17,318,513 feet, which was more than double the amount imported during the 1929 period.

Canada, formerly the third largest market for American motion pictures in Europe, dropped from fifth to sixth place in the world standings, although it took near cx a nation theatre in the first nine months of this year than it did in the corresponding period of 1929.

Canadian Imports Increase

In Latin America, Argentina, Brazil and Mexico remained the leading importers of American films in that section, although their imports dropped. Australia, which led the world as a quantity market for American films from 1925 through 1928, has been so far this year only the third best buyer among the nations of the world.

Canada went up over its 1929 purchases, taking 10,609,548 feet, valued at $462,734, in the corresponding period of 1929.

During the nine-month period of 1930, the American export of sensitized unexposed stock increased by almost 50 per cent, while the American importation of similar stock declined approximately 150 per cent.

Warners Announces Four New Theatres to Be Ready by Mar., 1931

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Warner Brothers has announced that it will formally open four new theatres between the middle of this month and March, 1931.

The newly-constructed Warner Brothers theatre in Chester, Pa., was to open November 14. On January 1, the second and third of the group will be ready in Youngstown, Ohio, and Erie, Pa., and the fourth house will open in Milwaukee some time in March.

Construction has begun on Warner houses in Morgantown, W. Va., and Torrington, Conn. Contracts will be awarded in the next few weeks for an office building in Perth Amboy, N. J., to adjoin a theatre which will be built later.

Dave Miller Promoted To District Manager For U in Buffalo Area

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Dave Miller, for 12 years with Universal, has been promoted to a district managership, with headquarters in Buffalo, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Miller has held various managers' posts within the corporation in New York particularly. This appointment is said to be in line with Carl Laemmle's policy of promotion from within the organization.

Phil Reisman Leaves New York on Sales Tour

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Phil Reisman, general sales manager for Universal, left last week for the Coast where he will confer on production plans with Carl Laemmle and Carl Laemmle, Jr., at Universal City.

At the same time, Reisman will make an extended tour of the company exchanges on the way westward, and on the return trip east. His first stop was to be Chicago.

"Average" Films Make Poor Business, Says Derr

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The showmanship of the Wood entertainment and it's poor business to give them only average films. This is the observation of E. B. Derr, president of Pathe, based upon his experiences when, as an exhibitor, he was operator of the Broad theatre in Bethlehem, Pa.

The Pathe chief points out that this rule must be followed by both producer and the exhibitor who seeks success. "In production, it is quality rather than quantity that counts," he says.

Still Willing to Buy Films of United Artists, Says Fox Head

Fox Dividends Will Be Paid: Clarke

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film Corporation, has issued the following statement: "Fox Film Corporation is receiving many telegrams and communications as the result of widespread publicity caused by the effect that the next dividend will be passed. Fox earnings are running ahead of last year, and regular four dollar dividend will continue to be paid."

Milliken Talks to Quaker City Group on American Films

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, told members of the Philadelphia Forum at the Academy of Music on November 7th that four out of every five motion pictures to be seen abroad have been made in the United States.

He declared that the standards of motion pictures made in this country are steadily improving and pointed out that the film is a tremendous means of advertisement for American goods among foreign peoples. Frequently a great deal of American products they have just seen in a popular motion picture.

Mr. Milliken stated that as 250,000,000 people a week attend the 50,000 motion picture houses in the world and learn about the life and customs of their neighbors, it can readily be seen that the motion picture is one of the greatest means of developing friendly international relationships.

Fox Midwesco Begins "Spring Cleaning" Now as Aid to Unemployed

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 13.—To aid unemployed, the Fox Midwesco organization has started its redecorating and remodeling program of local and state theatres originally planned for the spring. Fourteen local houses and 28 state theatres will be included in the renovation program.

Work has been started on several local houses including the Wisconsin. A new marquee has been built and the interior is being redecorated. The back stage is being remodeled and new equipment is being installed in the projection booth. The Wisconsin recently replaced its staff of male ushers with 21 girls. The change is merely an experiment, it is reported, male ushers having been used by the theatre for many years.

New enlarged screens have been ordered for all the theatres and new seats are being installed in several of the houses.

Stahl Starts "Seed" (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—John M. Stahl has been given the first production assignment on Universal's special production, "Seed," the best seller by Charles C. Norris.

Schenck Silent on Fox West Coast Tilt

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Joseph Schenck said today that no further announcement on his Fox West Coast fight was forthcoming. Controversy is well up, but seems to be going back and forth between Schenck and Oscar Oldknow.

Jolson and Cantor on Personal Appearances

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—With Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor making personal appearances in Southern California and with other stars soon to be drafted for this purpose, Joseph M. Schenck this week began putting teeth into the ultimatum he issued a week ago to the Fox West Coast Theatre chain. In the original statement he charged that the Fox organization, with 400 theatres on the Pacific slope, was a monopoly and was forcing prices paid to producing companies so that the companies could not make a profit and still produce good pictures.

Jolson and Cantor were rushed to the Garfield Theatre, Alhambra, where a United Artists picture was playing, and other appearances were being arranged. The movement to have Jolson and Cantor appear at the Garfield was said to have been directed at the Pasadena situation where, it is reported, the United Artists Corporation has been unable to find a theatre in which to show its product.

Charles Chaplin and others of United Artists also are making personal appearances in independent theatres on the West Coast.

Willing to Buy, Says Clarke

Harley L. Clarke, president of the Fox interests, issued the following statement:

"Fox West Coast Theatres and all other Fox theatre organizations always have been and will continue to be willing to purchase United Artists pictures on the same terms upon which they purchase pictures from Columbia Pictures Corporation, First National Pictures, Inc., Fox Film Corporation, Paramount Publicity Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, Pathé Exchange, Inc., Tiffany Productions, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc.

"We shall continue, as heretofore, to exercise our best judgment in the selection of pictures to be shown to our patrons."

Offer Same Terms As To Others, Says Clarke

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Harley L. Clarke, president of Fox Film Corporation, has issued the following statement relative to the monopoly charge by United Artists in which the Fox West Coast organization has been termed "a trust attempting to stifle the highest development of the motion picture industry".

"Apparently United Artists Corporation believes that old-time standards still prevail in the motion picture industry. United Artists demand prices for their pictures whether the theatre makes money or not. Every producer except United Artists, nowadays, sells its films on merit, that is, a producer gets a percentage of the gross receipts. We have consistently offered to buy United Artists pictures on the same terms we pay all other producing companies and they have as persistently refused to sell."

Calls Remarks "Misleading"

"The uncalled for remarks of the leaders of the United Artists make it imperative that we say that they are misleading."

Clarke emphasized that the Fox West Coast Theatres and other houses in the corporation purchase pictures on a flat rental or percentage basis from Paramount-Publix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, Columbia, First National, Pathé, Tiffany, Warner Brothers and Fox film company. "Much as we would like to add to the incomes of the famous old-time actors composing the United Artists," Clarke stated, "we can only do so on the basis of the demands of the theatre-going public. We have always been willing, and still are willing, to give the United Artists their share of every dollar taken in at the box office because of their pictures, but we cannot give them a preferential position over all the other producers with whom we do business."

Calls Statement "Paradoxical"

"The statement was made with reference to our company that 'it intends to pay us less and charge the American public as much as ever.' This is apparently a willful twisting of the facts and is paradoxical, inasmuch as the public should not be expected to contribute more of its money for United Artists pictures, based on their merit, than it does for the pictures of other producers based on the public's preference."

"The whole situation is as simple as A B C. If United Artists have got the pictures, they can go to the bank and cash the box office receipts, and if they haven't, they can't. In spite of the over-zealous misstatement of facts, the Fox interests are still willing to buy United Artists pictures."
15 Years of Technicolor’s Progress Completed on November 19

Organization Formed by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus Has Grown to Be Important Factor in Industry—“Whoopie” Outstanding

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—On November 19, 1915, a group of Boston scientists, headed by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, began the exhaustive research experiments which have led to the present-day Technicolor Corporation now holds in the motion picture industry. The laboratories of the company today seem far removed from those days, 15 years ago, when a number of men had only an idea born of inventive genius.

ELEVEN years ago, Technicolor was able to give satisfactory theatre exhibitions of motion colors which were photographed under favorable conditions and printed on small laboratory scale. The most difficult hurdle, however, in the production of natural color was that of demonstrating with sufficient pictures produced under favorable conditions and with prints made on a small scale, but rather the transition from that to a full fledged commercial scale.

The first feature length picture made by Technicolor under normal studio conditions was “Toll of the Sea,” with Anna May Wong and released by Metro in 1921. Five years ago, Paramount produced Zane Grey’s “Wanderer of the Wasteland,” with Jack Holt and Billie Dove, completely in Technicolor, and two years later Douglas Fairbanks gave color another impetus by making “The Black Pirate.” However, it remained for sound to bring about Technicolor’s present success.

After Warner Brothers made “On With the Show,” an all-talking, singing and dancing picture in color, its success caused the company to sign a contract with Technicolor for more than 40 pictures to be photographed and printed for Warner Brothers and First National. Following this came “Gold Diggers of Broadway,” which it is understood, has grossed upwards of $4,000,000 to date.

Expands 700 Per Cent in Year

Following this, other studios began to seek Technicolor treatment with the result that the corporation had to increase its output 700 per cent in the space of a year. This meant the construction of new laboratories, manufacture of patented cameras and specialized machinery for use in the developing and printing process. Extensive research was needed to keep pace with sound equipment and hundreds of technical men had to be trained in the operation of the intricate processes.

When “With the Show” was produced, there were only eight technicolor cameras in the world. Now there are 50, representing an equipment value of $400,000.

“Whoopie” Called Best Effort

“Whoopie,” the Florenz Ziegfeld-Samuel Goldwyn comedy, starring Eddie Cantor, and distributed by United Artists, and photographed entirely in color, is said to be one of the finest examples of Technicolor photography. There has also been some discussion that the excellence of the sound in the picture was enhanced by the special manner in which technicolor films are printed.

Some of the Technicolor pictures now being shown or soon to be released include “The Life of the Party,” “Viennese Nights,” “Kiss Me Again,” “Woman Hungry” and “Fifty Million Frenchmen.”

Clinton Wunder Revises Speaking Dates of Tour For Academy in Midwest

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—The revised schedule of Clinton Wunder, executive manager of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, for the speaking tour in the Midwest, has been arranged as follows:

St. Louis, Nov. 18; Memphis, Nov. 19; Washington University, St. Louis, Nov. 20; Omaha, Neb., Nov. 21; Minneapolis, Nov. 23-24; Milwaukee, Nov. 25.

The purpose of Wunder’s speaking tour is to inform the public of the Academy’s work and other “inside workings” in Hollywood. He will address civic clubs, colleges, women’s clubs, educators, film boards of trade and exhibitors.

“Viennese Nights” Goes Into N. Y. Warner Nov. 26

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—“Viennese Nights,” the Warner special in Technicolor, is billed to replace “Outward Bound” at the Warner Brothers theatre November 26. This will be the world premiere of the film.

The picture portrays Vienna as it was before the World War. The original story was written by Sigmund Romberg and Oscar Hammerstein.
State Censorship
Appeal of Horwitz Draws National Ire
Prompted by Rebuff on Unfair Protection, Says Pettijohn—Myers Denies Supporting Move

It's a case of from the frying pan into the fire with Will Horwitz, of Houston, president-elect of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas. Following the appeal of the independent exhibitors of Houston to the Herald-World to present their case after the floor had been denied their spokesman, Dr. W. Allen, at the Dallas convention, Horwitz went to the newspapers of Houston with an advertising campaign in which he accused producers of making obscene pictures and advocated state censorship. Two of these advertisements are reproduced in adjoining columns on this page.

Draws Down Criticism

This latest move of Horwitz brought criticism from the national headquarters of Allied and from the speakers’ platform at the MP T O A convention in Philadelphia.

C. C. Pettijohn, chief counsel of the Film Boards of Trade, called the newspaper campaign an attempt to mislead after the rebuff given him in his insistence on unfair protection.

(Willie in his letter in the Herald-World had pointed out that "not only are pictures four months old when we (the Houston independents) get them but the public has had an opportunity to see that picture in two large downtown theaters run by Mr. Horwitz at 15 cents admission and one of these theaters, the Ritz, has an established policy of running re-runs.

Myers Denies Supporting Move

Afram F. Myers, president of Allied States, already has refuted Horwitz’s claim that Myers had supported his action and Pettijohn told the M P T O A convention that “I cannot conceive that Myers ever made such a statement.”

Pettijohn warned those at the convention that censorship is ten times more serious now in the era of talking pictures with sound-on-film, and urged that there never has been a time when it was more essential that all branches of the profession present a united front against harmful legislation.

$47.50 and $50 Set
As New Wage Scale
By Northwest Allied

(Special to the Herald-World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 13—W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest Theatre Owners’ Association, Allied unit in this territory, announces satisfactory settlement of the protracted opera house strike.

A standard wage of $47.50 is to be paid by theatre owners with one projectionist on 7 and 11 p.m. daily and 2 to 11 p.m. on Sundays for either track or double.

A wage of $50 will be paid for hours from 7 to 11:30 p.m. daily and 2 to 11:30 on Sundays, under the same conditions as those above.

Universal Books Films
On 30 Liners to Orient

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Universal has booked several pictures for showing on the steamers of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Line from San Francisco to the Orient. The deal was completed by Mr. E. H. Hodkinson, manager of the San Francisco exchange. The arrangement calls for bookings on 30 sailings.

Horwitz Appeal—An Open Letter From The WILL HORWITZ HOME- FOLKS THEATRES TO MAYOR MONTEITH, THE CLERGY, THE CITIZENS AND THE PRESS OF HOUSTON:

The Jazz Age—the era of great dishonesty—pausing. To its end we are returning to the brighter and better ideals which once made America America. You and I, fellow-theater owners—constantly for its clean living, devoted-minded citizens.

The Horwitz Theatres never have been crooked. We have held to our old standards of decency; have made our theatres SAFE FOR CHILDREN. In fact, Oculus—notoriety for its clean living, decent-minded citizens.

We are driven at last to protest vigorously against the action of the DEPRESSED- LESS PICTURES the Movie Trust is taking to us in the grand for the ALMIGHTY DOLLAR. They make these offenders and depend on talking pictures to have every exhibitor, unless our pictures are shown. It is in this state of affairs that we believe to take a stand because we are SECONDS RUN-HOUSES.

CENSORSHIP—STATE CENSORSHIP—IS OUR NEED TODAY!

Unless this growing evil of TALKING, PICK TALKING, and FILM TALKING is stopped, the Motion Picture Industry will have driven us and our homes, our women and children, into the mire of immorality. We appeal to you, God help our women and children. They can not and will not stand with clean feet.

Remember—if the Trust provides only FILTY PICTURES for our first run, then we SECONDS RUN-HOUSES, and give the Motion Picture Industry only loopy, low and LUSTFUL and FILTH to offer you. Our policy is low because the pictures already have been run once in Houston.

I AM ANGRY TODAY OF SOME OF THE PICTURES I AM FORCED TO RUN. But there is a remedy. And that remedy is to PREVENT the showing of SEX-NATY, FLESH-GLORIFYING, INDECENT PICTURES, WHERE IN OUR STATE.

This Motion Picture Trust has hand-picked them deliberately. No pictures can be shown in these states until they have been SEEN AND APPROVED BY the State Board of Review. And they have not been so approved and they are evil and they are abominable. This Trust is seeking to ENRICH sinners, any more naive, more innocent, more ignorant than those who have been LOVED ONES OF TEXAS?

How can we, as Christians, present by the State?

For months this has been a serious problem. It is only within the last week that the solution has come.

On the last week I was elected President of the Independent Theatre Owners of Texas which is affiliated with the National Independent Theatre Owners of America.

President Abraham Meyer, who quit the Federal Trust, called to the head the National Independent Theatre Owners of Texas. He is a man of the highest character and integrity who has been of the highest character and integrity who has been

So now, as the head of the Horwitz Theatres in Houston, as President of the Independent Theatre Owners of Texas, I offer this appeal to the Motion Picture Industry.

I appeal to you, Mr. Myers, to the President of the National Independent Theatre Owners of America—call on you, Mr. Myers, to the President of the Motion Picture Industry, the City of Houston and to the Clan-

We are calling on you to save our picture houses. We are calling on you to save our picture houses. We are calling on you to save our picture houses.

My appeal to you is this: YOU ARE THE Censors. It is your duty to see that the pictures are moral and decent. It is your duty to see that the pictures are moral and decent. It is your duty to see that the pictures are moral and decent.

We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures. We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures. We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures.

Look upon the innocence in the name of our women, and the innocence of the children. The innocence of the children. The innocence of the children. The innocence of the children.

Love your families. In the name of your woman, and the innocence of the children. The innocence of the children. The innocence of the children.

Years for decency.

FOR CENSORSHIP

A POSTCARD TO YOU

OPEN LETTER FROM THE WILL HORWITZ HOME- FOLKS THEATRES TO MAYOR MONTEITH, THE CLERGY, THE CITIZENS AND PRESS OF HOUSTON.

There isn’t a man in Houston for the ideal Texas bathe-life and the art of taking pictures that defines the minds of our women and chil- dren, in pictures, for the good of the community, one which must be stood, an matter of the least of the: case.

In an open letter to the Mayor, Father, Citizen and Press I asked yesterday for support as a non-political child’s advocate. The motion picture Industry IS CRUEL, OBSCENE, MOVIE PICTURES.

To the people of Texas, to the citizens, to the people of Texas, to the citizens, to the people of Texas.

We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures. We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures. We ask you to join us in the fight against evil pictures.

But—all asked the same question, that is, "WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO IN THE MEANTIME?" I will suggest until—B E F O R E THE LEGISLATURE ACTS.

Unfortunately that is true. The legislature does not meet until January 10. We can not expect a STATE BOARD OF REVIEW PICTURES REVIEW before spring. That means at least six weeks of harmful pictures, flesh-glorying pictures unless a measure is provided in the Moves."

But there is such a measure—MUNICIPAL CENSORSHIP TEMPORARILY.

I do not believe Municipal Censors can achieve the same results as a STATE BOARD OF REVIEW, but, given definite authority to veto "YES" or "NO" on picture offerings, the Municipal Censors at least can check up our motion picture screen and KEEP THEM CLEAN under the legislation has provided for a State Board."

Remember the national organization of Independent Theatre Owners, through its president, Abraham Meyer, to the Motion Picture Commission, has assured Houston and the entire state of full support of its policy. Re- "DOES PICTURES THE MOVIE TRUST FIELDS ARE FACING NO.

In the downtown there is a little to choose between the competition of the vile creatures who prey on young girls for immoral purposes, and other equally-geneous men who are willing to pounce their MINDS with TEN FLETH for the sake of ten after effects."

THE MORALS OF TEXAS HOMES ARE NOT THE MORALS OF THE DECADENT MOVIE PICTURES OF THE MACK SACKS OF THESE HORRIBLE EX-ED PRODUCERS. WE HAVE NO COM- MUNION WITH THEM. WE WILL NOT RUN THEM OR HAVE THEM RUN THEM FOR BEAR THEM FOREVER FROM THE STATE WHERE COMMISSIONS INDICATE NO MEN'S RESPECT AND PROTECTION.

HELP THE FIGHT FOR STATE CENSORSHIP in the movement. I ask, in the name of Houston’s WIVES, MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS, as a campaign for MUNICIPAL CENSORSHIP OF PICTURES UNTIL THE STATE BOARD BEGINS TO FUNCTION.

Yours for Decency.

A LADY'S MORALS

G RACE MOORE, opera soprano, may be quite unknown to the average motion picture audience, but her work in this picturization of one of the famous Swedish operas, Jenny Lind, is as fine as anything that could be desired on the talking screen. Her voice records perfectly, and is delightful, not in her acting and physical attractiveness any less so.

Reginald Denny, playing opposite as the young composer who feels he is not of sufficient position to have the singer return his love and goes blind following an accident in the gallery of the opera house, gives as excellent a performance as he ever has rendered on the talking screen.

The story, meant to be a little of the actual personal life of the Swedish “Nightingale,” centers entirely about the romance of the two. Every opportunity is taken through the adaptation to bring out the voice of Grace Moore, and each appearance of the star in a singing sequence is welcomed. It is true that the opera sequences have a tendency to draw out of the film or cause it to lag a bit in action, but the personality and voice of the stage and opera star more than compensate for any seeming slowing of the pace of the story.

Among the selections rendered by Miss Moore during the film are a bit from “The Bride of the Regiment” and a famous aria from “Norma.” Other numbers which the singer was composed by Oscar Strauss with words by Clifford Grey, including “Is It Destiny,” “Barcarolle,” “Italian Song” and a students’ chorus.

Herbert Stothart wrote a Swedish folk song and a number on the popular style, “Oh Why,” with lyrics by Harry Woods and Arthur Freed; “Lovely Hour” from the pen of Carrie Jacobs Bond completes the roster of selections.

Several of the sequences in the film are decidedly reminiscent of the old silent days, and, though attractive in a measure, are too sentimentally old fashioned to contribute anything to the effect of the picture as a whole.

It is very unfortunate that such a title as “A Lady’s Morals” should have been given this film. The title is misleading in view of the actual life of Jenny Lind and this picturization of the Swedish opera star.

Direction is uniformly excellent and photography good, with a scene of the opera house and Miss Moore singing the aria on the stage being particularly fine.

HEROES OF THE WEEK

THOUGH other members of the cast are definitely subordinated to the two featured players, capable work is done by Jobyna Howland as the companion of Jenny Lind, and by Paul Porcasi as the manager of the prima donna. Wallace Beery appears for a moment or two as P. T. Barnum, who has arranged for Jenny Lind to sing at Castle Garden, New York, where the star finds the blind composer who had disappeared, and the two are reunited to end the film.

This may be termed an excellent piece of work with a brilliant featured player—Charles S. Aarons, New York City.

CHARLEY’S AUNT

TAKING hold of that slapstick and hokum comedy, “Charley’s Aunt,” written in 1892 and portrayed on the American silent screen by Syd Chaplin, Charles Ruggles has whipped it into one of the funniest pictures we can recall seeing. Ruggles, who has been playing less satisfactory parts for a long time, bursts forth as a first rate comedian. His portrayal of “Charley’s Aunt” is filled with hokum situations in which he puts over with a slam because of his gestures, his facial expressions and his ability to read his lines.

The audience at the Fairfax theatre laughed lightly as the preview got underway, and ended in roars of laughter. The whole show revolves around Ruggles, all of the others in the cast feeding him one laugh provoking line or situation after another. And the cost of the cast is good, particularly Beery will Hobbes, who is an elderly guardian anxious to marry “Charley’s Aunt” because of her supposed fortune. Ruggles becomes shy and kittenish, and he follows her. The things he does while retaining his monacle are enough to tickle the risibilities of old man Gloom himself.

The story, of course, has been copied extensively because of its original success. Because of this, even greater credit must go to Ruggles and Al Christie for making it into a clowning, howling success.

Two youngsters at college fall in love with two girls, and the affection is mutual. Hobbes, the crabbled old guardian of the girls, is in financial difficulties and he hears about “Charley’s Aunt” and her money. The aunt fails to appear on schedule and Ruggles substitutes. Not only does Hobbes play the suitor, but he is the father of one of the boys, played by Phillips Smalley, does also. Ruggles’ main effort is devoted to getting a signed consent from Hobbes for the girls to marry the boys. The real aunt shows up.

The women in the cast lend love interest and pictorial background. The juveniles are particularly good, and Doris Lloyd does exceptionally well as the aunt of Charley, one of the boys. In fact, the supporting cast couldn’t be bettered.

The scenes are well laid, credit going to Charles Cadwallader, the art director. Photographic of a superior nature brings out the convincing settings, all laid at an English college, and in an English home. Charles Ruggles’ coining is even funnier because of the staid, solid atmosphere of respectability.

There are a few broad lines and gestures, but the humor which revolves about them carries them through. Ruggles, in my opinion, is lacking a stride which will take him into the front ranks of the comedians. His first really funny job was in “Her Wedding Night,” where he was the restoration of a cat sent the preview house into convulsions. That act involved just a fleeting moment. This time, he is the whole show, and he proves conclusively that he has the right to be—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.
THE CAT CREEPS

This is an adaptation of the famous stage thriller, "The Cat and the Canary," and is played by a very fine cast headed by Helen Twelvetrees and containing such box office names as Raymond Hackett, Neil Hamilton, Lilyan Tashman and Jean Hersholt.

It seems to this reporter that the stage play was more effective in its suspenseful moments and spine tingling thrills than the audible picture version, but there is opportunity in the film for striking atmospheric effects which were necessarily impossible on the stage and these have been fully realized on.

Audience reaction in the New York theatre emphasizes the desirability of having everyone see mystery pictures from the opening reel, rather than arrive at the playhouse in the middle or toward the end of the feature entertainment.

The theme of the play is probably a familiar one to most people. It concerns what follows the reading of a will 20 years after the death of the owner of an old mansion. Of course there is the old servant whose deep voice and long drawn face add the effect. Blanche Frederici does very well in conveying the mystery impression from the opening scene.

Theodore von Eltz as Crosby, the elderly lawyer, reads the will which gives the estate to Anna Belle, played with a good sense of the dramatic by Helen Twelvetrees, who proves herself a really versatile actress. A codicil states that in the event the heir is proved of unsound mind the estate is to go to the person in the name is contained in a third envelope, which is not to be opened except when the heir is proved insane. The plot follows this line of reasoning. Immediately thereafter, the cat begins to creep all over the spooky old mansion with several of his claw handed performances, until his identity is eventually discovered following a role reversal between the two main characters.

Neil Hamilton, as one of the agents to the house at the reading of the will, is capable in his role, as is Lilyan Tashman, who, however, has merely a supporting part. Elizabeth Patterson contributes what little comedy relief is meant to ease the tension of the film, as Susan, and is quite amusing as the frightened maid.

Photography is excellent throughout, with several interior shots that are highly important in maintaining the atmosphere of suspense and fear around which the play is built. Practically the entire picture is set within the old mansion. Direction is uniformly good, though it might have been more effective if less attempt had been made to create the weird atmosphere, since the audience was amused rather than fascinated.

This is good as an hour's entertainment and the work of the cast as a whole merits praise.—Charles S. Auronson, New York City.

HERO OF THE WEEK

CHARLES RUGGLES holds ranking as first-rate comedian in "Charlie's Aunt," Columbia comedy produced by Christie.

RENAIGNEs

The French novel "Le Ragent" has been adapted cleverly and intelligently to produce a swiftly moving and carefully worked out film concerning four members of the French Foreign Legion stationed in Africa. A fine cast throughout is headed by Warner Baxter as leader of the four, and Myrna Loy in the role of the war spy who was the cause of Baxter's joining the Legion following the betrayal of military secrets he had entrusted to her.

The desert background, against which the entire picture is set, is extremely effective, with several particularly good shots of charging Riff cavalry and a desert encampment which Baxter has made his headquarters after he and his companions deserted from the Legion and organized the desert tribes with himself at their head.

The four men form an interesting group, all giving excellent characterizations. Baxter plays a French officer of the army; Noah Beery is cast as a German and does well even to the cutler German accent in his speech; George Cooper impersonates an American who apparently knows his machine guns; and Gregory Gaye portrays a Russian officer.

In this connection, the dialog gives evidence of careful preparation, since the speech of each man appears indicative of his nationality and breeding. Myrna Loy is not only attractive but highly competent in her role. Baxter kidnaps her after his assumption of desert power and assigns her to his native sergeant to be treated as a servant. In revenge, she conspires with the Arab ruler to overthrow the Legionaire. Baxter has sent two of his men to bring in a shipment of machine guns and ammunition. When they are attacked by the Legion forces, they lose the arms, but trap the attackers in a fort. Baxter goes to the aid of the German, and is faced with the dilemma of killing his own former comrades or deserting the precious munitions. Meanwhile the Arab ruler has attacked the fort separately, and Baxter, suddenly turning his forces about, repulses the Riffs and saves the Legion, thereby earning the admiration of the girl he is himself killed at the girl's instigation.

The plausibility of the conclusion as well as its real punch indicates fine adaptation, while the direction is excellent particularly for the parts retained throughout the film, which does not lag in any instance.

Bela Lugosi, Hungarian actor of the legitimate stage, gives a fine performance in the role of a desert Arab with whom the girl exerts sufficient influence to satisfy her revenge against Baxter. Another high spot in the work of an excellent cast is the portrayal by C. Henry Gordon of the part of the captain of the Legion station. The role called for several dramatic sequences which he handles with a fine sense of the requirements of the part.

Altogether, this is a striking picture, crowded with action in a popular story setting and featured by a high class performance.—Charles S. Auronson, New York City.

THE BAT WHISPERS

ROLAND WEST, United Artists director who scored with "Alibi," gave the preview critics "The Bat Whispers," taken from the stage play, "The Bat," by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood, one of the most entertaining and thrilling plays of the night at the Wilshire theatre. The combination of scenic effects, intelligent camera direction and camera work and carefully placed set-ups and the preview audience an hour and a quarter of real entertainment and revealed conclusively what this play can do in the matter of making a picture a work of art.

West apparently has devoted so much time to making a pictorially beautiful picture that he has not emphasized as greatly the other factors which make an outstanding mystery thriller. Chester Morris, the hit of "Alibi," seemed to over-act his part. His makeup was so extreme that one was able to guess the plot.

The success of a mystery play is based on the fact that it grips the audience to such an extent that every spectator believes that he or she is playing a part in it. "The Bat Whispers" left me sitting right out in the audience, watching every move.

Whenever the audience begins to get thrilled and started gripping the arms of their chairs, the suspense was lifted by this or that. At the conclusion of the preview, Chester Morris stepped from his role, came onto a pictorial stage, and asked the audience not to reveal any secrets, so this hints me to waive the details of the plot.

The acting heroes are won by Maude Eburne who, as Lizzie, the maid, appears frightened in a most realistic manner and sends the audience into gales of laughter with her antics. The rest of the comedy relief, which includes Spencer Charters and Charles Dow Clark, is fast, snappy, and, as the four-leaf clover of the supposedly haunted house, gives a most convincing performance and is just the type of person Mr. Reinhardt selected to play in the picture.

Love interest is very modest, Una Merkel and William Bakewell being the enamoured pair. Gustav Von Seyffertitz lends atmosphere to the production, and his cold and mysterious portrayal of a physician.

The pictorial magnificence of the picture must be seen to be believed. A scene shot outdoors, which was supposed to reflect a house in the moonlight, was taken at night from the Phipps estate. The camera is fine, and the cameraman is also outstanding.

The elders in the preview audience found that "Love "frightened" their own adolescent experiences and enjoyed themselves, while the youngsters went wild at the antics of Mickey Daniels, Mary, and the other members of the cast.

Thelma Todd was especially effective as the actress who amused herself by "vamping" the male members of the cast, and in this way, straightened out their love entanglements with their girl friends.

One of the outstanding features of the film is the introduction of the characters and those who made the film by two girls, costumed as heralds. They speak both the names of those who participated and the names of those in the cast, and the effect is pleasing to both eye and ear.

Pathé—Sound
This review on the whole is about as interesting as an advertisement. For the hosts of anglers everywhere there is first feature, conspicuous particularly for its fine photographically, picturesque a fisherman casting into the waters of a mountain stream. The fish on the surface are seen striking at the bait, till one is hooked and drawn to the top. "Bagdad" gives a picturesque glimpse of life in the Orient, with several rare views of the Eastern mosques. Following is a real scene of the Arctic waters breaking on the rocky shores of the Northland. Against a beautiful panorama of sea as a background, with no life appearing in the picture, it is yet a fascinating and a suggestive view of the north with a fantastic conception of New York as it might be, if one had sufficient imagination or a nightmare. This is followed by a telephone call, a train, and a church, with a pageant on the river, and the people walking there, in a novel review idea. Appropriate incidental music accompanies the audio. Running time, 10 minutes.

Pathé—Sound
Another of the old-time popular sentimental ballads, sung by the review quartet, opens this review. "Silver Threads Among the Gold" is the present choice. One of the quartet introduces the number in a short explanation of the origin. The setting is in a parlor or a hall, according to taste, and is appropriate to 1930. It will probably awaken echoes of those in the latter half of a century or more.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

It seems that entertainment nowadays is not considered entertainment without a certain amount of thrills. An auto race at the county fair is looked upon as a failure unless a driver or two has a smashup and one or the other is killed. Perhaps the desire for thrills accounts for the popularity the public is getting out of "THE BIG HOUSE," and it is no doubt accounted for the drawing power of this picture. "THE BIG HOUSE," as you already know, has to do with a jailbreak in a penitentiary. Wallace Beery leads the attack, and he makes just the kind of a leader one would expect in Wallace Beery. As an actor, he has everything necessary to fill the bill and he supplies thrills aplenty, but as a machine gunner he'd make a good soda squirt, for he couldn't hit a flock of elevators, and the only thing he hits in this picture is the side of the prison wall and the atmosphere. Should Wallace go out duck hunting, we would advise him to take along plenty of sawhills, for he couldn't kill enough ducks to feed a June bug.

"THE BIG HOUSE" is an important picture from several angles. It has action and thrills, it has entertainment, and it gives one a first-hand insight of prison life that one could get in only one other way. When one sees this picture he ceases to wonder why so many people choose to live in New York rather than in a penitentiary.

As between "THE BIG HOUSE" and "UP THE RIVER," we would much prefer the latter picture. It also has to do with prison life, but it has a comedy angle that would not be expected in a picture of this nature. In our judgment, both of these pictures will stand up for extended runs where extended runs are possible, and there ought to be no walkouts on either of them. As we see it, both of these pictures are meritorious productions.

We note that Mary Mc Cormick, Chicago opera singer, has recently returned from France and brought a French chef with her to cook lobsters. Well, he'll find plenty of "em to work on down there. Betcha the boys in the HERALD-WORLD office are getting pretty nervous.

In reviewing "THE BIG TRAIL," we note that Douglas Hodge of the HERALD-WORLD staff out in Hollywood exposes a painful lack of knowledge of the geography of this country, for he says, "It follows the lives of a great group of pioneers from Missouri across the plains, over the deserts, into the mountains and then through the wilderness of Nebraska and Wyoming." Why Douglas, where were you when the geography class was called? Don't you know that there are no "deserts" east of the Rocky mountains? And don't you know that you cross Nebraska and the eastern half of Wyoming before you come to the mountains? And don't you know that there isn't "wilderness" enough in Nebraska to hide a jack rabbit? Why speak thusly of the garden spot of these United States of America? We repeat, why do you do it?

When our good friend Douglas went to Hollywood from Lafayette, Ind., he must have gone around the Horn, or by way of the Panama canal and missed the wonderful panoramic view of Nebraska and Wyoming, and if the director of "THE BIG TRAIL" has shown any deserts or wilderness in Nebraska, or shown the forming of a shallow lake and called it the Platte river, as they did in "THE COVERED WAGON," we hope the state sues him for damages.

You know, boys, in spite of the fact that he is a Hoosier, Doug is a right nice kid and shouldn't be held accountable for his birthplace. The trouble with him is that when the geography class was called he was down on the Wabash river fishing for bullheads. His mother couldn't do a thing with him, and when he got out to Hollywood someone told him that there was a "magnetic hill" just up from Hollywood boulevard that would pull all the cars right up that hill unless the brakes were set, and he believes it. You can't teach a Hoosier a darn thing, and there's no use trying to.

Speaking of mallard ducks, we told you sometime ago that about the last of October we were liable to come home and go to Cherry County and do a little shooting. Well, we did, and you saw a picture of what we did in the HERALD-WORLD. If that picture don't prove to you how to handle a shotgun to your satisfaction we will refer you to Henry B. Walthall of Hollywood— he knows. And if that don't satisfy you, we will send you the cold storage receipt.

In reviewing "SWEETHEARTS ON PARADE," Tom Hacker says that it is "good program fare." Now, we don't want to question Tommy's judgment, for he's a brilliant young man and we like him very much. But our judgment is that if you take nothing from nothing, the result will be "SWEETHEARTS ON PARADE." In making this picture, Marshall Neilan must have used subtraction instead of addition, for had he added about 18 inches more to the height of the bathtub in which Alice White was taking a bath, and a dozen or 15 yaps watching her through a window, there would have been no incentive for making the scene. A gob and a marine fall for Alice. Just why nobody is able to guess. And in the falling, they have a mixup and nobody gets licked. Then the gob and the marine go away for target practice on their ship, hoping in their absence a big guy should on and off Alice a tubeful of pearls and a few seal skin coats and takes her on his yacht, where they put on a whoopee party in which several people get drunk. At this point, knowing that the audience would require plenty of liquor to properly enjoy the festivities, and Neill being a dry town, we got up and left, and that's all we know or care to say about it, except that "SWEETHEARTS ON PARADE" proves the elasticity of the Hayes "Code of Ethics."

Tommy says, "The picture is clean and wholesome entertainment, with not one broad gag or bit of dialog that offends, as against the unnecessary smut that is not uncommon in this type of sailor yarn." All right Tommy, we stand corrected. But our opinion remains the same.

After "COMMON CLAY" comes "ROMANCE," with Greta Garbo and Lewis Stone. When Miss Garbo made "ANNA CHRISTIE," we thought she had reached the pinnacle of success and that there was nothing left for her to work for, but in "ROMANCE" she achieves the greatest success of her career, if we know anything about pictures and careers, and there seems nothing left for her to do but stand still or slip backwards.

"ROMANCE" has the most sensible dialog of any picture we have yet seen, and it gives us hope that the importance of this feature in entertainment will eventually come to be realized by producers of motion pictures.

There is too much playing to the frivolous and dizzy, to much of a tendency toward the Nick Carter type of screen literature, and it's our abie, got back to sensible dialog with more pictures like "ROMANCE" and see if there won't be less complaint from the box offices of the country.

MGM Leaders Confer on Big Plans for 1931 Productions

Construction Work Alone for Enlarged Schedule Involve Expenditure of Hundreds of Thousands—Officials Confident Business in General Will Spurt in Next Few Months

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Following the announcement, greeted on all sides with enthusiasm, that MGM would produce as many foreign versions as English during 1931, a conference got underway today among executives of the organization for enlarging the company’s activities until it covered even a larger scope.

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of MGM, J. R. O’Brien, general counsel, and Charles Moskowitz, an official of Loew’s, Inc., arrived here for the conference this week. Also attending will be Louis B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg, Arthur Loew, in charge of foreign activities, and Felix Feist, general sales manager.

Many Big Specials Planned

The conference will decide on the bulk of the plans for next year, which will include many elaborate specials with famous stage and screen stars, in addition to the increased foreign language schedule.

The new schedule, doubling the studio’s activity, means that a large sum of money will be spent in making the pictures. Labor, construction plans, employment of players and technicians, and doubling of purchase of supplies and materials are involved. Construction work incidental to the new schedule will also involve spending hundreds of thousands of dollars, it is said. MGM officials express themselves as confident that the current business depression is at an end and that other industries, as well as motion pictures, will spurt during the next few months.

‘U’ Writers Busy

Universal City writers are working overtime this week, adapting stage hits and original stories to the screen. Tom Reed is working on “Steel” and plans a tour of steel mills for atmosphere. Leonore Coffee is adapting Charles G. Norris’ “Seed,” Erich Von Stroheim is high in the hills applying himself to the script of “Blind Husbands.” Kenyon Nicholson and Ann Price are busy on “The Up and Up,” Mary Hunt, Wells, Edward Luddy and C. Jerome Horwin are on an original story, John Wexley is writing an original and Fins Fox is adapting “Murphy Go Round.” Houston Branch is doing an original story. Gladys Lehman is through with “Many a Slip,” but Neil Brandt is preparing an original story and Monta Bell and James Whitaker are busy with “Fire of Youth.” Jack Moffitt has been signed for an original story. The serial department is busy, also.

Owlsley Signs

Monroe Owlsley, the juvenile who smashed through to success after only a few months in Hollywood, has signed a long term Paramount contract and will soon be working on “Strictly Business” with Claudette Colbert.

Wallace in New Job

Richard Wallace was so successful in directing Ruth Chatterton in “The Right to Love,” in which she played a dual role, that Paramount has assigned him to the megaphone in “Death Takes a Holiday.” The cast has not yet been selected.

Tiffany Active

On the Tiffany list is one Western special starring Ken MacDonald, a two-reel comedy with the Chump family and a two-reel underworld comedy featuring Paul Hurst. The Maynard special is “The Midnight Stage,” directed by William Nigh. Jeannette Loff has the feminine lead. Frances Hyland is winding up the script on “The Single Sin.”

Joan Bennett Busy

Joan Bennett has been loaned by United Artists to Universal and will co-star with Lewis Ayres in “Babes Won’t Tell.” She has a new United Artists contract which requires that she do eight pictures a year but she is free to work elsewhere when her services are not in demand. Miss Bennett was scheduled for “Smilin’ Thru” for United Artists, but this has been postponed.

Football

“Let’s Go Pickin’,” comedy on football, has been finished by Universal. Monte Collins leads. Stephen Roberts directed. Dick Alexander, Marion Shockley, Pitzie Katz and Jack White are in the cast.

“Dirigible” Soon

Frank R. Capra, Columbia’s top director, is using two stages and is working night and day with a double technical crew to get “Dirigible” into the theatres. Jack Holt and Ralph Graves again, of course. The United States Navy is cooperating.

Newmeyer’s New Job

Fred Newmeyer will direct “Subway Express” for Columbia. It is a mystery melodrama by Eva K. Flint and Martha Madson, and bowed to the public via Broadway. Jack Holt and Fred Kelsey will be featured. They worked together in “The Donovan Affair.”

“Aloha” Completed

Al Rogell, producer-director of pictures for Tiffany release, has completed “Aloha,” his special feature. The cast is headed by Ben Lyon, with Raquel Torres, Thelma Todd, Alan Hale, Marian Douglas, T. Roy Barnes, Robert Ellis and Donald Reed backing him up. Rogell calls it “lavish”; it has 37 interior sets, among other things.

HOLLYWOOD

Mr. Garfinkle, the best salesman in the whole exchange, is talking to Joe Holstein, who owns the Peekaboo Movie Emporium. Mr. Garfinkle is trying to sell Mr. Holstein his company's product for the new year, but Mr. Holstein is doubtful.

Garfinkle: Like a brother I'm talking to you. Why don't you buy our pictures and be done with it?

Holstein: Ah ha! Buy your pictures and be done with it. Just like I suspect. Buy your pictures and I'm done with the business.

Garfinkle: Listen, Joe, this is no time for jokes. I'm talking to you man to man. Here we offer you pictures with the biggest stars in the industry, Mary Moozle, Ida Filch.

Holstein: Ida who?

Garfinkle: Ida Filch, Ida Filch, what's the matter, you never heard of the big Broadway star, Ida Filch?

Holstein: No.

Garfinkle: Joe, stop your joking, you'll get me angry. Every idiot knows Ida Filch.

Holstein: I'm not running an insane asylum. No idiots see my pictures. If you think you can palm off this Finch person on me for the price of a special you're crazy, I'd sooner open a golf course.

Garfinkle: Her name is Filch, not Finch, you're making me mad, Joe. Such a product we got! A wild west story.

Holstein: Old fashioned.

Holstein: Again horse racing pictures?

Garfinkle: Joe, you're making me mad, this product is absolutely the best in the industry. Why, "Paris Green" alone will gross even more than "Oh, Ho, Ohio" did last year.

Holstein: I lost $200 on "Oh, Ho, Ohio."

Garfinkle: Listen, Joe, don't exaggerate. Always you're losing money, and last month you bought a new car.

Holstein: Who's asking you about my private business you big nose you. All I need now is you tell everybody this territory is making a lot of money so maybe Warners and Paramount and Fox and Radio should build theatres here tomorrow.

Garfinkle: I give up. Better I should try and sell a sailor roller skates.

Holstein: Noo, get out for my part. I lose money now, I could lose money without your company. Good buy.

(Garfinkle picks up his stills, his books, and begins to leave. Holstein calls after him).

Holstein: Moe!

Garfinkle: What!

Holstein: I'm going to play at Sam's tonight.

Garfinkle: Why not? But remember, no more than a quarter limit.

Holstein: Sure, sure.

Garfinkle: You better call for me, so the missus can pick up your wife at the house.

Holstein: All right.

Garfinkle: Well, dumber, you going to sign this paper or not?

Holstein: I'll sign it, I'll sign it, good-by the whole business. I'll lose every cent. I want to wait for the other salesmen. Every year it's the same. Believe me, next year.

Radio Pictures' Lot Has Lumber Mill, Power Stations and "Bank" Employs 100

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Talking pictures have increased employment conditions and are proving an important factor in the general prosperity of Los Angeles workers. In the silent picture days, when the Radio Pictures employed about 750, it was a busy week when 500 people were working.

Now, it is considered a dull week when less than 2,000 people find employment not including stars and featured players. The studio operates its own power plants, plaster and reclamation works, fire, and police departments. It is a city within a city, operated on a scale that makes traffic officers necessary.

Property Department Like Store

The property department of the studio is the counterpart of a four-story, metropolitan department store, completely stocked as those in any large city.

The electrical, paint and plumbing shops on the lot are employing hundreds of men, never suffer a lage of business. From the tax to five units are making pictures continuously. The textile industry is well represented, the wardrobe department, for example, is made up of 60 to 200 tailors, dressmakers and seamstresses. A battery of fifty sewing machines hum all day.

100 Persons Work in "Bank"

The cashier's department is the studio's "bank," manned by approximately 100 employees, a staff quite as large as that of a banking institution of any large city.

If the studio's business heads, executives, directors and technical men were situated in one building, their offices would require at least a six-story structure, and the door plates would correspond to those of any metropolitan elevator. Offices such as "Production At Law," "Designers," "Physicians," "Surgeons," "Investigator," and other listings identified with the business and professional world.

Roach Adding Sequences To Laurel-Hardy Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—In an effort to make "Their First Mistake," originally titled "The Rap," starring Laurel and Hardv, louder and funnier, Hal Roach is adding sequences to it before it is finally released for the entertainment of the millions of Laurel and Hardy fans.

Neil Hamilton Signed For Lead in Cruze Film

Begin Shooting "Stolen Heaven" At Paramount Eastern Studio

George Abbott Directing Nancy Carroll—Many Players in Vitaphone Varieties Considered for Feature Roles Six More Shorts Coming from Norworths

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—After a period of inactivity at the Paramount Eastern studio in Astoria, production has started under way again. Rehearsals for "Stolen Heaven," the Nancy Carroll starring picture, have begun this week, with actual shooting scheduled for today. George Abbott is directing Miss Carroll in the film, which has Phillip Holmes, newly arrived from Hollywood, in the leading male role opposite the star, with whom he played in "The Devil's Holiday."

According to an announcement by Jesse L. Laske, vice president in charge of production for Paramount, Maurice Chevalier and Ernst Lubitsch are to be reunited at the New York studio, the name and nature of which has not as yet been announced, will go into production about the first of next year, but Lubitsch is already in New York, where he has taken over the position of supervising director of the Eastern studios.

Chevalier, now in New York shortly before the Christmas holidays, and immediately set to work on his new role. The French star also is scheduled to make another production in the East following the new one.

Carolyn Putnam Returns

Carolyn Putnam, fashion creator at Paramount's Astoria plant, has returned to the city following her vacation. She will choose and design the gowns worn by Miss Carroll in the forthcoming "Stolen Heaven," and then devote her attention to Claudette Colbert's wardrobe for her next picture, tentatively titled, "Strictly Business."

Warner Brothers executives are keeping a close watch on activities at the Brooklyn studio where the Vitaphone Varieties short subjects are produced. Many players, it is said, now appearing in the shorts, are being considered from time to time for feature picture roles.

A Finishing School

Evelyn Knapp is noted as an example of a star who made her debut before the camera on the short subject set. Other mention should be made in the same way are Joe E. Brown, Robert Emmett Keane, Joan Blondell, Noel Madison, Lotti Loder and others.

The Brooklyn studio is in a sense the finishing school for future screen lights. Winnie Lightner received her first training there, and then went on to featured parts in full length productions. Her work in several shorts over a year ago, led executives to give her a contract.

The "Naggers" series, in which Mr. and Mrs. Jack Norworth are starred, have proved so successful among comedies at the studio, that Sam Sax, production manager, and Murray Roth, director in chief, have taken up their option on the two comedy players for six more of their domestic shows.

Fifth of First Series Done

They have just completed the fifth of the first series of six one-reelers under the direction of Alf Goulding, entitled "The Naggers Go Rottung." An Austin baby car is used in one of the sequences showing difficulties of driving at a high ball game.

Charles Lawrence, Broadway comedian who appeared in H. J. Phillips' Vitaphone Varieties number, "The Substitute," has made a new one-reel comedy, entitled "One Way Out" under the direction of Arthur Hurley. Lawrence is co-featuring with Thelma White in the "Vanities" Others in the cast are Bernard Randall, Jean Gabriel, Frank Kingsley and Gil Squarey. A. D. Otvos wrote the script.

Warners Moving Studio To Burbank; Will Open New Quarters on Dec. 1

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Warner Brothers is moving to Burbank. By the time the studio opens December 1, all of the equipment and properties will have been removed from their Sunset boulevard location.

What will be done with the old site is not known, but it is reliably reported that real estate values will necessitate a sale.

Stage Surprise Wedding

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Stealing a march on all but their closest friends, Jimmy Fidler, publicist, and Dorothy Lee, who has been playing with Wheeler and Woolsey in their Radio Pictures releases, fled to San Bernardino last Friday and were married. Dorothy had to be back in Hollywood yesterday to begin work on another Wheeler and Woolsey story for Radio Pictures.

Use My Yacht? Sure

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Leo Meehan's friendship for Al Rogell went to a test the other day—and friendship triumphed.

Both are directors. Al asked Leo to use his yacht, "Sandy," for the Tiffany picture "Alola." Meehan gave him an unqualified "yes."

Una Merkel for Cruze Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Una Merkel has been signed by Samuel Zierler, president and production executive, to play the leading female role in "The Command Performance," the James Cruze production now in preparation.

Urges Actors to Aid Civic Theatre Movement

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 13.—Bela Lugosi, lead of "Dracula" for Universal and number one in civic theatre movements, has written many noted players here urging them to cooperate in the civic theatre movement in Hollywood, believing that this avenue of endeavor may uncover new talent.

Lugosi has no official connection with the repertory theatre here, but he is helping out because he realizes what those performers connected with it are up against when it comes to support.

F. H. RICHARDSON on PROJECTION

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 62.—(A) What does a battery give off in charging? (C) Is it dangerous, and if so, why? (D) Is it safe to examine a charging storage battery, using a lighted match or other open light source for illumination? Explain.

DOWN IN THE LONE STAR STATE

[Until further notice all communications to this department should be addressed to F. H. Richardson, 43-38 Thirty-ninth place, Long Island City, N. Y.]

ALPINE, TEX.

We left El Paso at 10:45, drove 235 miles over roads, some of which were excellent, and the rest were not very bad, but we could have come by way of Alfa and out at Alfa five o'clock. Noticeing a very pretty theatre front, I made it my business to drop in and say hello. The name of the theatre is the Granada. The manager was out, so I left a card and went up and had a talk with Projectionist B. E. Perdue. He is putting on a programme image and good sound, too, though I will say I didn’t pay very close attention, because there was work to do and I was in a hurry.

That evening, Manager E. E. Mol knocked at our door and we had a very pleasant chat. The Granada is one of a chain of theatres owned and operated by Oscar Korn. The chain is called the O. K. Theatres.

Manager Mol and Projectionist Perdue knew of me, and although we had never met, still we were, in a way, friends. That is one of the best things about this sort of work. I do not meet one projectionist in a hundred whom the Bluebook and the department in the Herald-World has not helped. It is very pleasant to walk into a theatre in a perfectly strange city and find the hand of friendship extended.

Manager Mol tells me that his experience of almost 20 years in managing small town theatres has taught him that 50 cents admission is the maximum that small town patrons will stand for. We held some discussion with regard to wide film, but the problem wide film will present to the small town theatres is a large one, because very few theatres are large enough to accommodate such a screen image. It really seems to me (and with that opinion Manager Mol agrees) that wide film can only be available to small towns as new theatres replace the old.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

Well, here we are in what San Antonians call the Queen City of Texas—though possibly Dallas, Houston, Galveston, etc., might enter into argument with them on that point. Friend Daughter and I have “done” the historic old Alamo, where that old pioneer, Davy Crockett, and his band of faithful followers made their last stand and died in the defense of the freedom of Texas. It is a sacred place to every citizen of the Lone Star state, and is beloved, as well, of every true citizen of the United States of America.

One feels rather awed as he enters those grim rooms of stone and sees in his mind’s eye that little band of men in air filled with powder smoke, fighting until the last one sinks down dead. There is somehow a solemn grandeur about that sort of thing.

San Antonio is now a city of about 300,000. It has about 15 motion picture theatres. Publix has three houses, RKO one, and Victor four suburban houses. All the rest are independently owned. In addition to the above, there are about five Mexican theatres—that is to say, theatres owned and operated by Mexicans and patronized almost entirely by the large number of Mexican people resident in San Antonio.

Local No. 407 has 23 members. There are, in addition to them, six men from other local’s working on permit. The wage scale is in three classes: namely, $50, $62.50 and $82.50, the latter for deluxe houses. Business Agent W. B. Keeler informs me that the managers are very good about keeping the equipment in good condition.

The officers of the local are Charles Breuning, president; A. P. Hatfield, vice president; Benno J. Kuesenberger, recording secretary; G. Muller, financial secretary; and W. B. Keeler, business representative.

The only theatre I inspected in San Antonio was the Aztec, a Publix house, in which was found as excellent sound distribution as I have encountered in any wide auditorium. It has one horn pointed directly back to the center of the auditorium, two horns set to take care of either side of the main auditorium floor, and two additional horns to supply the balcony. The result is indeed excellent. I could detect very little, if any, difference between the sound at the center and at the extreme sides.

The theatre is finished in what they denominate Aztec style, which consists in—well, I hardly know how to describe it. It is of course of plaster, but the effect is of walls built of huge blocks of rough, very old brown stone, with Aztec heads and similar decorations. The effect is very pleasing. In the large foyer is a chandelier containing 365 “candles,” which latter, of course, have tiny electric globes enclosed in a “flame” covering. The theatre seats 2,455. Its admission prices are 15, 25, 35 and 50 cents.

The projection room is very good. It is equipped with Simplex projectors, using Peerless lamps. I am told that the Western Electric sound equipment is the third one ever made. They have recently installed two sets (six to the set) of Philco batteries, which Projectionist J. L. McElvea says have improved things very greatly. They use one of the sets for six hours, then recharge them while the other set is in use. This takes from seven to eight hours. The projection staff is composed of J. L. McElvea, Roy Cogdill, William Keller (business agent of the local), and Walter Tiney.

The meeting was held in the Aztec at midnight. It was attended by all members. of the local, and also, I believe, by some of the managers.

EXHIBITORS

AUSTIN, TEX.

We left San Antonio in a good strong drizzle, which later developed into honest-to-gosh rain. The pavement was one of those that, when you ski all over Kingdom-Come on, friend Daughter drove the first 50 miles, and several cars followed. I don't think I could politely classify her as feminine propriety. However, I'll give her credit, she got away with it. She was driving up any corner we came to. Then I took the wheel for the rest of the run, and right pronto one of these dear little girly things, driving a big bus, came around the curve, whereupon it was smash or ditch, so into the ditch of mud we went.

The car had run off the road (which same girly girl did not) and offered to pull us out. Also, a chump driving a big truck did the same thing, and in ten minutes we were back on the road all hunky dory.

Austin is, as you know, the capital city of the Lone Star state. It has but three large theatres, two of which are owned by Publix. The weather was so miserable that I only visited these two.

A. W. Mauritas, an old-time projectionist and member of Austin local No. 205, did the honors and showed a good turn. The Queen (Publix) theatre has excellent picture projection and very good sound. It has a lunette with a projection distance of 85 feet, and the picture is 15 feet wide. The projection room, however, is only about nine feet square, with a seven-foot ceiling. Simplex projectors are used, equipped with Peerless lamps, in which are Strong reflectors. The sound equipment is of the newest order, and the whole setup is supplied by 30-amperes arc rectifiers. The equipment seemed to be in good condition and was operating on a high note. The projection staff is composed of Bay Wilson, Paul Martin, Charles Schubert and Tai Parker.

Over at the Paramount theatre I found a brilliant screen illumination and very good sound. The Paramount is managed by Erwin Waite. The projection staff is B. M. Baxter, Lee Bammel, C. H. Barr and E. B. Ischy. Ischy is secretary of the local. Noticing that the legs of these gentlemens seemed well developed, I counted the legs down to the street. There were 75 of them. Why they didn't put the room on the roof and be done with it, I don't know. I simply know. I have been told they sacrificed a few seats in order to keep it in the theatre at all. However, it is an excellent room for seeing, and the projection staff is composed with Simplex projectors, Peerless H.I. lamps and Western Electric sound equipment. The boys are using 70mm, and, as I said, with excellent results. The screen is brilliant. Also, I noticed they are using Philo batteries.

Austin has a population of about 53,000. The local has 300 members. Its officials are, president, B. M. Baxter; vice president, Patrick Parker; secretary, E. B. Ischy; treasurer, W. R. Dunn.

HOUSTON, TEX.

From Austin to Houston was a bundle of excitement. We passed along the very worst your editor has tackled in 200,000 miles of pushing the landscape backwards. It is a new road, not yet surfaced, and when the wheels were not going down in a chuckhole, they were hanging out in a mudbank, or smushing up the mudbanks with those spying traps attached to the shock absorbers. About halfway through, "The Princess" yelled at me, in her automobile was "Hello, did you think I am, anyhow? A rattle box?"

Houston is a top-hole city and has a top-hole local of motion picture-sound projectionists. The local is not a very large one, but when I talked with the Publix city manager, Mr. Collins, he said: "We have a mighty fine bunch of men in the local here!" And, so far as I could observe, that was true.

During our tour to Houston we were the guests of Representative Edward Miller, his wife and Secretary F. C. Coogler, at San Jacinto Inn, out on the battlefield where Texas won her freedom from Mexico was won and the death of the Alamo victims avenged. We enjoyed the affair hugely.

At the New State theatre I saw a unique stunt, for which Projectionist Charles A. Smith is responsible. In the center of the light beam, several inches in front of the projection wall, just where the beam passes through the port opening—he has a tiny mirror held by a small wire attached to the wall. The mirror is about three-eights of an inch by a quarter of an inch deep, and, as I understand him, some special thing he picked up in Brooklyn, N. Y., quite a while ago.

This tiny affair reflects a beam of light back to a mirror about 12 inches high by maybe, 16 inches long, hung at a suitable angle from the line on a line with the projector aperture, as I remember it. It reflects the beam to a small screen painted face of the projected room and bordered by a band of black one inch wide, and on that screen appears a real picture of the scene photographic picture being projected. He has one for each projector.

Smith also has some sheet metal guards affixed around them. These are excellent. One protects the knurled nut on the end of the Simplex flywheel shaft, which must remain free of oil. Another is affixed to the front of the projector and catches any oil which may fall or be thrown from the rotating shutter shaft. He also has a automatic release to winder switch, which cuts off current from the motor when rewinding is finished. Smith seems to me to be a most excellent projectionist, as well as a mighty pleasant chap. Incidentally, he has tapped a small copper pipe into the base of his Simplex mechanisms to carry away any oil which may accumulate. It is carried to a receptacle placed beneath the projector. J. G. Talley is the other projectionist.

GALVESTON, TEX.

We now are in the island city, which some years since grabbed itself by its bootstraps and yanked itself straight up six feet. It was almost washed away by the tidal wave, but now built a huge sea wall, raised all its buildings up six feet and pumped sand in until the ground level was held to an inch over what it was before. Some feat, what?

At Galveston I did not get around much. There was a 250-mile drive next day and much writing to attend to, so it was that I made two visits in our Publix theatres. Neither are very modern. A really modern, high-class theatre should do well with as little as 50,000 people. There are two theatres catering exclusively to colored people.

In the afternoon, C. H. Mahlitz, president of local No. 305, and one of its members, W. R. Myers, called at the hotel and we had a very pleasant chat. In the evening we saw the first showing of local No. 305, came over and we had really a most pleasant confab. Brother Snow is one of the old-timers who was here at the first organized I acted at in 1917. He has just paid a visit to Hollywood, and we had quite a pow-wow over things there.

As was also a service man, one R C A service man, a full attendance of Galveston projectionists, and some of the exhibitors and managers. Mr. Martin, who operates the Martin theatre, sent his regrets at his inability to be present, as he was under a doctor's care.

ROM Galveston to Waco is 250 miles, and those miles were more or less filled with excitement. Something like 20 of them were over dirt roads on which a scraper had not been.

Waco is a thoroughly up-to-date city of about 65,000 people. There are six motion picture theatres. The local has 17 members, managed by H. J. Fuson, secretary; and H. F. Dunn, business agent of the local, made us welcome. The weather was not too little, and that 250 miles had worn me just about completely out. I therefore retraced into the depths of the hay pile, leaving Friend Daughter to plot a visit to Waco and Fuson on a visit to one of the theatres.

In the Orpheum theatre Western Electric sound has been installed for almost three years. The equipment is 2-AX all-battery supply. The projectors are Simplex, equipped with Peerless lamps, 50-30 amperes capacity. A Hertner multiple type transverter is used. It has given very good service. The men say they found the equipment better than any they have ever used. The projection room, with a nine-foot ceiling. Friend Daughter says the batteries and generator are in the same building, which cannot be recommended, though since the room is large (if it is well ventilated) it is possible no serious damage may be done. If you have told you before, the gases from batteries will attack the insulation of motor generators, and if there is at any time much gas in the room, it will do no work serious harm. Either the room should be divided, or the ventilation should be very good, indeed.

The screen is surrounded by a deep shadow-box of black velour. That is very good, but as soon as the floor is covered with the same color, it will be even better. There are three horns. Two of them are 2-12A, and one is a 13F. The Orpheum is managed by Maurice Rosenfield. Its projection staff is R. J. Hall, who is president; H. C. Fuson, who is secretary; and H. F. Dunn, who is business agent of local No. 597. Incidentally, Mr. Dunn is very well liked by the projectionists, which means that there is good cooperation between the office and the staff.

The projection distance is 146 feet, on a 21-degree projection angle. The picture is 16 feet wide. The screen is 12x16 feet. You just don't know how much of what, but nothin' don't! It would be 12x16 feet if it were not distorted badly by a 21-degree angle. It must be about 16x16. The Waco certainly needs a pair of McCullough's prisms to correct distortion.

This theatre seats 1,360. It is a very narrow house. It has one balcony. J. F. Pardue is manager; Mr. Harris is also city manager for Publix.

The projection staff is composed of W. J. Foster, Eddie Eustermuehle and E. F. Roberts. The screen is illuminated. Hanging from each projector, Friend Daughter made note of a cloth on which exhibited was printed "hands, and that is a very good thing. The projectors are Simplex. There is a 100-ampere Brenkman.

The meeting was attended by all the Waco projectionists, plus one Erpi sound engineer, some managers and the city fire department. Although we were because the latter were present, I spoke at some length on fire hazards, recommending that Mr. G. Abbott, Department of labor and industry at Harrisburg be communicated with, in a request that he send a copy of the Pennsylvania safety code. This is in my opinion, the best in existence.

Jobless Musicians Play Own Benefit Concerts
(Special to the Herald-World)

MONTREAL, Nov. 13.— Unemployed musicians of this city have banded together to give their own benefit concerts each Sunday afternoon at the Orpheum theatre.

The concerts are given on a cooperative basis. The musicians play under the name of the Montreal Concert Symphony Orchestra.

The Orpheum is situated at the half of the downtown theatre section, where the players were formerly employed.

Rockne and Squad View Football Film At South Bend, Ind.

Members of the first and second football teams of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., together with Knute Rockne, coach, were guests of Mayor Hooton at the time of the football game. The mayor arranged the guest party for the squad because of the influence of the game in the South Bend, having returned east before it was screened. Attendance of the football squad naturally drew a large crowd.

R C A Reports 30 Houses On Hawaiian Islands Are Using Photophone Sound

Out of a total of approximately 60 theatres on Hawaiian Islands, about 30 are now equipped with R C A Photophone equipment. The remainder are considered adaptable to sound reproduction, 30 are now equipped with R C A Photophone equipment.

The Consolidated Amusement Company, which operates some of the principal theatres on the islands, is undertaking to be contemplating installation of Photophones in its few houses which remain unwired.

The following theatres in the Consolidated circuits now have R C A equipment: American, Empire, Hawaii, Kahului, Kauai, Kona, Puako, Prince and three U. S. Army houses at Schofield Barracks, all in Honolulu; Empire and New Palace, Hilo; Honoumu, Hono- mu, Kahului, Kahului; Kalani, Makewai and Weine, Kauai; Lahaina, Lahaina; Paia, Maui; Lake Field, Pearl Harbor, Ioa, Wailuku; Lanai, Lanai, and the New Kaneohe and Pumene theatres on two large sugar plantations.

Three Montreal Theatres Show French Pictures

(Montreal) Montreal, Nov. 13.— Three French talking pictures were presented at three theatres here last week.

At the Palace, George Rotsky, manager, showed the French print of "Playboy of Paris" at scheduled hours during the week, the English version being otherwise shown. Howard Conover, manager of the Imperial, had "La Femme a Menti," the French version of "The Lady Lies," on the screen. Charles Lameriere, manager of the Roxy, showed an all-French newsreel.
BOX OFFICE PROMOTION

N. Y. Rialto’s Campaign Illustrates Value of Plugging Star of Film

The size and completeness of the Rialto theatre’s campaign in New York City for “Feet First” makes it an exploitation project worthy of the attention of every exhibitor who has promotion problems—and show us the showman who doesn’t have them.

Publicity in all forms, from broadcasting to billboards, was included. The biggest selling point in this picture is, naturally, the star himself, Harold Lloyd. The film’s title was of little consequence in comparison to the reputation of the comedian. Realizing this, the publicity staff built every display and every newspaper ad around the star himself. His name was most prominent in the advertising, while likenesses of him came next in each ad, with the name of the picture receiving the remainder of the play.

Radio Hookup Over 12 Stations

A highlight of the exploitation was a coast-to-coast hookup over 12 radio stations, sponsored by the International Federation of Catholic Alumni Motion Picture Bureau. A text of 260 words was included in this program. Another 200-word announcement was delivered in the Paramount Public radio broadcast over the Columbia network.

Special stories were sent to all New York dailies, weeklies and monthly publications, as well as trade journals. Lloyd made a special trip to New York for the opening, and all newspaper editors were informed of the exact date and place of his arrival one week in advance. This resulted in scores of valuable stories. Mats of the comedian were mailed to 200 papers, including suburban and foreign language publications in the city and surrounding territory.

Trailer 27 Days in Advance

A lobby display was arranged 27 days in advance of the opening. Ten life-size cut-out figures of Lloyd, taken in various action poses, were located on staircases, in corners and on promenades where theatregoers could not fail to see them. A deluxe trailer was also placed on the screen 27 days in advance.

Simplicity of copy and attractive color scheme featured the outdoor advertising. The largest billboard was a gigantic 96-sheet over the marquee. A duplicate of this was hung over the rear of the Rivoli theatre on Seventh Avenue. The background of the billboard was in brilliant red, shaded with black lettering. The large likeness of Lloyd’s head was done in natural colors.

For the second week of exploitation, the character of the picture was stressed. Through mail advertising, women’s clubs, families and schools were informed of the high grade of the picture as wholesome entertainment.

93 Stores Have Windows

Ninety-three stores of the Florsheim shoe chain tied up in a national project to de-vote window displays to the “Feet First” angle of the picture.

Philco Radio Company devoted about 25 per cent of its advertising space to Lloyd, running a large photograph of him. The same company also provided 1,000 three-sheet posters and distributed them. They resulted in scores of valuable stories. Mats of the comedian were mailed to 200 papers, including suburban and foreign language publications in the city and surrounding territory.

Sandwich Venders

In Uniform Exploit Picture in London

When publicity men set out to exploit a picture in England they show all the imaginative enterprise that one finds in American exploitation.

The Dominion theatre in London recently conducted a campaign on First National’s “Sandwich Vender,” with the results portrayed in photographs above. Sandwich venders, 12 of them, were selected carefully, with a view to their military appearance and bearing.

Each of these men was uniformed and given a poster to carry through the streets of the West End. Some of these venders were ex-servicemen and just the type the theatre wanted for its uniforms.

Another stunt was the decorating of a float in aviation fashion. A large truck was arranged so that there was room on its rear platform for a regular airplane. Art work on sheets of canvas and cardboard placed about the plane gave the impression that it was in flames. In the cockpit of the airship the figure of an aviator, in full regalia, was portrayed slumped as if badly injured.
Harold Lloyd Comes to N. Y.—"Feet First"

Paramount's "Feet First," starring Harold Lloyd, was exploited to the "nth degree" when it came to the Rialto in New York City. Below is illustrated the front display, some of the billboards and two of the newspaper ads. Life size cutouts of Lloyd were a feature, 10 of them being used above the marquee, on staircases and at other advantageous points. A gigantic billboard above the marquee was another feature.
St. Louis Parents Have "Sunday Afternoon Off"; Children at Rex

There is no question about the success of children's shows at the Ashland Rex theatre in St. Louis. The special matinee, given each Sunday afternoon, has attained such prominence that Louis Zimmerman, manager, reports he is now averaging 800 and 900 juveniles at the kiddies performances.

The Rex has recently inaugurated publication of a monthly house organ called the Rex Theatre News. In it Manager Zimmerman has a special department called "Kiddies Corner." For a long time the theatre has followed the system of mailing postcards each week giving information on coming attractions. This idea has now outgrown its "short pants," says Zimmerman, and the little postcard has developed into a sizable bulletin.

"Kiddies Corner" for Children

In the "Kiddies Corner," Zimmerman gives interesting facts on his promotion work among the children. Here are some excerpts:

"Approximately 900 kiddies attend the special Kiddie matinee on Sundays at the Ashland Rex. They thrill to the actions of their favorite stars who are shown in Western pictures in addition to the regular show. For 10 cents the kiddies see a three-hour show. Every possible comfort for the kiddies is provided on Sunday afternoons. They do not have to leave the building for their candy, popcorn, etc., as a special candy shop is in operation on Sunday afternoons in the theatre. Kiddies entrusted to our care are kept entertained till their parents call for them. At no time are anything but specially censored programs shown to them. Parents appreciate the "Sunday afternoon off" for themselves as is attested by the kiddies attending the matinee.

He Books Kiddie Shows

"Monday evenings a section of the theatre is set aside for the unfortunate children in our neighborhood. Several orphan asylums bring their youngsters in a body accompanied by their guardians. We are happy to have these children as our guests.

Loop Theatres Give Parking Privileges To Cars in Montreal

Exhibitors in Montreal are making special efforts through the medium of car parking advertisements to show patrons to their theatres. Some offer the parking privileges at a nominal sum while others give it free.

At some loop theatres, a motorist purchasing an admission ticket can have a parking ticket which gives him a "stall" in a nearby parking lot. This privilege is given any time during the day or evening. Many motorists prefer to attend the suburban houses simply because they need not fear getting a "red tag," it has been learned, and for this reason, theatres in the downtown districts are offering special concessions in the way of parking.

In other houses, the patron can purchase a 10-cent parking ticket at the box office when he buys his show admissions. The Tivoli in Montreal is one of the places employing this method.

Another system being widely practiced in Montreal theatres is the offering of special bargain matinees, starting at 10:30 and 11 o'clock in the morning, with an admission charge of 25 cents. The Capitol, Palace, Loew's and the Princess are all doing this, while the Imperial has a 15-cent matinee at 11 a.m. In Toronto, the Imperial, Loew's, Tivoli and Uptown have all adopted the morning show, it is reported.

Newsboys March to Fox

Fifteen hundred Liberty magazine newsboys marched through the loop district of Detroit on their way to the Fox theatre where they were guests at a Saturday morning matinee. A police escort headed the procession.
Meyer Uses Tieups With Miniature Golf And Miniature Cars

Building his exploitation around the fact that Raymond Denny, star of "Those Three French Girls," drives an Austin car, Fred S. Meyer, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, created a profitable tieup with a local Austin dealer.

Four of the miniature cars were used in a parade. Each machine carried a banner approximately six feet long announcing that Denny drove such a car in the film. These automobiles were dispatched through the streets for three days prior to the picture's opening and then every day during its run.

Shortly before the film started its run at the Alhambra, two indoor miniature golf courses opened in the vicinity. Meyer, quick to see the exploitation angle, tied up with them for distribution of 5,000 score cards. On the back of each was copy on "Those Three French Girls."

At the same time, Fifi Dorsay, star of the film, was appearing in person at the Wisconsin house in Milwaukee, and Meyer obtained a letter from her which he had enlarged and placed in the lobby for several days in advance, giving the playing date of the film. Through a tieup, mimeographed copies of this letter were placed in all rooms of a large Milwaukee hotel.

Danziger Prepares Film of Local Club For Cincinnati RKO

Bill Danziger, head of the RKO publicity and advertising department in Cincinnati, has undertaken the production of a local motion picture which promises to have a healthy effect upon the box offices of RKO theatres in that city during the next few weeks.

He has arranged with a local film producing company to make a multi-reel picture of the "Seckaty Hawkins Club," a boys' aviation organization which boasts several thousand members in Cincinnati and surrounding territory.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has also entered the tieup and devotes a half column story daily to progress in the making of the picture. It has also carried several cuts on the subject. Those who know their way around in Cincinnati predict that the RKO theatres will enjoy patronage of gigantic proportions when the home talent film is finally released.

Many Film Stars in Detroit

Theatre patrons in Detroit have been treated to an unusually large number of personal appearances by screen stars during the past few weeks. Among those who have performed on the stage in that city were Misri Green, Fifi D'Orsay, Lillian Roth, John Wayne and Fred Lightner.

High School Holds Football Pep Meetings in Cincinnati Strand

E. D. Yarbrough, who was recently transferred from an RKO house at Fort Wayne, Ind., to the RKO Strand, Cincinnati, Ohio, has kept the theatre's turnstiles from becoming rusty through some clever and profitable tieups.

He recently arranged with the local Woodward high school, one of the largest in the city, to stage a 'pep night' for its football team. Students were given tickets to sell among their friends. More than 1,000 were sold. A small commission was given on each sale. This alone brought many new people into the house.

The football team, accompanied by the school band and hundreds of students paraded the downtown streets on their way to the theatre, and many banners were displayed in the crowd, mentioning that they were on their way to the Strand.

Before the picture was shown, a concert was given by the school band which occupied boxes. Short addresses were made by different members of the faculty. The walls of the theatre were reverberated with the class yells.

Show Rockne Short

A regular program picture was shown, and a Pathe short, one of the Knute Rockne series, was added to give color to the occasion.

Similar tieups are now being arranged with other high schools.

Another effective stunt put over by Yarbrough was in connection with the first installment of the serial, "The Indians Are Coming." It brought not only a lot of business, but a great deal of exceptional publicity.

This tieup was with one of the biggest department stores in the city, which fosters an organization known as "The Schoolmates' Club," having a membership of 35,000 boys in the city and surrounding territory. The store advertised the picture in big display spaces in the daily papers, and also played it up strong in its house organ, which is edited solely for the youthful members.

The first installment of the picture opened on Saturday, and on that morning a special showing was given for the boys, 800 of whom, dressed in Indian suits furnished by the store, marched through the downtown streets enroute to the theatre. The parade was headed by a band, and a large sign that "The Indians Are Coming" was at the same time displaying the name of the theatre prominently.

Manager Yarbrough provided passes for the 800 boys in return for which he received several hundred dollars worth of free advertising, besides bringing into the house countless relatives and friends of the 800 boys, who, of course, paid regular admissions, and who are now potential patrons of the theatre.

Something Different

Ads such as these were scattered through the newspapers in Madison, Wis., by the Parkway theatre for First National's "Top Speed." Nothing fancy—just simple effectiveness.

---

TO EVERYONE IN MADISON

You don't know the limit of "TOP SPEED". Therefore you and each of you are hereby summoned to appear at the Parkway Theatre for seven days, starting Saturday, Oct. 11.

This is in compliance with Section 42 of City Ordinance 184 that prohibits parking without lights, passing red lights and traveling more than 20 miles an hour. Failure to comply with this summons will mean a loss of the most hilarious entertainment you have even seen on the screen.

SMILE!

Show those teeth!
Flash those eyes!
Check that frown!
See Joe E. Brown!

GIGGLE!

Get a wiggle on!
It's what you need!
Come on, get happy!
Go see "TOP SPEED!"

LAUGH!

Double up with laughter!
If that's what you're after!
See Joe E. Brown!
The comical clown!

HOWL!

Until the cows come home!
And that's no bull!
Don't be blue... See Brown!
He's coming soon!

A PERSONAL MESSAGE:

It is the opinion of the management of the Parkway Theatre that the next attraction which starts Saturday is by far the funniest picture we have shown in a long, long time. It is called "TOP SPEED" and has in its cast such able stars as Joe E. Brown, Bernice Claire, Jack Whiting and many others. We saw a preview of it the other day and laughed as we have never laughed before. We are telling you all this because we feel you would like to enjoy a good laugh and get the thrill that this picture gave us. We trust you will get your full share of fun that this picture adds.

Theatregoers Pick Best Love Stories In "Romance" Tieup

The management of the Crocker theatre, Elgin, Ill., tied up with a newspaper to conduct a "Do You Agree With Garbo?" contest for its promotion campaign on "Romance."

Contestants were invited to write an essay of 50 words giving their opinions of a given list of romantic love stories. This list was purportedly arranged by Greta Garbo, star of the picture. The contestants were to tell why they agreed or disagreed with the list. Those who believed there were other romantic stories from history or mythology which should be on the list were urged to explain why they chose them.

The contest ran in the newspaper three days, closing on the film's opening date. The first 25 winners were given pairs of tickets. The women's page of the paper ran a fashion article and photographs of Miss Garbo.

10,000 Heralds Distributed By San Antonio Uptown In Short Story Contest

Theatre patrons became story writers in San Antonio when the manager of the Uptown theatre there organized a story writing contest.

Each contribution was to be on the title of one of the feature pictures which had played at the Uptown in recent months. In order to provide all contestants with the titles, he distributed 10,000 heralds in the neighborhood, carrying names of the pictures.

A prize of $10 in gold was given to the person who selected one of the titles and wrote the best story. The idea proved to be a prizewinner. Contributions came in by the score. One of the San Antonio newspapers assisted by publishing a list of the titles. Later this same paper announced names of the winners.

Hookup on Candy Kisses Gives Dallas House Good Plug on "Madam Satan"

When "Madam Satan" played at the Melba theatre, Dallas, Manager Kissingbury tied up with a local candy firm for distribution of its candy kisses.

Each piece of candy bore a tag with the words, "Sweetheart kisses are delicious, but what are Madam Satan's kisses like?" See Cecil B. DeMille's masterpiece, "Madam Satan," at the Melba theatre."

Six thousand of the candy kisses were given away by a nearby Public theatre several days before the picture opened, besides the large number distributed at the Melba.

Stage Unit Entertains

A. M. Bowles, northern California manager for Fox West Coast Theatres, negotiated with Fanchon & Marco to have one of its stage units entertain when representatives of steamship lines held their annual dinner at the Palace hotel in San Francisco. The boost which the theatres will get through plug of the travel officials made it worthwhile, Bowles believes.

A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

[Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. They may be lifted as a whole or in part and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.]

The Buckingham theatre on Chicago's North Side celebrated its second anniversary of talking pictures this month. Charles Ryan, manager, wrote the following editorial in his house organ for the occasion:

To Our Friends and Patrons

The motion picture is 30 years old. Talking pictures were first introduced to audiences in New York on August 6, 1926, and the world immediately proclaimed their success.

The Buckingham, the first residential theatre on the North Side to offer talks to its clientele two years ago, has set aside the week of November 9 to 15 for the special observance of the Second Anniversary of its inaugural of talking pictures.

For this auspicious occasion we have selected the best programs available, which we believe will surpass any entertainment ever given at the Buckingham.

Week of November 9-15 is to be one of good cheer and you are invited to celebrate with us.

We launch our third year with a confidence gained by past performances and with gratitude for the good will that has been tendered us by our patrons, who acknowledge appreciation of our efforts by their patronage, which we hope to continue.

West Coast House Has “Old Time Movie Show,” Bustles, Too

Sidewalk exalts plastered with questions along the line of “Do you remember when?” brought scores of oldtimers to the “Oldtime Movie Show” at the Marion Davies theatre in San Francisco.

Bill Wagnon, manager, had “Borrowed Wives” as the principal attraction but there were oldtime films showing Mary Pickford, Lionel Barrymore, Harry Carew and Henry Walthall in their early screen days.

Questions on the sidewalk billboard, for that would probably be its proper name, inquired of passersby whether they remembered when beer sold for a nickel. Only the sketch of a foaming schooner was shown in place of the word “beer.” Similarly, pedestrians were greeted with the question “Do you remember when bustles were popular and nickelodeons were in vogue?”

At the foot of the billboard was an announcement of the “Oldtime Movie Show,” telling that all the above-mentioned styles and customs of the past would be pictured on the screen.

Shreveport Saenger Cuts Prices to 15 and 25 Cents

The Saenger theatre in Shreveport, La., is inaugurating a price change, Fred Ford, manager, asserts.

New prices include a drop down to 15 cents for morning matinees. This price holds for adults from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. After 1 p.m. the price remains 25 cents until closing time. There will be an exception on Sundays when the price stands at 25 cents all day.

Airplane Scatters Throwaways Over City for “Rain or Shine”

John Schoeppel, manager of the Midwest theatre, Oklahoma City, turned “air-minded” for his exploitation of “Rain or Shine” and engaged an airplane to circle the city at low altitude. Throwaways were scattered broadcast by the plane with copy “See ‘Rain or Shine’ and Joe Cook at the Midwest.”

A local studio made motion pictures of local events, including a scene in which the airplane was shown delivering the “Rain or Shine” film roll to the Midwest theatre. This picture was made several days in advance and necessarily could not show the real “Rain or Shine” film, for it had not yet arrived. But it was easy enough to use an imitation shipping case, similar to the one for the film and print it on the outside with the letters “Rain or Shine.”

When the film actually did arrive, it was brought to the theatre by airplane.

Tieup with a beverage company resulted in a special label being wrapped around each bottle. Copy on it said: “Drink with Joe Cook in ‘Rain or Shine’ at the Midwest.”

Schoeppel also obtained several thousand sample bars of soap, wrapped in attractive advertising paper with the words “Use our soap rain or shine and see Joe Cook in ‘Rain or Shine’ at the Midwest.”

Another tieup was effected with a local newspaper on a “Humorad” contest. Readers were asked to submit their contribution, which was to be an ad that was both effective and humorous. Each was to be on the subject of Joe Cook in “Rain or Shine.” Prizes ranged from $5 down to theatre tickets. In all, 100 prices were given.

Denver House Gives $50 in Prizes for Collegiate Cars

In “Good News” Contest

Fifty dollars in prizes was given by the Denver theatre in Denver for the most collegiate-appearing cars in connection with exploitation on “Good News.”

Contestants were requested to paint their machines over with smart cracks. The cars were all parked in front of the theatre, where judges selected winners. First prize was $25. Five other awards of $5 each were given.

After the winners were declared, a parade was arranged, and thereafter, daily, the winner of first place was used for a street ballyhoo during the run of the picture.

The contest was carried out through tieup with a newspaper.

800 Members of Old People’s Club See “Florodora Girl”

W. C. Bishop, manager of the Regent theatre, Battle Creek, Mich., negotiated a hookup with a local paper for publicity on “The Florodora Girl.”

The newspaper, in turn, tied up with the Three-Quarter Century Club, which has headquarters in Battle Creek and is composed of persons 75 years of age or over. Its membership in Battle Creek alone exceeds 800.

Through the tieup, all members of the club attended the Regent as guests of the paper and theatre. The stunt proved an exceptionally good one for “The Florodora Girl” and served to bring hundreds of others who were relatives of the guests.

A Horse for “Big Boy”

That the horse has not outlived his usefulness in this machine age is apparent by the opinion of the RKO publicity department in Cincinnati. During the engagement of Al Jolson’s “Big Boy” at the Albee theatre, a colored jockey rode a snow-white horse through the principal streets. Advertising banners on the animal attracted the desired attention.

This decorative scheme required 18,000 small pennants. Combined with lighting effects arranged by Frank Murphy it made a spectacular sight on Warner’s Hollywood theatre in Los Angeles. The occasion was the second anniversary of the theatre.
The SHORT FEATURE

New Device Combines Talking Pictures, Radio, and Phonograph

Short subjects of an educational nature have attracted increasing attention and prominence in the last decade for use in the schools. More recently, largely in the past year, devices have been experimented with for showing both educational and purely entertainment pictures in the homes, as well as in schools and laboratories.

To meet the demand for home motion pictures, the Bell & Howell Company of Chicago has announced completion of a combination instrument, the Filmophone-Radio, which will be on the market December 15. This machine includes not only a projector and sound device, but radio as well. In addition, there is also the phonograph, which comes as a necessary part of the talking picture equipment.

Housed in Compact Cabinet

The apparatus is all housed in one compact cabinet. A demonstration of its various functions was given this week before newspaper reporters and writers for trade journals in Bell & Howell projection room in Chicago. In all, four short features were shown, with pleasing results, both in sound and projection.

The projecting is done with a regular Bell & Howell Filmo projector, which is removed from its compartment in the cabinet and may be set on any table. Film is the usual 16 mm. width, while the sound may be either on disc or on film. The speaker may be situated wherever the audience desires it.

A Howard chassis is used for the radio feature. The phonograph motor is so arranged that the turntable can be operated at either the standard speed for ordinary records or thirty-three and a third revolutions for sound records.

Flexibility a Strong Feature

An interesting point noted in the demonstration was the flexibility of the combination picture-phonograph combination. The film can, naturally, be shown with or without sound. Then again, pictures may be screened with phonographic or radio musical accompaniments, not synchronized.

The Bell & Howell engineers believe they have solved the principal problem involved in such combination machines in their new device, namely the balancing of the projector with other units. The radio-phonograph apparatus is not new, however.

Short subjects, both educational and purely entertaining, are now being produced in large numbers, giving rise to the belief that talking pictures will continue to grow in popularity for use in the homes and in the schools.

Old Mill Forms New Children's Club to Exploit Serial Film

A method of exploiting serial films that has excellent possibilities for almost any exhibitor was used by the Old Mill theatre, Dallas, for "The Indians Are Coming."

The management organized a ""The Indians Are Coming Club,"" which was open to all children. Membership cards were given which were to be punched each week at the door. At the end of the twelfth episode of the film a grand prize is to be given. All juveniles who hold a card with 12 punches will be eligible for it.

The stunt used to start off the exploitation on this project was one arranged through tieup with a local dealer in used tires. The theatre carried advertisements to the effect that every child carrying a used tire would be admitted to the show. When all had been admitted, there was a lobby full of old tires, which were sold to the dealer in the tie-up.

Road Building Films Released

Road construction is described in a new series of pictures released by the Bureau of Public Roads, U.S. Department of Agriculture. The series is intended mainly for the use of highway engineers, road builders, engineering students and others engaged in similar lines. All the modern methods are illustrated. The films are one and two reels in length.

U. S. Poultry Film Ready

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued a new motion picture called "Cooperative Marketing—Eggs and Poultry." The film illustrates how cooperatives purchase and prepare feed and market their products.
Twin Organs Hold Stage at Marbro

Dual Consoles
Add Variety to Sing Program

Edna and Preston Sellers Featured
In Attraction Formerly Used
At Chicago Theatre

With the removal of stage shows from the Marbro theatre, a Balaban & Katz house, a few weeks ago, the old Chicago theatre policy of two organs was put into effect after searching for a musical attraction.Billing them as Chicago’s Foremost Organists, Edna and Preston Sellers took command of the two consoles with less than a day’s rehearsal and opened comparatively cold. The installation of the second console was completed only one hour before the time scheduled for opening. Since then, the “trial” period is over, and they are regularly featured each week in this attraction which is proving very popular.

The usual program of twin organs, as they are presented in New York, is in the manner of a popular song concert. However, in the instance of the Marbro, where the twin organ idea substitutes for the discontinued stage presentation, continuity and novelty is incorporated by means of the microphone and attractive slide announcements.

The reaction of the audience to this type of entertainment is decidedly favorable, as is attested by the manner in which it responds vocally to the various numbers played. To further the illusion of “twice as much music as before,” a double concert is sometimes given, such as Edna playing popular tunes while Preston may ramble around in the classics. Occasionally a vocal soloist is included in the program, which gives the audience something different and goes over very well. Joseph Griffin has appeared in this capacity, as well as Charles Crafts, and others of note are scheduled to appear in this manner.

The program for last week was built around the celebration of Armistice day, and the combination of the two instruments made most effective the songs played in commemoration of this event. Manager Geissman is wholly enthusiastic about the new policy, and the Balaban & Katz executives are well pleased with the drawing power of the new unit, it might be said “the new sound policy.”

MUSIC AND TALENT

"Tickled Pink"

STAGE SHOWS

Baltimore Loew’s Century
Week Ending November 8

Loew’s Century, Baltimore, resumed its policy of stage attractions November 3, with the Loew-Capitol theatres in New York, state. "Plastics," stage band directed by Arthur Knut, under the supervision of Louis K. Sydney. This new, all female band, showing a huge bon-bon box closed and backed music coming from within, with yellow flimsy drapes and the Chester Hale girls in full pink and green gowns lined up in front and up sides in tableau pose. As the band opened Century stage band was revealed and they played the girls out in routine steps and formations, on aperion of the stage. The band was led by Herbert Bens.

Allen Rogers, master of ceremonies came on and after the girls left introduced June Worth, who came on dressed in close fitting black velvet costume without tights and went into her acrobatic dance steps. Following that Rogers sang "I Love You, I Do," and "The Song of a Pool," accompanied by the band. After that the Chester Hale girls were introduced by him by a joke about Hoover putting all hands to work so the girls would now do a hand drill.

Girls on in green lights and green and yellow blouses with black silk gloves and after some routine steps sat on benches they carried and did knapsack, shoulder, leg hand tapping dance with hands and arms.

Then followed Jans and Whales formerly with Ziegfeld and Valettes. In straight comic chatter, as they played and dance steps, all comedy with third man entering for some of the work, winding up with the "Crazy-As-a-Cooch-Na-Gooch-Go-Go" song and dance. After this the Chester Hale girls came on again in full yellow gowns parted to show bare legs with high feather head pieces, did routine and then posed on each side of stage so the Banno Japs, acrobatic troup, of 6 in company, could have the stage for their acrobatic work. They were dressed in white knickers with white jerseys trimmed with blue collars. Tableau with band and organ finished the act, with center drop being lowered holding artistically draped show girl.

Chicago Oriental
Week Ending November 14

Welcome back, Benny! That’s what every audience that attended the opening week of this versatile master of ceremonies at this theatre has said by their continued and upvoious applause. We hardly need mention that the last name of the performer in question is Merri, but there is no question whatsoever as to his ability, and it was with great deal of pleasure that he again witnessed his gyrations upon the stage in one of the best stage shows, as it seemed to us, put on at the Oriental in some time.

The opening number (the production was entitled “Rare Bites”) showed the Lombart Ballet, attired in old robes, standing in some sort of tumble down stage, and after doing a brief eccentric dance, they gather together in a circle, and presto! We have Benny smiling out at us. He calls some of the members of his orchestra down, and after “striking up the band” with “brass” they get together and do a clever little tap dance that was taught them, no doubt, by Benny. This drew plenty of applause.

Hello everybody—I made a short business trip to Philadelphia one day over the weekend and had the pleasure of seeing Jimmy Clark, manager of M. Witmark & Sons, Sammy McElhinny, manager of Shapiro, Bernstein, and Carl Zeller, manager of Robbins. All three of the boys are doing well and sure are hustlers. That wasn’t all I did in the City of Brotherly Love, oh—I dropped in to see Milton Slosser, the Earle’s new organist, and believe me, it is satisfying to meet a regular fellow like him. I am sure sorry I can’t say as much for another organist who is playing this town. . . .

The last time I was in Philly, I was so high-hatted that this time I thought it would be better not to get insulted again. Some of these fellows is going to need newspaper and music men and then it’s going to be just too bad . . . . And that goes for other (very in their own minds) important people . . . . Getting back to Slosser though, yes and I, Mr. Mills and David H. Ross (the new musical conductor at the Earle), they are the kind of fellows that make visits worth while. On the way back to dear old Broadway, I stopped in at Asbury Park to see how G. Howard Scott (better known as Scotty) was getting along there and the large and impressive Civic Auditorium where he is giving daily and nightly concerts. Scotty is doing fine and is helping, not only in getting his own name known but is doing his share in helping to impress the visitors that Asbury Park is a great resort . . . . The greatest single plug ever enjoyed by one song is that of the recent release and single release in over three hundred theatres throughout the country of “Check and Double Check” the new Amos ‘n Andy picture. The simultaneous showing to millions of people at one time is a plug that is not paralleled in the musical world. “Three Little Words” the song in question, has already shown the effects of this tremendous plug by its performance in sales throughout the country. The Kalmar and Harry Ruby wrote this number and it is published by Harmony, Inc. That’ll be building Wills Rockwell now, “cause he is one enthusiastic fellow when things are rolling along smoothly . . . . The guffaw, Hey! Howard Grode over at the Times Square Golf School must have a touchy time with his golf, because he’s written a straight song for Donaldson, Douglas & Gumble called, “Tryin’ to Get You Off My Mind.” . . . Funny though, it hasn’t a word of golf in it. It’s all about a girl and love. His other song (published by the same firm) is “Love’s Melody.” It sure does make you wonder, because there’s a most of love, but well give him the benefit of the doubt because maybe he’s thinking of that charming wife of his whom he writes the love songs for—Mr. Imogene. Fred Kinsey, well-known organist, has the distinction of being the first player to ever have written a song. Last week he played the organ (even though only half the pipes were in and the console was way back-stage) at the Robert Martha Theatre and at the end of the week also opened at the new Victory Theatre in Bay Ridge, West, out on Long Island. The first thing one notices when they enter Harry Blair’s office at Shapiro, Bernstein’s is the 21 or so sheets of music that he has hanging on the wall (all saying such nice things about him, too). That sure speaks volumes for his popularity among the boys . . . . Just heard that Bobbe Arnst, Lillian Sisters & Louise Lyons & Lorraine and Arthur Brown were all on the bill at the golf premiere at Jacques Rinaldo’s new “creation of modern art” in Boston. . . . But, back to our story, Mr. Brown, this one an organist who has been hibernating in the snowbanks of Vermont for the past three years has just sold little of “NYC” a visit. Amid a blaze of trumpets he made his way down that dusty famous (or dirty) street called Broadway. . . . He is getting himself a brand new reed organite, so he can do justice to the inaugural program of the new and Theatre in Burlington, Vt, which he is to open on November 26 . . . .

Witmark Song’s Romantic Origin; Unknown ‘Till

“Daughter of the Latin Quarter;” by Joseph Alexandre, a hitherto unknown composer, has been imported from Europe by M. Witmark and Sons, and given American treatment by Al Dubin and Joe Burke.

One of the representatives of F. Feldman and Company, which represents Witmark in Europe, heard the song in the streets of the Latin Quarter while do Montmartrist while on a business trip for his firm. Hearing it played several times, he searched for and finally found the writer, who has been mentioned above. Alexandre, it was further disclosed, was a Latin quarter artist who had not herebefore a written music. He was responsible for both the lyrics and the melody.

The popularity of the song may no doubt be due to the European origin and the American lyrics given it by Dubin and Burke, as well as its adaptability to a variety of treatment.

This week's musical and stage offering calls for a flock of cheers and a rousing salute. In honor of Armistice Day, Walter Rooner and his musicians offer "Doughboys," a musical panorama of the A. E. F., with the entire University of California Glee Club rendering yemen's assistance, and then there is the "Doll Poppies Idea" of Fanchon and Marco to lend life and color.

The opening scene with a rousing chorus of drum and a thrilling reminder of the arrival of peace twelve years ago, followed by favorite melodies of the war period. Moving pictures of actual battle scenes are shown on the huge screen of the Fox, followed by the Glee Club in khaki, marching as its members on. The finale is marked by a grand musicalizing of instruments and the Glee Club in semidarkness stepping to the strains of "Marching Home." The orchestra is in khaki and the elevated pit is used to simulate the trenches, adding to the effect.

The "Doll Poppies Idea" opens with a garden scene and Bobe Sherman singing from a bough swing. Girls in old-time costumes and white feather oaks offer a and the boys in the orchestra evidently got a great kick out of doing it.

Julia Curtis was then announced, and the aid of two "orchestrators," she put on a delightful act of ventriloquism, the two bandmen acting as the dummies. (They were pretty clever dummies.) She gave a few imitations, among them being one of Mae West, and the other Texas Guinan, and she was well received.

The most outstanding extra act was the Eight Allisons, a Bureau of Buffalo troupe that started everybody and made them wonder how the human body could be so agile. It would be impossible to describe their antics, but they certainly are entertainers supreme, and they work with the utmost ease. One of them did a double somersault from the floor to the floor, and you can well believe that the audience held their breath. Incidentally, the tumblers were introduced by the beetle, who did a dainty dance, the team appearing at its height.

Then Benny went through some of his stuff. There doesn't seem to be anything that he can't do. He should have a "Stump Me" week. After juggling clubs, balls, bats and cones and a few other things, he sang "I Still Got a Thrill Just Thinking of You," which is just one more accomplishment. He's the sort of a chap you could imagine flying an airplane without ever having been up in one before.

The production number was very effective, the ballet being attired in half and half costumes, and doing a pretty routine to the "Wedding of the Painted Doll." They received considerable applause when they finished, and if time had been more plentiful, they would have undoubtedly gone through it again.

George Givot was well received, pulling some of his old gags with success, and a good many new ones. Sang several comic songs, wore his full pants something like 46-inch bottoms, and the finale consisted of the ballet and Givot doing a pleasant dance, during which the Allisons and Julia Curtis made their appearance for a final bow.

When the blackface comedy team, Ames 'n Andy, changed their broadcast period from 10 p.m., to 11 p.m., KYW found it impossible to accommodate the new work feature on account of conflicting schedules. They had to go off the air at an earlier hour. So the broadcast periods of the early afternoon were opened up, and KYW decided what to do with the extra fifteen minutes. "Let's give it to Wayne King," they said in chorus. This is the finest program of its kind. Wayne King

Each Saturday evening, Mr. Bloom presents an Artiste Bureau program, introducing entertainers of all kinds, including vocal and instrumental soloists, orchestra combinations and novelty acts of all kinds to appear under Mr. Bloom's direction, at private functions. Part of his success in planning entertainment, Mr. Bloom attributes to his many years in concert work, and building radio programs.

Harry Kegen, popular leader of the Yeast-Flour orchestra, was discussing the instruments in his band. "That's a take over there, isn't it," his friend asked, "but what's an oboe?" "Well," said Harry, "according to Gus Kahn an oboe is a tramp who won't work, but I'll tell you what it really is. An oboe is an ill wind that nobody blows good!"

Christmas eve will have a double significance for friends and listeners of WENK, for it will be the occasion of this remarkable performance of the Wiener Minstrel show, founded, written and directed by Mr. Bloom. Christmas Eve is set to make this week's one-night stand a noteworthy event in honest-to-goodness old time minstrelsy. The story of Wiener Minstrelsy is the true story of radio and American life. The original cast consisted only of oboes and two other performers, but the humble beginning proved an instantaneous success, and Morgan Eastman, quick to sense the possibilities of this feature added a twenty-five piece band and two end men to the troupe. Gene Block is in charge of work with and the present Wiener Marchion Minstrel is the result of his labors.

Barney Richards, brings to the radio world, through the medium of his renowned orchestra, music that minutes in a life degree the speed and flash of jazz and the depth and color of the modern classic. Barney's deep and alluring voice, announcing the dance tunes played by his band, is now heard from the Upstate Village Cafe to the band over station WMAQ.

Maurie Sherman, conductor of the Beachview Garden orchestra, is a dyed-in-the-wool fighting band and a firm believer that Tuffy Griffin is our next heavy-weight champion. Take a tip from one who knows and don't differ with Maurie as to his opinion, for if you make that mistake, Maurie is Hable to forget what songs you are plugging and what firm you represent. All kidding, folks. Sherman's a great guy and here's hoping that Tuffy may get to be champion, providing of course he leaves his "bake" at home. ORGAN SOLOS

JOHN HAMMOND (Staten Island, N. Y., St. George) was one of the best organists last week that this reviewer has heard. It was called "And They Call It Love." Mr. Hammond's really neat and showmanship added to very clever comedy gags on the screen between each song made this solo extremely interesting. Opening with "Sweetheart of All My Dreams," Hammond turned toward the audience and in a very pleasant manner talked about the special version choruses of the "Prisoner's Song," the piano and the infectious smile, or rather chuckle, of Hammond had the audience in a very pleasant mood. The regular choruses which were lustily sung by the audience were: "By All the Stars Above You," "Loving You the Way I Do," "Moonlight on the Colorado," and "Blue Bird Was Caught in the Rain." Mr. Hammond's very fine organ playing plus great showmanship, have made him very popular in the short time he has been here.

LEONARD SMITH (Avalon Chicago) offered another of his piano organ solos and called it "Piano-O-Rama." It opened with incidental slides, tendng to show which was the more popular, the piano or organ. Both Helen Smith playing "Little White Lies" at the baby grand in the center of the pit. Leonard then offered "I'm Confessin'" with the organ. "Just a Little Closer" by the piano and organ "Go Home and Tell Your Mother." Then followed a novelty song and while "Love Song" that the audience enjoyed closing with "Swingin' in a Hammock" with both organ and piano. The solo was very pleasing and the audience overflowed their approval in the way of applause. An organist that some time or another Leonard's solos with me remarked that he played perfectly and believe me that's a compliment coming from a brother organist. All Leonard's solos are well conceived and executed as for Mrs. Smith's playing, well it's perfect.

EARL ESTES (Chicago Gateway) solo was called "There's a Reason" for everything including the audience being there. The numbers he used were: "I'll Be Blue Just Thinking of You," "My Blue Heaven Was Beautiful," "Somewhere in Old Wyoming," for comedy he inserted a tongue twister and closed with "Anchors Away," He should have taken an encore with more chore, but I suppose they were pressed for time, but the audience still applauded and would have liked more.

G. HOWARD SCOTT (Asbury Park, N. J.), Civic Auditorium, Asbury Park, was at one hour and a half organ concert of popular and classical numbers two times last week, all were taken off of concerts and conventions run by the city of Asbury Park. The concert here with reported was of Thursday, November 6th, opening with his usual number "Seven Stars Above You," Mr. Scott followed this with the "Overture Composers," the "Beethoven" by Sanborn and Dutil, "In My Heart," "Ave Maria," "My Stars Above You," "Love's Melody," selections from "Pompeiiant Girl," "Liebestod" from Tristan Und Isolde, "Ave Maria," "Mornin' Muscak," "Beyond the Blue Horizon," "F-instanza," "Good Event" and "Rhapsody In Blue." This was a small but very appreciative audience. Mr. Scott also broadcast twice a week over radio station.

"IT'S A LONELY OLD TOWN WHEN YOU'RE NOT AT HOME" (Berlin, Inc.)—Bea Barteo. The original master of ceremonies is featuring this tune these days. It is a real hit and the possibilities of becoming a well known are very likely for this number. By Harry Tobias and Chas. Kean.

"SING SONG GELI"—(Red Star Music Co.)—A Chinese comedy song that is written up great. We can stand a song of this type right now as it's the first in a long while. Words by Joseph McCarthy, music by James F. Hanley.

"THIS SIDE OF PARADISE"—(Robbins Music Corp.)—A beautiful little ballad that should be a great song. The melody written as a waltz is very pretty and this song should sell. Words by Billy Rose, music by Lee David.

"THREE LITTLE WORDS"—(Harmas, Inc.)—The feature song of the big pictures of the year. CHECK & DOUBLE CHECK, featuring America's biggest radio names, AMOS & ANDY. The picture will play every big and little town in the country, so it looks like this song will enjoy a wide sale. Words and music by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby.

"IN A WINDOW IN A HOUSE IN CAROLINE"—(Davis, Cotts & Engle)—A beautiful thought in this title. Old songs always give an appeal to the public even for those of us who have never seen South. Written by Mr. Billy Pritch and Otto Motzam.

"MY MISSOURI HOME"—(Donah Moon, Douglass & Gamble).—It's been some time since we've had a song written by Mr. Billy Pritch and Otto Motzam. This one might develop, as it was written and is being featured by that great radio artist. Little Jack Little.

W.C.A.P. This house is run free by the city of Asbury Park and on most occasions the entire five thousand seats are packed with lovers of good music.

ARLO HULTS (New York Chester) offered another of his popular "switlik" organ solos last week in which he not only entertained his audience with some very well played numbers but also pleased with a clever burlesque on the old-time wild west motion picture. Hults depleted the chase of Cowboy Jim after his sweetheart Rose, who had been carried away by Indians with some of the most clever and fitting music and a convincing story, which he told in a manner that had the audience visualizing the entire action. Hults opened the solo with a verse and chorus of "Since They've All Playing Miniature Golf" and then crotled off many requests for "Miss Waltz" which he would play in "Crawford" style. He did play this number with such a slight variation of the "Crawford" style that if one had heard it before and not seen Hults play it, they would really think Crawford himself had played it. The few in the house who have heard Mr. Crawford play, did appreciate Hults' efforts but the majority seemingly had not, because he did not get the response on this number that he so richly deserved. Following and closing this with the above mentioned wild-west novelty (which this audience understood better) Hults received an appreciative reception.

Jaysee, Dyer Means You!
COULD NOT GET ALONG WITHOUT the Herald-World, Tell J. C. Jenkins to call and see me—Very truly yours—W. E. Dyer, Sun theatre, Gretna, Neb.

Photography Poor, He Says
IT SEEMS THAT EACH TIME I WRITE in your journal I have something to “beef” about, but I have noticed in the past our role in photography of many current releases. In silent production the sole entertainment factor lay in the picture. In the present day it shares this honor with sound, and by the looks of some releases the producers are trying to jam it all into sound. Fortunately, however, we now enjoy the privilege of working on two of the same patterns, namely, “Swing High” and “Night Work.” The photography on these subjects is good in the case called Delphi, outdoor as well as indoor scenes bore that smutty effect of an over-time negative. Now, we are not using all of our Dou Caza or George Vandersby, as we have received many good prints from them. Now in each case these features were followed by an MGM production, and what an amazing contrast they revealed.

In our case we are using 50 amts on straight arc with 16 foot picture, through a perfectly lined optical system. If given a good chance we project a clear, clean-cut, well illuminated picture, but with poor photography—uh!

Hoping producers will soon learn that their product must be perfect in picture as well as sound.—Lester Bost, Projectionist, Rivoli theatre, West Bend, Wis.

Mayor and Editor Appreciative
I RECEIVED YOUR BEAUTIFUL Award of Merit sent me as a mark of honor for the high quality of my sound reproduction in the North Newton theatre.

Having a small theatre I want to say I am agreeably surprised in being awarded your honor.

I have shown the plaque to the mayor of the city and to the editor of the newspaper and they are loud in their praise and appreciation of it.

I will always strive to give my patrons a high quality of sound reproduction.

Thanking you for your consideration in conferring this great honor on the North Newton, although in doing so son, North Newton theatre, Newton, No. Car.

“Good News” Good
HERE ARE SOME REPORTS I THOUGHT you might run in a coming issue of the Herald-World. I have just read about a wonderful feature (MGM), with Bessie Love, Cliff Edwards and Gus Shy, with Lola Lane and that dancing fool, Dorothy McNulty, as the box office. Naturally, I have the pleasure of knowing the men and women who make the comedians, is immense in this picture. This girl has got it when it comes to a role like this one, and Cliff Edwards and Gus Shy make a wonderful team together. Cliff Edwards is about as popular with our audiences as some of the big stars, and a whole lot better than some. He can always be depended on to get the laughs. We consider Swing High a picture much overrated by the critics. In the first place, the prints we got did not reproduce good, and we have Western Electric films in the theatre and can get it on this, there is no use to try. “Swing High” had a lot of ballyhoo, but it did not deserve it, and we considered it just an ordinary picture, and so did the audience.

Rogue Song (MGM) is all-color, and the sooner they get away from it in it’s present state of fuzziness, the better. In the first place, it takes too much light, and some of the runs are burning the prints up and warping them, a bad condition for the exhibitor who has the later runs. Color is hard on the eyes, especially when it is unstable on the screen, and this is the case when a print has had too much light. The reaction of this condition is making the audience dislike color, and some say that it makes their head ache. This happened on “The Rogue Song” on all three runs. However, on “Good News” there is a reel of color that is a bit smutty color should be. It is sharp and clear. But I suppose we got the print before some run that had not yet had the chance of being shown on the screen, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Store Displays Plaque
I HAVE BEEN QUITE A WHILE IN making a report on the beautiful plaque as the Award of Merit, and I want you to know that I appreciate having such a beautiful piece of work to display to the public. I made a display of same in the window of the theatre, and I think everybody here has seen it and came to the theatre to see if it was so and went away satisfied that it was just that way.

It sure makes an exhibitor feel good when he can please the public, as you know that is hard to do no matter how hard we work. Let me thank you again for the plaque.—G. A. Duncan, Lyric theatre, Carlisle, Ky.

Audience Cheers Plaque
OUR AWARD OF MERIT PLAQUE WAS formally presented to the theatre last Saturday evening and the audience was generous in its cheers of appreciation and shares with us our pride in possessing this mark of distinction.

Personal greetings of congratulations are much in evidence from our friends and one patron even accused us of having installed most perfect sound equipment—but we hadn’t. Maybe our operator was just a little more on his toes.

Again we thank you for this reward.—C. D. Hoon, Star theatre, Sioux Rapids, Iowa.

From Mitchell of the Dixie
HERE ARE SOME REPORTS ON PICTURES. The Trespasser (UA)—Late in running; this one. It’s good but the recording on disc is terrible. If you have disc equipment, better lay off this one. Prince of Diamonds (Col) is just a fair program show, with a little action in the last reel. Not much. Lay off Lady of Scandal (MGM). It failed to please. Has a good star, who draws them in, the picturing all outstanding.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.

Prominent in Lobby
WE ENCLOSE NEWSPAPER CLIPPING from the Delphos Republican of the presentation of the Plaque you sent us. It was placed in a prominent place in our lobby and point to it with pride.—Eli Mullinax, Auditorium theatre, Delphos, Kan.

Opinions from Yancey
HERE ARE SOME REPORTS ON PICTURES played recently. The Big House (MGM), very good. Did Under-Tow (U), nothing to rave over. The Flora- dora Girl (MGM), very good picture of the historical type. Helen’s Heroes (U), rotten— and worse than rotten. Children of Pleasure (MGM), very poor. Some of the pictures are so sure has slipped. The Other Tomorrow (F.N.), just fair, nothing to rave over. Our Blushing Brides (MGM)—Oh boy, how they turned out to this one! Went 75 per cent over anything played. Not such a hot picture, though. In the Next Room (F.N.), not much and no business. The Careless Age (F.N.), a fair one. Did very good at box office. Strictly Modern (F.N.), very good. Laughing Hyena (F.N.), plenty of business and it pleased. Notorious Affair (F.N.), just a fair show. Broadway Hoofer (Col), mighty nice show and is doing a nice business. Playing Around (F.N.), very good, with good recording on disc. Lady of Scandal (MGM), nothing much. Senior Americans (U), only part-talking, and lousy at that. Would have been better silent. Of all the noise and lousy recording this talkie stands first. New Bus (MGM), did good business at the box office, but is no picture at all.—Robert K. Yancy, Paradise theatre, Mansfield, Mo.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

The new Espanos 400 theatre opened its doors on November 8 to an audience that expressed considerable satisfaction and pleasure with having been present at the first showing at “Chicago’s Smartest Cinema.” As the house is called. A staff of acoustical engineers, interior decorators, sound experts and construction engineers worked for some time to put the house in top condition for the gala event, and the results attest to their acumen.

Visitors to the 400 theatre were treated to a new plan of theatre smartness and environment which has been the subject of many favorable comments. Wholly unostentatious, the house is furnished in a rich, rather subdued manner, which is entirely restful and inviting. The interior decorations are conceived according to the modern school, the scheme being carried out in a color scheme of modern motif, which gives an impression of simplicity but conveys an after-thought of luxury. Modest fixtures, the black and white, shimmer and lobby give one the feeling of entering a rather exclusive—well, something more than a mere motion picture theatre, as some people still remember them.

New types of seats were installed in the auditorium, constructed in such a manner as to further the comfort of the patrons, especially in the matter of plenty of space between the arm rests. This is a big feature, this being able to feel as though you could sprawl out if you wanted to. They are also placed cleverly, on an angle that gives patrons a clear view of the screen. The staff is trained right up to the minute, smartly trained, we might say, to be in keeping with the phrase, “Chicago’s Smartest Cinema.” There seems to be a delightful, informal air about the house that will undoubtedly make much satisfaction on the part of the theatre with its patrons and will make every minute of their stay a genuine pleasure.

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago is cooperating with the Red Cross in its drive for membership. It encourages the running of trailers in the theatres and also sponsors the idea of having nurses stationed in the lobby to encourage patrons to aid this worthy cause. And everything the association and the Red Cross drive, we might mention that it is a great pleasure to have Tessa (her last name is Brady now) back at her desk.

Mrs. A. Ward, owner of a theatre in Lockport, Illinois, collapsed while attending the funeral of her sister recently. It is reported that she is convalescing rapidly and will resume her duties soon.

Educational is "housed” in its new quarters, and it was a busy place the morning we went in. The Universal building seems like a pretty empty place now, and as far as film row is concerned, it seems as though it had tucked on a couple of miles or more. It used to be across the street and back again, but now its down to 13th street, up to ninth and back to 13th. It would have been splendid if the exchange building which was planned could have gone through, for then everything would have been located all together, and—under any circumstances, it would have been quite handy and most desirable.

In This Case It Might Have Been Greek

An exhibitor in Chicago, whose theatre is located in the center of a Jewish neighborhood, told an amusing story, that might possibly have been called a sequel to the Cohens and the Kellys. However, it seems that a trailer was shown, telling in glowing terms, the excellent features of a picture which was to be shown the following week. After the performance was over, one of the patrons, a son of Eritn, approached the manager, commented favorably upon the program, but said he “could hardly understand one of those short, worded pictures which you showed.”

Whereupon the manager laughed—and then explained. The trailer was all in Jewish.

Theatre personalites.

Those who “man” the United Artists exchange have all been endowed with pictures, "The Lost Man's Bride," which is playing at the United Artists, and the next feature, which will be shown at that theatre is "Hell’s Angels." As Jack Fox Smith is back from his short jaunt to Des Moines, and Morris Hellman is still smoking cigars— as usual. While the subject of United Artists, however, we should like to welcome to the fold A. N. Gonsior, who is now special representative for United Artists throughout the state of Illinois. For eight years, "AI" was manager of the Virginia theatre in Champagne, one of the largest in the state, until that time taken over by RKO. And we might also congratulate the exchange on having him as a representative.

We marvel, sometimes, at the patience of the ushers in various downtown theatres when patrons insist in going down any aisle that is used by the graduate to some causes a wholly uncalled for holding up of the ingress and egress of the old and new audience, and those who handle it so adroitly is to be commended. The training which the personnel of the Loop houses receive is maintained at all times, even the most trying ones, and the training must be good.

The reports which have floated in to us, mostlyoral, concerning the Fox picture, "Up the River," have been of the first water, and the other night, in passing the Roosevelt, we saw what appeared to be a family, the parents and a son and daughter, pause before the entrance to the lobby, and finally we heard the chorus, "Well, here’s where we ought to go."

Frank Young presented a perfect picture of intense industry as we glanced at him through the grinding gears of the RKO exchange. Exhibitors to the right of him, exhibitors to the left of him, and some were sitting down. He was so busy that we didn’t have a chance to disturb him, and so—there is a very good possibility that some choice tidbit will not appear on this page. And Bill Blumhier—somebody he’s going to be in his office and we may get a chance to peek in at him and say hello.

Sam Schaefer is off on another of his frequent trips to New York. We gave up counting them weeks ago, for each time we’d go in, we’d find that he had left the day before and would be back again about a week. Whatever it is that Sam is “concocting,” we wish him all the success there is. There may be a certain longing for the New York Central lines that Sam hasn’t ridden in, but we doubt it.

Jack Hess has a happy faculty of being able to put himself in almost any situation, but to get ready in a half hour to board the train for New York is—well, he says he didn’t forget a thing, and he made his train.

That stage shows appeal to people has been amply demonstrated by the receptions that have been given Ted Lewis and Benny Moroff in New York. Good stage shows are undoubtedly a powerful factor in attracting patrons.
The Public Wants Color

These positive films supply it, through beautiful, over-all tints—
at black-and-white cost

THE public’s appetite for color has been whetted. Colored pictures are the cream of the show.

With Sonochrome Tinted Positive Films any picture can be made in delicate, atmospheric, over-all tints that help to express every turn of the plot . . . . to bring out the prevailing mood of the picture. And this color costs nothing extra . . . . for the Sonochrome price is the same as that of ordinary, black-and-white positive.

Sonochrome reproduces sound faithfully . . . . of course. It’s designed particularly with that requirement in mind.

Key Points

Running Time

The fixed speed for sound film is 90 feet per minute.

This makes the running time of 1,000 feet to 11½ minutes.

Knowing the length of a picture and the running time per 1,000 feet, the running time of the picture can be easily computed.

The variance in the speed at which silent film is run through the projector makes it difficult to compute the running time of a silent picture with any degree of accuracy.

Projectors are now designed for a fixed speed of sound film—satisfactory within a small margin of error. But this is as close to exact as the fixed speed for sound film—but the rate at which silent film is actually run varies from 70 feet per minute to 90 feet per minute, and infrequently as high as 125 feet per minute.

Variety is nowhere found to such an extent as in the modern one-reel talking picture. That’s one reason the short short subject this season is playing the most important part in many years in the plans of big showmen. Another reason is the super-quality entertainment which Educational has brought into its four great series of one-reel pictures. Comedy, novelty, drama, beauty, thrills—they’re all there in these popular one-reel attractions that will snap up any show anywhere.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

IT'S always a good season for a good show. That was never so true as today.

People are spending money for entertainment carefully—but they are spending it. The grosses piled up by really outstanding attractions exceed even boom-time figures.

With this in mind, I said to Jesse L. Lasky, Paramount's first vice president in charge of production, some weeks ago: "If you could arrange your studio operations so that four or five of our finest pictures could be released in November, the benefit to theatres and to Paramount would be tremendous".

I said to the Harold Lloyd Corporation: "The industry needs Mr. Lloyd's new picture right now. Please bend every effort to a November 1st release for 'Feet First'". Both Mr. Lasky and Mr. Lloyd have come through magnificently.

Theatre men will rejoice with me in the fact that PARAMOUNT IS RELEASING BETWEEN NOW AND DECEMBER 1st, 7 OF THE GREATEST PICTURES IN THE HISTORY OF THIS BUSINESS:
HAROLD LLOYD in "FEET FIRST". In my opinion and that of everybody who has seen it, the finest Harold Lloyd comedy in many years. The first week’s business at the Rialto, New York, is terrific. I believe Lloyd records all over the country are due to fall.

MAURICE CHEVALIER in "PLAYBOY OF PARIS". Did $14,000 above normally good business at Paramount, New York and held second week. This popular star’s best liked attraction practically everywhere — and that means top money.

"LAUGHTER". With Nancy Carroll, Fredric March and Frank Morgan. A new type of strong comedy-melodrama handled in a new way by Director D’Arrast that seems to be exactly what the modern public wants. I have heard more trade and public advance comment on this picture than any on our program. It seems destined for sensational success.

GEORGE BANCROFT in "DERELICT". This star whom Variety’s survey named the strongest box office draw in the business, comes back with a mighty wallop, in this action story of the sea. His strongest vehicle since “Underworld”, beyond a doubt.

"MOROCCO". With Gary Cooper, the startling new star discovery Marlene Dietrich and Adolphe Menjou. So good that it was instantly picked by Grauman’s Chinese Theatre, Los Angeles, to play at $2. A Josef von Sternberg production that is not only an artistic triumph and a big money maker but which creates a powerful new electric light name—Marlene Dietrich.

"TOM SAWYER". A perfect production of the greatest boy story ever written. Bringing back Jackie Coogan, with Mitzi Green, to the screen and millions of kids of all ages to the box office. You’ve been yelling for a big picture with strong juvenile appeal—here it is!

RUTH CHATTERTON in "THE RIGHT TO LOVE". You know the sensational results of Miss Chatterton’s previous hit, "Anybody’s Woman". Theatre Men who previewed "The Right to Love" wire me that it is in every way an even stronger picture.

That’s SEVEN GUARANTEED BIG PICTURE SUCCESSES released within six weeks. We planned in that way, to deluge the public with more than their money’s worth of great entertainment, to start the S.R.O. crowds coming and keep them coming.

Check what I’ve said about these pictures by seeing them at Paramount exchanges. Then BOOK THEM, PLAY THEM AND ADVERTISE THEM. The results will convince you that real quality pictures in quantity will bring smashing grosses today—and Paramount is the company that can supply them.

BIG MONEY

A riotous satire on rapid-fire wise-cracking gangsters played by a trio of star comedians who can put over comedy lines like nobody’s business.

Something decidedly new in its view of a rollicking racketeer with more nerve than common sense and a streak of luck a mile wide.

In presenting EDDIE QUILLAN, JAMES GLEASON and ROBERT ARMSTRONG in "BIG MONEY" Pathé is dealing the industry Three Big Aces to make a Full House.

"'Tol'able David' is one of the fine pictures of the year. I would suggest that everyone see it. I know I enjoyed the film to the utmost."
—Al Sherman in the Morning Telegraph

"After all, few talkies have managed to capture a mood of poignancy or wistfulness such as is inherent in this story. Richard Cromwell, who makes his screen debut here, is excellent."
—George Gerhard in the Evening World

"Young Dick Cromwell earned his long-term Columbia contract by his charming, dreamy and yet determined performance in the current Mayfair production. Columbia executives give us a 'Tol'able David,' which is excellently cast...winds up in a magnificent and thrilling climax. "'Tol'able David' is a movie of merit. It deserves your attention."
—Irene Thirer in the Daily News

"Richard Cromwell, a screen unknown, deserves—and hereby gets—congratulations for his work in 'Tol'able David.' A sincere effort that hold's one's attention. It's good entertainment."
—Rose Petrick in the Evening Journal

"It is a Columbia Pictures Corporation product at the recently opened Mayfair, and it is a good talkie—one far above the average. 'Tol'able David,' in short, is a competent job."
—John S. Cohen Jr., in the Evening Sun

"A large audience at the R. K. O. Mayfair Theatre did a little weeping in the dark."
—Quinn Martin in the World
"Tol'able David' is a fine, sensitive, beautifully directed and acted picture... All of this is beautifully worked out with each scene leading up to the climax, a thrilling and terrific fight between David and Luke."

—William Boehnel in the Evening Telegram

"It is difficult to believe that the young actor, Richard Cromwell, who takes the title role, is seen in his first screen characterization. He gives a grand performance. The picture is a fine product."

—Julia Shawell in the Graphic

"Rare screen fare.... A thoroughly meritorious transcription of the Hergesheimer story.... Both producer Harry Cohn, of Columbia Pictures, and his star, Richard Cromwell, deserve ample credit for their parts in the making of the picture."

—Regina Crewe in the American

"Lively and effective, and it thereupon becomes one of the better films. Richard Cromwell plays the Barthelmess role admirably. Miss Joan Peers is, as usual, an admirable heroine, and the mountain types are well cast."

—Marguerite Tashjian in the Herald-Tribune

Understanding Each Other

IN the Better Theatres section this week, the Herald-World presents an article which can well be read and studied by everyone connected with the motion picture industry. Its author is Gordon S. Mitchell and its title is "The New Motion Picture and the Public."

Mr. Mitchell expresses in clear and interesting terms the essential difference between audience reaction to the silent and the sound picture. It is distinction which most theatre owners are vaguely conscious of but have not fully recognized.

Writing from the studios, the author shows a surprising knowledge of the problems confronting the showman in attempting to meet the revolutionary changes which have taken place in the business. It will especially surprise the theatre owner who has felt the studio hasn't "given a whoop" about what the exhibitor was up against.

In presenting this article, the Herald-World feels that it is not only providing interesting and instructive material but it is contributing toward a better understanding between the two extreme ends of the business, the people who make the pictures and the people who have to sell them to the public.

Studio workers have had serious problems. They have made mistakes. At times, it may have appeared, their progress toward perfection has been unnecessarily slow. But they have striven to improve the product.

"Perfect pictures," as Mr. Mitchell concludes, "come closer to attainment only as cooperation and understanding is extended throughout the entire field of motion pictures—the studio, the laboratories—and the theatre."

The Laugh Starts

AN object lesson in what is apt to happen when outsiders are dragged into a controversy within the industry is apparently to be written in Houston.

Will Horwitz, president of the Texas Allied Exhibitors, who after attempting to fight a fair adjustment of the protection arrangements in his home city countered with an ill advised campaign for state censorship, is already on the defensive in his own town.

The Gargoyle, which looks over the happenings in Houston in a sophisticated manner, not only declines to take him seriously but cannily looks in back of his public declarations for his ulterior motives.

"Will Horwitz feels cut out over our having questioned his sincerity in this censorship crusade," the Gargoyle comments in a recent issue. "He carried two column ads in the Tuesday dailies (we thank him for the ride), bought a couple of columns in this issue (we thank him for the revenue) and wrote us a letter, which you'll find over in the letter column, all telling us how wrong we are in suggesting that he is not the soul of consistency or that he may have reasons other than moral or patriotic ones for urging a state censor board."

"Not being a mind reader nor having attended his little private censorship parties, we naturally could not be expected to know how valiantly Will has been fighting in his dark room for purity on the screen, for lo! these many moons. We'll take his word for it, though we'd like to know why he's hiding the light of his crusading virtually under a bushel for so long. We'd never thought of him as a shrinking violet up to the present.

"But, in his several answers, Will failed to mention the chief criticism we levelled against his campaign—namely, that he'll have to rouse the forces of Intolerance, if he hopes to get anywhere with it. Is Will ready to join the fellowship which includes Frank Norris, Atticus Webb, Tom Heflin, Bishop Cannon? Houston's own reverend John E. Green would not only like to see censorship, he'd like to see Will and all his fellow exhibitors squelched, abolished, put out of business. He hasn't gone to a show in twenty years. Shall we now be entertained by Will's enlisting the Reverend in his crusade? Politics are said to make strange bed-fellows. So, apparently, do crusades.

"And while we grant Will a certain consistency, while we may sympathize to some extent with his troubles as an independent theatre owner, we're still not dissuaded from thinking that his primary purpose in harassing the Movie Barons, as he calls them, with a threat of censorship is to secure concessions, agreements from them which he thinks necessary to the profitable operation of his theatres. We wonder, in other words, how long after they had met his terms, he would retain any active interest in the censorship business."

Horwitz has started a laugh. It will probably reecho long after he would like to forget it.

Advertise and Work

ADOLPH ZUKOR, one of the outstanding successes in the motion picture business, standing at the head of a company which has made a success in all three of the major branches of the business, production, distribution and exhibition, shares the secret of his success with the entire industry.

"Advertise and work" is the message he gave interviewers in Los Angeles a few days ago. He has said the same thing many times before. It is a phrase which will bear reiteration. And it is particularly timely at the present moment.
Predict RKO-Pathe Merger Completion by January First

Marcus Denies Being Slated For High Executive with Pathe

Deal Not Completed—Report Possibility R K O May Take Over at Least One Independent

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Despite reports to the contrary, the RKO-Pathe merger has not been completed. This was stated to a Herald-World representative today by a man informed of the status of negotiations.

The deal has been on and off many times in recent weeks but it is understood now that things look favorable for its consummation by January first.

Many rumors have been current regarding RKO's expansion program; this is stated today by a person in the know in film circles that there is a possibility of the company taking over at least one of the independents after the first of the year.

Lee Marcus Denies Transfer

One report which spread along Broadway this week was to the effect that Lee Marcus would assume a high executive post with Pathe. Marcus, the executive vice president of Radio Pictures, told the Herald-World, however, that "I don't know anything about it. They haven't made me any offer."

This report gave rise to speculation that the RKO-Pathe deal had gone through and that Marcus' transfer was merely the initial step in consolidating the two companies. This apparently was not the case.

It is further understood that Cortland Smith, as head of Trans-Lux Corporation, of which RKO owns 30 per cent of stock, would be definitely concerned in the reorganization in the event that the pending deal is completed as now anticipated.

Doubt $5,000,000 Figure

David Sarnoff, president of R.C.A., who has been active with Joseph P. Kennedy in negotiations, has been unapproachable to representatives of the press, as have other executives who might affect the negotiations.

B. B. Kahane, vice president and secretary of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, told the Herald-World that he knew nothing of a deal.

In reports which were current this week and which had the deal closed it was said that RKO had paid $5,000,000 for Pathe. Many have felt that this figure was absurd in view of the excellent product which Pathe has had this year, the worldwide value of its trade mark, and its newsreel.

New Publix House Opens

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—The newest Publix house, the Oriental at Jamaica Plain, seating 2,000, has been opened. As indicated by its name, the theatre is Oriental in design and furnishings.

Screen Advertising Eliminated in Fox Circuit Theatres

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Harry C. Arthur, general manager of Fox Theatres Corporation, which comprises all houses East of the Mississippi, has issued an executive order effective immediately calling for the definite elimination of all screen advertising in the circuit theatres.

It is understood that the new management has believed in such a policy for some time, and that this order is the final decision on the matter. Trailers on future pictures and house advertising at the individual theatres will be retained but is to be cut to a minimum.

Though this ruling will result in the loss of thousands of dollars in revenue over the entire circuit, it is nevertheless felt by executives that the policy of permitting screen advertising by local merchants is a bad one and that the profit thus derived is not desirable. Hereafter, the house manager, under the supervision of the division manager, contracted for such advertising with the sanction of the home office.

Scenario Sold to Rival

Studio Costs Girls Job

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Two girls in one of the big studios have been discharged from the scenario department on the charge that they used the studio's time to write an original play which will shortly be produced here by another company. The girls claimed they wrote the play in their evenings and on Sunday afternoons. They sold it for $2,500.

Kansans Look for Amusement Tax as New Governor's Plan to Shift Burden

TOPEKA, KAN., Nov. 20.—It is believed by many here that an amusement tax will be introduced in the January session of the state legislature and that the new governor, Harry Woodring, will favor such a move, as he has stated that he wishes to relieve the farms and homes of tax burdens. This may mean that the burden will be shifted more heavily on the schedulers of industry, with the motion picture interests being called on for their share.

The motion picture people of Kansas, despite party affiliation, it is said, looked to Frank Hauke, Woodring's Republican opponent, as a friend of the industry and his election might have had some effect on Sunday shows.
Mike Simmons of the expressive vocabulary and head man of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, has a capable cabinet to assist him in running the affairs of the organization. The excellent attendance at Thursday luncheons is proof of this and is an indication of the drawing power of Secretary Ed Finney's literary masterpieces. After reading Ed's weekly invitations there are anxious moments waiting to spend your dollar at the Dixie.

Broadway developed a new kind of speak-easy this past week. Some bright boy took advantage of the "buy an apple" campaign for the unemployed and used that as a ruse to dispense wet goods. He had what appeared to be boxes of apples in a taxi and a noisy policeman discovered that each box contained but one layer of the fruit and hidden under this were the bottles of cheer. What might have been a land office business was nipped in the bud there and then.

Dave Loew, Bruce Gallup and Hamerslag carried away most of the honors in the first of a series of ping pong matches which will be held at the Motion Picture Club this winter. Their opponents in this instance were the youth of Tenth avenue and it looked for a time like their clever use of the paddle might register a defeat against the club.

Mike Simmons is taking the boys of the trade press for a set back in pea pool.

The welcome mat is always spread in front of the door at the office of Oscar Hanson, general sales manager of Tiffany. The problem is to find him in town between conventions.

This week has produced its usual stock of rumors. A while back it was Howard Hughes who it appeared was buying up every company in the business, and now the rumor boards have turned to R.K.O. Last week it was Lee Marcus is leaving Radio Pictures for an executive position with Pathe.

Joel Swenson is to be complimented on the excellent editorial job he is doing on Fox's "The Last Word," which is published at the home office. In addition to being a neat piece of work, its many pages contain valuable suggestions for the Fox theatre managers.

Hy Daub's next big advertising spirit will be on "Cimarron." If he is to match his sensational Amos 'n' Andy campaign he will have to do some tall hustling.

Joe Weil has prepared a clever accessory for advertising Universal's "See America Thrift." It is comprised of a miniature lager of beer which is attached to a card announcing the picture and stars. Contained in the envelope also is a bottle opener.

Wallace West has just completed for Pink Wingart a biographical brochure of all Paramount players. It was a task to compile, and Wallace has been working on it for many weeks. It is a credit to his thoroughness.

Bill Boyd Appears in—

"The Painted Desert" and "Beyond Victory," two of the three Pathe specials set for November release. The dates for the two mentioned are November 20 and November 30, respectively, the one of which no still is here shown being "Sin Takes a Holiday," which was released November 10. Being a hairdresser is apparently a new role for Bill, and in the lower picture—well, we'd certainly call it a beautiful scene.

Sporr-Berggren Film Hailed as Step Toward Greater Realism

Natural Vision Picture Shown To Public for the First Time

Wide Film and Quasi-Stereoscopic Version of RKO's "Danger Lights" Successful at State-Lake, Chicago

By GEORGE SCHUTZ

A full-length commercial motion picture produced by the Spor-Berggren "natural vision" method was presented to the public at a regular performance for the first time when on Saturday, November 15, Radio Pictures' "Danger Lights" opened at the RKO State-Lake theatre in Chicago.

With special Spor-Berggren projectors in the projection room and a screen measuring 46x26 feet installed on the stage, the quasi-stereoscopic version of the new RKO railroad thriller is being shown under the direct supervision of the inventors, George K. Spor and P. John Berggren.

This initial public presentation represents the successful outcome of experiments begun about 17 years ago, when George K. Spor, head of the Essanay Studios in Chicago, a leading producer in the days of "Bronco Billy" and Bushman-Janey fame, gave up the production of motion pictures to turn his plant into a laboratory in which to realize an ambition to end the flatness of the motion picture screen image. Association with Berggren, Swedish investigator in optics, followed in 1917, and in 1921 Essanay announced through Exhibitors Herald that "natural vision" pictures had been achieved.

Affiliates With RKO

Development work continuing, Spor acquired necessary production facilities about two years ago through an affiliation with RKO, and experimental pictures were produced at the latter's Gramercy studios in New York. With the production of "Danger Lights" at the RKO studios in Hollywood, the Spor-Berggren system was applied for the first time to the production of a regular commercial feature.

Audience reaction at the State-Lake indicates that a large measure of success has now rewarded the long quest of the inventors. "Danger Lights" is no "star picture," it is not an epic, but its general proportions are entirely those of an excellent program production. Yet in the "natural vision" version, "Danger Lights" may be said to stand out from the regular class as its image elements stand out beyond the flatness of the screen.

Applaud Niagara Falls Scene

The efficacy of Spor-Berggren photography and projection in this respect is further indicated by a short that accompanied "Danger Lights" on the program. This was an ordinary scenic of Niagara Falls, which consisted only in a variety of shots of this aquatic spectacle. The orchestral accompaniment was mechanical and it was not synchronized. Color consisted only in a green tint of the foliage. But following a standard short comedy projected for a standard-sized image, the curtains parted to the edges of the wide screen and the Spor-Berggren scenic of the great natural wonder appeared, the house broke into applause.

The nature of the story and setting of "Danger Lights" is well suited to demonstrate the power of the system, and only the inventors are careful to point out is not intended to create a full stereoscopic image but one having optical effect on the visual mechanisms similar to that of reality.

Intensifies Sense of Reality

A love story set in a railroad environment, with its miles of steel roads in yards and over country, snorting locomotives, clanging bells, washouts, signal lights in the darkness and warning whistles in the distance, "Danger Lights" is a premonition of outdoor sequences, and it is in the outdoor shots, especially those of long range, that depth is most effectively realized. Perhaps the fullest benefits of the innovation are achieved in a long sequence that builds up the climax, in which to save the leading character's life, the man who has apparently wronged him drives a train at record speed from the West to Chicago. The racing locomotive, with its single coach, is shot impressively from almost every conceivable angle and at both short and long ranges, while at intervals the theatre patrons themselves "board" the "cowcatcher" to be hurled over the rails, around curves and through tunnels, with a realism that intensifies the usual thrill of such audience-experience to an extent considerably beyond the powers of the standard screen image.

The film stock used for the Spor-Berggren version of "Danger Lights" is 66-mm. wide, with the frame measuring 54x28 mm. The throw at the State-Lake is 148 feet. It is pointed out that the projection angle at this theatre is 26 degrees.

While it is possible to place the sound track on Spor-Berggren film, the sound for "Danger Lights" is on a separate reel, which is run in synchronism with the image projectors. The projectors are equipped to handle both, however, the upper sound film magazine being alongside the upper image film magazine and running through the pickup head of the same projector that is projecting the corresponding images. The synchronous ratio between the sound film, which is standard, and (Continued on next page, column 3)
Theatre Plays Big Part to Put Over Milwaukee Better Times Week

Free Midnight Party at Fox Oriental Wins Cooperation of 65 Merchants —Five Thousand Tickets Distributed

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 20.—Theatres always have taken a leading part in alleviating the plight of the unfortunate in their communities during stressing times. Special programs to raise food and clothes for the poor are not unusual, and as the theatre has lent a helping hand to the needy, so too it is aiding in restoration.

Perhaps one of the most successful attempts in this direction was staged recently by Fox's Oriental theatre in Milwaukee in cooperation with the Upper East Side Advancement association. A Better Times Week was designated by the association, of which Wallace James, manager of the Oriental, is a member. The high spot of the week was a big free midnight theatre party at the Oriental.

65 Merchants Take Part

Sixty-five merchants in the community cooperated. A spread in the community paper was used as the original announcemen. Then 10,000 handbills, 18x24 inches, were distributed throughout the district. Posts carried placards and flags, while window cards were posted in the merchants' windows and store fronts were decorated with bunting and flags.

More than 5,000 free tickets to the midnight show were distributed by the merchants and a band circulated aboard a truck the night of the big show. Forty merchants arranged displays in the lobby of the Oriental which could be viewed all during the week, and on the night of the show more than 200 prices were awarded from the stage of the theatre.

Children under 16 years of age were not admitted to the free show unless accompanied by adults. Tickets were numbered and each person was entitled to deposit only one stub in the box at the door. The theatre, which has a seating capacity of 3,000, was packed and hundreds had to be turned away. Prizes were awarded by drawings, and in return for their merchandise awards, contributing merchants received trailer mention in addition to the lobby display.

Give Diversified Program

The program was diversified, consisting of a short comedy, community singing led by Ray Parker, vaudeville by Ray Parker and Company, a one-act play by the Drama League Players and a feature photoplay.

The event received gobs of publicity and didn't cost the theatre a cent. The advancement association paid for operating.

Tickets Selling Fast
For Benefit at Detroit

(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Nov. 20.—Tickets for the Detroit Times midnight benefit show to be held at the Michigan theatre on December 6, are going like hotcakes, according to those in charge. Funds derived from the performance will be turned into the Detroit fund for the aid of the unemployed.

Tickets were placed on sale last Saturday in all of the Publix houses, including the outskirt theatres.

Loew's Inc., Takes Controlling Shares Of Boston Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Purchase at private sale of a block of 20,000 shares of Loew's Boston theatres' stock by Loew's, Inc., gives to the New York company an absolute majority of the shares of the local company and assures them of undisputed control of the State and Orpheum theatres here. Prior to this time Loew's, Inc, had a working majority of better than 30 per cent of the Boston stock and to this it has gradually added, ending with the 20,000 share purchase.

the Spoor-Berggren film, is 36 to 30 frame-heights. The intermittent movement of the Spoor-Berggren projector is one-fifth slower than standard.

The increase in heat on the film, due to the latter condition and also to the width, both of which tend to cause buckling, has resulted in the addition to each projector of an air-pressure system, which forces a stream of air against the film at the aperture, keeping the film flat. Air is also forced against the film under the top loup for a similar purpose.

The added amount of light required by the Spoor-Berggren film is indicated in the ampere being used to project it at the State-Lake, where the projectors normally draw 150 amperes and are drawing 180 for Spoor.

The essential factor in the Spoor-Berggren system in the lens, that of both the camera and the projector. The lens, which has been treated of in past issues of the Herald-World during the development of the process, is a single unit involving two lenses, or rather, two light refractory principles. The cooperation of these two principles is based on the conditions of natural vision, under which sight is achieved through two lenses (the eyes), focused from a parallax. The lens in the projector weighs nine pounds.

The “Natural vision” version of “Danger Lights” is not intended for general exhibition, it is stated, but will be shown in principle theatres in various cities as a roadshow. Coming into the State-Lake purposely without ballyhoo or with much preparatory advertising of any kind, the picture is playing to packed houses daily. Prices are popular.
United Artists’ $3,500,000 War Chest to Build 15 Houses

Will Speed Expansion Where Fox Has Slight Competition

Work Starts in Week on First of Theatres to Cost $150,000 Apiece—Sol Lesser in Charge

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—United Artists was busy this week proving that its “declaration of war” against Fox West Coast Theatres was not a hollow gesture.

Announcement was made at United Artists studios that the company had $3,500,000 to invest immediately and that plans were being made for the construction of 15 theatres to compete with the Fox chain.

Work on the first of the new theatres will start next week. It will be located on the northeast corner of Fifth Street and Broadway, Santa Ana.

The theatres will resemble each other closely in architecture, according to Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, and will cost approximately $150,000 apiece.

Sol Lesser, founder of the Fox West Coast chain, will have complete charge of building operations and management of the theatres. The United Artists organization plans to expand the building program as rapidly as possible, and to erect playhouses wherever Fox has only slight competition.

Form New Company for Synchronizing of Music To Feature Productions

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Emil Velazco, well known organist, and Don Hancock, recently associated with the Van Beuren Company, have formed a new company, the Velazco-Synchronizing Company, to do the principal work of the new production, which will be the scoring and synchronizing of music to feature pictures. Velazco is president of the company, with Hancock active in the capacity of general manager.

In addition to the synchronizing work, several series of short subjects will be produced, probably involving the use of the organ accompaniment. Production on the first of these shorts will begin immediately at the Ideal Studios, located at Hudson Heights, New York.

Tri-State MPTO To Hear Speakers Of National Note

(MEMPHIS, Nov. 20.—The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee will gather for their fall 1930 convention at Hotel Peabody for two days, Sunday and Monday,Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

Several nationally outstanding speakers are to appear on the program, including M. A. Lightman, president of the MPTO; R. F. "Pete" Woodhull, immediate past president of that organization; C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the MPFD; Charles Piquet, president of the MPTO of North Carolina, and Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTO of St. Louis and vice-president of the national organization.

The social climax will take place Monday evening, with the installation of 1931 officers. Among the honor guests will be Kenneth K. McKellar, state senator, and Mayor Watkins Overton, of Memphis.

Mulligan President of Liberty National Bank

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—At the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors, John J. Mulligan was elected president of the Liberty National Bank and Trust Company, of which Harry M. Goetz of Paramount Publix is a director.

Advertise and Work; That’s What Paramount Will Do, Declares Zukor

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Advertise! This was the slogan given Los Angeles by Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount-Publix, upon his arrival here yesterday.

“Advertise and work,” Zukor said. “That is what we are going to do. Last year we spent $35,000,000. I have not the exact figures for 1931 but there will be a substantial increase in our budget for the coming year. At the same time we expect to get more for our money. Our business must continue active. Money will be spent as usual, salaries will not be cut and our employees will remain on the job, but there’s going to be less losing. Times are as you make them. I do not believe in hard times; in fact, there is no such thing. You can always get a return for your efforts if you get out and get after it.”

He said a few places in the country, if any, reflect depression in the theatre grosses.

Pettit Succeeds to National Board Seat After Tower Resigns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Dr. Walter L. Pettit has been elected chairman of the National Board of Review, following the resignation of his predecessor, Dr. William B. Tower. However, Dr. Tower will continue to take an active part in the board’s work as a member of its executive committee.

Dr. Pettit has long been engaged in the field of social activity, his first endeavor in this direction being the organization of social work in the Philippines. Later he organized recreation in the midwest for the Playground Recreational Association of America, and since 1915 he has been director of the department of community work for the New York school of social work. He is particularly interested in the movement for the community use of motion pictures.

New York Operators to Celebrate 17th Year

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Local 300 of the Motion Picture Machine Operators Union will celebrate its seventeenth anniversary with a dinner and dance at the Hotel Astor on Saturday, January 17, 1931.

The committee of arrangements has Sam Kaplan, president of the union, acting as chairman.
Ad Council to Serve Exhibitor Showing Warner and FN Films

Waxman, As Member with H. M. Warner and Sam Morris, Will Give His Time Exclusively to Special Campaigns on International Scale Following Broadway Success of Plan

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Following an extensive experimental period in the Metropolitan area, H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, has created a special advertising council for the benefit of exhibitors playing Warner and First National pictures.

A. P. Waxman, recently promoted following the consolidation of the Warner and First National advertising and publicity departments, is one of the council, the other two being H. M. Warner and Sam E. Morris, vice-president. Waxman will devote himself exclusively to creating and executing special campaigns on an international scale.

The council is designed as a service to exhibitors on all attractions which merit special effort. Two New York houses, the Strand and the Winter Garden, were used as the base of operations for the experimental work, and the pictures selected were "The Doorway to Hell," "The Office Wife," "Three Faces East" and "The Life of the Party." The results were indicated by the fact that these pictures were holdovers and successfully established new box office records.

Another reason for the development of the council was the marked difference in results of showings in cities of approximately the same population. The same pictures, however, were holdovers in New York under the handling of Waxman. Consequently it was decided to create a council which would exploit pictures for the entire country.

David Weschler, head of the Warner circuit publicity department, will add the council.

RKO Radio Plans New Zealand and Australia Offices

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—RKO Radio Pictures has definitely decided to establish its own offices for sales and distribution in Australia and New Zealand, according to an announcement by "Bo" Dowling, general manager of foreign export for Radio.

This decision follows the start made in the United Kingdom, where similar offices were established. Scott will be general manager of the Australian and New Zealand offices, serving in the same capacity that Sol Newman does in England.

George Melford Fined $200 for Tax Evasion

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—George Melford, director, has been fined $200 after pleading guilty on a charge of tax evasion during 1924 and 1925. The total amounts to almost $11,900, it is said.

Carewe Opens Offices

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Edwin Carewe is opening a big suite of offices on Wilshire boulevard next week for business ventures.

SECURITIES PRICE RANGE

Week Ending November 19

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Amusement stocks shared in the advance in Tuesday trading that followed the reversed direction of prices from last week. Gains made on Tuesday include these: A T & T, 5/16; Eastman Kodak, 13 1/4; General Electric, 5/16; Radio, 1 1/8; Westinghouse Manufacturing, 1.

Erpi Put in Houses

In Greece, Egypt; 7170 Is World Total

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—With the Cinema, Cotopouli in Athens, Greece, and the Elito Cinema in Alexandria, Egypt, listed among the latest Western Electric, sound equipped houses, the world-wide installations have reached the figure of 7,170, of which 4,701 are domestic and 2,469 in the foreign field.

H. M. Wilcox, operating manager of ERPI, has prepared statistics showing the distribution of Western Electric sound systems by cities, which indicate that New York leads with 356 installations. Among the other centers which have 20 or more are: Chicago, 166; Los Angeles, 86; Philadelphia, 82; Detroit, 76; Cleveland, 51; St. Louis, 46; San Francisco, 41; Baltimore, 40; Kansas City, 32; Cincinnati, 32; Milwaukee, 30; Seattle, 29; New Orleans, 26; Buffalo, 26, and Pittsburgh, 22.

There are 23 cities having between 11 and 20 installations, totaling 341 wired houses, according to the report. In 75 cities there are from five to 10 Western Electric equipped houses, 75 theatres being included. Four installations each are listed for 48 cities, involving 192 theatres, while 113 cities with three installations each total 339 theatres.

Radio Programs Take Step Forward by Using Electrical Recording

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Electrical transcriptions for broadcasting have taken what is considered a great step forward with the completion of an elaborate tieup involving King Features Syndicate, International Feature Service, Newspaper Feature Service, Incorporated, William Morris Agency and Cameo Broadcasting & Recording Studios, Incorporated.

M. J. Mintz, president of the Cameo company, stated that this advanced stride in radio programs via electrical transcription was decided upon only after months of study and research among the stations as well as the national advertisers.
Hiram S. Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, and chairman of the board of directors for Radio Pictures, is greeted, upon his arrival in Los Angeles by Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of Radio Pictures (on the right) and William Le Baron, vice president in charge of production for the film company. Mr. Brown is making his semi-annual tour of inspection of the properties of his company on the Coast.

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, says farewell to Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO and chairman of Radio Pictures Board when they reach Los Angeles after going west on the same train.

Here they are! The great "gang" that attended the 11th Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in that dear old "quaker city" of Philadelphia. From all reports—well, everyone whom we know that was there said it was a "regular show."

A passing glance may not reveal all the untold wonder of this picture. Rather unique "flivver," don't you think, upon closer inspection? Can you imagine meeting it about dusk on some lonely road? Just what Si Wills and Bob Carney are up to we can't make out, but the scene is from Pathé's "Under the Cock-Eyed Moon."

The Grand Central Station again acts as the setting for the cameraman as he snaps noted travelers from the Coast, who drop into New York occasionally. Here we have C. Graham Baker, co-production executive at First National studios, Mrs. Jack Warner and Jack Warner, in charge of all First National studios.
Publix Shifts Brains to Field
For Close Contact with Public

Four New Departments to Be Responsible to Sam Katz

Deny Move Is First Step Toward Eventual Assumption
Of Operating Control by B & K

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Shifting of the brains of theatre operation from home office to territories, in order to realize closer contact necessary with houses under their supervision and with the public in those territories, has just been accomplished by Paramount Publix.

That this is only the first of several important changes to be made in the company’s plan of theatre operation is denied.

It had been thought that this realignment would lead eventually to Balaban and Katz assuming operating control of Publix. It was stated emphatically, however, that such a report was without foundation.

In announcing the decentralization of operation, the following statement was issued:

“Elimination of a considerable amount of pressure on the company and expansion of the expansion program of Publix Theatres makes it possible for Publix to now enjoy full unencumbered use of its executive manpower in operation of its theatres.”

Dembow to Handle Buying

Sam Dembow, vice president of Publix, will, in addition to details connected with the handling of properties, be in charge of and expansion matters, be in a position to give over active management of the film buying and booking department, working with the assistance of Leon Netter. This makes available for the company the large theatrical experience of William A. Saal for direct theatre operation. Arrangement of supervisory work, therefore, in the Publix home office under the direct supervision of Sam Katz is in line with the policy of directly concentrating home office manpower on the important problem of theatre operation. In this connection the entire theatre operating activities of the company are divided into four main divisions, headed by members of a cabinet who will be directly responsible to Katz, as follows:

David J. Chaikin, in charge of the New England division, Southeastern division, Carolinas, Tennessee, Virginia and Pennsylvania;

William A. Saal, in charge of the Sauger Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona;

Arthur L. Mayer, in charge of Iowa and Nebraska, Finkelstein and Ruben division, Indiana and Illinois;

John Balaban, in charge of all de luxe operations, and Milton H. Feld.

Balaban and Feld will remain in charge of their present de luxe houses and in addition eight other de luxe operations will receive their joint efforts and will be divided as follows:

Balaban, who has direct supervision of important Chicago and Detroit operations, in addition to control of Famous Players Canadian Theatres, will have charge of the Minnesota, Minneapolis, the Metropolitan in Boston and Paramount in New Haven. Feld will be in charge of the Metropolitan at Houston, the Loew’s Dallas, the Texas in San Antonio, and the Sauger in New Orleans.

It is planned that Publix theatres on the West Coast shall also become identified with the Balaban-Feld divisional setup.

Division Director Stay

The present division directors will continue in their same capacities except that they will function in their respective territories.

There are no changes whatsoever in connection with actual operation of men in the field. What minor changes may be necessary in the matter of correspondence, weekly letters, reports, etc., will be announced if and when necessary.

The concentration of manpower as indicated in the foregoing alignment has received enthusiastic endorsement of everyone in Paramount Publix as being a most constructive step. It is the belief of all concerned that the theatre will be splendidly strengthened with men in the field and concentration of their efforts directly on the spot.

Leo Moore, Exhibitor for 20 Years, Dies in Theatre

CENTERVILLE, IOWA, Nov. 20.—Leo Moore, for 20 years an exhibitor here, died while watching a performance at the Paramount theatre in Des Moines. His death was due to apoplexy.

Moore had recently sold his local theatre holdings to Central States of Des Moines.

Canadian Company Shows Increase in Net; $296,452 as Against $270,440

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—Increased revenue, increased profits and an improved financial position were shown in the annual report of United Amusements, Limited, Montreal, operating a chain of 20 high-class theatres in Eastern Canada, the statement being for the fiscal year ending August 30.

Net earnings amounted to $3,751 per common share, as compared with $3,41 for the preceding year. The number of shares outstanding remained unchanged. The surplus account had a total of $72,200, or an increase for the year of approximately $1,14,000, while the net profit was $296,452, as compared with $270,440 one year ago.

The property account total was $3,111,224, which showed an increase of $278,866. United Amusements, Limited, is an independent organization which is affiliated with Famous Players Canadian Corp., the latter holding a minority block of stock. Incidentally, Famous Players made an offer of purchase some time ago but it was not accepted.

Cashier Tries to Stop Holdup But Loses $50

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20.—An attempt by Libbie Cuban, cashier of the Rialto theatre, to sound a burglar alarm in the presence of a bandit was unsuccessful and the thief got $50 in bills.

When a man approached the box office and thrust a handkerchief-covered pistol through the window, Miss Cuban fumbled with the bills and at the same time tried to sound the alarm, but the bandit pressed the gun closer, forcing her to hand over the money. He escaped in a waiting automobile manned by an accomplice.

Tiffany Speeds Studio Plans After Three Successful Releases

Company Never Before Has Had So Many Specials, Features and Shorts in Preparation or Work, Says Cook
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—With the first three of its big pictures, “The Third Alarm,” “She Got What She Wanted” and “Extravagance” already released successfully, Tiffany anticipates concentrated and capacity production activity at the plant here.

GRANT L. COOK, executive vice president of the company, in a production statement, said: “Never before in Tiffany’s history have so many specials, features and shorts been in preparation and production at one time as at present. And more significant, never have we been able to offer the trade so many pictures of really conspicuous merit, with first-line stars, first-line directors and first-line stories and adapted plays.

“Alabam,” second on the schedule of Big Ten and Twenty Over Ladies this year, has just been completed, featuring Ben Lyon and Raquel Torres and a large supporting cast. Al Rogell directed.

The 16-film talking Western in a series of six that Ken Maynard has been making is just leaving from the cutting room, and marks the first talking Western star ever made. The film was directed by William Nigh, with Jeanette Loff playing opposite Maynard, and the famous horse, Tarzan, taking an active part.

Features Shorter Completed

Five short subjects also have been completed, including another Tiffany Chimp comedy, “The Little Divorcee,” the first Paul Hurst comedy, “De World’s Champion,” two travel shorts in the Color Symphonics series produced by Brown and Nagel, and the second short in the Multimedia Rolling Stone series.

“The Command Performance,” which is just being completed under the direction of James Cruze, is termed by Cook as “one of the most ambitious undertakings on Tiffany’s schedule.” It features Una Merkel and Neil Hamilton, with Thelma Todd and Burr McIntosh prominent in the support.

Among the other films in production are: “Caught Cheating,” a George Sidney-Charlie Murray comedy feature, directed by Frank Strayer; another Trem Carr production, “The Sunrise Trail,” which is the fifth on the schedule of six Bob Steele Westerns; and several short subjects, included in the latter group are two Tiffany Chimp comedies, “Africa Squawks” and “Ten Nights in a Bar Room”; the last of the first group of 26 “Voice of Hollywood” shorts; the third of the Rolling Stone series; and the second Paul Hurst comedy, “Ex-Harterer.”

Seven Features Preparing

Seven productions of feature length are now in the process of preparation. James Whale will direct “X Marks the Spot,” which is to be his second directorial effort, following “Journey’s End.” The others are: “The Single Sin,” with Kay Johnson; “The Drums of Jepthah,” from the pen of Harold McGrath; “Platinum,” a gangster story by the author of “Rattling the Cup on Chicago Crime.” Edward Dein will produce, which the James Cruse unit will produce; “The Beloved Enemy,” which Al Rogell will handle; Edward Sheldon’s play, “Salvation Neil”; and “Left-Eyed Ladies,” by Ursula Parrott, author of “Ex-Wife.”

“One of the characteristic advantages of the Tiffany program, as it has been said, is its amazing variety. Every type of story, spread over the widest field of public taste, is available to the trade.”

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—“Business is good for good pictures,” declares David Wescnher, director of publicity for Warner houses outside metropolitan New York, who has just returned from a nine-day tour of key cities. Wescnher reports that three films being especially well received are “The Door to Hell,” “The Life of the Party” and “The Office Wife.”

Harold Lloyd Corporation Found Guilty of Infringing Witwer Story in “Frisnman”
(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—The Harold Lloyd Corporation has been found guilty in Superior Court here of violating the copyright laws in the production, “The Freshman,” starring Harold Lloyd.

The case was handed down after Mrs. Sadie Witwer, widow of H. C. Witwer, author, brought suit for plagiarism. The ruling was a technical one, stating that Lloyd had unintentionally used things in his picture that had previously been used in another story. The Emancipation of Rosenda.” It indicated that the judgment will require Lloyd to pay a nominal sum to the Witwer estate after an accounting of “The Freshman” has been made.

A California Court decision climaxizes a long series of law suits which were started by Witwer himself. The writer’s original asked for $3,000,000 damages. When he died here in August, 1929, his widow continued the action. Witwer is reported to have left an estate of $16,000.

George Pratt Made Erp Vice President; John Ray a Director
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—George C. Pratt has resigned the various executive capacities he has occupied with Western Electric and E R P I in order to take over the duties of vice-president of E R P I, to which position he has just been elected. He will also assume the work of special counsel for that company and Western Electric, making his headquarters in Los Angeles in charge of the Western division of E R P I.

For many years prior to this organization change, Pratt was vice president, director, member of the executive committee and general counsel for Western Electric as well as a director and general counsel for the other company.

John H. Ray has been elected a director, member of the executive committee and vice president and appointed general counsel of the Western Electric company. In addition, he has been elected a director and appointed general counsel for E R P I.

A BOX OFFICE LANDSLIDE!
Warner Bros. 1930 Net Profits $7,074,621

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Net profits of Warner Brothers and subsidiaries for the year ended August 30, amounted to $7,074,621, according to a statement just issued. This figure represents the profits after deducting all charges, including those of depreciation, amortization, federal income taxes, special film inventory write-down, and extraordinary expenses incident to the acquisition of newly acquired properties. The net is equivalent to $1.77 a share on 3,709,023 shares of common.

Net profits for the fiscal year of 1929, were $14,514,628, equivalent to $5.23 a share on $3,015,541 shares of common.

In issuing the 1930 statement, Harry M. Warner, president of the company, pointed out that while the per share earnings have been figured on the total number of shares now outstanding, which includes those shares from the sale of which in September the company received $14,000,000, full benefits from this acquisition of capital were not enjoyed during the fiscal year which the net profits represent. If only the stock outstanding during the fiscal year were considered, the 1930 net would be equivalent to $2.44 a share. Total assets for the period are placed at $230,185,444, as compared with $167,189,024 a year ago. Warner further stated to stockholders:

“We are pleased to report that as of November 8, 1930, your company had current assets totaling in excess of $41,000,000, as compared with total current liabilities of less than $19,000,000.

“The various properties acquired during the past fiscal year were conservatively priced and were purchased almost entirely by the issuance of shares of common stock and by other funded indebtedness. Such purchases included 257 theatres, the results and advantages of which acquisitions are already apparent in the income received.” This income is represented in film rentals as well as theatre receipts. Stockholders numbered 26,990 on November 7, 1930.

Step into Legislative Fight
Early, Coast Exhibitors Told

State Senator Sounds Warning at Convention of Allied Amusements
At Seattle, Facing Amusement Tax, Censorship and Daylight Saving—F. C. Weskil President

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

SEATTLE, Nov. 20.—Exhibitors must keep a close eye on legislative bills affecting them and must get into the fight early to protect their interests against inimical action by the lawmakers. This warning, particularly against a proposed 10 per cent amusement tax, state censorship and daylight saving, was sounded by State Senator Paul W. Hauser in addressing the eighth annual convention of Allied Amusements of the Northwest.

Two representatives of the association gathered here from key cities of Washington, Idaho and Alaska to lay plans for combating the legislative measures.

Officers elected are:

F. C. Weskil, president.

James Hone, secretary-treasurer (eighth term).

The officers were elected by the board of seven directors. New members on the board are:

L. O. Lukar, Dave Gross and Louis Perunko.

Ralph A. Horr, new congressman, commended the association for its constructive work and pledged his assistance both to this organization and to the film industry.

The film industry as the “fifth estate” was lauded by Mike V. Mitchell, another Washington congressional representative, who referred to Allied Amusements as a valuable and potent organization.

Rev. C. Kleeheauer praised the motion picture trade as a power for good, and urged the exhibitors to measure up to their responsibilities, with high ideals and a resolve to help one another in solving problems. He congratulated the officers upon having formed such a representative group.

Contracts between various film companies and exhibitors were discussed in open forums. The association, it was found in good financial condition but plans were launched for doubling the membership in the coming year and effecting closer cooperation.

28 of 52 Shorts on Pathe Schedule Are Completed for 1931

(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Nov. 20.—Pathe has already completed 28, or more than half, of its 1931-32 short subject program, which called for 52 comedies during the current season.

Study of the type of comedy made by the company indicates a decided change in the trend of two reelers since the beginning of the year.

The 52 scheduled for production are divided into eight distinct classifications: Rodeo, Melody, Manhattan, Rainbow, Horse, Foley, Checker and Campus Comedies. The short subject, it is noted, in the early part of this year evidenced a marked inclination toward music and revues on the screen. Pathe Melody comedies were among the musical shorts being made at that time, but since then they have been discontinued at the Pathe plant, though the series title is still retained.

In the connection E. B. Dear said, “Although the comparatively recent mad scramble of producers to bring musical pictures to the screen has passed, we cannot entirely divest the screen of melody. For that reason there should be a certain amount of music on every film program, even if the short subject end of the bill supplies this modest need.”

As a result of various changes which have taken place in the Pathe comedy department, there are now four directors under contract and three comedy writers. The staff has been on the staff since the removal of the short subject department from New York to the West Coast; Archie Heath and Ray McClary.

Cummins Adapts 12

Ralph Cedar has just been signed to direct Daphne Pollard in “Harold Sees the Indians.” Harry Frazer, Charles “Chuck” Callahan and Hugh Cummins are the writers at the plant. Cummins has himself adapted for the screen 12 of the comedies so far produced this year, directed one and written several originals.

“Harold Sees the Indians” and “Seagoing Sheiks” are scheduled to go into immediate production simultaneously to begin an extremely active period in the Pathe comedy department.

Public Wants Action Melodramas, Declares Freuler of Big 4 Films (Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Melodramatic action pictures, or adaptations for the screen of newspaper stories and novels which have a wide appeal among the public, comprise one of the greatest needs of the theaters of the country today, in the opinion of John R. Freuler, president of Big 4 Film Corporation.

"The public today," says this executive, "is 'news conscious, thrill conscious and reader conscious." He expressed the belief that in view of the enthusiastic reception accorded the occasional Western films produced by large companies last season, there was a definite desire for program Westerns on the part of the motion picture public.

He noted that the favorable reaction to the series of six action Westerns released by Big 4 originally, an additional series of six was produced, which in actual sales, doubled the previous group.

Illinois Governor Speaks At Community Festival Honoring Theatre Man (Special to the Herald-World)

HARVARD, I11., Nov. 20.—Eugene Saunders, owner of Saunders Theatres here, will be honored December 8 in a community festival to be known as "Saunders Day." The occasion will be the dedication of a recently completed highway.

Governor Louis L. Emmerson has accepted an invitation to speak and there will be a number of other state and county officials present.

The celebration has been designated "Saunders Day" because, as a local newspaper puts it, "Saunders was instrumental, by his active promotion and uniring efforts in obtaining rights of way and clearing up, which would have interfered with completion of the road." Saunders is postmaster and president of the Chamber of Commerce.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Three public school systems have bought conveniently to the Monroe theatre, sent 3,000 children last week to attend a special matinee showing of the Paramount release, "With Byrd at the South Pole."

It is understood that so far 33 repeat bookings have been received for the film, with the gross averaging better than most first run pictures.

City Hall Sleeps Across the Street as Daylight Bandit Loots Philadelphia House (Special to the Herald-World)

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 20.—One of the most daring holds in the history of this city occurred across the street from the city hall and courthouse here when a youthful bandit thrust his gun into the cashier’s cage of the Stanley theatre and made off with $210.

The robbery occurred at 4:30 o’clock in the afternoon when the street was crowded with traffic. The thief disappeared in the crowd.

"Up the River," a crime picture was on the Stanley screen at the time and the cashier’s booth was surrounded by cardboard figures of thugs and bandits.
Machat Adds Twenty Years in One To Theatre Progress in Bermuda

Sponsor of Little Cinema Movement in U. S. Heads Movement Giving Islands Houses Comparing with Broadway First-Runs

[By Special Correspondent of the Herald-World]

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, Nov. 20.—Modernization of the motion picture industry in Bermuda is due primarily to the enterprise and perseverance of Nathan Machat, formerly of New York, sponsor of the Little Cinema movement in the United States. Machat came to Bermuda to recuperate from a severe illness and he felt that while making Bermuda his home he wanted to give the Islands the benefit of his experience in the motion picture business, gained through a period of more than twenty years, during which time he operated theatres in New York, Brooklyn and Newark, as well as "little theatre," in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Detroit.

When Machat returned to Bermuda after an absence of 20 years he found the industry at practically the same stage as it was in the United States in 1910. Tourists frequently left the theatres in disgust after sitting through a reel or two. Machat's aim was to give the Islands the same class of cinema entertainment as prevails in the States and the performances at Reid Hall, Hamilton, compare very favorably with those at first run theatres in New York.

Five Theatres Now

Credit is also due to the directors of Reid Hall, Ltd., of which Machat is managing director. The directors placed ample funds at his disposal with the sole purpose of enabling him to spend his own expense to give to Bermuda a chain of thoroughly up-to-date theatres. This company now controls four theatres, in addition to Reid Hall. The four are at St. Georges, Somerset, Bailey's Bay and at His Majesty's Dock Yard, Hamilton. All have the latest sound equipment; in fact, a silent picture could not be sold on the Islands. This company now has extensive real estate holdings and for one month in Hamilton it has refused an offer of $1,000,000.

Reid Hall, the largest and most up-to-date theatre on the Islands, was opened in June, 1930, with talking pictures. It has a seating capacity of 600, the most improved type of R.C.A. equipment and is equipped for stage presentations. At the last performance 4,000 Attend Reid Hall Weekly

A year ago the City of Hamilton never played to more than 300 or 400 persons weekly. Today Reid Hall plays to approximately 4,000 weekly by giving two shows nightly and two matinees on Thursdays and Saturdays, the scale of prices being 75 cents for evenings and 50 cents for matinees. The company now has contracts with M.G.M., Fox, R.K.O. and United Artists and keeps on its shelves a large number of films so that no alarm is felt if steamers plying between New York and Hamilton are late.

Reid Hall, Ltd., is the authorized agent of R.C.A. Photophone. Four standard and four portable sets are used in the company's theatres, the most recent sound installation being at the theatre at the Government Dock Yards on Ireland Island, patronized by members of the English Navy stationed in Bermuda.

Pay U. S. Wage Scale

The scale of wages in Bermuda is low but Machat's forces are paid at rates prevailing in the United States. As a result the company has a force of thirty, of whose efficiency, loyalty and devotion to their work he is justly proud. Operators are paid at the rate of from $40 to $70 weekly and sound installations are made by the company's own men, some of whom are A-1 mechanics.

Bermuda Motion Pictures, Ltd., owns and operates Mechanics Hall, in Hamilton, the oldest motion picture theatre in Bermuda, which is now being completely remodeled and renovated and will be reopened in the very near future. This house has a seating capacity of 250 and is equipped with Western Electric sound. Paramount, Universal and Pathé films are shown at Mechanics Hall and in the other five theatres owned by Bermuda Motion Pictures, Ltd.

Road-Show Pictures Planning New Release

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—L. E. Goetz of Road-Show Pictures has arrived here to arrange release of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room." He plans to make either a national hookup or sell state rights. The "Primrose Path," rights for which are held by the same company, has been sold to Nat Rosyer, High Point, N. C., for distribution in North and South Carolina. L. C. McHenry made the sale.

Wunder Speaks to Groups During Stay in St. Louis

(ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20.—Clinton A. Wunder, managing director of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, who is making a tour of the principal cities of the country, was guest speaker of the St. Louis Film Society branch of the Motion Picture Branch of the beard of Trade last Tuesday evening at a dinner.

Efforts of Prosecutors to Send Two To Death May Act as Bombing Damper

(KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—It is understood that prosecuting attorneys are seeking to place the death sentence on two members of the carpenters' union who confessed to the bombing of a suburban apartment building last fall. In such a case, death sentence is permissible by a law which was passed in 1929, making the wilful explosion of a bomb punishable by death.

The bombing apartment is said to have been built by a nonunion labor, and it is thought by some that this particular case may have some bearing of acting as a deterrent in the matter of possible theatre bombings which might arise through union disputes. The last theatre bombing took place a few weeks ago, it is reported, in a suburban house where an operator belonging to the nonunion group was employed.

Know Your Exchange Managers

The exchange manager is the direct contact between exhibitor and distributor, and therefore it is to their mutual advantage to know each other. The Herald-World presents a series of brief sketches of exchange managers and their outstanding activities in the motion picture field.

C. R. BLUBAUGH, branch manager for C. R. Blubaugh went to the Fox organization as salesman in the Omaha territory.

CHARLES E. KESSNICH, Southern division manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with headquarters at Atlanta, Georgia, was for years a theatre operator. It was thirty years ago that he entered the exhibition business and he continued as an exhibitor for an even dozen years. In 1912 Kessnich became actively interested in sales and was appointed by Mutual Film Corporation to manage the Atlanta branch. He remained with Mutual in that capacity for four years and then, in 1916, joined with M.G.M. as manager of the Atlanta office.

R. F. CLOUD is manager of the central office of Warner Brothers, First National and Vitaphone Varieties at Cincinnati, following the amalgamation move announced two weeks ago.

Cloud started as a bookkeeper for George Kleine in 1915 in the Cincinnati exchange. A year later Cloud was promoted to Warren and covered the Ohio territory until April, 1917, when he entered World War service. Mustered out in April of 1919 he joined Realart Film Company as assistant manager.

DANGER LIGHTS

THIS is a melodrama made out of the thrills of railroading and of three fine kinds of love—legs, love, and marriage. A ballad is sung between comrades and the love between a man and a woman. And one man, aching for, feeling assured of, the love of the woman, has to learn that he can, that he must get along with only the other two kinds.

Quite probably this picture embraces one of the most descriptive treatments of railroading that has come to the screen. Perhaps this impression is due somewhat to the fact that the writer saw this picture at the State-Lake theatre, where the Sprecher-Berggren "natural vision" version was shown. It does not seem, however, that the standard version will have lost any of the immense railroad backgrounds. Fast shots as advantageous will have been used, and since, after all, it is sound which gives the impression on the screen its conclusive realistic details.

Great locomotives with their clanging bells and rhythmic gusts of steam... the shouts of hardy railroaders on the job... the clank of steel on steel... the deep, distant whistle of the oncoming limited—these, with their visual complements, form a railroad panorama against which two men and a girl struggle to determine what is in their hearts.

Louis Wolheim portrays what is essentially the central figure—Dan Thorn, two-fisted, rough-voiced, great-hearted superintendent of the mountain division of the Chicago, Milwau-kee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad. Admired by superiors and men alike, he is by many loved, and his authority is never challenged. It is while he is driving his men to clean up a landslide (one of the pictorial and auditory highlights of the picture) that he encounters Larry Doyle (Robert Armstrong). Doyle was a good railroad man, an engineer. Dismissal for insubordination turned him into a tramp. But he is not afraid of Dan Thorn's mightier fists, and thus begins Thorn's rehabilitation of him.

Mary Ryan (Jean Arthur) continues it. Mary and her father have been looked after by Thorn ever since Mary got injured. That is why she is willing to marry Thorn. Then Doyle appears, and ultimately, not wishing to hurt Dan, they run away.

Doyle's foot gets caught in a switch. Under great floods, in the rain, Thorn is repairing a washout. He is told of Doyle's seeming duplicity. Finding Doyle just as the limited whistles, he saves him instead of killing him with his fists, and is struck by the train.

Proper medical care cannot be had west of Chicago. Thorn can live five hours. But the fastest run on record was seven. Yet Doyle says he can make it in five. And it is this successful race against death that provides a climax rich in sound and pictorial effects. The picture closes with Thorn reconciled to his loss of Mary to Doyle.

Wolheim is, as usual, entirely convincing. Armstrong, perfect as to type, is otherwise competent, while Jean Arthur's good looks are sufficient for the role. Comedy relief comes from Hugh Herbert (whose professorial tramp brought spontaneous guffaws at the performance reviewed), and the rest of the cast is capable.

The general effectiveness of the picture speaks for the direction, which carried the story always logically forward and sensed keenly the dramatic values of the setting itself. The dialog was suitable, but it was the action, not the dialog, which was emphasized as the story-telling medium. Altogether, therefore, "Danger Lights" is full of red-blooded, yet genuinely tender, entertainment.—George Schatz, Chicago.

TOL'ABLE DAVID

THE part of David, played in the original silent of some years ago by Richard Barthelmes, is here taken by Richard Cromwell, in as fine a portrayal as could be desired. He, though very young, handles himself with a decided assurance and confidence, and acts his part with a sincerity that is unmistakable. His work in this talking version of the old silent is every bit as excellent as that of Barthelmes in the original creation of the screen character.

The film, originally taken from the story of Joseph Hergesheimer, and now readapted for the talking screen, has been expertly revised. Particular mention is deserving Glazer for his work in writing the dialog, which adds much to the effectiveness of the picture as it appears today. Direction, handled by John Blystone, is thorough and careful. There has been comparatively little alteration in the readaptation to the talking screen, with the exception of the simple dialog, which, by the elimination of dragging subtitles, speeds the action to a great extent.

The story is all David, which reflects still more to the credit of Richard Cromwell. David is always looked upon, and referred to, as a boy, just Tol'able. It is only after his elder brother, who drives the coach carrying the Government mail, is crippled by a stone thrown by the vicious Hathurns, and the father dies from the shock of the tragedy, that David comes into his own. Finally permitted to drive the coach, he loses the mail, which is recovered and stolen by one of the Hathurns. Returning to get the lost mail sack, the boy, in an excellent dramatic scene, kills all three of the white trash family and brings in the mail safely.

It is true that the fight scene is a bit improbable, and that the concluding sequence is highly melodramatic, but it does not detract from the fine performance not only by the featured player but also by the entire cast, which is excellent without a single exception.

Noah Beery, in the role of the meanest of the three Hathurns, is exceptionally good. His voice and Southern accent are perfect, and, in fact, this is true of the others as well. Joan Peers takes the part of Esther Hathurn with sincerity and finish, and is very appealing as the sweetheart of David. Edmund Breese and James Bradbury do noteworthy work, the first
HEROINE OF THE WEEK

LOIS MORN does a good job of her role in "The Dancers," a society drama produced and distributed by Fox. It is an adaptation of a stage play by Gerald Du Maurier and Viola Tree, with little alteration for the screen except to permit of broad background effects.

This film, the screen adaptation of a stage play by Gerald Du Maurier and Viola Tree, is really a comedy of the的姿态 boards, with those trimming adaptations which adaptation to the motion pictures has made possible. The cast is competent, with honors, going in particular to Phillips Holmes as the young fisherman who leaves the girl with whom he made a romantic pact, goes to Canada, and on his return finds that he has written an article which earns him an article. With this case, finds her leading a fast life.

The theme, concerning the "honor" agreement, was made when the girl, played well by Lois Moran, leaves him as they are about to be married because she did not live up to the terms of the house. Later, he discovers her in the capacity of a school teacher in a small French school, and marries her. The there is the other woman in the case, portrayed feelingly by Mae Clarke, who, as a dance hall entertainer in a Canadian village, meets and falls in love with Holmes, follows him to England and then sacrifices her love for him by bringing together, Miss Clarke is not only a capable actress but is possessed of a charming singing voice which she uses to good advantage in the song, "Love Has Passed Me By," written by James Monaco and Cliff Friend.

It is quite apparent that the stage play has not been altered for the screen, except for the introduction of broad background effects not possible on the stage. For example, the film opens with lumbering scenes in the Canadian woods which are quite effective, and later in the picture the landing of a plane by Lois Moran on the lawn at an English country home at the beginning of the flight to Paris which Miss Moran makes when she flees from the impending wedding in a very different manner.

Holmes speaks his lines with a proper English accent, but the supporting cast, particularly in several sequences in English drawing rooms, render their lines in clear, matter-of-fact American English, which does not completely convey the impression of English locale. The same is true of Miss Moran in her dialgoue, and she is supposed to be an English girl born and bred. Mae Clarke as Maxine, on the other hand, is occasionally, but not too noticeably, emphasizes too strongly in her speech the fact that she is an American from Canada.

Walter Byron as Berwin, the Englishman who becomes the main link with relation to Lois Moran, plays his part well, yet here, too, it is easily understood that it is not an Englishman playing. Miss Clarke is highly capable as the "Aunt" Emily of Miss Moran, injecting a touch of humor into what is otherwise a rather straightforwardly dramatic story.

Photography is excellent throughout. Direction is for the most part good in the reproduction of the original play. The dance hall in the Canadian dining room seems like a Broadway night club as far as orchestra is concerned, though true to what it is meant to be, locked to the center of the room.

The picture moves at a good pace and should provide an hour's entertainment for most any audience.—Charles S. Aaronson, New York City.

LAUGHTER
GOOD FUN! Produced and distributed by Paramount, Director, II. D. MacRae. "A Screwball D'Arrast and Douglas Doty. Dialogue by Donald Ogden Stewart. Photgrapher, George Fossey. With Nancy Carroll, Fredric March, Helen Twelvetrees, Diane Ellis, Leonard Carey. With "LAUGHTER," it is pure farce and no effort is made hide this fact. Much of the enjoyment of the picture is in the dialogue of Donald Ogden Stewart. It is snappy and natural throughout.

The swift movement natural to this type of picture might have been even more emphasized if the movement of the production as a whole. Shorter, it would have been still better.

Fredric March plays a character decidedly different from what is generally assigned him. As Paul Lockridge, a composer, he reveals a real flair of comedy and it is refreshing to see him in such a role.

The same should be said of Nancy Carroll, who has in "LAUGHTER," one of the best opportunities given her. She is not submerged by the work of another player as is generally the rule.

"LAUGHTER," the story of a Man and December. The show girl marries a multi-millionaire. At first she believes herself happy in her new surroundings and refuses to heed the warnings of a poor sculptor whose heart was broken by her marriage to this man of affluence. Soon the artist commits suicide does she realize that true love, and not money, brings real happiness. Realizing this, she leaves her husband and joins her former lover with whom she had always been in love in Paris.

"LAUGHTER," is a most suitable title for the picture for the theme is treated in that manner. Jay M. Shreeve, New York City.

COSTELLO CASE MYSTERY THRILLER! Produced by James Cune Productions. Distributed by Par and Paramount. Director, Walter Lang. From the stage play by the same name, produced as silent drama. Cast: Lola Lane, Tom Moore, Edward Kanes, Wheeler Oakman, Jack Richardson, and Russell Hardie.

EXCELLENT acting by those outstanding in the cast, a well-knit plot and good lines, to say nothing of capable direction by Walter Lang combine to make "The Costello Case," an entertaining production. Those old troopers, Wheeler Oakman, as the villain, and Tom Moore, as the cop, make the characters they portray true to life, and Roscoe Karnes, whose name and face are not as yet as well known to the screen as they might well be, combines comedy, wise-cracking and good sense, scoring heavily as an apparently gullible and yet shrewd nephew.

Lola Lane, as the juvenile love interest, and Russell Hardie, as the lover, both newcomers to the screen, give creditable if not quite smooth performance.

The "Costello Case" revolves about the killing of one Costello, a bootlegger. The real killer, the sleag gang leader, is Wheeler Oakman. The juvenile is suspect. Tom Moore, as the cop who wants to make, narrowly escapes death when he is put on the spot in his own home. His peace is made on a fine dramatic situation exceedingly well done. He later gets his man.

I am becoming quite tired writing the phrase "give the doll to her father," but in "Costello Case," this is again a true comment. The talking screen is the third medium in which it has been handed to the public, for it has been a stage play and a silent. In the new dress, it contains a bedroom scene and the juveniles in pajamas.

The lines are excellent, particularly those given to Karnes, whose jibes are satirical and take direct aim at some of the more glaring police methods. A fine plus is given by some good ones and puts them over with a modulated Irish brogue which scores heavily. Oakman does much with pantomime.

Settings are made quite narrow in scope and reminiscent of the stage. Photography is at par. Plot treatment is excellent, moving smoothly and rapidly with no unexplained tangles or loose ends.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS... NO. 3
Universal—Talking
John Hix in this series picture explains strange facts and occurrences in various parts of the world. Photography and pantomime is a feature of the subjects. In this number, he tells about Herman the Hermit of Hollywood, who bathes, dresses and runs off to the studio in the morning with little clothes and lots of pep. In Los Angeles is a mausoleum dedicated to the burial of animals. Here are buried the pets of many celebrated movie people. One is the gorilla in a zoo, where the old fashioned fishing bait is grown and packed in cases for shipment to all parts of the world. Bricks were used by French troops on a day in a day in the war, before the development of machine running in synchronization with the propeller of the plane. A Nipponese mentalist has a group of devoted followers who permit themselves to be pierced by knives and swords and who lie on broken glass before the camera, apparently without feeling any ill effects and showing no marks. On the whole, this is an interesting number, featured by excellent color photography and good description.—Running time, 10 minutes.

PAR AND DOUBLE PAR
GRANTLAND RICE SPORTLIGHT
Path—Talking
Golfers should devour this wherever they may roam, and according to statistics there are millions of them in the country. It opens with a demonstration before the camera of Bobby (called Emperor) hitting his first shot in his own inimitable way. Slow motion more clearly indicates stance, grip, eye on the ball and follow through. Then follows a motion picture description of Jones going through his own big tournament match with a huge crowd scrambling after him with each shot. A running fire of comment points out what the golfer should give heed to in the film. The subject concludes with a song titled "Donald the Dub," rendered by Frank Crumit accompanying himself on the ukulele. Crumit and Granland Rice wrote the words and music, and the song runs into several verses and several more choruses, but it is clever and Crumit puts it across with plenty of pep. This is novel and should prove an extremely, popular short subject.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THE LOVE PUNCH
MURRAY AND SIGNEY COMEDY
Universal—Talking
Cobbe and Kelly are in the theatrical business and in a quarrel. The firm breaks up and Cobbe marries a woman in jail in order to receive $50,000 left by his uncle. The woman who owns, of course, Kelly who is in the habit of killing off his husbands on the wedding night. She escapes from jail, and at a house party attempts to do away with Cobbe, but Kelly, who knows the woman, arrester part of the film concerns itself with the search of the house where the two detectives look for the crazy man. There is lack of punch and cleverness in the story and the laugh spots are occasional. Addie McPhail, Florence Hall, Richard-type and Stompe, a negro, complete the cast.—Running time, 20 minutes.

ONE NUTTY NIGHT
A CHECKER COMEDY
Path—Talking
By the cast names, Shyllock Combs and Silo Transfiguration is a subject of time to save him. The poisoning is taken away by the police and the two in patching their quarrel with a drink accordingly share the cup containing the poisoned fluid. As the police, Fredric March and Helen Twelventrees is necessary and does not belong in any motion picture for popular consumption. The picture is not strikingly clever, but there are several fairly good laugh moments.—Running time, 20 minutes.

THE MYSTIC ISLES
VAGABOND ADVENTURE NO. 16
Path—Talking
Tom Terris takes his audience to the socalled Mystic Isles which spread about the Equator. Scenic effects are excellent, particularly those of the sea, which open and close the subject. Terris describes the islands and their peoples which are clearly pictured, and the camera emphasizes the intricate and beautiful carved stonework which almost literally covers the buildings. Native craftsmen are seen in the process of completing some of this work with care and precision. Rustic bridges of bamboo in the form of lattices, and the palms which are scattered about the islands complete a fascinating picture to any American city dweller. The Vagabond Director enters an ancient temple and seats himself in a beautifully carved chair which is apparently an object of worship to the natives. An opportunity for several fine interior shots is here taken advantage of most competently. This is the story, and it is on a par with the better of the subjects.—Running time, 10 minutes.
“Cimarron” Land Rush Scene Gives 24 Cameras a Big Task

Five Hundred Wagons, 1,700 Horses and 2,000 Persons in Radio’s Spectacular Effort—Darmour Making Five This Month—Hoffman and Gumbin Buy Halperin’s Stock in Liberty

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Radio Pictures will make the gigantic land rush scene of “Cimarron” forty miles north of Bakersfield tomorrow. It is the big scene in “Cimarron” and more than $200,000 already has been spent preparing for it. All plans had been made to shoot the scene Sunday but constant rain for eight days brought the company in, and it returned to Hollywood Monday to await dry weather. Wesley Ruggles is directing, Richard Dix starring, and Eddie Cronjager and Nick Musuraca are chief cameramen.

The huge scoop of preparations is seen in the plans two hundred wagons, others and 1,700 horses, as well as 2,000 persons. Plans for filming the landrush, depicting the struggle of homesteaders against official rights of the Government land of Oklahoma, are reminiscent of Bill Hart’s famous “Tumbleweeds,” but are on a more lavish scale.

Ten Cameramen in Pits

While the scenes are being shot, ten concealed and mechanically operated cameras, hidden in pits, are to take new and unusual angles. Extras have come from four adjoining states to perform and to collect $5 for driving a team of mules or riding a horse.

Radio Pictures has rented a 3,600 acre ranch for the production. The picture is said to be costing Radio Pictures at least $1,500,000.

The big scene is to show the huge throng of settlers leaving the state line to claim homesteads. It is a scene which permits of no rehersal. With twelve guns explode to signal the 2,000 actors to move, the scene has to be right the first time.

The greatest care has been taken to foolproof that scene. All the million things that could go wrong have been anticipated. To Ruggles, Cronjager and Musuraca the big shot presents a gigantic responsibility. The success of the picture with its big investment depends on the smoothness and perfection of a shot that is to go on the screen in less than four minutes. To Louis Sarecki, supervising producer, the picture has meant sleepless nights.

He realized the danger these extras were to confront and discussed it with Ruggles. The latter repeatedly has admonished the extras that “you are jeopardizing yourselves in this scene. If you can’t ride a horse expertly you’re liable to be killed in a stampede.” But not one of the riders has withdrawn.

Barnum Busy

During the month of November, Larry Darmour is making five new productions. Mickey (Himself) McGuire and the Toonerville Kids are making two, Louise Fazenda is making one, and two features—one a melodrama and the other a Spanish production—are being done for independent release. Albert Herman is directing the youngsters.

Liberty Stock Purchase

M. H. Hoffman and H. M. Gumbin, executives of Liberty Productions have purchased the stock and interest formerly owned by Victor and Edward Halperin in Liberty Productions and will continue to produce pictures at Metropolitan Sound Studios. The Halperin brothers, owners of their own studio, have four screen plays during the year.

Fowler on Varieties

Fowler Studio Varieties are being prepared for production at Fowler studios, and A. D. W. Productions, releasing through Fowler, is working on a series of children’s pictures. Shooting probably will start next week.

Five Jobs for Rogers

Three famous novels, an original stage play and a story will comprise the program of the Charles B. Rogers productions for the coming season of 1930-31. The first, “Millie,” is in production. The “Common Law,” by Robert W. Chambers, is being adapted by John Farrell; “French Love,” “The Registered Woman,” and “Dark Flame” are next in line.

Macdonald Loaned

J. Farrell Macdonald, for years with Fox, has been loaned to M G M to play the part of Mr. Murdock in “The Easiest Way,” starring Constance Bennett. Principals include Robert Montgomery, Adolphe Menjou, Marie Prevost, Anita Page and Hilda Hopper.

Warwick Working

Stopped by his friends in Hollywood while on a trip from New York to visit friends in Australia, Robert Warwick went to work in 24 hours and decided to stay around a while. He was taken over on contract by Fox and then loaned to Radio Pictures for a featured part in “The Queen’s Husband.”

Old Folks Have Day

On “Cimarron” Location

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—“Cimarron,” which has become distinguished for having everything a motion picture ever had in the course of production, has added one more feature. It was “Old Folks Day.”

Richard Dix, star of the epic, telephoned long distance from location, to his aged father, who witnessed the original land rush of Oklahoma pioneering days.

“Cmon up, Pa,” he invited.

“Okay,” said “Pop” Dix.

“That’s a good idea,” said Louis Sarecki, associate producer at Radio Pictures studios. He too called his father.

The elder Sarecki also accepted, and “Old Folks Day” came into being.

Pauline Starke Says

Salary’s Missing; Sues

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Pauline Starke, actress, has filed a breach of contract suit for $6,050 against James Cruze, director, and Henry D. Meyer, said to be a stockholder in James Cruze, Inc.

Miss Starke charged she was given a contract for four weeks’ work at $1,500 but was discharged after the fourth day.

Ray Coffin Combines

Managing, Publicity

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Ray Coffin, publicist, is combining his exploitation work with management, he announced this week. His office is one of the first to undertake this combination. Coffin has assumed the management of Paul Finkelstein’s Serenaders and the Ethio- pian Etude Chorus, Coffin in addition to maintaining offices in New York, Paris and London, has just ordered another in Berlin.

Caddo Productions Moves

To United Artists Studios

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Caddo Productions, which has been leasing space at the Metropolitan Sound Studios, is moving this week to the United Artists studios. “The Front Page” will be the first product in the new location.

Al Santell Likes His

Cars Made to Order

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Al Santell, after driving his expensive coupe only 13,000 miles, decided that he wanted a few slight changes, including a slant to the windshield, which had been vertical, and new louvres in the hood. He wanted them square instead of oblong.

“That is a pecadillo?” asked the Herald-World reporter.

“Noope,” replied the body builder.

“We had to tear the top off and recast the hood.”

Estimated cost for minor changes

—$1,000.

DeMille Recuperating

After Appendectomy

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Cecil B. DeMille is recuperating at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital following an operation for appendicitis. His condition is reported to be “comfortable.”
Paramount and Warner Set Pace in Eastern Production

Astoria Plant to Be Busy Ten Days Shooting "Stolen Heaven"—Four More Subjects Completed at Vitaphone Studios

Simple Simon Comedies Go into Work

(Especial to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—With the Paramount studio in Astoria slated to be busy for the next 10 days at least on the shooting of Nancy Carroll's starring vehicle, "Stolen Heaven," and Warners' Brooklyn studio turning out the usual quota of Vitaphone Varieties, production is moving at a good pace in the East.

Edward Gordon, founder and head of the Washington Square Players, who is credited with having given the first engagements to such stage stars as Katherine Cornell and Glenn Hunter, has been placed under contract to Paramount. He recently left the Astoria studios for the West Coast, after several weeks of work here.

Kane, Zukor, Shauer Arrive

Robert T. Kane, general manager of European productions for Paramount Pathé, has arrived in New York for a six weeks' visit. He was accompanied by Eugene Zukor and Mel Shauer, top executives of the productions.

Tailhoul Bankhead is due in New York on January 13, to begin her screen work at the Paramount studios. Her first picture will be "Her Past," in which she will play with Clive Brook, who will come on from Hollywood for the production. Donald Ogden Stewart is now at work on the scenario for the film, and George Cukor will direct.

"Sex in Business" has been selected as the title of the forthcoming screen production of Austin Parker's original story formerly called "Strictly Business," in which Claudette Colbert, Fredric March and Charles Ruggles will be featured. Parker and Gertrude Purcell are putting the finishing touches on the scenario and work is scheduled to begin about December 1. Dorothy Arzner will handle the direction.

Four Varieties Finished

At the Vitaphone studios of Warner Brothers four new subjects have just been completed. "Squaring the Triangle," features several prominent Broadway stage successes, among whom are Mayo Methot of the "Torch Song" and Donald Brian, musical comedy star, who also wrote the story which satirizes the eternal triangle idea, and Arthur Hurley directed.

Andrae Heilbron and Marion Mitchell of "Up Pops the Devil," Broadway stage play; Dennis Moore, also of the "Torch Song" company; and Geoffrey Bryant are starred in "The Old Flame," a light comedy written by Weare Holbrook.

A farce comedy, "The Love Nest," directed by Alf Goulding from the script by Stanley Rauh, has in the cast Billy Wayne, Thelma White and Thomas P. Jackson. "With Pleasure" is a two-reel musical comedy number, for which the music and lyrics were written by Harold Levy and Herman Ruby. Roy Mack directed a cast which included Dolly Gilbert and three sets of twin sisters, the Collette sisters, the Pearl twins and the Corbit twins. Roy D'Arcy has been signed by Murray Roth, producing chief, for work with Brooklyn, and Bobby Jones, golf champion, has contracted for a series of Vitaphone Varieties relating to the game. It has not yet been decided definitely where they will be made.

Simple Simon Comedies Start

Simple Simon Comedies, Incorporated, has begun production activity at the Audio Cinema studios in Chicago. Louis Simon already has completed several scenes for "Hot Shivers," the initial two reeler on the program. Mort Blumentock is directing the comedy, which was written by William A. Crew and Rube Welsh. Ruth Holden, star of "June Moon," stage success, is appearing opposite Louis Simon.

Canadian Authors Want "Justice" on Copyrights

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—The copyright controversy in Canada has been revived by the arrival in Ottawa of George Herbert Thring of London, secretary of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights and Composers. Thring asserts that the English organization is ready to aid Canadian authors and composers in their fight for "justice and a fair copyright law."

In the meantime, Canadian exhibitors continue to ignore the demand of the Performing Rights Society of Canada, which wants an annual seat tax from theatres which play copyrighted music for which the society claims it holds the Canadian assignment.

Sentenced to 60 Days for Issuing Worthless Checks

(ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20) — E. May Nye, former treasurer of the defunct Lee Theatre Corporation, which at one time operated the Lee theatre here, was sentenced to 60 days in the workhouse by Judge Butler of the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction on charges of issuing two checks, for $298.50 and $25 respectively, drawn on a bank in which the company didn't have sufficient funds. Testimony showed that the checks were given to a movement picture company for salary.

"Man to Man" Is Final

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Warner Brothers has announced "Man to Man" as the final title of "Barber John's Boy," its special production, according to J. L. Warner, vice president.
YOU haven't seen anything out here unless you've been to a football game. Hollywood, to be truthful about it, is an old Egyptian word, the northern part of Egypt, by the way, meaning "ball of the foot," which can easily be translated into "football." Somebody told me it could also mean "back of the foot," which would be translated into "heels," but this person hadn't had his option renewed.

I saw the U. S. C.-California game, which lasted three hours and ended by the closely-fought score of 7-4. Ooey! it was bad. The California cheering squad, not being able to offer one little cheer during the game, got up as one man at the final whistle, put their tongues out at U. S. C. and yelled, "Yah! You didn't make a hundred!"

These football games out here aren't like the eastern ones. Not a bit. It's probably because football wasn't invented to be played on summer days. For the price of three and a half dollars you are privileged to witness:

1. Football game.
   a. Twelve thousand forward passes.

2. Concert.
   a. Two bands of four thousand eight hundred sixty-one persons, so large there is no room for spectators. Play only one song. Something like "Romona."

3. Vaudeville.
   a. An Austin in which are six persons, another dressed like a Trojan, one bear, a bass drum, and a thin dime. This car does tricks between halves.
   b. Two grandstands filled with forty thousand people who have purple, orange and red hats, interchangeable every other minute, guaranteed to make you intoxicated merely through looking at them.
   b-1. These grandstands, also at the signal of a whistle, can mould themselves into designs. In two minutes they formed a bear, a trojan, a shoe horn and a waffle with syrup.

When you come to think of it, and if you're in California on a Saturday in the fall you certainly have to think of it, that's a whole lot of show for $3.50. I don't know if motion pictures give you as much.

There is another little touch the natives have out here that is denied Easterners. They coach their own games. For instance, a man in W. 14, Tunnel Five, will suddenly decide that it would be a good thing for Bludger to go in at tackle. Promptly, forthwith, he sets up a great hue and cry, "Bludger, we want Bludger." This is not exactly accurate, because nobody wants Bludger except himself, and maybe Bludger's mother.

But the sheep in the grandstand suddenly decide that they, too, cannot endure another minute without Bludger at tackle. And pretty soon you have the whole stadium, including the fans for the opposing team, shouting, "We want Bludger." They get him.

The part of the game I remember best is the sensation of finding, at about the last quarter, that the quiet and reserved gentleman to my left not only bore a striking resemblance to Winfield Sheehan, but was Winfield Sheehan. Next to him was George Gershwin, to whom I've been introduced twelve thousand times, none of them registering, and after him Raoul Walsh and a lady.

Sheehan never did get very excited. He wore a cap, pulled low over his forehead, and sucked on one cigar after another. I give my word that he never had a cigar out of his mouth the whole time I sat next to him, and I also swear he used one match, lighting each one from the other. There's Fox economy.

Three-quarters through the game Gershwin, hearing one of the awful songs for the thousandth time, turned to Sheehan and said, "Can I use that?" Sheehan said "No!"

BIG LITTLE GUY

Ten years ago, when the Universal City of today was in the making, a black-haired, bright-eyed little imp raced through the corridors, clawed and shouted, laughed and joked with all those who passed. There was no limit to his activity. If he wanted to play baseball up and down those corridors, he'd play baseball. If he wanted to stage a marathon, he'd stage it. Executives and writers tore out their hair and raised their hands in supplication. But their pleas did no good.

The imp was Carl Laemmle, Jr., the boss's son.

Today, a black-haired, bright-eyed young man of 22 sits behind a big desk in a big room and presses buttons and snaps orders and holds conferences.

Today, this little fellow of 22 directs a business which each year grosses more than $30,000,000. He is answerable to only one man, and that man is Carl Laemmle, Sr.

Today, he is not the boss's son.

He's Carl Laemmle, Jr., general manager of Universal studios.

Young Laemmle has forsown four years of college to handle the business.

Young Laemmle has been assistant to every head of every department which lies behind the Universal City gates.

Young Laemmle has watched the men who call him boss play basketball until 9 o'clock at night to encourage them, and he has gone back to his office and worked until 4 the next morning on executive problems.

Young Laemmle has had battles with older executives, who have their formula for making pictures, and he has proved the value of his judgment in the face of their objections.

The big little fellow, with the ideals and the dreams and the aspirations of youth, has breathed a new life and a new spirit into the organization at Universal City. He has done it with sheer enthusiasm and vitality.

There's a big sign at Universal City which reads:

"We're on top. Let's stay on top."

That's what Carl Laemmle, Jr., and the men who work with him are trying to do.

Some day, the other story of "All Quiet on the Western Front," the picture which won for Universal City the coveted award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for 1929-30, will be written into motion picture history.

It is a story of modern youth looking tradition in the face, grinning widely, and going ahead with its own ideas.

"All Quiet is more than a picture," said young Laemmle, "It's an epic. Universal will do it.

The oldsters shook their heads. Some rushed into the offices of the senior Laemmle and said, without equivocation:

"That kid's going to ruin us."

Laemmle went ahead. He battled with every one from the executive offices to the props department. He raised a million more times more hubbub in the executive offices than he had ten years before playing ball and running marathons up and down the corridors.

Laemmle, Junior, laughed as he told me the story of his fight to produce "All Quiet." He laughed quietly. Then he laughed from his wide, pleasant mouth, and the 22 year old executive became firm-lipped and serious.

"Laemmle, Junior, is still at Universal City," he said.

He glanced around the room.

" Probably will be for some time," he added.

"The imp's got some more tricks up his sleeve, you bet."

J. C. Jenkins—His Colym

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Were it not for a knowledge gained from long experience, and only for our ability to forecast results, this favorite magazine might now be minus a more or less important columnist and might also be shy the handsomest man on the force, which would be next to a public calamity.

It was this way. After we voted last Tuesday, we drove up to Cherry county, Nebraska, to shoot a few mallards. We were entertained by a ranchman who had a number of lakes on his ranch, which were located in the hills. He not only had a lot of lakes but he had a lot of range cattle, and among these cattle there was a bull, and it is this bull that we want to tell you about.

Out in that range country the cattle pay no attention to a man if he is on horseback, but if he is about it is quite different. We located ourselves in a blowout in the hills where we could get some pass shooting—but maybe you don’t know what pass shooting is. Pass shooting is where you are located in the hills between two lakes and you shoot the ducks as they fly from one lake to another. We like pass shooting better than shooting on the lakes, for the reason you can gather all the birds you shoot without having to wade around through the mud and rushes and then lose half of them.

We had shot several mallards and were getting set for a fine evening’s shooting, when we happened to glance around and there stood a whitefaced bull about ten rods from us, and he was giving us the once-over. We wanted to appear kinds sociable-like, so we said, “Hello, Mr. Bull, how’s all your folks?” At this he walked up a couple of rods closer. Then he said, “Say, old timer, don’t you recognize your boy friend?” Then he came up a little closer and began to bow his neck and paw up some sand. Now when a bull begins to bow his neck and paw sand, we know exactly what’s on his mind, and we know, too, that to stop a bull with a charge of No. 5 shot, he has to be closer than we care to have him get. We also know that it is not considered quite chivalry by the ranchmen for people to shoot their cattle, and as between an irate ranchman and playing ring-around the rosy with a bull, there isn’t but little choice.

If this bull had been a little, warty, knottedhead bull, we wouldn’t have bothered so much about shooting him, but he was a bullock meat comes high out in that country, especially if he has a pedigree as long as a Democratic platform. So when that bull began to bow his neck and walk towards us, we felt like Will Rogers did when he was chased out a melon patch by a farmer with a shotgun down in Oklahoma, and he exclaimed, “A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse!”

But there was no horse in sight, and when that bull started for that blowout, we knew it was our move, and we moved. We went out of that blowout and down a steep hill into a canyon and ran over three jackrabbits on our way down to our car, which was parked about 30 rods away.

We have driven a lot of canyons in our time, some of which we thought were mighty deep, but this one seemed to be about the shallowest one we ever saw, and it was the only canyon around that was handy enough for our purpose, so we took it.

After we got to the car and caught our breath, we felt like Doug Hodges did when the doctor told him it was an eight-pound girl. We began to feel pretty chesty and we wanted to give that bull a piece of our mind, but we supposed that he was still charging around in that blowout, until we looked out of the back window, and there he stood not more than 100 feet away, with his neck bowed and still pawing sand. Then we rolled down the window and stuck our head out and said, “Say, you low-down, pusillanimous cuss, did you come down that canyon or did you take a short cut? You needn’t swell up just because your candida is all over its ears yesterday and think you own all the grass around here, for you don’t. And don’t think we don’t know your geneology, for we do. Your ancestors came from middle Africa, and you are half hippo and half rhino, and as Andy Gump said to Min, there’s another thing—you great great great grandmother was half Jersey and half something else, and she was the cow that kicked the lamp over in Mrs. O’Leary’s barn and started that fire in Chicago back in ’71. We didn’t see the cow but we saw the fire and we know, and if you feel proud of your ancestry and want to swell up, then go to it and see if we care.”

This seemed to make him kinds ashamed of himself and presently he nodded off over a range of hills, and we went back to that blowout and shot about a dozen more mallards, then went back to the ranch house and called it half-a-day.

We are back again in the old “Sundowner State,” and as between associating with that bull or these Jayhawkers, we prefer the Jayhawkers. They are not so particular about their company.

We called on our old friend Sam Blair tonight and Sam had a smile on him like a catfish, the reason being that he was standing ‘em out on “THE BIG TRAIL.” Our guess is that if you can stand ‘em out on anything it will be “THE BIG TRAIL.” This is another one that Fox has added to the list of worthwhile pictures. It follows closely in the footsteps of “THE COVERED WAGON,” and ten years hence, when the present generation has forgotten “THE COVERED WAGON,” this one could be called “THE COVERED WAGON” and they could get away with it, and the folks would be just as well satisfied.

Sam will soon commence the building of a new theatre at Smith Center, which will add another one to his chain. We didn’t have time to visit with Sam as much as we would have liked because he was leaving for Kansas City.

We met a Mr. Flynn, salesman for Fox, who impressed us as a real salesman and very much of a gentleman and we hope that we added another friend to the list long of sales boys who always have a glad hand for us. The sales force is one particular branch of the industry we always like to speak a good word for, because we know what they are up against, and as we have said before, we have the first one to find yet who wasn’t a good friend of ours.

Were we to presume to advise you—which we are not going to do—we would advise that you get “MANSLAUGHTER” and kill it from Dan to Bethsheba, and from Genesis to Revelations, including all the barns, chicken houses and back fences in the neighborhood, for it is a picture that has plenty in it to satisfy everybody, from Grandma to the hired girl and ice man.

“MANSLAUGHTER” is further evidence of what picture entertainment ought to be, and is further proof of the employment of capability in the production field, a thing some pictures lack evidence of.

To say that pictures are not becoming better and better as the years come and go is to deny that experience has taught us anything, and when producers come to realize that mental and suggestive motion pictures are not conducive to good entertainment, we will have arrived at that point that exhibitors and the public have hoped for years. More pictures like “MANSLAUGHTER” will lessen the demand for censorship and create a more hopeful outlook for the industry.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 63.—(A) What will be the inevitable result of locating storage batteries in a dark, inconvenient place? (B) What is likely to happen if storage batteries be located in the same room with motor generators, or other electrical equipment? (C) Describe, in detail, the various acceptable light sources for use in examining batteries. (D) What do you consider the best, and the second best, light source for use in battery examination? (In answering these questions, it is desired that you go fully into detail, to the end that we may know exactly what your ideas are concerning these matters.)

DALLAS—NEW ORLEANS—AND HOME

(Dallas, Tex., 1143-28 Thirty-ninth place, Long Island, N. Y.)

DALLAS, the next stop after Waco, is one of the many large thriving, growing cities of Texas. It is, in many ways, a leader among the cities of this great land of ours.

We were greeted by Secretary J. G. Sinz of local union 249, and were well taken care of while in the city. We visited a few of the theatres, and I was surprised by the excellence of the work the men are putting on in spite of being handicapped by very poor projection conditions.

At the RKO Majestic theatre we found a small projection room. The motor generator room was very small and so inefficiently ventilated that the motor in use was so hot I could not hold my hand on the field without great discomfort. This is a very foolish condition. Such heating will, in time, weaken the insulation of any generator, and if it be used anywhere near its capacity, the armature will quite probably burn out. Just why installation engineers permit such conditions I do not know. It is very inefficient, and in the end, very expensive.

The Majestic presents vaudeville as well as motion pictures. It is managed by Lou Ramey. While there we met J. H. Harden and C. S. Nix, the projectionists then on duty.

At the Melba theatre (Publix), the condition as to motor generators is equally bad. If I am not mistaken, this is the theatre in which a large motor generator was recently burned out, and small wonder. The room in which a large motor generator is installed is really nothing more than a good-sized closet. True, there is an open window on one side, but no fan was running, and the generator was very hot. The condition of the Melba projection room, while perhaps a little better than that of the Majestic, was bad enough. It is well for great corporations to understand that, in the nature of things, men will not produce the best possible work when things are made uncomfortable for them by overcrowding, etc. Such installations are NOT a paying proposition from a box office viewpoint. However, in justice to W. R. Wall, F. E. Kennamer, C. E. Rupard and J. G. Sinz, who comprise the projection staff at the Melba, the results put forth were good.

The picture was rock steady. I did not investigate the sound. The theatre is managed by a watchman, and it may be clearly understood that when I write thus, it is not in a spirit of criticism. It is merely to set forth facts—facts I would much rather not set forth, but the man who describes and praises good conditions and weakens poor ones, when encountered, is not playing fair and is not doing his duty by the motion picture industry, the exhibitors, or the projectionists.

The Dallas meeting was at the Palace theatre. Except for the entrance, the projection room, while not ornate, was very good. You reached it, however, by a vertical climb of about ten or twelve feet up an iron ladder, in a little space perhaps two feet square, emerging finally from a hole in the floor. They hoisted the films up through this grand entrance by means of a rope and pulley. If I had to climb up very often I'd have them hoist me up that way, too. When you finally got up, however, there was room enough. I did not investigate either the generator room or the battery room, nor did I obtain the names of the projectionists.

I most sincerely compliment the projectionists of Dallas for the excellence of the results put forth under adverse conditions.

PALESTINE, Tex.

PALESTINE is a small city in which we stopped two nights and a day in order that we might visit friends of other days. Way back in 1890, I was engineer of the waterworks of that city. Later I was engineer of the light plant, where the electrical foundation was laid which eventually caused my affiliation with motion pictures in the capacity of projectionist (then known as "machine operator"). Under the sunny skies of that little city rests the ashes of Friend Daughter's elder sister, who remained with us but a short while. I wanted again to look upon the little stone which marks the spot where she sleeps.

In Palestine I had a look-see at a 700-seat theatre nearing completion. It is being erected by the R & R Company, and considering the size of the city it is a remarkable house. In fact, Manager J. F. Jones, now manager of a smaller theatre—owned by the same company in that city—assured me it was the finest theatre in any city of equal size in all Eastern Texas, with which statement I am not inclined to quarrel. Its name will be the "Texas."

The Let H. was not ready for its equipment. The auditorium has a rather flat, arched ceiling, painted in a sort of cloisonné, that arrives, has been provided. The projectors will be Super-Simples, equipped with Peerless lamps. The sound apparatus will be Western Electric.

Earl Schultz will be in charge of projection. Friend Schultz is now projectionist in a much smaller theatre owned and operated by R & R in Palestine.

NEW ORLEANS, La.

From Palestine, Tex., to the great city of New Orleans is a run of almost 600 miles. We had written the Shreveport and Bossier area stations, but had not heard from them. Perhaps it was our fault.

We had been warned by many friends not to be courtesies. We therefore decided to go down the way of Beaumont, Tex., where I was engineer of the great "Eagle" saw mill somewhere around the year of 1892. However, at Beaumont, like every thing else I knew in years gone by, it had been wiped out by the sponge of time. The run from Beaumont to New Orleans was over an almost perfectly flat country. We rode between tens, if not hundreds, of thousands of acres of rice.

And now I shall relate an incident for the purpose of attracting the attention of the exhibitors to the necessity of employees, under any circumstance, to be courteous to the public. This is particularly important in the matter of ticket sellers, door keepers and ushers. Discountory on the part of an employe will make enemies for the theatre and the opera, and any ordinary circumstance, there is no possible excuse for discourtesy.

After a run of about 300 miles, mostly of gravel roads, we stopped in Lake Charles, La., for the night. We were weary, but after dinner, noticing a Paramount theatre across the street and believing it to be a Publix house, we approached the box office and asked the young woman in charge if it was a Publix theatre. Upon being told that it was, I tendered the regular Publix circuit pass to the doorman. Now if this young man had said, "This is not a Publix house," that of course would have settled the matter. Instead, however, he said (and there's a lot in how a thing is said, let me tell you! "This is no good! You can't get in on that thing!" or words to that effect. Of course an argument ensued, and after I had asked the young man at least three times if it was not a Publix house, he finally told me it was not. Then I returned to the box office and asked why I had been told it was. The young woman replied that she had misunderstood.
November 22, 1930

New Orleans has something more than 75 theatres, some of which I entered, finding the work to be excellent, both as to sound and to screen results. The Saenger theatre, for example, on Canal street, is a very up-to-date establishment. The projection room, however, is necessarily small. The room contains two Bickrent C14 spots, one Bickrent F7 lamp and one Bickrent F3 lamp. Among the three Super-Simplex projectors, with Hall and Connolly high intensity lamps. The back is a table, enclosed rewinder, trailer cabinet, etc. The ventilation of the room is very good, as is the lighting and painting. Western Electric equipment is in place at one end of the projection room—a separate room. It is well ventilated. The batteries, by the way, are over two years old. The projectionists of this theatre are Willie Breitenmoser, Louis Boudreaux, Sam Picinich and Vic Bouteire.

The costumes are very excellent. One room is set aside as a school. It is equipped with chairs, one arm of which forms a small table. There is a blackboard. All in all the room looks as though it really means something—by that I mean, it is USED. The union is apparently making a very good attempt to operate a worthwhile school, thus improving the knowledge, and therefore the efficiency, of its members. President Johnstone evinced pride in the phase of the union's work, and that is as it should be.

At the banquet I noticed that when E. W. Richard, president of the Saenger Amusement Company and vice president of Publix; Howard McKay, city manager of Publix; and N. L. Carter, attorney for the Saenger, all mentioned this part of the union's work, praising it very heartily.

The banquet was in the beautiful roof garden of that very swank hotel, the Jum. It was tastefully decorated, and I am advised that some 325 men and their ladies fair attendance was down in the number. The affair lasted until the wee sma' hours.

Howard McCoy, city manager of Publix, acted as toastmaster. During the dinner, talking pictures were made, with the intention that they be shown in New Orleans theatres. I was invited to speak on the "mike" and, of course, did so. During the course of the dinner P. Raoul, International representative of the I A T S E & M R M O, whose offices are by the international office to be present and represent the I O at this banquet, in an appropriate address, mentioned that Richman was in the life membership in New Orleans local, and in token thereof gave him a beautifully engraved gold watch.

Mr. Richman has always been a friend of the union. He is, in fact, esteemed by all New Orleans projectionists as a true, loyal friend. Being one of the rare masters of his craft, he finds it consistent with their duty as heads of companies to treat employees fairly and with every reasonable consideration.

The theatre in the Thaddeus Theatre, a Publix house. The attendance was large, and the interest of the audience was apparently very keen. (I might add that in the future I will be able to talk to well up to a half-hundred of New Orleans projectionists, who made the practical demonstration of their interest by handing me their subscriptions to the Herald-World.)

On the last night of our three-day stay in New Orleans, we were invited to partake of the hospitality of local 293 at a restaurant over in the old French quarter. The dinner was ordered by Mrs. L. Boyer, who is affectionately known as "Mother of the saenger theatres," by all motion picture people in New Orleans. Viewed purely as cuisine, it was one of the best dinners I have ever eaten. The compliments of both Friend Daughter and myself go to Mrs. Boyer. If she is as expert in theatre business as she is at ordering French foods, then the Saenger company is to be congratulated upon her affiliation with their organization. The following were present at this dinner:

A. S. Johnstone, president of local 293; J. E. Kane, business agent; S. M. Moroy, vice president; W. P. Raoul, international representative; E. L. Beaud, secretary; Mrs. Lee Beaud, the charming wife of the secretary; Friend Daughter and your humble editor.

In the middle of the proceedings, President Johnstone made a very complimentary speech, in which he advised Friend Daughter that she had been duly appointed the official "Sweetheart of the I A T S E." In addition to this, he had been token of local 293, with a very beautiful garnet ring. Friend Daughter was floored. She got upon her toes, stuttered a little, sputtered a lot and then to her credit, pulled a very nice speech of acceptance, winding up with, "I don't know how to thank you for your kindness." International Representative Raoul wiped off his mouth carefully, got to his feet and said he knew a good way—whereupon the line formed at the right and in all other directions, and Friend Daughter, being modest, got behind her dad, and there was almost a riot.

AKRON, O.

O n the way home from New Orleans, we traveled north as far as Akron, and stopping here over night, it made it my business to drop there and two of the theatres, shake hands with such managers as were on the job, then hoist my 225 pounds way up yonder to say hello to the projectionists.

At the Colonial, one of the units of the Feiber and Shay chain of theatres, I found good work being done put on by Projectionists D. M. Bartholomew and John Shaffer. The theatre is managed by L. B. Cool. The house seats 1,800. The projection is very small. Simplex projectors are used, with Western Electric sound. L. B. Cool, manager of the theatre, was away. I did not therefore have the pleasure of a chat with him. I did, however, leave him a message.

On either side of the screen, and close thereto, was the figure of a woman in the usual "artistic" garb. These figures are displayed by the use of lights of various colors. The illumination is not heavy, but theatre managers must remember that theatres patrons sitting in semi-darkness are gazing constantly at the screen for from one to two hours without any rest for the eyes. Now a pair of figures may do no harm to even the most sensitive eyes in a short space of time. They do, however, set up two rather mild glare spots, and such spots have an injurious effect in two ways. First, they will, in the course of an hour or two, strain eyes that are quite sensitive to that sort of thing, to the point where they will feel uncomfortable. Second, such spots have the effect of reducing the contrast of the picture, thus rendering it less effective.

One of Loew's very beautiful theatre, I found J. M. Menhorn and E. H. Simmons in the projection room, up just below the twinkling stars. The projection angle is very great, therefore the distortion is bad. However, the sound results are good. It is astonishing that an organization such as Loew's will place the projection room in a position which operates automatically to "stretch" everything vertically a distance one-fourth of its natural width, and in addition stretch everything horizontally in varying degrees, from the bottom of the picture to the top.

As encouragement for early mailing of Christmas parcels, Hon. Arthur Sanve, postmaster general of Canada, appeared in a special film which was taken on the steps of the Parliament buildings at Ottawa. The talking message, in both English and French, is to be distributed among all Canadian theatres early in December for regular presentation. Paramount and Fox News trucks were used for the shooting of the special release.

On Thanksgiving Is Built Upon Events
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—In conformity with his practice of making a special 300-foot subject for each American holiday, James A. FitzPatrick of FitzPatrick Pictures has produced one for Thanksgiving Day. The subject is said to contain excerpts from every important event leading to the proclamation of Thanksgiving Day as a national holiday.

Talkers Take Place of Stage Acts in Japan;
Use Sound-on-Disc Sets
(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Talking pictures are gradually replacing the legitimate stage in Japan. Combined capital of producing companies in that country has grown to the figure of $125,000,000. Of this amount only $8,000,000 represents the capital of incorporated enterprises, the rest being that of private concerns.

One of the largest companies, the Shochiku Cinematograph Company, produces approximately 100 feature pictures a year, while Nikkatsu, Ltd., makes an average of 80.

Sound equipment has been installed in many of the leading theatres. Most of the apparatus is made in Japan, since foreign manufacturers cannot compete with the low prices of sets made at home. All sound equipments made in Japan are sound-on-disc, for the Japanese have not as yet been able to perfect a sound-on-film machine in which the film will not scratch.

Italian Studio Makes Six Talking Films for Foreign Distribution
(Special from Correspondent in Italy)

ROME, Nov. 20.—The Stefana Pitaluga Society has completed its first talking pictures for international distribution. The first is "The Song of Love," starring Dolly Davis. Gennaro Righelli directed.

Other pictures produced in the company's large studios here include "Nerone," starring Petroni; "Il Cortile"; "Il Medico per Forza;" "Il Terzo Mese"; and "Resurrection." Pictures now being prepared for production are "Corte d'Assise," with G. Bignone directing; "Si, Morte" with M. Blasetti directing; and the special, "Ave Maria." Righelli will direct the latter.

Sound synchronization is also being completed on the film "Naples Singing," on which distribution rights have already been sold for all of South America and portions of England, Canada and Mexico.

Looking for Something Different? Try Muskogee's Dawn Preview

A dawn preview! Who ever heard of such a thing? And who would want to roll out of bed at 5 o'clock in the morning to go to a show?

Strange as it may seem, there were plenty of people who wanted to see a dawn preview in Muskogee, Okla., and they didn't mind getting up early either. The occasion was a dawn showing of "Playboy of Paris" at the Ritz theatre, which, the management asserts, was one of the best exploitation stunts it has tried in many weeks.

The whole thing started over $40. The management offered a cash prize of $40, or a trip to Dallas, Tex., to the employee who would most successfully exploit one picture. The award was available for employees in any of the three houses controlled by R. P. M. & R. Theatres, a subsidiary of R. & R Theatres. Theatres included were the Ritz, Broadway and Yale in Muskogee. The contest was announced to run from September 1 to December 25.

George Scott's Idea

George Scott, treasurer of the three houses in Muskogee, was the man who conceived the dawn preview idea.

F. M. Marsh, one of the managers, tells us in his letter that the early morning show started at 5:45. He says: "Attendance was far above what we expected; nearly 450 people crawled out of bed and came down to see the show. Everyone seemed to enjoy it. We can classify it as an unqualified success, not merely from a money-making standpoint, but as a general advertisement which has kept half the people in Muskogee talking about the stunt for the past 10 days. We are including an outline of the entire scheme, if you wish to reproduce it in your magazine."

Trailer Starts Exploitation

Exploitation started a week in advance when a special trailer was shown with these words: "There is something new under the sun! Did you ever hear of a DAWN PREVIEW? No? Well, neither did we, but we are going to have one just the same, HERE, Wednesday, November 5, at 5:45 a.m. The picture shown will be 'Playboy of Paris,' Maurice Chevalier's newest mirth-maker, a comedy sensation. Hot coffee with cakes will be served to everyone through the courtesy of the Griffin Grocery Company, manufacturers of Polar Bear coffee. If you do not have a car, the Herbert Miller Motor Company will send a brand new DeSoto straight eight sedan after you, if you will just leave your name and address at the box office. Remember the date. Be here, and enjoy a new and novel experience."

The coffee came through a tieup and was cooked by a local cafe. Paper cups, saucers and spoons were purchased locally. Vanilla wafers were used in lieu of doughnuts. The automobile service provided by the garage also came through a tieup which cost the theatre nothing. Sixty persons came in these emergency "taxis."

3,000 Cards Distributed

Another phase of the promotion was the distribution of 3,000 cards carrying the following copy: "There is something new and different! This card and 30 cents will admit you to see the DAWN PREVIEW of 'Playboy of Paris' at the Ritz theatre Wednesday, November 5, at 5:45 a.m. Be there if you want a novel experience."

These cards were handed out at a Halloween midnight preview and at other subsequent shows. Although they were not all used, they provided an excellent medium of advertising.

One hundred fifty other cards were printed with these words: "This free ticket will admit one young lady who is a member of the senior class of 1931, Central high school, to the DAWN PREVIEW of 'Playboy of Paris' at the Ritz theatre. These were turned over to the president of the senior class, who distributed them among the senior girls. Each one of these free tickets practically meant the sale of another ducat, for each girl had a boy friend with her.

Ten posters were scattered through the

A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

[Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. The following is the published list of tunes and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.]

Fun for Your Children

Fun plays an important role in the life of every child. The songs and raps in your youngsters' soup, figuratively speaking, is both healthy and necessary.

Did you ever stop to think how large a part motion pictures can play in this? Film comedies provide both fun and education. It is wholesome entertainment. That is the kind we are showing on our screen every day.

They are comedies that contain just as many laughs for youngsters as for grownups.

If you do not have time to come to our theatre yourself, send your children here. Then you can be assured that they are out of mischief. It saves you worry and gives the kiddies the best of entertainment.

Chester A. Black, manager of the Knoll, suburban house in New York City, recently told his theatre furnished with acoustical materials. To give his patrons an idea of the value of this substance he said the following in his house organ:

Our Acoustics

"Good sound equipment and fine talking pictures will not produce enjoyable entertainment if the acoustics are bad. Too many 'hard surfaces' are the cause of reverberation-words and syllables are blurred together, dialog is turned into a jumble of sound that cannot be understood."

"So, to insure Knoll theatre patrons always the best to be had in the way of talking and sound pictures, the management of the Knoll has just completed a big expense on acoustical treatment for the interior, whereby talking and sound pictures can always be heard at their very best from now on. This is guaranteed Knoll patrons the finest possible system of speech and music that can be obtained in any theatre, regardless of price, and all we ask is a chance to prove our claims to you. A trial and comparison will convince.

"In installing the most costly acoustical treatment, the management believed perfection would appreciate it and attend the Knoll. This faith has been entirely justified, and each evening increscently more come to the Knoll, where sound is naturally reproduced. There is no substitute for the best. The greatest motion picture theatres offer you no better sound. In fact, most of them do not offer as good sound, on account of their size, as the Knoll. With the perfections in the acoustics of the Knoll, where sound is naturally reproduced, there is no substitute for the best. The greatest motion picture theatres offer you no better sound. "It doesn't take a scientist to recognize good sound, and we appreciate even more the patronage of the patrons who demonstrate that they, too, appreciate the best. Here you will find the full, rich tones of musical reproduction, clearness and distinctness of words is not found in many picture houses today, and which is only possible with perfect acoustical conditions."

200 in Popularity Contest

The Hollywood theatre, Detroit, received over 200 entries in its recent contest to pick "Miss West Fort Street." The winning girl was given a full week of personal appearance engagement. A meeting was arranged with the mayor, who publicly congratulated her.

J. C. Ewing Gives Bank Accounts To New Babies, Passes to Golfers

J. C. Ewing, manager of the Colonial theatre, Watertown, S. D., explains in his letter an extensive campaign he promoted for the picture "Follow Through." As Ewing puts it, his exploitation "might contain ideas for other small town exhibitors." He tells us about it:

"Enclosed are a few articles that you might find suitable for publication on your Box Office Promotion pages. They might be ideas for other small town managers."

"Paced with the problem of selling both our Prosperity Week and the feature picture 'Follow Through,' we decided to sell both on the basis of cooperation of cooperative ads in the local newspaper. So we went out and sold all the display ourselves. In anticipation of this, the editor of the paper donated substantial space for the Colonial. A streamer across the top of the page and a story on the picture were printed gratis. Consequently, we had quite a lot of publicity that cost the theatre very little."

Bank Ad Plans Film

"On the opposite page was another large ad, inserted by a local bank, which also plugged the film. We had previously tied up with the bank to have it act as a depository for $1 bank accounts given to all babies born during the week that 'Follow Through' was on our screen. This stunt is the highest kind of good will advertising that one can get. All it cost us was $5, for there were only five babies born during the week.

"Every merchant represented in the cooperative ad section also carried posters in his windows."

Make Bid for Rural Patronage

"It takes a lot of encouraging to make steady theatre-goers out of the out-of-town patronage. With this in mind, we have set out distributing throwaways regularly in the rural districts. Each throwaway carried a coupon good for one free admission. The dates on the coupons were staggered so that no two people living near each other would receive them for the same day. As a result, the heralds averaged two paid admissions to each guest coupon. The back page was sold to a local advertiser, making the cost to the theatre very nominal."

"But this is not the biggest thing done. He sent us some newspaper clipplings. One of them tells of his idea of admitting all hole-in-the-wall children free of charge."

"He made a check of records at both the public and club courses of the city and found there were nine who had shot aces. When they had made them didn't matter: all were admitted who had ever scored a shot on a local course.

"The $1 bank accounts mentioned above were advertised as being donated by Charles Rogers, star of the picture."

F. G. Penrell Writes A Line or Two About His Promotion Work

F. G. Penrell, manager of the Berrien theatre, Berrien Springs, Mich., broke away from his big routine a few days ago long enough to write us a letter on his exploitation activities. His own words follow:

"While I have never written anything to be published in your paper, I always read what the other fellows write, and with that in mind I am writing this, thinking it may help some other exhibitor.

"Our local schools are quite large, using buses to bring children in from the adjacent territory. After taking it up with the superintendent, I am giving one pass to some member of each class every week for leadership in scholastic work. Of course, it is talked about and carried home by the children, and I find some who come on passes bringing their parents along. In many cases, these parents had not been accustomed to attending the theatre. The free tickets idea gets regular mention in the high school publication and local news papers, which publish names of winners.

"Another goodwill stunt I tried was inviting inmates of the county infirmary to a show on a light night. They all came and I got a story in the papers.

"I agree with J. C. regarding Fox pictures, but then add that I have found Metro's product very good."

Fact Stories of Your Own 2 Billion Dollar Industry

Cases on the Motion Picture Industry

HARVARD BUSINESS REPORTS Volume 8

Compiled and published for the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University

HERE is the first book to bring together in convenient "case history" form, pertinent facts and figures, the actual intimate story of many of the pivotal situations and perplexing problems in motion picture production, distribution, and exhibition.

May Suggest Solutions to Your Own Problems

Each case outlines an actual situation just as it occurred, the actual methods used in handling the problem, and the reasons why. Then the commentator briefly analyses the problems involved in the case in the light of all the facts given and comments informatively, insightfully, on the entire case. You see exactly what was done and why. Cases discuss such topics as: Consolidation to reduce production costs; advertising profitable thematic series; "cost-minimizing" credit rates; video life organization for theatre chains and so on to mention but a few. You may find answers to many of your own problems here.

This street intersection is said to be the busiest corner in San Antonio. Small wonder then, that it made an excellent location for a display on Paramount's "Manslaughter," when the film showed at the Texas.

Tieup Gives Texas Theatre Billboard On Busiest Corner

The Texas theatre, San Antonio, secured one of the best billboard locations in the city for a display on "Manslaughter" when Publicity Manager Victor tied up with the U. S. Army recruiting station there.

Tieup, with the San Antonio Safety Council on careful driving made it possible for Victor to place a note on the billboard, saying that the picture was approved by the council.

The location of the recruiting station, a photograph of which is shown elsewhere in this section, is said to be the best in the city. It is reported to be the busiest corner in the city. The billboard was placed above the entrance to the recruiting office.

Cost of this tieup was small. It took only a few passes which were given to the safety council and the recruiting officers. This is said to be the first occasion on which any theatre has been permitted to post advertising in that location.

Jenny Lind Relics Help Plug Picture Based on Her Life

Perhaps one of the most interesting displays, from a historical standpoint, which the Capitol theatre, New York, has had for a long time was the one arranged in the lobby for screening of "A Lady's Morals."

The picture is based on the life of Jenny Lind, the "Swedish nightingale." W. J. Hildebrand, a New York resident, loaned the Capitol his historic collection of programs, letters, tickets and accounts of Jenny Lind's sensational engagement at the Castle Garden in New York, June 6, 1851, which was held under the auspices of the famous showman, P. T. Barnum.

This illustrates the drawing power of exploitation which has an element of curiosity.

Dawn Preview Aids Muskogee Theatre

best windows in the city with special copy on the morning show. A pass was given to each store which donated a window.

All main floor seats in the house were reserved for the preview at 50 cents each. This was done, Manager March explains, so that the management would have some idea how many people would attend the show, in order that there would be enough automobiles available for taxying. It also prevented cars from being sent on "wild goose chases" to fictitious addresses, as all who wanted a taxi in the morning had to leave their addresses at the box office when they purchased their reserved seats.

"Worth Hundreds," He Says

Exhibitors may find some good suggestions from Marsh's summary of what the dawn preview did for him. Read this: "The show did not make a world of money, although it was profitable, but the word-of-mouth advertising the picture and the theatres received as a result of the show are undoubtedly worth hundreds of dollars. The idea, so far as this city is concerned, was so entirely new and unheard of that a buzz of conversation flooded the house every time the trailer was shown. Practically everybody in town knew about the preview, even if they didn't all feel like arising so early to see it.

"As a means of waking your city and making it realize that there is a theatre in town, this idea is invaluable. Of course, it is strictly one-time, or possibly a once-a-year stunt. It cannot be used too often. In my opinion, such a preview should be given during the summer months, or at least earlier than now, as the weather usually is disagreeable this time of year. We had a lucky break, however, for the weather was just right."

Ted Hilgendorf follows Tip in B. O. Department For His House Calendar

Ted Hilgendorf, manager of the Ritz theatre, North Milwaukee, has worked out a calendar of his coming attractions along the line of one which was reproduced in the Box Office Promotion department a few months ago.

In his letter Ted says: "The idea was taken from your columns sometime ago, although you will notice that my arrangement is somewhat different. The merchant advertising, of course, pays for the print job."

The previous calendar to which he refers was, we believe, the reproduction of one used by the T & D Jr. Lodi theatre in California. Is that right, Ted?

J. B. Russell Building New House in Maysville, Ky.

J. B. Russell, of Maysville, Ky., is erecting a new theatre in this city, which he plans to have completed for official opening Thanksgiving day.

The house is to be known as the Russell. It will have Western Electric sound and luxurious seating facilities. Architecture is Spanish. Reports indicate it will be one of the most palatial showhouses in its region.

Hosiery Tieup for "Whoopie"

The Colonial theatre, Brockton, Mass., tied up with a local dry goods store to exploit its engagement of "Whoopie." Hosiery was advertised in extensive window displays, in which stills from the picture were exhibited.
Toiletry Tieup and Midget Bungalow Exploit “Du Barry”

Rodney D. Toups, manager of Loew’s State, New Orleans, netted his theatre considerable publicity when he tied up with a local newspaper in a classified ad contest for “Du Barry, Woman of Passion.”

Scattered throughout the want ads were titles of pictures in which Miss Talmadge, Conrad Nagel and William Farnum, stars of the picture, had appeared. Readers were to pick the starring pictures of each of the three actors. Prizes were the trophies.

Toups also hooked up with a toiletry concern for window displays of toilet articles named “Du Barry.” Similar windows were obtained in 30 drug stores. Copy and stills were featured in each exhibit.

A compo board bungalow on the sidewalk at the front of the house bore the sign “Madame Du Barry’s Dressing Room.” Above one of the windows was another sign which read “Do Not Look In Here.” In this room were stills and advertising material on the film. Naturally, there were many curious enough to look in the window.

Three Montreal Houses Have Children’s Matinees

Three theatres in Ottawa, Ont., had special children’s matinees on Saturday of last week. One of the houses, the Imperial, admitted free all youngsters who brought an article of old clothing. This was to be given to the unemployed.

The shows and houses where the matinees were held were “The Santa Fe Trail,” Imperial; “Whoopee,” Centre, and “Captain of the Guard,” Avalon.

Indianapolis Circle Ties Up in Classified Ad Contest

The Circle theatre, Indianapolis, secured the cooperation of a local newspaper in a classified ad contest that brought a good deal of notice to “A Lady Surrender.”

Each day 10 questions, some of them pertaining to the picture, were published in the classified section. The answers were to be found scattered throughout the section. Pairs of tickets were awarded to each day’s winners.

15,000 in Houston Summoned To Appear “For the Defense”

Fifteen thousand legal-appearing subpoenas were distributed by the Metropolitan theatre, Houston, “summoning” residents to appear in the trial of William Foster, alias William Powell, who stars in the film “For the Defense.”

They Sit Up and Take Notice

The official-looking document caused a turmoil in the homes—until people found out what they had received. Very few of those bills were thrown away without opening. They looked too much like something serious to be taken lightly. But when the reader unfolded the paper and found what it really was he was probably both relieved and amused, for it was a clever stunt.

Each document was signed by Home O’Shoze, Clerk of Amusements Court, which has a significance all its own. On the inside was the message: “The State of Texas to the Chiefl of Police, Marshal of any Police Jurisdiction in the State of Texas—Greet: YOU ARE HERETI COMMAND ED to summon. Every Amusement Lover in Houston to be and appear before the Amusements Court in Houston, Texas, and there to testify as witness For the Defense in a certain criminal action now pending in said Court wherein the State of Metropolitan is plaintiff and William Powell alias William Foster, the defendant, and there remain from day to day until discharged by said court.

Bob Kelley Did It

“Herein fail not, but of this writ make due return as the law directs. Witness my hand at office in Houston, Texas. . . . Home O’Shoze, Clerk of the Amusement Court, Lamar Hotel Bldg., Harris County, Texas.”

Bob Kelley, publicity director for the Metropolitan, was originator of the idea.

Denver Paramount Offers Cut Prices to High School Students from 2 to 6 p.m.

A stunt to stimulate lagging business in the late hours of the afternoon has been inaugurated by the Paramount theatre, Denver, whereby high school students save a dime on matinees.

Several thousand cards were distributed, carrying this message: “High school students presenting this card and 25 cents will be admitted to the Paramount until 6 p.m.” Students were quick to pick up this offer, for the usual price between 3 and 6 p.m. has been 35 cents.

Every Friday night the Paramount gives a special program for students. This custom is growing in popularity.

“Check and Double Check”

Amos ’n’ Andy have some engine trouble in Milwaukee, but it’s good exploitation anyway. Story on page 90.

“Double Check” Ads

In Paper’s Gag on Amos ’n’ Andy Film

Heavy exploitation was featured by both the RKO Palace theatre in Milwaukee and the RKO Capitol in Madison, Wis., in connection with the showing of Amos ’n’ Andy in “Check and Double Check.”

In Milwaukee, in addition to the regular double spread newspaper advertisement announcing the picture, another double spread was promoted by the Palace, of which Earl Payne is manager, tying up with twelve merchants on a “Check and Double Check” contest. The object of the contest was to check double check each advertisement appearing on the spread and then write a sentence telling why the firms deserved the readers’ patronage, and why they give greater value, better service or superior quality. Six cash prizes were awarded in the contest ranging from $50 to $5 as well as 25 pairs of tickets to the Palace for the picture.

Old Car Leads New Ones in Parade

An old Ford, similar to the model used by Amos ’n’ Andy in the picture was also promoted and led a parade of new automobiles, promoted from a local dealer, along the downtown streets of Milwaukee. Each of the cars was appropriately placarded, with copy on the Palace and the picture.

In Madison, John Scharnberg, manager of the Capitol, promoted a parade of old Ford cars resembling the “fresh air” taxi used by Amos ’n’ Andy in the picture. The Capital tied up with the Wisconsin State Journal in this parade, which offered $10 to the owner of the Ford most nearly resembling the one in the photoplay.

“Double Checking” the Ads

A tieup with the newspaper in a contest on its classified page was also promoted. The object of the contest was to “Check and Double Check” and count the want ads appearing in several issues of the paper. Scharnberg also arranged a tieup with one of the leading clothing stores in Madison whereby every boy who purchased one of the items mentioned in the store’s advertisement was given a ticket to the special Saturday matinee to see the picture. Each advertisement featured a still from the photoplay and gave credit to the Capitol theatre.

Scharnberg also had made an invitation, seven feet long and four feet high, which was delivered to Mayor A. G. Schmedeman by two Western Union messenger boys, inviting him to see Amos ’n’ Andy in “Check and Double Check.” This large invitation received plenty of attention and incidentally, a break in the papers.

Moise Bloch to Supervise Publicity for Loew’s State

Moise B. Bloch has been appointed director of publicity for Loew’s State in New Orleans, after serving for two years as assistant director of publicity for the Saenger Publicity organization in that city.

Bloch is a graduate of the Tulane school of journalism and was, before his entrance into the amusement field, a reporter on the New Orleans Item Tribune.

Ushers Have Their Day

Ushers at the RKO Palace, Cleveland, “had their day” (or night) last week. Frank Hines, manager, allowed them to hold a dance on the theatre stage after the show, each usher bringing a girl friend.
Christmas Far Away? Not to This Exhibitor; Has Gift Club Already

Christmas is coming. It may be a long way off, but Gary Lassman, manager of Warners' Egyptian theatre, Milwaukee, doesn't think it's too far away for organizing a kiddies Christmas Stocking Club.

Lassman has for sometime sponsored a regular club for children, but this new organization is his first attempt along the Christmas line.

In the Christmas Club plan, each youngster in the community is invited to bring a stocking and hang it in the theatre. Between now and the holidays gifts will be placed in the stockings by merchants who are cooperating.

Has Drawings Every Saturday

For his Warner Kiddies Club, Lassman makes it a custom to offer some special attraction at each of the Saturday matinees. He promotes toys and novelties from merchants. Candy and flowers are often given, while such specimens as goldfish, dogs and the like are frequently thrown in.

His system for awarding these prizes is simple. Each member of the club has a number and drawing takes place every Saturday afternoon. In addition, he posts each Saturday 20 numbers in the lobby. All juveniles whose numbers correspond to those posted are admitted free at the matinee.

Members Have Creed

Members of the Warner Kiddies Club are given cards which have the following set of rules printed on the reverse side:

I WILL:
1. Attend school regularly.
2. Attend every Saturday Kiddie party.
3. Obey my parents.
5. Be a square-shooter in my home, in school, on the playground or wherever I may be.
6. Study and know my school lessons.
7. Be kept on the inside of the house all days of all. A special card is mailed to each child shortly before his birthday comes around, congratulating him and inviting him to attend the show gratis. The house organ carries the names of these individuals each week.

Approximately 3,000 copies of the house organ are distributed, and the publicity, Lassman also gets a good deal of news space in local community newspapers. Before coming to the Egyptian he was connected with the Strand in Syracuse.

Aid of Steamship Line and Shoe Firm Plugs "Feet First"

"See 'Feet First' and then visit Hawaii." That was the slogan in San Francisco for Harold Lloyd's latest comedy.

Why? Because some of the sequences of the film were taken at and around the Molokai, a liner operated by the Matson Navigation Company and the latter joined with the California theatre to exploit the picture.

Robert E. Hicks, manager of the house, got tieups with eight Fleischer shoe stores which donated window displays. These cooperated in a joint newspaper ad campaign and aided in snipping 34 24-sheet sheets throughout the city. Another tieup along shoe lines was made with the Canadian shoe manufacturers.

Another stunt was the staging of a preview for shoe men.

Similar exploitation aggressiveness was displayed by Hicks in his campaign for "Girl of the Golden West." His publicity director, Ray Thome, organized the effort.

A robot paraded the streets several days in advance of the engagement and a sound truck distributed 10,000 heralds. Owl drug stores loaned use of show windows and also distributed 8,000 sample tins of Outdoor face powder.

Picking up the pioneer atmosphere of the picture, Thome and Hicks lined up a 40er parade, with a police escort. A feature of this was an actual Concord stagecoach from the gold rush days. It was drawn by six horses. Cowgirls, horsemen and two sound trucks made up the remainder of the procession.

At one of the matinees, every woman was presented with a chrysanthemum through a tieup with a flower shop.

Stenographers Race at Typing to Exploit Aztec's Showing of "Office Wife"

A new twist was woven into the exploitation for "The Office Wife" when it was booked into the Aztec theatre, San Antonio. Stenographers, it seems, have played a prominent part in exploitation in almost everywhere it has been shown, and so did they here. Buddy Waller, publicity director for the Aztec, made use of stenographers, too. He staged an elimination typing contest. Both students and full-fledged stenographers were eligible to compete, but they had to be women.

The eliminations were conducted on the stage every night of the picture's engagement and the prizes were announced daily. The contest finals were held the night the picture closed, with a grand prize going to the winner.

Prepares Double Feature

J. C. Adams, manager of Loew's in Montreal, is preparing a "revival feature" at 11 a.m. on week days, in addition to the regular program. Last week, besides the regular film and live acts of vaudeville, "The Cocoaeeus" was revived for the morning bargain matinee.

The price for the early shows is 25 cents.

Vagabond Series Showing on Contract in 2,642 Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—With 15 subjects so far released since their introduction, the Vagabond Adventure Series, featuring Tom Terris, is now being shown on regular contract in 2,642 theatres in the United states. The series is distributed by Pathé.

This includes representation on the screens of all major theatre circuits.

This is believed to be a record for sound short subjects, aside from Newsreel.

Combines Old ‘Tab’ And New ‘Blackout’

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in its new short comedy, “The Devil’s Cabaret,” presents a new effect in short subject entertainment by combining the “blackouts” of the modern stage and the technique of the “tablou” from oldtime musical comedies.

In place of the chorus which formed the background in the old stage productions, M.G.M. has substituted elaborate ballets. The picture is filmed in color, with the dancing being done by the Albertina Rasch ballet. Marty Brooks, creator of New York vaudeville “tabs,” is the director. Eddie Buzzell is the featured player.

The story of “The Devil’s Cabaret” is said to be especially adaptable to “blackouts.” It is a satire, in which Satan decides to drum up business by sending a salesman to the world above, to invite earthly mortals to his cabaret. One of the features is a song called “Go to the Devil,” sung by Buzzell.

Director Brooks maintains that the old-time vaudeville still has much attraction, but that modern audiences require more snap and concentration of ideas. The blackout has risen entirely because of this change in audience psychology, he believes.

This type of entertainment has also been employed by M.G.M. in other recent short subjects such as “Caballeros” and “The Crazy House.”

MUSIC AND TALENT

"Stump Me" Organ Program Goes Big

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Chicago
Week Ending November 20

The presentation this week was somewhat below the usual standard of the Chicago. The principal reason for this fault was the lack of a good comedian. Billy Glason was the man supposed to provide the fun, but his humor was only fair. He had to work too hard for the laughs. He failed to get spontaneous response.

The orchestra, master of ceremonies, was missing from the stage. He is at the Marboro, a West Side house, acting in his usual capacity there. It gave a feeling that there was something missing from the Chicago stage, for no one had been provided to take AE's place.

A juggler act by the two Bobs Brothers was one of the best numbers on the programs. These boys certainly could handle their juggling pins. They started out tossing three pins in the air and the number increased until there were six or more flying in all directions. A duo with more than average intelligence joined the Bros in the middle of their act and caught everything thrown in its direction. Fields, a violinist who entertains in the lobby of the Chicago, also added his presence to the act and helped bring it to climax by playing with a cigar in his mouth. The idea was to see which juggler could knock the story down first.

Sylvia Fisher provided the acrobatics of the show with an exhibition of tumbling, cartwheels and hand-springs that was admirable. With apparent disregard for whatever bones she had in her body, she went through all sorts of contortions. In fact, she did everything but break a kneecap.

Hans Muehler played a pleasing medley on the violin, which he called "Oyvy Airs." His technique was good but his stage presence showed stiffness and lack of experience.

The Royal Ballet performed some excellent dancing numbers in beautiful costume. A soprano, billed as "Kris Sengbu," sang while the ballet danced. But Miss Sibley's voice was rather disappointing as far as musical quality was concerned.

H. Leopold Spitalny directed the Chicago theatre orchestra in the overture "Gems from Naughty Marietta."

Week Ending November 15

Henry Santry and his "Soldiers of Fortune" opened with the orchestra of theatre in the pit playing an introduction with 14 male members of the band coming on from the left entrance in front of the curtains and singing "We Are Soldiers of Fortune," dressed in tuxedos with canes, with which they do a novelty drill. Santry comes on from right stage in a tuxedo and a gray felt hat with comedy chatter, including a comic role call, each member pulling funny lines. This finished, members exit through the center of curtain, leaving Santry, and then the curtain part revealing full stage darkened with heavy drapery and a black drop representing a tower framed window with a pink flood back of it. The band goes into a number and Santry introduces two tap dancers; when they are finished Santry directs the band in a straight musical number with various instruments doing solo parts, interpolated with a tenor solo by a band member and solo vocal work by Santry.

Free Ticket If Organist "Falls Down"

Stimulates Business and Everybody Has Good Time—Types of Requests Interesting

As has been said before, patrons like novelty, and novelty is just what Ted Hilgenstorf, manager of the Ritz theatre in North Milwaukee is giving them, and the results are—good business and everybody happy. Organ programs have about them a personal touch that no other medium of "extra curricula" entertainment seems to have, in that for fifteen minutes, the audience itself has a chance to perform, and how people like to perform. No one ever quite gets over the urge that made them, as children, say to their elders "Now watch me do this." The very fact that they were doing something the least bit out of the ordinary thrilled them. And this up-and-coming manager realizes that fact, so he gives them all the leeway in the world to seek their thrill, and in this case, it's fooling the organist, and—getting a free ticket.

Every Friday night, a "Stump Me" organ novelty presentation is put on. To every patron entering the house is given a request blank, on which is room for the name of a song and the "stumper's" name. These are to be filled out and placed in a box in the lobby before the one making it out goes to his seat.

Organist Gets Request Box

This novelty program goes on between the first and second shows, and just prior to this, the request box is taken to the organist, who, with the aid of his assistant, takes charge of the program from them on. One at a time, the man at the console draws a slip from the box, reading the name of the person submitting it and the title of the song which he would like to hear. If he is familiar with the tune, he plays it, if not, an usher passes down the aisle and presents the one "who stumped the organist" with a free ticket to the theatre.

To take care of as many songs as possible, the ones which are rendered are given only in part, the first eight measures or so being

HELLO, EVERYBODY—According to Clff Hess, special service man for Rernick and DeSylva, Brown and Henderson, Genesee’s new advance is remarkable in demands for sale sets in the last few months. Clff himself confesses to finding organists are readying to use throughout the country and that pretty soon the country will be “organically” sound.

Oh, but that was before Clff say that, because he has been one of the most skilful of musicians and we have been trying to make him realize that selfsame thing for many months past.

... To further prove my contention that there are lots of organists back on the job, in fact, nearly one thousand, one need but talk to Mr. Sam Shayan or Mr. Boris Mows of Paramount-Publix. In the last three days, Adolph Golub (for the past three months organist at the Paramount, Atlantic), Singing Bill (organist at the Paramount, St. Paul), Fred Ziegfeld (organist at the Metropolitan, Mass.) arrived in town between changes in assignments...

Golub is opening at the Paramount, Springfield. Singing Bill is probably going to South Bend, Ind., and Hamilton will soon get his new assignment. Another organist to arrive recently in town is George Latch, who visited his father in Berlin and intended to get a position over there but found conditions so bad that he decided to come back...

Incidentally, Latch ran into Billy Barnes, formerly of Lasky, on his way to Berlin, where he has a good job. ... Arthur Franklin, assistant to Bobo Crawford, in charge of musical production for Western Theatres, First National Theatres on the West Coast, le in New York on a ten day business trip. Latch will be the air from the Yardi operas, among these being the great march and “Celeste Aida” quartette from “Vigilant,” played with two trumpets and two trombones, the “Missourea” from “El Fauzaro,” sung in four voices, and the “Avinoll Chara,” offered with the assistance of thirteen girls performing on anvil and the clinking of electric sparkers.

The curtain goes up on the official U. S. Reservation Band on the stage and Chief Shumatzka does on full regalia and directs with a turkey feather in plume of a baton. Eight tribes are represented in the orchestra and the military offerings are well presented. “Moon Dvor” is played and sung and the chief offers an tribal song, which he makes a plea for his people. He gets a great laugh with his story of the visit of a party of Indians to New York to attend an important function and where an elderly society dame inquired of the chief who was the members of his tribe “like it in our country.”

An Indian tap dancer demonstrates how a real American Indian dances behind. With Bevweeumn interrupts at this stage and commences reading from the Police Gazette, with the orchestra Illustration of the Indian dances of this Great. This is a living comedy that proves correct on the bits of the dance.

The act comes to an end with the presentation of Brent’s Golden Horse and Bella Donna. The golden horse and rider pose in a variety of positions with the lovely horse bowling its acknowledgment at the end. The Fanchon and Marco Girls are less in evidence than usual, but do an elaborate Indian ceremonial dance as an offering, making the show one typical American.

As this proceeds there comes on from the right back the organist in white, who does her routine while Santa’s children “Deck the Halls, Mamma.”

Dancer exits to left, Santa jives it up, winding up with the dancers returning for a few more sets to end. Then follows a hurry boy with red spot from floor of stage on switch, which was followed by tro playing “My Man,” with Hawaiian guitar, xylophone and base violin. Santa then says “The Song of Christmas” waiting with him in front of curtain at the close. Then some costum and tambourine brought from right and change to them while remaining two dancers in this one move in dark a minstrel costumes with face masks to make them look like part. Dancers are chanced to silver with modernistic and strange Oriental players. Then a jazz tempo with two tap dancers doing their stuff in “Memories of Mistletoe Days,” winding up with song, “Confess I Need You.” This is followed by girl in burlesque costume of the dot line beside. Bubbers doing a funny contortorist dance. The tempo年来 with the band swinging into a “Waltz,” and another girl follows in black velvet short costume in Jazz toe dance, two other girls come on in a cloc, and finishes to blue tights and other garments to match, beating drum and all swinging into “The Maine Steal Song.”

Week Ending November 20

This week’s stage act at the Fox, the Fanchon and Marco “Reservation Idea,” runs so much to music that it became advisable for Walt Horst and his orchestra to do a comedy relief turn, and the result is entertainment of an unusually high level.

The orchestra is first heard in a fantasy made up of the air from the Yardi operas, among those being the great march and “Celeste Aida” quartette from “Vigilant,” played with two trumpets and two trombones, the “Missourea” from “El Fauzaro,” sung in four voices, and the “Avinoll Chara,” offered with the assistance of thirteen girls performing on anvil and the clinking of electric sparkers.

Philadelphia Mastbaum

Week Ending November 21

“Putt Putt,” the great Mastbaum this week, as its name indicates, has its back to our bright green and around a whiskie bottle which contains one lively, aerobatic stunts, dancing and excellent music. Teddy Joyce proves himself a versatile and dynamic master of ceremonies and stands up and executes a remarkable dance.

The Mastbaum Band, Orchestra of 30 under the leadership of Fabian Sevickly, was beautiful in form and the outline “Roman Melodies” was beautifully played, as was “Aida’s Theme,” as an encore.

Chevalier Brothers are a excellent team of equi- librium artists and their strength were greeted by many exclamations of amazement, especi- ally from the miscellaneous portion of the audience.

The program is a program which is attracting much attention and getting good business for the Ritz theatre, North Milwaukee, of which house Ted Hilgendorf is manager and incidentally the organist.

played there being only fifteen minutes in which to get in as many as possible.

May Request Old or New

Any song, old or new, may be requested, provided the song was at some time or other in the popular category. Manager Hilgen- dorf was kind enough to give us a few interesting statistics on the type of song asked for, which also gives some idea as to the lasting popularity of such songs. He has found that about one-half of the requests are made up of current songs and hits also that those that have been in the past three years on the popular list during the last three years; one-sixth consist of old popular songs, and by that he undoubtedly means songs that were popular ten years ago or longer; and the remaining percent are songs that no one ever heard of. Ted also adds (in this he do not expect, nothing delights the audience so much as to see the organist “stumped.” And, as an additional incentive to the patrons to respond, anyone who stumps the organist will and then sing the song of the winner is allowed on the audience. Up to this time, however, Ted says no one has left the theatre with two free tickets. (We doubt very much if this will last long should some- one happen to exceed the precedent. That surely would be lots of fun.)

But after all, it’s good business for the organist to do a program of songs, for the idea is not to show off the organist but to increase attendance, and people do get thrill out of a personal free ticket, and seeing others get free tickets inspires them to do likewise, and thus they’ll come and come, hoping that they may play the role of “stumpner,” and win.

Odd Songs Tickle Audience

Bursts of applause rise from the audience when such titles as Going Barefoot All Winter Long, "Send Me a Kiss by Wire," "The Sailor and His Wife," "Goofoos," "What’s a Home Without a Baby," etc., are announced. As a result, the patrons to respond, another free ticket is offered to anyone who stumps the organist and will then sing the song of the winner is allowed on the audience. Up to this time, however, Ted says no one has left the theatre with two free tickets. (We doubt very much if this will last long should some- one happen to exceed the precedent. who realized just how difficult some of the stunts were. The smaller brother’s dance punctuated by somersaults and hand springs and ending with a double 180-degree spin to the delight of the audience. The 4-year-old’s outstretched arm was the climax.

All the action of the stage show revolved about the golf course, where an attractive feminine patron, Marjorie, Louise and Kitty, demonstrated their skill as golf experts. There is a comical caddy named Frank Hunter, who does tricks with balloons and adds greatly to the fun. The band played “St. Louis Blues,” while Teddy Joyce in Spanish costume of black and white with girdle of rhinestones gave a most unusual twirling and twisting snake dance in which he appeared to have no bones in his body. The Muriel Abbott Girls in Scottie costumes, gave a unique tap dance on tip toes that brought down the house.

Frank Hunter and Mae Percival, who is a striking reason why gentlemen prefer blondes, put on a dashing line of gags that are new and funny. The Muriel Abbott Girls, in blue velvet and gold, gave another interesting and novel dance that was greeted by hearty applause.

Milton Charles, the singing organist, played and sang two popular numbers, “Can This Be Love?” and “I’m Yours.”

New Orleans Saenger
Week Ending November 14

The pendulum has again swung back and the Public is now finding that the big city by way of a $10.00 act are here again, with “Moonbeams” as the initial offering, a welcomer as it were, for those of some time past, although we should be thankful for small favors received.

“Moonbeams” is one of the most colorful and pleasing seen on the Saenger stage for many a week and should rightfully.

Eddie Lambert, whose feet covers well might half an acre provided the piano a-la Paderewski, in original and footloose melodies, strong and original, and conventional, and carried off, so to speak, their first acts, dog acts. While the acrobats of old would turn over in their graves and bite the linings of their last resting place at the liberties taken, still Paul Whiteman would have laughed a laugh that could be heard from the Battery to the top. For hoopers who know how to hoop, and do it properly, May Wynn and Buddy, responded to every move and it was with difficulty that Benny Ross, was able to proceed with the program.

The program of the first part was Senorita Caritas, a Spanish song bird, assisted by the Dorothy Berke Girls in a program of music from the land of her birth, proving the lady was actually born in the land of the bull fighters. The act was dressed especially grand and perfect in every detail.

Ashley Pace, the boy with the wooden keys was also among those present, and did his act as the doctor ordered.

But while the high-priced acts left a memory, still there should be a hit and maybe a dozen of them —in favor of the Dorothy Berke Girls. Ladies of the chorus; who were adept in their art, Dorothy may well be proud of her offspring, and may she have many more, as this is the year of big families.

Benny Ross, personality leader, strutted his stuff in imitations ranging from Al Jolson to Tita Ruffo, though in all seriousness, Benny is original enough to suit all walks down here, with his own work.

Cincinnati RKO Albee
Week Ending November 21

The current stage show, which is above the average, is headlined by George Germons and an artful rooster one of his new numbers, “If I Could Be With You,” and also features “My Blue Heaven,” which is one of the songs that brought him fame. He takes the audience into his confidence as to how rooster got through the band and through a very clever electrical device. Some of his songs are projected into the audience through a “mike.”

George Allen and Nat Burns, who have appeared here previously, present an act of great fun, entitled “Lamb Ovens.” Their wire-reeling keeps the house in a perpetual up roar. Their bit of dancing fits nicely into the turn.

Curl Freed and his company of jazz players, accompanied by a stunning little miss, not programmed, but who is gifted in the art of high klezmer, proves a high spot of real entertainment. Freed gets gaudy gals from his acrobatic direction of the orchestra, and a dance with his instrument musicality by playing several kinds of instruments, including a harmonica, finally rounding out a rhythm on two ordinaries.

De Vito and Denny do a knockabout turn called “Anything for a Laugh.” It is a very appropriate title. There is much mugging of each other’s apparel and smashing of stage props in which the back of the stage is almost ruined. But Stevens, a comic brunetette, is a capable assistant.

The Be Teresa, an animated young lady and a stalwart young man, put over some of the best dance numbers seen here in a long time. There are Argentinian and Viennese numbers, together with American dances. The Indian dance is a gem, Sydney Boyd and Joe Bradstreet, tenor and pianist respectively, providing accompaniment, and provide it well.

One of the enjoyable highlights of the Albee stage show is the daily organ concert played by Miss Grace Baucon just before the act go on. She proves more and more that she is complete master of the console.

Detroit Michigan
Week Ending November 20

“Neptune’s Festival” is the title tacked onto the new Public unit at the Michigan this week, and the acts which are on display really live up to the title. It is an admitted fact that naming shows is the hardest part of producing, especially when there is no connection between title, stage setting, acts, or what-you-will. Lou Kellod and the Syncopators are much in evidence from start to finish, and do a remarkably credible job of the show. Old Fathe Neptune is present, and introduces Freda and Palace, a couple of crooners who click. Then salt water tricks offered by the Morgan Trio hit the high spots, and give the audience just what they like, while the whole of a dance put on by Chilton and Thomas neat little or nothing to recommend it to entertainment seekers.

The 12 Fred Evans Girls are featured in two prettily devised and starred numbers. Arthur Gutow’s organist, and Eduard Werner’s Michigan Symphony offering complete the show.

Week Ending November 13

“Hello Paradise,” another Public unit, could have more money with it as an amusement provider, if one were careful as to the word “amusement.” Senator Murphy, who claims to be the smartest man out of congress, is one of the usual chatter coins, whose line of patter might be made a little brighter. Nelly Kelby, as her billing indicated she might, tied the customers in knots with her clever work, while Al Samuel and Brothers, snipers, gave a speedy performance. Allee Weaver, billed as the “Broadway Melody” girl and the Albertina Basch Girls, completed the program. Edward Werner and the Michigan Symphony, with Joseph Griffin, well-known Detroit comics, featured “Reflections of 1919,” which needs no further explanation. Arthur Gutow was at the organ.

Swinging into the spirit of Armistice day week, “Eddie” and his RKO-Ollans orchestra played the “Midsummerne of Armistiers” while on the screen was shown a shadow effect picture with a dooohboy in the center, statue of Liberty at the left and the Eiffel tower at the right. Following in quick succession were strains from “Tipperary,” “Keep the Home Fires Burning,” a drum ruffle representing the declaration of armistice, more bits of music “Home Again” and as a finale, “Stars and Stripes Forever.”

Allen and Sonny Lamont, the former announced to be the champion of the world heavy weight, tax dancer and the latter his sister, present an act of wire walking. Wire walker, assisted by Billy Lamont, who with Allen performed on the last tour, Sonny opens by telling the audience he is the “moss” of the Blass brothers, in “which draws a laugh. Allen, in an abbreviated costume of white and silver sheen, dances upon the wire carrying a pink parasol.

dancing along with Billy, winding up in handsprings in quick succession and a dance "Lament of Make Believe."

Pleureuse Jeoffrie, coloratura soprano, sings a French selection from her first number. Other numbers, all of which win appreciative applause, include a lilting number "Mammy's Little Hand-Headed Boy" and "Pretty Mocking Bird," which Miss Jeoffrie tells the audience is an old English melody.

Nick Casse, as a master director, and Elsie Lehn, who takes the role of a baby, head up the next act, with Miss Gertrude, Yolanda Masso, Adele Wolfe and Mildred Link as "Hollywood" tryouts comprising the repertory with Miss Casse's selection of "Billy Million." The show drops them as on "Hollywood boulevard."

The horn and violins of the Ward band, Joe Van, silent comedians, choreoing without words, draw a good deal of laughter in their act. One plays the horn in all seriousness while the other accompanies

Week Ending October 30

Dick Powell, m. e., in "Hicksville Corners," has a longer than usual and very entertaining stage show, a surprise opening for the orchestra boys, dressed as rubes, running through the aisles of the theater towards the stage. A surprise finish also is offered with the girls (known as the Rockets, but this week as the Millikorns) in an ensemble wearing lanky sloughams, only to dianem them and display elaborate costumes. Incidentally the girls are now ten in number and have several nice routines. In one, dressed in beautifully colored overalls, they do dance stunts with the aid of brooms.

The hit of the week is Frank Radcliffe and Company, consisting of Frank himself and his accompanist. These boys are colored and put on a great turn. Actually they have an amazing voice range, and with one songs baritone or soprano. And how he sings he makes the audience feel good. He also excels as a soft shoe dancer, not to mention the hilarious way he and his partner put over some good comedy routines.

Week Ending November 13

A musical selection entitled "Espanola" by the Jeyboys under the direction of Jimmy Innis served as a prolog to Fanchon & Marco's "Gems & Jams" Idea.

For the opening episode the chorus of 12 Living Gems, augmented by Maxine Evelyn, darner, Will Cowan, perform in fine manner. Miss Evelyn dances in a charming manner, while Will both sings and dances.

Nee Wong, Chinese idle player and songstress, offers a delight to all. Her "That's What That's My Baby" in Chinese. From all appearances the young man is thoroughly Americanized in respect to clothing and makeup. He has taken up an American color scheme and plays "Soo-Chow."" (no "Soo-Chow" in a Soo.

Jimm Penman incenses his way about the stage in an entertaining and amusing way. In the chorus, who, attired in full dress suits and equipped with unicycles, attempt to imitate Jim through amusing routines, are so amusing that they keep the audience in glued.

The Seven Arrows, a troupe of acrobats who do almost everything but jump from the stage to the balcony, deserve first mention, though they actually close the bill. The act is one of speed, class and novelty, not to mention a nice selection of music. The last number, a well thought out comedy.

George Clarke, as the well-known to Detroit audiences, is the comedian of the show. What George does to the customers and how he does it is a treat to see and hear. The patter is fast and clever, and the patrons don't get a chance to sit on their hands while he is on the stage. The Brinkley Sisters (the relatives of Nell), provide vocal harmony which would be hard to equal. The palms are fair to see, and more fair to hear. Bob Clarke's organ number, as always, tops everything in town this week, and gets the audience to use their vocal cords on the catchy, melodic tunes.

Jean Sarli and His R K Owens Horse Orchestra under radial overture, which is warmly received by the patrons. The Smith and Rogers are seen in the opening spot and do a dancing-in-several-oovers by the dancing male and female and that pleased the vast audiences all during the week.

"Gower" Lowery, billed as "The Delightful Screen of the Screen," may be well called that of a midget who is being judged from the way that his act went over here.

Scoo's horse riding full of fun down the runway and several dance steps in which this youngster, who is so much working alone, puts every effort, including his whole body and soul in his act. He gets a grand hand, too.

Walter Page, who is a famed ventriloquist, pre-presents his own company of human and wooden dummies in a novelty turn that is really one of the best of this kind. The mammals are dressed with a nice round of applause at the finish.

The "Ride Gang" this week's current stage show and brings to the Alamo City a variety of entertaining features. This quintette are famous as broadcast artists over the NTC and associated with radio stations. They were also the principal act of the classical as well as popular numbers and those scoring a hit were Harold Clyde Wright, baritone; John Griffen, tenor; Adam DelBarr, baritone, and Jeanne Mignelet, soprano. Helen Andrews is accompanying pianist for these sensational vocalists. They closed the bill and won a great reception.

The Hollywood this week a bill which is as well-balanced as any which have been seen on a local stage. Dick Powell, m. c., has an interesting bill, which is not only a great success for the Chalvez and Violet start the reeling, with their rope twine rope there. The girls of the West, Violet is no doubt the reason for Horace Grec-oil's "go west" advice. We have been unable to figure out the reason for the success of this group of dancers, the Moore and Company, the "company" being Ruth Marsh, who has a great way of getting people on her swill. They have the title "Titled The Pride of the Clan," Lou starts and finishes at high speed, his clowning being easily listed among the favorites, almost the favorite of the whole week, and always a hit, his "Half Shot at Sunrise" is the screen piece.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—Public stage units have reported a local tour of stage presentations at the Capitol theatre, Montreal, and the Imperial, Toronto. To inaugurate the new plan, Helen Kane, eleven year, made personal appearances at the two theatres in successive weeks. Stage shows are also scheduled to return to the Upjohn theatre, Toronto.

Phil Kornheiser's faculty for picking winners, now that he is in the "racket" for himself, he has put a good deal of faith in the number "On a Blue Skyscraper in Spotlights." The number was right ahead on the list. Among the others which are among the destined, "it's said," are "Wedding Bells Ring," "Are You Still in Love For Sally?" and "I'll Be Waiting."

While he was connected with Feist, Philip plucked out such hits as "At Sandown," "Mother," "I Love You," "Swinging Home," and "Mammy's Little Hand-Headed Boy," and August, and others, Chick Castle, who is Chicago representative for Phil Kornheiser, Inc., has been receiving many com-detail with cymbals, stacked fiddles, barbed wire entanglement and a stupendous entrance. Kenneth Golden is the singing doughboy. He sings "Dearest Old Pal C'mon," and "When the Organ Player at Twilight." No. 3, "If I Could Be With You." (Remick.) No. 4, "The Organ at Twilight." (Santly.) Betty Co-Ed." (Carl Fischer.) No. 5, "White Mountain" (Shapiro & Sons.) No. 6, "If You Could Be With You." (One Hour Tonight). (Remick.) No. 7, "I'll Be Blue Just Thinking of You." (Frisch.) No. 8, "If I Could Be With You." (Donaldson.)

ROSE DIAMOND (New York Loan's State) opens this Broadway house each day with a concert of popular, opera and art songs. Last week's presentation was called "A Musical Journey," and the solo consisted of popular songs of many nationalities. Among the numbers was "Little Brown and Miss Diamond playing "Carolina Moon." Then to "Easy Liv'n, Alabama Moon," "Under a Texas Moon," "Moonlight on the Colorado," "Somewhere in Old Wyoming," "Springtime in the Rockies" and "When Kentucky Bids the World Good Mornin." Miss Diamond plen- tywise played each number and in a showmanly man-ner carried out the continuity with a clever little story which she told via microphone between each number. Her efforts to entertain the audience was greatly appreciated and evoked much applause.

JACK MEYER (Brooklyn Fox Carlson) presented a community song-fest which he entitled "Let's Sing." This was a straight singing solo and it is the type of presentation that this audience enjoys and lustily sings to. Opening with "Good Evening," "Easy Liv'n," "Valse Meyer" and "Blue Boy," Miss Meyer followed by the Blue Meyer, "I'm Blue," "I'm It," "Blue all the Stars Above You," "I Don't Mind Walking in the Rain," "Always in All the World," "The Three Jones," "Hinky Dinky Parley Vooz," "My Bud- dy" and "Over There" in honor of Armistice Day. This was an entertaining solo and Meyer received a most gratifying reception.

AL HORNING (Loew's Century Baltimore) gave the sensation of a week at this theater. A little Blondie Horning at the console and he broke into the mike at his right hand, while a loud speaking voice over microphone. Horning's big back to audience and facing console. Started off with "Hall, Hall, the Gang's All Here," then explained about all sorts of endurance contests and now they would have a song on screen endurance contest. Started off with "So Beate My Heart For You," with words on drawn curtains with folds making them hard to read (would be better on screen). This was followed by Hornig announcing a mother entered her baby in a two sitting contest and then followed a burlesque, with words on curtains, of "Rock-a-Bye Baby." Then "Just a Little Cooze," which was followed by an- other burlesque to the tune of "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," and a girl under an auto winding up with "Go Home and Tell Your Mother."

Even Rosetta Duncan Can’t Fool This Fellow

Wasson’s Midget Course Is Reply to King Winter

A stage gag that literally “stopped the show” was given at the Paramount theatre in Des Moines when Rosetta Duncan of the Duncan Sisters team did a takeoff on “Strange Interlude.”

Rosetta promised an autographed photograph to the man who would lend her a hat or coat or both for the gag. Obtaining the props, she completed the impersonation, handed the garment over the footlights to the young man and offered him an unsigned photograph, telling him to come back stage after the show for the signature. The young man protested vigorously and demanded the signature then and there. Everything seemed to have gone as Rosetta had planned. However, while she was signing, the young man suddenly lunged out of his box and snatched the signature right out of her hand.

Sets Record, Then Falls Off
SEATTLE, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy's first week at the R.K.O Orpheum, Portland, broke all house records with gross receipts the first five days of $16,000. Second week fair, with $15,000 gross. At the R.K.O Orpheum, Seattle, the box office took $17,500 first week, but fell to $10,000 on second.

Popular with Children
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy's two weeks at the Boyd theatre proved very big, drawing from box office standpoint in spite of great newspaper advertising campaign in advance of opening, two page ads two days previous to opening, half page ad for three days and two column ads for a week. Was not popular with the high type of audience patronizing the Boyd, but the manager believes it will go over big in neighborhood houses. It has not been shown in neighborhood houses as protection has not expired. Also, the picture is very popular with the class of box office and house records for children's attendance were broken. Matinees large, but no attendances in evenings.

Week's Record at Albany Proctor's
ALBANY, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy played a straight week at Proctor's R.K.O theatre in Albany to the biggest business thus far this fall. The picture was given a rather spectacular opening at an 11 o'clock night show and played more than the usual number of shows each day, including one beginning at 10 p.m. each night. Heavy advertising preceded the run. Both matines and evenings were heavy, while many were favorably impressed by the picture. Also many were heard to declare the picture carried only that which they had heard over the Radio and was not up to expectations.

Flopped at Regent, Fair at Imperial
OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—Simultaneous first runs of "Check and Double Check" at Regent and Imperial theatres. Proved a distinct flop at the Regent, but registered fair business at the Imperial despite the fact that admission prices at the Imperial were raised fifteen cents to coincide with the Regent scale. Intensive exploitation failed to arouse enthusiasm. Receipts at Regent for week ran below $4,100, while Ottawa had $4,000 for recent high marks, house seating 1,200. Amos 'n Andy drew better than average at the Imperial though not at all bad.

Seven-Day Record in Des Moines
DES MOINES, Nov. 20.—Seven day run Amos 'n Andy at the Orpheum theatre grossed 100 per cent more than average box office receipts, according to Jesse Day, manager. Day says picture holds box office record for Des Moines to date.

Two Weeks' Top in St. Louis
ST. LOUIS, Nov. 20.—The Amos 'n Andy picture opened with a special preview of a day and then ran for fourteen additional days. The St. Louis seats about 2,400 and during that engagement played seven shows daily between 10 a.m. and midnight. The best available estimates were that the picture broke all house records and played to upwards of 200,000 persons during the run.

Trifle Lower Second Week
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy, "Check and Double Check" opening October 24, in two weeks broke records of R.K.O Orpheum since the house went into continuous operation to four of vaudeville. Admission mornings, 25 cents; afternoons, 35 cents, and evenings, 50 and 60 cents. First week the attendance was about 70,000, grossing around $20,000; second week approximately the same, though it might be a trifle lower. Orpheum theatre capacity, 2,200.

Three Weeks in Detroit
DETROIT, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy established a new house record, both for attendance and gross, when "Check and Double Check" was held for three weeks.

Withdrawn in Second Week
SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 20.—After playing to $8,000, with a gross of nearly $35,000, the first week, the Amos 'n Andy picture, "Check and Double Check," Bopped the second week. After showing for two days of the second week, the R.K.O Majestic theatre replaced it with the "Silver Screen.

Gross Drops Second Week
CINCINNATI, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy at both R.K.O Palace and R.K.O Capitol broke all previous records. Palace, with 2,700 seats, grossed $28,100 for week, while R.K.O Capitol, 2,000 seat house, turned in $22,050, making total gross of $50,150, an all-time record.

Picture was held over at R.K.O Capitol second week, but gross dwindled to only $12,080.

Second Week Not So Strong
MILWAUKEE, Nov. 20.—"Check and Double Check" played to good box office with two weeks at R.K.O's Palace-Orpheum despite strong competition.

Week was as strong, although teachers' annual convention helped boost.

Louisville Gross Record
LOUISVILLE, Nov. 20.—Jerry J. Martin, manager Brown theatre, reported Amos 'n Andy ran two weeks to largest gross the house ever had. First week very big, the house seating 1,500, being busy at all times. Attendance of children very large. Martin called it "a 100 per cent picture."

Slight Drop Second Week at K. C.
KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—Amos 'n Andy grossed $4,250 during two weeks at Mainstreet. First week's gross was $22,500, house record.
We think this is a "darb" of a picture, and we'll wager you agree heartily. As far as the table is concerned, it may be well that the "King of Jazz" is making this difficult shot, which will no doubt end in a rewarding "click" from this position. Paul Whiteman is now very much of a Chicago personality, having dispensed his melodies for many happy Chicagoans at the Granada Cafe, and there is every possibility that New Year's will be a memorable event because of his presence. The other day he played last, at Lindy's, to all the music publishers in this great city. And were they present? Well! Can you imagine anyone staying away?

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

We write this brief story with a strange mixture of regret and pleasure, regret that a distinct Chicago personality is leaving his locale, and pleasure at the prospects which the change may hold in store for him. Jack Hess is scheduled to make New York his habitat, there to have charge of special advertising for all RKO houses throughout the country. It sounds like a big job, but we feel certain that RKO has chosen the man who can handle it.

We thought we might devote this space to that remarkable performance at the State Lake, which is receiving acclaim and "after picture" gossip from all who have attended. "Danger Lights," a marvelous photographic achievement, but although we might write a few feeble lines concerning it, the story in the front of the book, by George Schutze, the gentleman whose eagle eye makes the Better Theatres section of the Herald-World a delight to the eye, is far more replete with "story" than ours would be. Therefore, we shall merely remark that the macaque, that noble "composition" in front of the theatre, has the true "Hessian" touch.

Jack has a habit of springing surprises, and this one—well, all we could do was give him the glad hand. A very happy lady, by the name of Ruth Higgins, was made Mrs. Jack Hess the first part of last week. May we congratulate them both and wish them all the happiness there is.

And now we are happy to introduce the man who will occupy that cozy office which Jack is leaving. His name is George Brown, who, before he came here, had charge of exploitation in three Fox Midwest houses on the Coast, they being the Egyptian, Chinese and Garthby Circle. We welcome him to Chicago, and wish him the success which goes with such a welcome.

Tokyo, Japan, is—let's see—2,000 miles from here to the Coast, and then about 6,000 miles until you reach that string bean of an island where "mountains topple over into the sea." Well, we received a letter from there the other day, a very delightful surprise, too, and it was from one who used to frequent the Row, and each morning say "howdy" to his many friends. Lip-ton Astrakan asked to be remembered to all the "boys," and, very incidentally, mentioned that he would like to hear from some of them. There's just about time for a Christmas card to reach "them there shores."

Numerous changes have been made in the matter of theatre ownership during the past few weeks, among which is the taking over of the Regal theatre by Abe Ostrovsky, owner of the White Palace and California theatres. Charles Golin, former owner of the Banner theatre is now in possession of the De Luxe, which, prior to the time of Golin making it is owned by Robert Gumbiner.

But we might give "Bob" Gumbiner a separate paragraph, all his own, and wish him every sort of success in his new venture, not new, by any means, in the type of work which he will do, but new in locale. Bob has left for the Coast, (and what a time to leave, just before Old Borsa is too playful!) where he will take up his duties as general manager of the new Los Angeles theatre in Los Angeles. We understand that on New Year's Eve, there is to be a long awaited world premiere of his house, namely "City Lights," which Charlie Chaplin has had on the fire for some time, quite some time. Looks like Bob is all set for a Happy New Year.

C. J. ("Pat," as he is known to his host of friends), Scollard, vice-president of Pathé, and, incidentally, instigator of the Knute Rockne series of shorts which are giving many people an interest in football that they never dreamed they could possess, passed through Chicago last Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. Scollard. They were on their way to the Coast, where Scollard will spend some time arranging for another enlightening series of shorts, this time to do with golf. Johnny Farrell, "fairway" star, will be the personality of the "course," and we venture to say that people will begin to take an interest in golf. We hate our "venture" on the popularity of the Rockne series, which no doubt have aided in increasing the gate receipts at many games. Nothing like a game, you know, to watch how it's done in the picture, and then go to a match to see if you can discover it for yourselves.

Every Monday night finds the "merry bowlers" gathered at Benson's for another try at "breaking" that elusive 300 that hovers like a tantalizing myth over the polished alleys. Charlie Vetrov, who can be found after gazing over the maze of desks at the new M.G.M exchange, is a secretary par excellence when it comes to bowling data. We should like to carry a list of the individual scores, but—well, perhaps we shall wind up the end of the season. However, here are the results up to and including the night of November 10, as gleaned from Charlie's exact records.

MACK SENNETT
TALKING COMEDIES

When they rave like this you've got to sit up and take notice. For it's real box-office stuff they're talking about.

Just another proof that your theme song won't be "The Blues" if you're playing and plugging this great series of comedies.

"ALL BOX-OFFICE"

"Mack Sennett has a knockout in this comedy and Educational is going to crown itself with exhibitor blessings when it is released. It is comedy as it should be made... will take its rightful place as the ace comedy bet so far made in a short-reeler.

"It has a war background, but a background that has never before been seen the camera. Harry Gribbon is the boy, coming from a small town that only had one life to give to its country and that was Gribbon. He carries a three-piece band with him all through the war and, in the most trying circumstances, Harry breaks out in song, accompanied by his band.

"Gribbon is great in his part, and stamps himself as one of the funniest men in pictures... There are five people credited with having written the yarn and the dialogue, and Sennett should pin a medal on each of the five, in addition to doing everything he can to keep Bill Beaudine out on the Sennett lot doing more comedies, for his direction was perfect.

"Mr. Exhibitor, don't miss this one. It's a wow and will make an evening's entertainment even though you have a very weak feature picture."

—THE HOLLYWOOD DAILY REPORTER

"Mack Sennett, they say, is proud of having turned out a product like this. He should be. It's one of the cleverest two-reel comedies ever made with dialogue... The finale is... one of the most ludicrous scenes that has ever been brought to the screen. It is a clean piece of satirical fiction that sets a new record in the making of talking comedies."

—EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

"Here is a two-reeler that will provide more laughs per minute than any short seen in some time... one long howl from start to finish. Harry Gribbon, Patsy O'Leary and Yola D'Avril have the leading roles and give excellent performances... Many funny gags are interpolated and the comedy moves at a rapid pace. This will appeal to all types and rates a plugging."

—MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"Audiences at the Belmont Theatre, Los Angeles, howled with glee at the preview... And well they might. It's a riot of fun and ends with a whale of a laugh situation... It's great fun, well recorded and splendidly photographed."

ORGANIZE NOW for 1931 selling in the Motion Picture Market

In the motion picture market, there are 14,000 theatres which must be provided with motion picture products—offer an audited circulation showing distribution to 9,342 individuals in the theatre branch of the business, controlling more than 95 per cent of the buying power of those theatres. No other motion picture trade paper even claims to approach that figure in total distribution.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD and BETTER THEATRES

WHAT GOES ON BEHIND THE SCENES...

THE audience sees only what goes on "out front". Few know what is going on behind the scenes. They see nothing of the elaborate organization which puts on a show across—even the faultless operation of this organization is vital to the success of every show.

The same thing applies to the dimmerboard which controls the lighting effects of your theater. The board is merely "out front", behind are the dimmer plates, the real heart of your lighting control. The dimmer plates determine whether your lighting effects will be "spotty" or smooth.

Most experienced showmen use only Cutler-Hammer "Simplicity" Dimmers for their dimmerboard. C-H Dimmers insure smooth, continuous dimming—from full brilliance to black out. Each plate has contacting surfaces on both sides, permitting more circuits to be handled in a given space. Direct rack and pinion operation prevents any play or backlash.

These are a few features of Cutler-Hammer Dimmer construction which insure their famous "velvet-smooth" control of lighting effects. Thirty years of experience in theatrical lighting, in solving the problems which confront the showman have earned C-H Dimmers a permanent place on the dimmerboards of hundreds of leading theaters.

Ask your electrician or architect about C-H Dimmers. You can have them on any dimmerboard you install and they can be adapted to meet your requirements as you grow.

Now a Definite Way to Correct Faulty Theatre Acoustics

A Message to Theatre Managers from the United States Gypsum Company

Every theatre manager knows that his box office receipts soon drop if his patrons are unable to hear clearly and distinctly every word and note of his talking picture entertainment. Acoustone, the USG acoustical tile, now offers you a simple and definite way to correct faulty sound conditions in theatres or auditoriums.

Without obligation, one of our acoustical experts will make a thorough investigation of your sound problems. If he finds that acoustical correction or sound insulation is needed, he will prescribe the necessary treatment and predict certain definite results. By accepting his recommendations you may rest assured that your problem will be definitely solved, for in every job which it undertakes, the United States Gypsum Company assumes full responsibility for the results.

A scientific sound-absorbing material, Acoustone prevents reverberation caused by the reflection of sound waves. It may be quickly installed over present walls and ceilings without structural alterations and without interruption to business.

Acoustone is especially well suited to theatres because, in addition to providing proper hearing conditions, it is distinctive in its beauty. Its many shapes, patterns and colors lend themselves to a great variety of interesting decorative schemes, including those modernistic in spirit.

Being a mineral material, Acoustone is fireproof. And, when soiled, it is economically restored to its original beauty by simple cleaning, thus eliminating the expense of costly redecorating.

If you have reason to suspect that your theatre acoustics are not perfect, why not call in one of our sound control experts? Remember that this service is without obligation. Address the United States Gypsum Company, Dept. 5911, 300 West Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois.
Shakespeare and the rest of them knew plenty about plays. But not so much about settings. When the script called for a forest scene, they’d hang up a sign that said “Forest”, and let your imagination supply the trees. THERE ARE STILL SOME THEATRE MEN WHO FOLLOW THAT TECHNIQUE. When their lobby or their auditorium needs redecorating—when it needs a change of scene—they daub a little paint on the walls and hang out a sign: “ Completely Renovated and Redecorated! The most beautiful theatre in town!” That won’t do the trick any more. You must actually change the scene. That means, among other things, new carpets. And that means Bigelow-Sanford... the oldest and largest of weavers... leaders in styling as in craftsmanship... specialists in rugs and carpets for theatres. Write for your nearest dealer’s name.

When even pictures fail....

A picture may win "four stars" from the critics.

Yet that same picture will fail miserably in theatres where hearing conditions make a meaningless jumble of dialog and music.

And unless those conditions are corrected there's bound to be a serious slump in box office receipts.

Managers everywhere are facing this vital problem. Many of them have already found—in Acousti-Celotex—the happy solution.

For Acousti-Celotex, applied to the recommendations of Acousti-Celotex engineers, immediately corrects faulty acoustics. Jumbled sounds become clean-cut syllables. Every spoken word, every note of music, is heard clearly and distinctly in every part of the theatre.

Lost patrons return... Acousti-Celotex soon pays for itself at the box office!

If hearing conditions in your theatre aren't what they should be—if you suspect that your business is suffering because of faulty acoustics, by all means investigate what Acousti-Celotex can do for you.

Facts you should know:
Quick, easy installation—Acousti-Celotex comes in single, finished tiles, quickly and easily installed in new or old buildings—fastened directly to present walls and ceilings.

Decorative adaptability—Acousti-Celotex brings distinctive beauty to the theatre. Its decorative adaptability assures harmony with almost any architectural or decorative scheme.

Permanent and "fool-proof"—This treatment is a permanent treatment with a very low cost of upkeep. Acousti-Celotex tiles can be painted and repainted with any good paint, including lead and oil, without impairing their efficiency.

Tested in many fields—Architects and builders are familiar with Acousti-Celotex. Long before the advent of sound pictures they had used this remarkable material to provide "better hearing" in auditoriums.

THE GOODWILL THEATRE
Johnson City, New York

Before Acousti-Celotex was applied to this theatre, the many hard surfaces made a veritable football of every syllable that came from the screen. Now, thanks to Acousti-Celotex, the box office tells a story of fast growing patronage.

The deep perforations in Acousti-Celotex serve as channels for carrying sound waves into the fibrous interior, assuring high sound-absorbing efficiency, and permitting decorating without loss of sound-deadening value.

INSULITE ACOUSTILE

does More than improve SOUND REPRODUCTION

O F COURSE . . . you want better sound reproduction in your theatre—it means increased patronage—you also want your house beautiful and attractive for the same reason. Both of these ambitions can be secured by the application of Insulite Acoastile.

Acoastile absorbs excess sound energy and eliminates distorting reverberations, echoes and "dead spots." Acoastile has a more uniform sound absorbent coefficient over the entire frequency range than any other material. This means that in an Insulite Acoastile treated theatre, the true tones of voice or music travel clear and distinct to every seat in the house.

And Insulite does more than correct acoustics. It will improve the appearance of your theatre as well.

Pleasing in texture, Acoastile can be beautifully decorated to blend with any color scheme. The tile-like units of various sizes can be arranged in an unlimited variety of patterns to harmonize with any type of architecture. Furthermore—treatment of your theatre with Acoastile is the economical method of correcting acoustics. Expensive remodeling is not necessary as Insulite Acoastile is easily and quickly applied to the existing surface.

The use of Insulite for the controlling of sound has been tested and approved by many of the great motion picture producing companies in Hollywood. The mammoth R.K.O. sound stage, the largest in the world, was treated with Insulite. Also, during the past year Paramount-Lasky have used over a million square feet of Insulite for sound stages and sets.

THE INSULITE ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT IS AT YOUR SERVICE

If the sound reproduction in your theatre is not what it should be, have the Insulite Engineers analyze your trouble. You may be certain that the recommendations of this staff of Acoustical experts will be the simplest and most economical method of securing correct acoustics. There is no charge for this service and you are under no obligation.

NOTES ON WRITERS AND SUBJECTS IN THIS ISSUE:

Much has been written about the effect of sound in the routine of the motion picture theatre, and on the technical phases of sound itself, there is a veritable library. In the points of view thus represented, sound is considered, however, as a thing more or less apart from the whole phenomenon that is today's motion picture. It is as if sound were simply a physical addition to the silent film, like a new gadget on an automobile. Well, we were more or less in the habit of regarding sound along the same lines until we received a manuscript from Gordon S. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell is an electrical engineer affiliated with the sound technicians department of the Universal studio in Universal City, Cal. Entirely capable of discoursing interestingly enough on certain, disjoined technical aspects of sound (and probably inclined, by the nature of his work, to do so), Mr. Mitchell rather placed himself in the position of a well-informed, yet lay critic of the motion picture as it is now produced and exhibited, and the result ("The New Motion Picture and the Public") is a blending of those multifarious considerations in sound picture production and exhibition that represents one of the most accurate analyses we have seen of the modern motion picture and the problems present in the process of bringing it before the public.

In the Mayfair theatre ("The Mayfair in New York"), just recently opened in New York, we have another Broadway supercinema (as they say in Lon'on) owned and operated by one of the great motion picture producers. That fact alone would make the Mayfair particularly interesting. But architecturally, and in general conception, the Mayfair is worthy of every consideration. In the first place, it represents one of the most extensive (and expensive) remodeling jobs ever tackled in the field of motion picture theatre construction. And secondly, it is in many respects representative of the new trend in motion picture theatre architecture—that is to say, the design is modern (modernistic, if you please), yet it employs these modern elements in a highly imaginative, brilliant and decorative form. . . . Howard Osbath is a member of the editorial staff of the Herald-World.

In this issue is concluded C. M. Cutler's discussion of the new illumination technique ("The Modern Use of Light in the Theatre"), which was begun in the October 25th issue. Mr. Cutler is a member of the research engineering staff of the National Lamp Works at Nela Park, Cleveland.

As indicating one of the most significant developments of the motion picture theatre, as showing the varied functions of the theatre, and as an example of how space not paying sufficient dividends may be turned into effective promotional media, the "party room" which has been added to the Rialto theatre in Joliet, Ill., is one of the most interesting innovations brought to our notice in some time. For the sketches, as well as the photograph and discussion, we are indebted to the architects, C. W. & George L. Rapp. Arthur Frederick Adams, who prepared the description, is a member of that architectural firm's staff.

It is always interesting—and profitable, we believe—to have a look at the buildings in which we are to show our motion pictures. Few, if any, types of business are so intimately associated in their very function as a business, with the buildings that house them, as motion picture exhibition is. We have already mentioned the Mayfair. There is also the new Fox theatre in Stockton, Cal. ("The Spanish Colonial Design of a New Fox Theatre"), which is presented in plan as well as in picture and text. For the plans, we acknowledge the courtesy of the architects, Balch & Stanbery. . . . The theatres for which Boiler Brothers submit a group of projections and perspectives ("Designs for Three Western Theatres") are currently under construction, and therefore they offer a peek into the near-future regarding the conceptions of this architectural firm, which has designed scores of important American theatres. And in the new Michigan theatre in Muskegon ("A Theatre of the Commercial Building Type in a Small City") we have a representative of a distinct trend.

In "Contractual Liability: Late Decisions," Leo T. Parker continues his series on the Theatre and the Law. Mr. Parker is a Cincinnati attorney.

The new contribution of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer engineers to the art and science of sound picture exhibition—the so-called "squeeze track"—is discussed along with this same firm's interesting modification of the wide film principle—"Realife" film—in "Edward Churchill's first-hand report of technical developments at the M G M laboratories on the West Coast ("Two Innovations in Sound and Image") Mr. Churchill is a member of the Herald-World editorial staff, attached to the Hollywood office.

THE NEW MOTION PICTURE AND THE PUBLIC

By GORDON S. MITCHELL

The new studio-theatre alliance as observed by a sound technician

A MOTION picture, to be successful, must exert box office appeal for a great number of theatres. These theatres, spread over the country and catering to the tastes of a multitude of individuals, all of whom differ from one another in likes and dislikes, have the common problem of endeavoring to please the majority of these people most of the time. The problem is one which calls for an understanding of the problems of the other fellow—an understanding in the heart of the producer and the exhibitor alike.

The fluidity of the silent motion picture was responsible for most of its universal appeal. The ability to cut from place to place, from scene to scene with amazing and breathless rapidity, gave the motion picture that certain something which could never be duplicated upon the stage, with its changing of setting and time, its between-the-act pauses, possessed a ponderous and unwieldy heaviness when compared to the motion picture. While the actor upon the stage must needs content himself with the mention of a certain stopping place, the motion picture was able to flash a photo of the actual setting before our eyes. The audience was thrilled with dizzying rapidity from place to place, and from time-setting to time-setting. This played upon the emotions of the audience to a degree that could never be attained by stage productions. Due to these inherent characteristics, the stage and screen were worlds apart. Taken by and large, the stage audience was an entirely different type of individual than the screen enthusiast.

The silent motion picture usually presented light entertainment, demanding little concentration. The stage presented entertain-

- "In many theatres it is a common practice to start the show with the sound level high, gradually reducing it until correct volume is obtained. This method would be all right were it not for the fact that our ears, once they become accustomed to lots of sound, become more or less insensitive to volume changes. Thus the level is never brought down as far as it should be, because to anyone coming into the theatre from the outside the sound level is loud."

- "The alliance between the brain and the ear has resulted in a very highly developed mechanism. . . . The problem of the sound recorder is to capture the sounds as they emanate from the source. . . . His particular problem is to store the sound in such a way that when releament which demanded concentration, attention at every minute lest some essential portion of the action be lost. The silent motion picture allowed relaxation—it was possible for a father to go to the "show" after a hard day's work at the office, sit back in his seat and relax. He would possibly let his thoughts wander from time to time to little details of business which he would attend to in the morning. Mother, likewise, could sit beside father, and every so often her thoughts would return to the children, temporarily in far-away town, the motion picture was able to flash a photo of the actual setting before our eyes. The audience was thrilled with dizzying rapidity from place to place, and from time-setting to time-setting. This played upon the emotions of the audience to a degree that could never be attained by stage productions. Due to these inherent characteristics, the stage and screen were worlds apart. Taken by and large, the stage audience was an entirely different type of individual than the screen enthusiast.

ence today has all of the characteristics of the stage audience. Willingly or no, the change has been made. Never again will the "silent picture type" of audience attend the theatre. If the problems unearthy by this change of type be recognized—and if attempts be made by both producer and exhibitor to solve them—the change will be less painful.

The major factor in determining the box office success or failure of a motion picture, is the story. No matter how excellent the photography and sound recording, if the story is poor, the picture will fail. Good photography, good sound—these can never overcome the drawback of a poor story. On the other hand, many a photoplay presented with poor photography and poor sound, has been pulled from among the failures upon the strength of the story told. Notwithstanding the fact that "the play's the thing" even in motion pictures, it behooves all concerned with the technical end of the production of motion pictures, and with the exhibiting end, to take advantage of every opportunity to accentuate the universal appeal of the motion picture.

In the studio, much can be done to make the theatre's job of presenting the picture convincingly more easy. While it is a fact that much that comes out of a motion picture studio is the result of genius, many of the successful effects are achieved because someone has recognized the limitations of the equipment with which he is working and has taken advantage of the equipment up to the limit. In photography, the closeup centers our attention upon the individual, and the subsequent shot (Continued on page 40)
THE MAYFAIR IN NEW YORK

By HOWARD OISETH

CREATED out of a building that knew the day when Eastern Wheel burlesque was some kind of a criterion, a theatre stands near Times Square in New York today, a monarch of modern theatre architecture and a monument to the most modern of entertainment forms. And it is as well an example of extraordinary remodeling.

The new creation is the RKO Mayfair. The old was the antiquated Columbia burlesque house, really an amusement palace in its day. Once the pride of the "Black Crook" and Watson "Beef Trust" devotees, the Columbia had in recent years become covered with the moss of quaint memories—memories of a day when chorus girls were fully clothed and buxom.

In more recent years, the Columbia had been spasmodically open and closed. Radio-Keith-Orpheum took it over some months ago. The new Mayfair is the result.

The RKO Mayfair is interesting as an example of remodeling as it is an example of modern theatre design. Practically nothing save the old walls remains in the new structure. It even appears enlarged. Every effort has been bent toward making it a metropolitan playhouse, a finished model of the ultra-modern cinema, built for the talking picture.

Located on Broadway at Forty-seventh Street, it is Manhattan's newest theatre. It is said to represent the complete abandonment of traditional means and methods in equipment, planned to include the latest mechanical and scientific innovations, has an architectural scheme harmonizing with the modernistic tendencies of old and new design, blended together.

The marble-paneled floors, sculptural plastered walls, with bronze and marble intermingled, and its high ceilings, culminating in the luminous dome, present a majestic effect.

One first receives this impression upon entering the vestibule facing Broadway. The unusual height is striking. One notices the Morocco rouge marble used to obtain sculptural con-
Radio-Keith-Orpheum's new theatre near Times Square, created between the walls of the old Columbia burlesque house in a brilliant pattern.

The visitor to the Mayfair notices that atmosphere is obtained by an artful juxtaposing of insert fabric panels, exquisite draperies, quaint lighting fixtures, and simulated lighting effects.

Floors of the auditorium are covered with multi-colored carpets. A wide staircase ascends from the auditorium level to the mezzanine promenade, leading into a great elongated octagon, the walls of which are decorated with polished hardwood, inlaid with satinwood. The arched portals to this octagon are trimmed with real ebony. Illuminated panels radiate diffused light from the elaborately beamed and trussed ceiling.

The main lounge adjoins the promenade. It is generously large, with appropriate accoutrements. The floor is bordered with black marble. The walls are faced with silvery hardwood in large frames of satinwood. On opposite sides of this main lounge are special rooms for men and women. Another feature is a, cosmetics room, fitted with milady's every luxury.

Directly over the first promenade is the second mezzanine promenade, with its own lounge. Its walls are faced with teak and trimmed in Macassar ebony. The adjacent rest rooms are similar to those below.

The Mayfair has one of the most completely equipped projection booths in the country. R C A Photophone, sound is used, and the booth was built according to specifications planned by M. C. Batsel, chief engineer for RCA Photophone, Inc. Several of the features are said to be entirely new. One of them is the improved loud speaker and directional haffle. Engineers declare it diffuses the richest and clearest sound so far obtained through the medium of a mechanical device. Another new note is the introduction of an impedance gate in the sound head. Steady passage of film through the sound gate and consequent elimination of flutter is made possible, the technicians say, by this special device.

Two detail reproductions of the auditorium decorative treatment, and a view of the general lounge. The upper detail is of one of the decorative features adjoining the proscenium arch, at the location of the organ loft. The lower detail shows the decorative treatment at the upper rear of the auditorium, where the ceiling rounds into the wall, which is pierced with the ports of the projection room. The latter was especially designed by an engineer representing the sound equipment installed. The lounge shown in the middle view adjoins the mezzanine promenade. There are also men's and women's lounges, and a women's cosmetics room.

Installation of RCA Photophone Acousticon Seaphone equipment is now being prepared for, as an aid to the hard-of-hearing. Each headset will be fitted with a lorgnette handle. This instrument is the product of the Dictograph Products Company, working in collaboration with RCA Photophone engineers.

Wide screen is part of the theatre’s projection equipment, and the huge proscenium arch forms a strikingly suitable frame for it. The proscenium arch is another aid to projection, more especially sound projection, it is said, because its cavernous hollow supplies a necessary aid to good acoustics, acting as a sound box, reflecting the waves resonantly down and forward.

As one steps from the auditorium, walks through the foyer and once more reaches the sidewalk, one turns again to study the brilliantly lighted marquee. It is of unusual design and size. Its sloping surface floods the entire street with animated illumination. The main banner of lights is 100 feet high, and 125 feet wide. A harmonious color scheme is maintained in the frame of border lamps, which play in perpetual color motion, undulating and wavering. The lettering plan is variable, changes in announcements being made in changing colors. Some of the letters are from four to six feet high and seem huge even from the street below.

Thermostatic instruments control the ventilation, heating, cooling and disinfecting systems of the Mayfair. Any one of them can be regulated with the turn of an electric switch to create any gradation of change.

One third of the air in the building is in a constant process of washing, while the other two-thirds is constantly fresh. The ventilating plant has a capacity of 150 tons, permitting the air to be constantly freshened at any desired temperature.

The architect of the Mayfair was Thomas W. Lamb. M. Shapiro & Son was the contractor, while Walter Reade supervised construction.

The Mayfair is running on an exceptionally heavy exhibition policy, with 18 hours a day of continuous program. Every day except Sunday the doors open at 9 a.m., and remain open until 3 a.m., the following morning. This gives the house approximately ten complete performances daily. The admission scale increases throughout the day, with popular prices being changed for all performances.

Finally, the Mayfair is a brilliant example of how good sound reception may be practically assured through the scientifically guided remodeling.
THE MODERN USE OF LIGHT IN THE THEATRE

By C. M. CUTLER

Concluding the discussion begun in last Better Theatres on illumination technique

SINCE it has been discovered that one-third of an entire audience can be stowed away in the balcony, it is not surprising that this part of an auditorium has undergone important development. And by a judicious use of light, the balcony can become a decorative as well as a utilitarian feature.

Panels of translucent glass or fabric are easily built into balcony rails, around columns and plasters, and when lighted from behind, make a massive balcony structure, or the very wall itself may appear luminous. The appearance of these panels can be made even more novel and interesting if tints and patterns are chosen to provide a variety of effects.

Those who occupy the rear orchestra seats can have new vistas opened to them by being able to lift their eyes to a decorative 'grille work' silhouetted against a lighted background, or to a design of illuminated panels of such a size and shape as would be in keeping with the size and shape of the recess. When such lighted panels are contemplated (they usually should be built in), the size and shape of the recess, the lighting units and the translucent material to be used all enter into consideration. The space should be deep enough to produce a smooth lighting effect, the depth depending, of course, on the width of the panel, its general shape and the spacing of the lamps. It is well, however, to provide for a minimum depth of at least six inches.

The recess should have a white mat surface, to provide a good diffusion. It should be shaped with curved and sloping sides, to reflect the light towards the front, and the back corners should be rounded to facilitate cleaning (Fig. 1). These elements all contribute to the efficiency of the lighting system, even though they may seem to have only a remote connection.

When the recess is quite shallow, bare lamps often give satisfactory results. White porcelain keyless sockets attached to white painted conduit are suggested, and for smooth lighting the spacing between sockets should not be over one and one-half times the distance from the centers of the lamps to the glass. The use of reflectors will direct more light towards the glass. Then more depth must be provided than in the case of bare lamps. Small reflectors, such as used for footlights and small show windows, with a wide spread of light, are usually suitable for this purpose, and if the recess in which they are installed is likely to collect dust, glass rounds, or cover plates, give additional protection against loss of light.

The wattage of lamps used in the panels depends upon the desired effect, the brightness of the surrounding area and whether the panel is used for ornamentation alone or for producing useful light. Lower wattage lamps may be used when the panel is intended merely for ornament. The range between the 10-60 watt inside-frosted lamps will, when a glass with a transmission of the order of 50% is used, satisfy the average requirement. Where panels also serve as utilitarian lighting units, 100 watts may be used, provided the glass has a fairly high degree of diffusion.

A BRUTAL switching on and off of the lights, whether these are inside or outside of the panels, is disagreeable to the eye of the beholder. To avoid this, all panel circuits should be connected to dimmers so that they may be controlled for gradual lowering and raising with the house lights, as they are lowered or raised.

By wiring the sockets on several circuits, and by interchanging, from time to time, the color hoods to outlets in other positions, each group of sockets forming a different pattern, a number of effects can be produced. By the proper manipulation of the dimmers of each circuit the patches of color may be made to blend with each other, or to change from one color to another. Thus the number of effects obtainable is limited only by the number of different combinations which the range of dimming control for each circuit is actually capable of producing.

Another economical, and at the same time versatile, arrangement can be obtained by a symmetrical placement of the lamps over the entire area, using only such sockets as are necessary for a particular effect. When a different pattern is desired, a different combination of sockets is used, involving no additional wiring cost.

The number of effects possible with panels is also somewhat dependent upon the type of glass used. Its thickness, texture and pattern are all important factors, since all determine in some measure the light transmitting qualities of the glass. The various types of glass which can be used for lighted panels are compared in the table accompanying this discussion.

Any lovely object can be made the keynote of its surroundings. A single beautiful vase, picture or piece of statuary, if it is properly emphasized, can supply the dominant decorative motif for an entire room or hall.

In the theatre, where the art of lighting is highly developed, this is especially true. The lighting principles that have done so much for the stage can achieve much if applied to similar ends in the auditorium.

The lighting of prominent bits of statuary adds interest to the interior of the house. This need not be confined to simple spotlighting. Several spotlights of red, green and blue can be used to provide a white light for the ornament, and at the same time a shadow is cast for each beam, which is illuminated in color by the other beams, so that a striking color-shadow effect is produced on the surface behind. A fascinating play of color and shadow can add interest as well as beauty to the ornament if the spotlights are slowly and alternately dimmed and brightened by means of a mobile color motor-driven arrangement. Often, too, a protruding ornament can be effectively silhouetted by lighting the surface behind by means of concealed lighting units which gives a sort of aural background for the object.

Because of its mobility and its vibrant quality, light is undoubtedly one of the most desirable decorative mediums that exist. Especially in a theatre is this true, for with the advent of color lighting, the auditorium that is adequately and consistently wired can virtually become as a large canvas wherein the light artist may paint his picture for all to enjoy.

And the greatest advantage of this picture is that it can be changed—not like the show, once or twice a week, but like the mood—any time at all, and instantly.

Whether the effect of the play is one of realism or symbolism, sadness or gladness, turbulence or calm, color lighting in the auditorium, suitably designed and utilized, can enhance that effect and increase that mood in the audience.

More, inherent beauty in this type of decoration recommends it on aesthetic grounds. From a practical standpoint, too, it has unequalled flexibility and economy of operation to recommend it.

Now that radiant artificial light is so accessible, and since we have created the electro-mechanical mechanisms for its control, we need only to develop the technique that will give us a genuine art of dynamic decoration. To this end we have already gone far. But the field is new. The true artists in it have been necessarily few, while opportunities for original creations have begun to assert themselves only the last few years.

It is noteworthy that much of what has already been accomplished has paralleled the development of the motion picture theatre. The cinema, in function, in style and by association, is peculiarly suited to the exploitation of this medium, and motion picture theatre designers have contributed importantly to its advance. As new theatres are erected, there is to be noted a growth in the use of light as a decorative medium, with much of this extended use representing genuine artistic experiment with light itself. It will be through such experimenting that the art of dynamic decoration with light will be realized, and perhaps it would be only natural if this medium is finally developed to its fullest in the motion picture theatre.
THE Publix Rialto theatre in Joliet, Ill., was opened four years ago. It has a magnificent main foyer and rotunda, with marble columns, mirrors, marble floors and an elaborate ceiling design. To this foyer section has been added a feature of unusual interest. It consists in a room, or small hall, which will be used for several purposes. While serving as an exit to an important street, which at the time the original building was built could not be used, it is also to be used for small social gatherings, such as bridge parties, teas and so on. In other words, it will be used to emphasize the Rialto as a community gathering place.

The style is totally different from that of the theatre proper. This room, as was the theatre, was designed by C. W. & George L. Rapp of Chicago and New York. This room has been designed to give an atmospheric effect of an outdoor Roman courtyard, or garden. From the main foyer you descend several steps into this "outdoors," the floor of which is of colorful tile laid in a unique design. On either side are pergolas, fountains, niches, statuary, garden gates, etc., the whole being decorated with flowers and shrubbery. A miniature cloud machine has been installed to give a hazy sky effect. Also, outdoor lamps and other miscellaneous garden features have been incorporated.

Entrance can be had to this Roman garden without going through into the theatre. In other words, private parties can be entertained in this space without interfering at all with the theatre, as care has been taken by the architects and owners to have this treated in such a way as to be absolutely isolated from the theatre, if necessary.

It is difficult to explain the interesting effect to be gained from looking from the foyer through this atmospheric courtyard. Ingenious lighting effects have been employed to give the exact color effect of Italian skies. The illustrations do not do justice to this particular phase of the treatment, but a fair idea can be had of the monumental features which have been incorporated in the design.

The plan shows the layout and space given for electrical illumination, ventilation, etc. A preliminary study by the architects, also shown here, is of an interesting scheme which, while not adopted, indicates what possibilities there are in the treatment of small special rooms of this kind.—Arthur Frederick Adams.

A party room added to the Rialto theatre in Joliet, Ill., is discussed here by one of the staff of the architects, C. W. & George L. Rapp

A NOVEL FOYER FEATURE TO STRESS COMMUNITY APPEAL
Organs and Courtesy

Aside from being a factor of great value in enhancing the entertainment qualities of the motion picture theatre, the organ performs what may be termed an "unconscious" role, as far as the audience is concerned. (And there is some doubt as to whether the organists themselves are entirely cognizant of it.)

The coming of sound pictures brought with it to the theatre attendant responsibilities that were not present when films were in silent form. Contradictorily, sound brought with it a demand for silence. Patrons could no longer whisper to one another about some particularly attractive feature of the program without disturbing those who were near them. And based upon this fact came the "training" trailers, which requested those in the audience to maintain silence while the picture was being shown. Worded, seemingly, in a manner at which no offence could be taken, these trailers nevertheless would sometimes cause an unfavorable reaction among the many in the audience who "didn't have to be told what to do."

Organ features on the program are closely related to the trailers, only they do not convey the slightest impression of being mandatory. The moment an audience begins to sing, those singing patrons become aware that they are not in the midst of an insensate assembly but are among other people like themselves, there to have a good time. A vague bond is established, a sympathetic "something" that rebounds to an innate sense of courtesy and of the right thing to do.

The remark was once made that courtesy is 10% training, and 90% good sense. All the training in the world cannot make good sense, and training that seems to be forced upon a person cannot be expected to effect the desired result. There must be some response from within, in consequence of which there will develop a consideration that carries a certain amount of pride with it—pride in not having to be reminded that one must keep quiet.

Augmenting the Exhibitor's Income

In this issue is begun a regular department devoted to those affairs which, perhaps for want of a better term, may be called allied amusements and services—meaning those minor enterprises which may be operated in conjunction with the motion picture theatre, either for promotional purposes, or for the purpose of augmenting the income of the exhibitor.

It must be recognized, too, that there are growing up activities that may be adapted to the theatre as services, which, while not adding directly to the income of the exhibitor, create good will in the public toward the theatre and which therefore have promotional value. An example of such a service is the provision of space for free parking. Sometimes, moreover, miniature golf courses are operated as more or less promotional ventures rather than as distinctly separate sources of profit.

Exhibitors also have been finding that vending machines not only provide a service which has long been common in theatres, but also represent a highly efficient method of adding to income through the sale of candy and other articles. Pop corn machines, peanut roasters, etc., while requiring an attendant, also are in many situations entirely adaptable to the theatre. To these may be added (as already they are in a growing number of actual instances) mechanical games for lobbies, foyers and lounges, and the selling of souvenir novelties, either by vending machine or by an attendant stationed in an attractive booth in the main foyer.

Inasmuch as these allied amusements and services tend to increase the theatre's business itself, they act, even when operated as purely promotional activities, to increase the exhibitor's income. This characteristic, plus the fact that such activities are increasing in the theatre as ventures entirely for the purpose of corralling any extra nickels and dimes that may be available, is responsible for the title of the department—Added Income.

Manufacturers and distributors of the products used in these activities are invited to contribute news and comment regarding their products, while exhibitors who are already adding to their income in this way, are urged to tell their fellow exhibitors through this department about the methods which have proven most successful for them.

Glad to Be of Any Help

What the winter will mean for many people has been painted vividly by others, and the picture is not one that inspires any more efforts along that line than are necessary. We have received, however, a plea from a charitable organization that we give some publicity to its needs in the work it is doing toward the alleviation of suffering among the unemployed, especially among the children of the unemployed.

"Perhaps never before,” goes the request for our mite of help, "has the need for cooperation been more urgent than it is this year. We ask you to insert the attached article in the next issue of your paper as your contribution to this national child-saving work."

And so we do:

Have You Got a Job?

It has surely been a great many years since those of us who are so fortunate as to have the means to provide the comforts of life had cause for greater Thanksgiving than we have this Thanksgiving.

Many hundreds of thousands are out of work, and have been for a long time past. The majority of these have been asking alms. No one knows what will become of them during this winter, unless those who have will share of their means, to help those who now have nothing.

Conditions, close times, drought, etc., have worked a severe hardship on the Christian Home Orphanage at Council Bluffs, Iowa. It is unable to meet the demands made upon it, and with winter at hand, and calls for help from scores who are absolutely without food or shelter, rapidly increasing as colder weather approaches, appeals are made to good people everywhere to come to the help of this national child-saving institution. Let those of us who have been blessed, and who are working and earning, share at this Thanksgiving season with the unfortunate ones.

The Christian Home Orphanage is non-sectarian and is supported wholly by the voluntary gifts of the people. The Home was established in 1882.

If possible help this work to the extent of your ability at Thanksgiving.

Address the Christian Home Orphanage, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

While we cannot help pointing out to our readers (in bad taste though it seems to do so) that we have not investigated this organization, we add that everything about the communication with us indicates that it is sincere and worthy of the support of those who may be interested.
The Spanish Colonial Design of a New Fox Theatre

An interesting study in Spanish Colonial architecture is the Fox Stockton in Stockton, Cal. Designed by Balch & Stanbery of Los Angeles, its design conveys both an impressiveness and simplicity of ornamentation. The house seats 2,100.

A slight departure from the predominating Spanish note is evident in the embellishments of the box office, with their modernistic wrought iron work, and again in the lobby, with its touch of Romanesque. All are blended, however, into the general scheme.

The first view of the box office gives an image of an interesting color effect. The sidewalk at the front is of terazzo. Radiating rays from a circular motif at the box office tends to direct the gaze of the passerby to the ticket window. The rays converge at the center, where the word Fox is worked out in the marble mosaic.

The spacious rotunda is elliptical in pattern. Its dome is supported by massive columns, which are decorated with intricate designs. A wide stairway leads to the mezzanine foyer and lounges. On the main floor, in the center of the rotunda, is an ornamental fountain and pool, in which ferns and other water plants are arranged.

The foyer located just off the rotunda is noteworthy for the simplicity of its walls. Surfaces are plain, with only stone markings to relieve the eye. The ceilings, however, are more highly decorated. A dominant feature is the heavy beams of carved wood, heavy beams supporting lighter ones. At the end of the foyer a stairway, its iron railing done in fabricated wrought iron, ascends to the mezzanine floor.

Simplicity is again evident in the treatment of the auditorium walls, most of the stress being placed on a massive ceiling. Huge beams span the main ceiling and are supported at the ends by massive brackets. Between the
The mezzanine floor, showing the passageway to the loges from this level, which looks down—and up—into the rotunda. One of the features on the mezzanine is a children's nursery. On the same level a room is provided for the ushers.

In a lounge measuring 26x31 feet, located over the lobby, there are, in addition to rest rooms, a cosmetics room, a smoking lounge and telephone booths.

From the mezzanine, one may ascend to the balcony, or cross over to the aisle desired. Two sets of stairs lead down.

Ample space has been provided for dressing rooms. Some are located under the stage and others above the wings. Storage rooms are found at the rear. Also housed there is the equipment of a cooling system, and also the steam boilers.

There are no "open-to-the-sky" exit courts in the Fox Stockton. All passageways leading out of the theatre are enclosed in concrete structures.

There has been no stinting of space in this house—not even in the projection room. It is large and roomy, planned to care for the latest type of equipment and for new devices to come in the future. It is to be noted that projectionists here have every opportunity to work under the most favorable conditions. The batteries and motor generators are housed in separate compartments. Back of the projection room is a large fan room to accommodate the ventilating equipment.
A theatre of the commercial building type in a small city

Describing the new Michigan theatre in Muskegon, a 1,900-seat house of Spanish design forming the major part of a structure containing offices.

THE Michigan theatre in Muskegon, Mich., is a modern, 1,900-seat house forming the greater portion of a structure that also contains shops and offices, and it is quite representative of this growing class of commercial - theatrical buildings as it is being adapted to both the needs and limitations of enterprising small cities.

This theatre, which was opened just recently, is the property of the Continental Realty Company. C. Howard Crane of Detroit, with Elmer George Kiehler and Ben A. Dore as associates, was the architect. The Michigan has been leased to Paul J. Schlossman of Muskegon.

The building has a frontage of 153 feet and a depth of 130 feet. The commercial section runs 42 feet deep, leaving the theatre portion dimensions of 88x153 feet.

The exterior is of modern American architecture. The entrance to the theatre, which is dominated by a semi-circular marquee, is located at a corner of The lobby, showing stairs to balcony.

The building and visible on two streets. The architecture and decorative scheme of the interior is based on Spanish patterns. Entrance is directly into a vestibule, which leads into the lobby. The vestibule floor is of marble that matches the marble base of the box office.

The foyer just beyond the lobby extends across the entire rear of the auditorium. A stairway leads directly to the balcony, but the balcony may also be reached from a mezzanine floor, to which a stairway extends from the foyer. The mezzanine floor overlooks the foyer, the latter having an effective height of two stories, with a domed ceiling, from which are suspended two chandeliers.

The Spanish character of the auditorium is worked out in pointed detail rather than in a panoramic decorative scheme. The walls, done in variegated plaster, are essentially plain, with a modeled cornice running around the room. Most of the decorative effects are placed at and around the proscenium arch, the sides of which consist in square stone-like columns supporting a shallow arch. The latter is surmounted by several contrasting series of scrolls in relief. Organ screen treatment consists in tall arches of Moslem pattern and executed in plaster. Beneath the lofts are emergency exits. The color scheme of the auditorium is composed of red, buff, green and blue. The draperies are of red velour, with gold trimmings.

The entire auditorium is lighted from a large circular dome, the lighting being dimmer-controlled on a two-color plan. Both the walls and the ceiling have been given acoustical treatment.

Lounges, retiring rooms, stairways, foyers and aisles of the auditorium have floor coverings of chenille. The wainscoting of the walls are treated in imitation of tile.

The stage is built and equipped for stock or "legitimate" road shows, having rigging lofts, fly galleries and a steel gridiron, as well as a dead front switchboard. The proscenium opening is 42 feet wide, while the stage has a depth of 28 feet.

The auditorium in general has the appearance of being considerably larger than it really is, an effect that may be at least partly attributed to the absence of excessive decorative treatment (which often exerts a "closing-in" influence), and partly to the lightness of the decorative detail employed. Of the 1,900 seats, 800 are located in the balcony.

The Michigan normally operates on a straight picture policy.
CONTRACTUAL LIABILITY: LATE DECISIONS

By LEO T. PARKER

EVERY theatre owner, as well as all employees, frequently have occasion to determine questions of law. In many instances a correct solution of the problem presented avoids litigation and consequently results in a great saving of time and money. Also, under circumstances where it is impossible to avoid legal controversy, a person who is familiar with the established law may readily build a logical foundation upon which to win a law suit.

Undoubtedly, the most practical and interesting plan of acquiring legal knowledge, concerning one's own business problem, is to know the cause and outcome of the important litigations just decided by the higher courts in various localities and involving theatre owners or related interests. Obviously, any subject of the law in which your fellow business man has been involved in litigation, is an informative and practical one for you.

However, obtaining information of the recently decided higher court cases assures dependable legal knowledge, which is an important consideration, because very often the late decisions reverse or modify the law that has been established for many years previously. For this reason it is good policy to record the cases cited monthly in Better Theatres. You will thus be often able to inform yourself as to what you legally may or may not do, and also if you become involved in litigation, you may render valuable assistance by supplying your attorney with these late citations, which ordinarily are extremely difficult to locate.

It is interesting to observe that recently the higher courts have rendered several decisions involving the rights and liabilities of theatre owners, officials, brokers and others who sell theatres and equipment. Therefore, since these cases illustrate important phases of the law, I shall review them.

BREACH OF CONTRACT

In all litigations involving contracts, the courts have held that any person who breaches a valid agreement is liable to the other party for an amount of damages equal to the complete profits lost by the latter as a result of the breach.

For instance, in Wingo v. Gilloz (30 S. W. 2d 777), a man named Wingo filed suit against a property owner proving that a contract was entered into whereby the former was to procure for the property owner a site for a theatre building and procure a loan on the real estate; a building was to be erected thereon for an amount acceptable to the property owner; that he was to procure a tenant for the theatre when completed and to perform other services incidental to financing the proposed building by procuring a loan and in leasing the theatre; that by the terms of the contract the property owner agreed to pay him not less than $15,000, and upon certain contingencies $20,000 for his services.

Wingo fulfilled the terms of the contract and after he negotiated and procured a loan of $125,000 on the property procured plans for the building to be erected, procured a contract for furnishing the theatre, and negotiated a long-time lease to a tenant acceptable to the property owner, and complied with all the terms of said contract, the property owner refused to proceed with the construction work and otherwise refused to abide by the terms of the agreement.

In holding the property owner liable for payment of the agreed compensation of $15,000 to Wingo, the court explained that a person who breaches a valid agreement is liable in damages to the other party in an amount equal to the profits the latter would have earned had the breach not occurred.

WHEN SILENCE MEANS FRAUD

It is elementary that an employer who, with knowledge, accepts the benefits of a transaction conducted by an assumed agent, is deemed to have ratified it. It is also familiar law that it requires much less positive action on the part of a principal to ratify transactions as to third persons than as in favor of the assumed agent himself. Mere silence and inaction are usually held sufficient.

Therefore, although a seller of a theatre does not employ a broker who makes false statements, the former is held responsible if he knows of such false statements and fails to inform the prospective purchaser of the falsity.

For example, in Swartz v. Will Starkey Theatres Company (290 Pac. 708), it was disclosed that the Will Starkey Theatres Company was the owner of the Rex theatre, a moving picture house, and Starkey, the president, agreed to sell it. The purchaser fell behind in payments due under the sale contract, and Starkey served upon him a notice of forfeiture, upon receipt of which the purchaser made the payments then delinquent. He again fell behind during another month, however, and another notice of forfeiture was served upon him. At this time there was unpaid upon the contract of sale of the theatre the sum of $6,100, in addition to which the theatre owed outstanding bills for current operating expenses in an amount between $2,000 and $3,000.

The purchaser called upon Starkey, who agreed to permit the former to sell the theatre. The purchaser employed a broker, who inserted an advertisement in the newspapers. A man named Swartz, noticing the advertisement, called upon the broker for the purpose of investigating the proposition, and he was taken to the office of the theatre company and introduced to Mr. Starkey.

All the parties interested immediately thereafter met in the office of Mr. Starkey's attorney, where, after considerable negotiations, Swartz purchased the theatre from the original purchaser and paid $1,000 down, agreeing to pay the balance within a specified time. Three days later Swartz wrote to the Starkey Theatres Company the following letter:

"I hereby surrender to you the possession of the Rex theatre, located at West 326 Riverside Avenue in the City of Spokane, Wash., and hereby elect to forfeit my agreement to purchase as of December 24, and relinquish all my right, title and interest therein as of this date, you to take possession today."

Thereupon the Starkey Company took possession of the theatre, operated it for two days, then closed it down.

Swartz sued the Starkey Theatres Company to recover the $1,000 down payment, and also asked the court to cancel the contract in which he had agreed to purchase the theatre.

During the trial testimony was given that indicated that Mr. Starkey had taken over the theatre and had simply allowed the original purchaser an opportunity to see if he could find a purchaser who would pay enough to clear the indebtedness and possibly allow him a little something for his supposed equity. Also, it was shown that the broker was asked by Swartz why the theatre had not

LONGITUDINAL SECTION, WATSON THEATRE, SALINA, KAN. BOLLER BROTHERS, ARCHITECTS, CHARLES H. SHAVER, SUPERVISING ARCHITECT.

The modern note is continued throughout the interior of the Watson. The auditorium seats 1,000 on the first floor, and 600 in the balcony. A three-color lighting system, fully equipped stage and roomy lounges for men and women are features of the interior. All seat rows are spaced 24 inches, back to back. The carbon dioxide system of refrigeration will be served by a deep well supplying 200 gallons of low-temperature water per minute. This method, according to engineers reduces by approximately 50% the expense of operating a cooling plant under the usual methods calling for city water, cooling tower, or spray pond.

The Fox is being erected by A. O. Rorabaugh and V. M. Wiley, owners of the largest department store in Hutchinson, on property adjacent to their present business location. The Fox will contain 1,400 seats and have a mezzanine type of auditorium. The stories above the theatre are intended as an annex to the present floor space of the Rorabaugh-Wiley Store. The theatre will be operated by the Fox-Midland circuit. The modernistic design of the exterior is carried out in buff tapestry brick, trimmed with terra cotta in shades of light gold. The second story panels and archway over the theatre lobby are trimmed with aluminum finished terra cotta.

Aluminum and black play an important role in the color scheme of the interior of the Fox, with touches of blue, red and gold on ornamented surfaces. Silver-blue walls will add the necessary warmth to prevent austerity in the design. The carbon dioxide refrigerating plant will be supplied with low temperature water from a well on the theatre property. The stage is 45 feet in width, and 25 feet in height.

This project represents a joint development in harmonizing Spanish Colonial design among buildings planned for theatrical and commercial purposes. Nathan Salmon will own and operate the theatre. The adjoining building, which contains a second floor dance hall, is owned by Judge C. J. Roberts and the Greer Loan Company of Santa Fe. Both structures are being erected in the same building contract. Separating the two buildings, a ten-foot arcade serves the double purpose of exit court from the theatre and driveway to a free parking station in the rear, which accommodates approximately 150 cars. An exit bridging this driveway permits patrons to pass directly from the theatre mezzanine to the dance floor. The Spanish type of design was chosen as giving the desired distinction to the new structures, without destroying the general atmosphere surrounding the older buildings of the city of Santa Fe. The front elevations are faced with white stucco of rough texture, ornamented with intricate terra cotta details.

The atmospheric type of auditorium in the theatre seats 800 on the first floor, with the rear section of the orchestra seating arranged for loges. The balcony contains 500 seats.

SOUND IN THE THEATRE

TWO INNOVATIONS IN SOUND AND IMAGE

By EDWARD CHURCHILL

Describing the new "squeeze track" method of volume control and the "Realife" system permitting wide film frames on standard stock

IN evolving the two innovations in sound picture production and reproduction known as "squeeze track volume control" and "Realife" film, the engineers of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in whose laboratories the ideas were brought to fruition, can well feel that they have contributed not only to the betterment of that company's own product, but that they have worked toward the advancement of the new motion picture in general, and thus to the potential advantage of every producer, every exhibitor and of the public.

A number of producing companies, for example, are working out their own ideas as to what the wider film shall be like. But out of all this separate experimentation will come the type of film that shall be characteristic of motion picture product, and thus it is that each engineer is working toward a summation that will represent the unselfish endeavor of many minds toward a finer motion picture for all.

Technically, squeeze track and Realife film are unrelated, but ultimately, of course, they are related, since sound and image are inseparable in the modern motion picture. And in the evolution of one process, the requirements and limitations of the other must be considered. Let us take up the squeeze track first.

As one phase of a constant endeavor to anticipate and solve the problems of the theatre manager and the projectionist, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has evolved the squeeze track to increase or lower volume of sound automatically, in order to insure uniformity throughout Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product. The device has been developed under the supervision of Douglas Shearer, recording director, and Wesley C. Miller, chief engineer of the sound department of M.G.M.

Its advantage lies in the elimination of elaborate cue sheets, which have been the bane of projectionists since the advent of the sound track on motion picture film. Mr. Miller and his associates knew that the projectionist had his hands full even without being shouldered with the added burden of making fader adjustments at intervals throughout the picture. The squeeze track also makes it possible for the projectionist, handicapped by the noises within the projection room, to cease "exploring" his house for the right volume of soundings. Under the system of elaborate cue sheets, he was forced to make fader adjustments continually without knowing how the picture was sounding to the audience.

The first remedy offered for the variation in sound volume was installation of a fader in the theatre proper. While excellent results have been obtained from this system, and while it still is in effect in some of the larger houses, it cannot be utilized by the smaller exhibitor because it necessitates the employment of an extra operator. The other method is to leave the matter of sound control up to the projectionist. The reproduction of the sound in a picture involves, of course, both the recording and the projection processes. Faults of either one are reflected in the result. However, the projection can very often correct recording errors.

If in recording a picture, it were practicable to maintain a fixed recording level throughout the entire picture, the demands upon the projectionist would be reduced to a minimum. At present, however, and probably for some time to come, in spite of careful planning, many irregularities exist in the recording level. Thus, when a film is cut, the projectionist is called upon to make continual corrections to offset these irregularities, in order to secure a good performance. To assist the projectionist in this, and to relieve him of the necessity for this constant cueing, the automatic device in question was evolved.

Many remarks, and some published statements, have been made which could be taken as derogatory to the projec-
The American public does not like to be buncoed. They'll stand for it quite a while, but they'll run anybody who tries it too long. Look at the last election.

All this talk about attendance falling off because the novelty of talking pictures is wearing out is far from truth. It is falling off in some theatres because the "talk" is so far from human speech. In plain U. S., the patrons have been buncoed too long.

When a patron lays his half dollar on the window sill he is paying for a Synchrofilm show. If he gets it, he will be back with another half dollar as often as you change programs.

Barnum packed up his show and pulled out of town each night. You are anchored to a thousand tons of brick and steel. You can't afford to pull the stunt Barnum did. Get a Synchrofilm for each of your projectors.

ON October 8, the new Carrier Corporation was established. It consists of the Carrier Engineering Corporation, makers of Manufactured Weather, the Brunswick-Kroeschell Company, and the York Heating and Ventilating Company (Philadelphia).

As a result of this merger, the engineers who had been specializing in air-conditioning of theatres in the Carrier Engineering Corporation and the Brunswick-Kroeschell Company were grouped in a new unit, the Theatre Division of the Carrier Engineering Corporation. In this new Theatre Division are combined the two decades of experience in theatre air-conditioning of the two leaders in this field. Between them they can offer to every theatre any type of air-conditioning equipment on an unbiased basis of most economical performance in the theatre, whether it seats 500 or 5,000.

R. A. KROESCHELL, formerly in charge of all theatre air-conditioning for Brunswick-Kroeschell, now joint head of the new Carrier Theatre Division.

A. C. BUENSOD, formerly specializing in Manufactured Weather for theatres, now joint head of the Theatre Division of Carrier Engineering Corporation.
Announces

service to theatre owners

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOUR THEATRE

Ten years ago, theatre air-conditioning was just beginning. Today its influence on box-office receipts is fully recognized. Customers do come back to a comfortable theatre.

The only question is, “How much will it cost?”

That’s where the new Theatre Division of the Carrier Engineering Corporation comes into the picture. And comes in strong.

Here you will find the practical money-saving discoveries and developments of the two decade-old leaders in successful theatre air-conditioning.

In the Theatre Division itself, there will be new economies in research work, in installation, in offering a 24-hour-a-day maintenance service in principal cities. The merged service and expediting departments will be on the spot almost as quickly as your own maintenance men. There will be new improvements in theatre air-conditioning similar in importance to the elimination of the slightest disturbing noise from the apparatus when sound houses came in.

Find out what air-conditioning can do for your theatre or theatre chain—what it has already done in hundreds of successful houses. Get in touch today with the Theatre Division, Carrier Engineering Corporation, Paramount Building, New York. Next Issue—European Theatres
Mr. Shearer pointed out the advantages, as far as perspective was concerned, by drawing pictures of four poles, set in a square, at some distance from the camera. With standard practice, involving the narrow angle, the two poles closest to the camera were not only just within side-limits but obscured half of those poles behind.

With the wider angle, caused by the wide angle from lens to film, the front poles not only were well within the side limits, but the poles in the background stood out separately and distinctly.

"There is a clear third dimensional illusion," he continued. "Another example of what I mean is given with a picket fence. In standard practice, only the faces of the pickets show, giving the eye a flat picture. Through the use of the wide angle, the part of the sides of the pickets which are not in the direct center of the picture, are also caught for the screen. The sides give the pickets a third dimension, and depth. The camera becomes more like the human eye."

Another outstanding attribute apparent in "Realife" is the size of persons and objects of all kinds in the background. These figures are in no way distorted or blurred and are of normal size. In standard practice, a person walking away from the camera becomes smaller at such a rapid rate that the illusion is impaired. With "Realife," size recedes more normally.

The only mechanical difference between standard film and "Realife" observed by the spectator is the variation in the size of the screen. The screens on which "Realife" is to be projected will be much wider.

"The main advantage to the exhibitor is the saving of money in adapting his equipment for 'Realife,' as against the amount he would have to spend to show 70-mm. positives," explained Mr. Shearer. "I conservatively estimate that if 70-mm. prints become standard, they will cost exhibitors in the United States a minimum aggregate of $40,000,000 for modification of equipment."

"A survey further reveals that five major producing companies alone would spend approximately $20,000,000 a year more than they are at present for film. This would eventually have to come from theatre box offices. The general belief," Mr. Shearer added, "is that the industry cannot stand the burden of this added cost."

Some very interesting observations have been received from Mr. Norman Simons, of M. Simons & Son Co., in charge of our export sales, who has been traveling in Europe. He writes from Paris, "I must mention my last night in Paris. Went to the second leading theatre, 'Casino de Paris.' The whole theatre is covered with crudely mounted, yet very efficient Wright-Decoster's. I am arranging to secure a list of your Paris installations, and am certain you have every important theatre on the list."

Later, another message from Budapest reads, "There are 120 theatres in Budapest without the rest of Hungary, and more Wright-Decoster's than any other single make, European or American. They are installed beautifully. Just saw THE KING OF JAZZ and you couldn't get better reproduction in the Roxy. Here you are with good company, Warner's, First National, M G M, Fox, Paramount, etc."

sound talks
—by F. H. RICHARDSON—

NO MUMBLING ALLOWED
• Again screen figures should talk, not mumble. Every word should be just as clear, just as distinct to the audience as though the audience were listening to the actual speaker. And it will be that way, too, if you have good equipment maintained in a proper state of repair, and if you handle that equipment as it ought to be handled—assuming that the theatre auditorium itself has no acoustical faults.

PERFECTION
• The exhibitor and manager must remember that unless the equipment itself is in perfect condition, the projectionist cannot possibly produce perfect results. And the term perfect must in this case be construed to mean first-class equipment maintained in a first-class state of repair. Given that, there is no earthly reason why the projectionist cannot send to the horns as perfect a result. What happens to it after it leaves the horns, however, is dependent upon the acoustical properties of the auditorium. Remember: (1) If you have poor equipment. (2) If you have equipment in a poor state of repair. (3) If you have an auditorium which contains any one of several possible acoustical faults. Then you have no right to expect excellence in the reproduction of sound.

REPAIR AND CONDITION
• Equipment may be in a perfect state of repair and still be in poor condition. And "condition" is, with sound equipment, perhaps even the more important of the two. A battery, for example, may be in perfect repair. Nevertheless, it may be in a very poor condition. Its plates may be perfect. Its electrolyte may be all that it should be. Its separators may be as good as new. Yet all this may be nullified, in a way, by the fact that the connections are loose, dirty or corroded, or that there is dust mixed with electrolyte on the battery tops. The exciting lamp may be perfect as a lamp. Its filament may be as straight as a string. Yet that filament may not be in perfect alignment with the sound optical system, or the lamp globe may be dirty, or the lamp contact may not be perfectly clean, with the result that there will be both lowering of volume and distortion of sound. Don't let bad nullify the good.

EXCELLENCE AND CARE
• Excellence in sound reproduction and projection can only be produced by the exercise of great care. The projectionist who reproduces really high-grade work in sound must exercise great care. He must make certain tests each day. He must know that his batteries, upon which so much depend, are in the pink of condition. He must examine his exciting lamps at least once every day to make sure there is no sag in their filaments. He must make frequent tests to know that the light beam is properly centered at the sound aperture. He must test his horns individually before starting the first show each day. And so on through a long list of "musts."

MORE FAULTS, YET NO FAULTS
• Form the habit, projectionists, of picking flaws in your own work and seeking means for their remedy. If you follow that course persistently, pretty soon it will be very hard for either the exhibitor, the theatre manager or the theatre patron to call your work "poor."

China Goes to the "Movies"

CHINA is torn with civil war and the brigandry that is a natural result of governmental breakdown. Yet the number of its motion picture theatres is steadily on the increase. In 1927 China had 106 film theatres. At the present time (according to agents of the United States Department of Commerce) that nation has 233 picture houses.

This is important to the American film producer and theatre equipment manufacturer because the United States is a principal source of motion picture supplies. Of about 450 feature pictures shown in China in 1929, approximately 90 per cent were produced in America. American theatre equipment does not yet enjoy such dominance but with a growth of the manufacturer's interest in foreign markets, Chinese purchases in the United States are expected to increase.

People residing in the treaty ports can now enjoy sound pictures. In Shanghai there are 12 theatres with sound equipment.

A serious impediment to further increase in sound picture entertainment in China is inflicted by conditions in the interior. Economic demoralization due to civil strife, the dangers and difficulties of transportation and the lack of facilities for proper servicing of equipment, that the manufacturer and distributor will find it extremely difficult to overcome. Silent pictures are popular in the interior and theatres showing them are profitable and multiplying.

carries the action along, showing the individual in his place with relation to the picture as a whole. The accompanying sound must be controlled and amplified to a varying degree to fit the illusion of distance created by the camera. If the dialog be carried along at an even proration it may be noticeable to the audience. The variation in loudness must at all times be so proportioned as to fit the size of the cut upon the screen.

It might be mentioned here that due to the fact that all persons do not hear equally well, the effect must be catered for the average. At best, this will be a compromise.

The alliance between the brain and the ear has resulted in a very highly developed mechanism, which functions in a definite, predetermined way. The problem of the sound recorder is to reproduce this phenomenon as nearly as possible in reverberation of the auditorium. The particular problem is to store the sound in such a way that when released, it will react upon the ear and the brain of the listener as it would have, had the listener heard the original sound.

Several inherent difficulties present themselves. The normal human being is so equipped with two ears, while the microphone has the equivalent of only one ear. The normal human being, from experience, is capable of sorting out the sounds which fall upon his ear-drum and of concentrating his attention upon those which he wishes to hear, while the microphone picks up and records everything that presents itself.

Due to the very small time difference of sounds falling upon one ear and then upon the other, the human being is able to distinguish both direction and distance of sounds actuating the ear-drum. This effect is lost when recording with one microphone, but all of these limitations of sound recording may be somewhat alleviated by an intelligent use of the microphone.

DEVELOPMENTS are being announced every day which help also to broaden the scope of sound recording. The beam microphone, recently brought out, is a case in point. The microphone is placed at the focal point of a large reflector, perhaps six feet in diameter. The reflector is then aimed at the desired point, and a decided directorial effect is obtained. Not only is the sense of distance governed by an increase or decrease in the volume of sound which falls upon our ears, but due to an actual loss of the higher frequencies with an increase in distance, there is an actual change in the quality of the sound.

In the theatre there are two principle factors which help to make or mar the talking picture. The acoustical properties of any room or auditorium depend upon so many factors that it is almost impossible to form the auditorium. The importance, of course, are the size and shape. New theatres can be built to conform to the well outlined laws of auditorium acoustics. Theatres already built have the problem of altering the interior to conform as nearly as possible to the outside of the screen, which gives much less directional effect. Distribution, however, is far from uniform with either method.

In the days of the silent picture, the projectionist was important but not nearly so important as he became when the screen has acquired a voice quality. Upon him rest the responsibility for not only the picture, but for sound control as well. Whether or not the audience is to be tortured with too loud sound, or must strain every nerve to hear, all depends solely upon him. The question of sound and picture, which is being solved, many technicians believe, by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who have brought the squeeze track to its present state of perfection. The squeeze track is merely a variable density sound track, which has volume control made inherent with the track by a simple laboratory process. The regular variable density track is normally .128 of an inch wide (speaking with reference to the direction of travel of the film). In scenes where half-volume is desired, for example, M G M blocks off half of the width of the track with a simple solution of the desired result (the fundamental principle of the photoelectric cell being that the sound transmitted is proportional to the amount of light falling upon the sensitized surface). Blocking off half of the track cuts off half of the light falling upon the cell from the energizing lamp and consequently diminishes the volume by half. Any desired cut in volume can be made in the same way. This method of volume control on release prints eliminates the need for fader cues in the theatre.

There remains, however, the question of general volume level throughout the picture. As the house fills, it is of course necessary to raise the level. There are many methods of determining the actual raise necessary. The best way, of course, is to station someone in the theatre auditorium who can control volume from his station there by means of a fader. This method requires the employing of an extra person and is seldom used. The next best method is to designate one certain person to keep the projectionist advised at all times as to sound. This is usually one of the more capable ushers.

CERTAIN points regarding this should be brought out. Sound should be adjusted for the great majority of seats in the house—should favor the best seats instead of the worst. The sound volume should be maintained throughout the house, and it should be possible to alter the level gradually reducing it until correct volume is obtained. This method would be all right were it not for the fact that our ears, once they become accustomed to loud sound, become more or less insensitive to volume changes. Thus the level is never brought down as far as it should be because, while it sounds all right to the observer who has been inside of the theatre all of the time, to one who comes in from the outside and who has not been under the influence of the much louder sound, it is insufferably loud. The sound level should be started low and brought gradually up to the volume which is correct under the reigning conditions.

Sound motion pictures are the result of the efforts of thousands of persons, all cooperating to attain an end. To amuse, sometimes to instruct, always to satisfy the thousands of motion picture enthusiasts, is the purpose for which all in production and exhibition are working. The immediate problem is to get intelligible and pleasing sound into the theatre.

The problem can only be solved by a mutual understanding of the other fellow. The exhibitor and the projectionist must understand the problems of those who are engaged in recording that sound which they reproduce. And the recording technicians must realize the problems of sound reproduction in the theatre.

The exhibitor must do his part in the path of sound through the studio to the theatre. Perfect pictures come closer to attainment only as this cooperation and understanding is extended throughout the entire field of motion pictures—the studio, the laboratories—and the theatre.
When I was in Cranbrook, B.C., in the course of my trip this past summer, I visited the Star theatre and paid the projectionists there a number of compliments later on for the excellence of their work. Projectionists Ward and Burton at that time promised me a detailed description of certain things for publication, the receipt of which has been much delayed. I have been chasing around these United States of America the past few months so fast that Uncle Sam's postmen couldn't keep up with me. The following letter has just reached me:

"Friend Richardson and Friend Daughter: We enclose herewith diagrams and some photographs of the various things shown you at the time of your visit in our city.

"Figure 1, is a diagram of the emergency lighting automatic switching circuit. We believe this diagram is largely self-explanatory and that it will serve as a guide in the application of this system in any theatre.

"The magnetic switch we are using is made by the General Electric Company, but any make of magnetic switch of suitable capacity will do. The one we have is a three-pole switch, each pole being used to control a circuit. We thus are able to handle three circuits with one switch, and one 30-ampere switch of this type produces a total circuit capacity of 90 amperes, which should be ample for emergency lighting in almost any theatre.

"The supply for this switch is brought through a point ahead of both the main fuses and the main switch, thus preventing any possible trouble to the circuit box should trouble develop in the house wiring, which may occur. Of course the entire installation should be very carefully made. The use of this circuit should not be permitted except under emergency circumstances, or when there is danger of panic. Under such conditions, the fewer fuses there are to give out, the more certain one can be of emergency operation. Except in emergencies, or for purposes of periodical test, the use of this circuit should, for obvious reasons, be absolutely forbidden. As we explained to you personally, we have one controlling station in the projection room, which is connected to the port shutter suspension bar, which therefore is the real automatic feature of the system. In addition to this station, we have a manually controlled station at the door man's position. As many more can be installed as may be desired. Each manual station should be plainly labeled, 'For Emergency Lighting Only.'

"In operating, the toggle snap switch shown, which is held normally in position by a cord and ring attached to the port shutter bar, is pulled to closed position by the action of a suitable coil spring upon release of the port shutter bar. Current then flows to the magnetic coil of the magnetic switch, and because of the magnetic attraction of the coil, the switch plates are rocked to closed position, thus connecting the emergency circuit and holding them on until the snap switch is opened in the projection room. Manual operation from any of the other positions accomplish the same results, thus providing means for instant emergency lighting by any authorized person in the house staff from convenient positions in the auditorium.

"In our own house, we have three of our regular house circuits connected to this system, and the feed from the magnetic switch is connected between the regular control switches and lights, care being taken to see that the polarity of these connections are the same as that supplied from the regular source.

"Where there are entirely separate emergency circuits, this is a 100% fine way to operate them. It is more especially so if manual release of the port..."
shutters are provided for, as it should be in every projection room.

The Bradleystat used for our stepless monitor volume control is connected in series with the speech coil of the horn unit. The ideal mounting position for the Bradleystat is on one side of the fader box, where a suitable hole may be drilled in order to allow the shaft to protrude so that the operating knob may be fastened to the outside. The shaft is surrounded by an outer threaded bushing, which also will protrude through the hole in the box. The tightening down of a locknut then fastens the whole unit in position. This device is, in our case, in connection with the output of Western Electric number 46-B amplifier. We urge that in no case this or any other device be connected into this equipment without at first receiving the approval of this company's service engineer.

"We know that you are mentally digesting the idea of applying this principle to the control of the main horn input, thus securing stepless fader adjustment and incidentally getting away from poor contact in faders, which latter trouble is sometimes encountered. With the carbon disc pressure for adjusting resistance, stepless control is obtained, but it must be pointed out that as we use it there is no contact with the fader. The Bradleystat merely cuts out resistance to the monitor speech coil, regardless of the fader setting.

"We believe the idea of applying this principle to the fader proposition is worthy of consideration.

"A photograph of our motor generator set, with its coil spring suspension and the necessary switching arrangement to interchange with the rectifier, is enclosed. (Also, a view of the theatre interior, executed by Projectionist Ward, than whom, as a photographer, there is no whomer.) You will note the iron switch rack containing main and individual switches for the motor generator and the emergency mercury arc rectifier. There also is a box containing a three-pole cartridge cut-out, where the moving of a fuse out of one fuse clip into another provides instantaneous connection of area to either the motor generator or the rectifier. There too is the ballast resistance for the two projectors and the stereo, all compactly mounted.

"RETURNING for the moment to the photograph of the projection room emergency lighting arrangement you will see the toggle snap switch, its holding cord and a section of the shutter suspension bar, all clearly shown. The large switch box upon which is it mounted is not the magnetic switch but merely another switch, which was already in place, so that we used it as a support for the two projectors and tension spring. The conduit above the large switch shown afforded us an easy means for bringing the two wires for the snap switch into position. The magnetic switch, which was mentioned at some length, prior to this, is located outside of the projection room.

Returning now to the carbon-resisting fader-control proposition, there may be some difficulty in applying this to the main horn control, because the variable pressure in a device of this kind may make it difficult to bring a given volume to a given fader setting (as shown on the dial) twice in succession, the adjustment being so very fine. However, so long as the monitoring of the main sound can be done for monitoring purposes, the dial as it now is would be unnecessary, except for purposes of making a record."

I present this to you, gentlemen, just as it is received. The devices I saw in Cranbrook worked perfectly. I would advise that you study these drawings and photographs, because they are worthy of it. The suspension of the motor generator is an adaptation of the plan set forth in this department and in the Bluebook years ago. A heavy plank is suspended by ropes, which as I remember it, are attached at their upper end to iron hooks, the hooks passing up through the main support attached to the iron frame and through a coil spring upon which the supporting nut at the top rests. The motor generator stands on the boards. The springs absorb all the vibration and you can hardly hear a sound.

GENERAL CONDITIONS IN PROJECTION TODAY

I HAVE before me a letter from the office suggesting that I write an article describing projection conditions as I found them on my nation-wide tour this summer. Now I don't mind a suggestion from the head office when it is a good one, and this one is so very good that I will act upon it.

Projection conditions throughout the country, while they show a tremendous advancement over conditions of some 13 years ago, when I made my last trip, may still be very greatly improved, particularly with regard to sound.

Insofar as has to do with motion picture projection, sound has almost entirely eliminated the curse of over-speeding. With sound, it just can't be done, at least to any very damaging extent. The principal fault now encountered is travel ghost and under-illumination. As I have explained to you, travel ghost is very harmful, because of the evil effect it sets up on definition by slightly blurring the horizontal lines on the picture, and by pulling the whites up or down over the blacks, which, of course, in the very nature of things, reduces the contrast of the picture. While it is true that the blurring effect above mentioned may be very slight, still it does occur, and it makes the picture hard on the eyes of the theatre patron—especially on such eyes as are very sensitive to such things.

I have found that pictures without any travel ghost at all are the exception, though it is true that in many theatres the ghost will be so slight that one must go down to the forward seats to see it.

A great many believe that such a small ghost does no harm, but such a conclusion is very erroneous and one which

The GOLDE Manumatic Changeover Shutter

With this non-electric, automatic, manually operated device, the problem of speedy, noiseless changeover is solved. Noiseless in operation and without electrical connection there is no noise to be picked up by the Movietone amplifier, transferred to the screen and kicked back at the audience with a bang and a boom. Simple to install—any projectionist can put on a pair in twenty minutes, without drilling, cutting or filling the mechanism. It fits any model Simplex, rear or front shutter type.

Nothing to get out of order—small first cost and no upkeep. Comes equipped with novel new tension pad release and special arrangement for quick and accurate framing.

EVIDENCE OF SLOPPY WORK

ON this trip I have had forced upon me substantial proof that there still is lacking that careful care in some of our theatre projection work which should obtain, and which must obtain if the best results are to be had on the screen, and the maximum box office receipts realized.

At each meeting I have had projected about 300 feet of film of a talking picture very generously made by President William Canavan for the purpose of recommending the lecture and introducing my "umble self to audiences.

Now we would naturally presume that even if a man were disposed to be a bit careless with ordinary film, he would most certainly be very careful indeed when projecting the speaking image of the International President of the IA TSE & MPMO. He would surely see to it that that particular film sustained no damage, yet for many yards a scratch mark has been made directly over President Canavan's face, and I have already had to have the oil cleaned off the film three times, and it right now is in need of another cleaning.

The scratch mark is due to the fact that some projectionist was too careless or lazy to examine the projector film track to make sure nothing adhered thereto at any point which would or could scratch the film. It was not made in rewinding. It is too long for that.

As to the oil smearing, well you may form your own opinion. I will merely remark that if I found myself unable to prevent oil getting on the films, regardless of oil well leakage, I would resign and take up some line of human endeavor requiring less knowledge and skill.

It seems to me that the oil should be handled and disagreeable to write thus. But it also is exceedingly disagreeable and harmful for films to be oil-smeared, as they so often are. There is no excuse for it. Men who know their business can prevent it. Men who both know and attend to their business will and do prevent it. Exemplary care should be ashamed of themselves. They can quickly put a stop to oil on film. They don't do it. They have no manner of right to ship out oil-smeared film to a theatre, but they do it! Some projectionists, finding that no penalty is suffered for permitting oil to get on film, just let 'em smear. It requires some effort to keep the oil entirely off the films, but there is no penalty, hence they don't make the effort, and that, gentlemen, is something to be thoroughly ashamed of.

Many men who pull this sort of sloppy stuff should be ashamed union men. They are nothing of the sort, for the very simple reason that a good union man, merely in order to save himself a little labor and trouble, would not do something which he very well knows will injure the show projected by his fellow union man who must use those films afterward.

Incidentally, my brother, being a good union man, means something besides paying your dues, wearing an I A button and bragging about your Unionism. It means also that regardless of the amount of work involved, you will perform your various duties in the very best possible manner. If you cause unnecessary damage to the films—and unnecessary damage most emphatically includes smearing them with oil—you have been just as untrue to union principles as you would be did you work under the scale. That is a statement which many of you will vociferously dispute. However, your dis-putations will not alter the fact—and what I have said is cold fact, though some union men have not taught themselves or been taught to look upon it in that light.

I am laying that matter before you, gentlemen, because you will be supplied with oil-smereed film I find it is about time it was laid before you. I don’t care two whoops in New Jerusalem how much your intermittent oil well may leak. You can keep the oil off the film if you really try.

And certainly it is high time that each projectionist was trying.

DEFACING PRINTS

From B. H. Higgins, projectionist at the Princess theatre in St. Marys, Kan., comes this letter: “Dear Mr. Richardson: With regard to the letter from Mr. Hersey, projectionist of Elsinore, Cal. (titled ‘Pro-jectionist—Operator’), in the issue of September 27, he certainly hit the nail on the head in what he said about marking, scratching or otherwise defacing film for the purpose of imprints upon it a changeover signal.

“My own reaction to this is that every exchange should charge the theatre perpetrating such an outrage for the damage done. If that be done, there will be less damage of that sort perpetrated.

“We (my father and I) are away out here, one hundred miles from any film exchange, and we ought to see the prints we sometimes receive. We have found a way to cure the habit some exchanges have of sending out anything that looks like a picture and letting us do the rest. We refuse such prints, and of course they are compelled to send replacements, prepaid, which is something they just love to do—I don’t think!

“Several times I have started to save some of the things I have cut out of films, to send them to you, just to give you an idea of what they work off on us when they feel like it. I am going to do it some time, too, and that before long.

“I do not know whether I stole Brother...”

Hersey's way of marking film, or whether it is possible that two 'great minds work in the same direction.' anyhow, it took me a long time to discover that a china marking pencil is the best thing for the purpose, because you can rub your mark off, thus leaving the film clean for the next projectionist.

"I place a short pencil mark near the bottom of about three alternate frames, or if the lower part of the frames at the right point are very dense, then I place them elsewhere in a more transparent part of the print. That is all there is to it, and it works out very well, without any damage being done to the film itself, because before packing the films for return, I wipe the marks off.

"We take great pride in our theatre and I try very hard to put the very best possible results on the screen, but what in the world can a man do with defaced prints? In the days of silent film we could cut out the bad spots and get by fairly well but with sound that cannot be done."

This department is, of course, entirely in accord with Brother Higgins’ objection to defaced film. It also is in accord with his suggestion that the exchange charge the theatre for damage done by machine operators who scratch holes in the emulsion, or who otherwise permanently deface the film for the purpose of making changing film. If all theatres would refuse to accept damaged prints—and they cannot do otherwise and be honest with their patrons—exchanges would very quickly stop sending out prints in the wretched condition some of them still sometimes do send out.

However, while the china marking pencil idea, as against scratch marks, is a very great improvement, still a better device than that is the cue sheet, which is not at all hard to make once the projectionist becomes accustomed to doing it. During the first projection, the projectionist should watch closely at the end of each reel, selecting some particular point at which the changeover should be made. (For instance: Gloria Swan-son sets down in chair by well.)

The trouble with this, however, is that the changeover mark is easier, and most men are not going to do any more work than they have to. If the projectionist really does his full and complete duty and puts on the best show it is possible to put on with the equipment and the film supplied, that projectionist is going to be pretty reasonably busy—and I don’t mean maybe. However, it is well to remember that the projectionist of today is receiving from three to eight times what the projectionist received in the days when he was the “motor” as well as the projectionist, and it’s not going to do him any particular harm really to work during the relatively short period he is on duty.

Now, don’t for an instant imagine I am always friendly. I most emphatically am not! I am merely citing the facts, as I see them, in a matter that is of interest and importance to us all.

Most Excellent Action

Recently during my visit to a certain city, the business representa-tive of the local union of which I was the guest, related this circumstance during a conversation regarding the need for projectionists to study their business:

“I certainly do believe our men should study,” he said. “I also am of the opinion that lack of study means inefficient work, which is, of course, bad for the union itself. Many men think that if they have a union card, that is quite sufficient and all they need. We had a member who was incompetent. We put him in job after job and he always got fired. Finally he left town and was gone three years but as he always kept his dues paid up, we carried him on the rolls as a member in good standing.

Finally he came back, and at a time when we had three very competent perm-it men working, I talked with him and soon found he was just as he always had been. He proposed that I take one of the permit men off and put him to work. This I promptly refused to do, whereupon he demanded whether his card was good or not.

“I told him his card was not good enough to cause me to throw a good man out of work in order to put a notoriously poor man in his place, whereupon he told me what he would do about it. But at the next meeting the local sustained me in my position, and he faded out of the picture.”

That, gentlemen, is pretty nearly exactly the words used by this business representative in describing the incident to me, and I here and now make the point blank assertion that I most sincerely wish we had more business agents with such a viewpoint and sufficient stamina to do likewise. I also wish that all locals would take the enlightened, advanced stand this one did.

It is very true that conditions are such that it is not always possible for a local to refuse membership to applicants who are not fully equipped with knowledge, but certainly it is very possible, once admitted, to place them in the less desirable jobs until such time as they have remedied their defect, or at least made some real progress in that direction.

Inefficient work is bad enough now. Wide film is coming and when it arrives, inefficiency then will be a very much more costly thing to the exhibitor. Indeed, I believe wide film will set up a condition in which the man who lacks knowledge in matters technical will be found to be incapable of coping with the situation.

THREE QUESTIONS

FROM John E. Allen of West Webster, N. Y., comes the following letter:

"Dear Mr. Richardson: Here's a letter from a somewhat intermittent reader of your pages in the Herald-World. Perhaps it is because of my not reading your articles more often that I have to pop these questions to you, but the Herald-World is in great demand around here and your articles are cut out before I get to it.

"We opened with sound last week, have a Synchronodisk outfit with a special Stromberg-Carlson amplifier and four Beacon directional horns that cover our 300-seat house perfectly. We have a rubber screen and have put two speakers on each side of the screen. In spite of the fact that the house was declared acoustically bad by engineers from the Victor company, we have used no padding or other preparations for the walls and the sound is as good as any I've yet heard. Now here are the questions:

"(1) Do you think that a monitor speaker is essential in the projection room? My projection room was equipped with one, but the incessant blat from it made it very confusing. I think the less confusion there is in the projection room the better off the projectionist is, so I cut mine out and eased my pictures as I did in the silent days, by action rather than sound. The results are good. I have a buzzer that is connected with the auditorium, and a system of rings for establishing the volume. However, I note that all the large theatres in Rochester have the monitor horns, and I want to have things right. Hence the question.

"(2) Can anything be done about the way producers and distributors send out there sound prints—on so many reels, I mean. We played Paramount's 'Virginian.' By actual measurement it was 8,029 feet long, yet it came to me on twelve reels, and one of them, the fifth, was only about 250 feet in length. I imagine the time a fellow has laying up his projector and trimming his area in the few minutes allowed by this extreme shortness! We still have the old fashioned are lights, too—those you adjust by hand.

"(3) I notice that all prints from Paramount for our disc equipment carry a sound track. What is the best way to tackle the problem of masking this off? Whatever I do like this must be done by myself. Little cooperation from friend manager. He doesn't seem to care whether it shows or not, but for me it spoils the whole picture, and I believe that it does distract the attention of the audience.

"I'm just learning the projection business. I've projected for six years, I'm 20 years old now. There is a heck of a lot that I don't know. I've always made enough from this work to help a lot in paying for my education and I'd like to go into it as a regular thing, but it sure is hard to make the union in Rochester. They offer no encouragement at all. Of course I don't blame them. Times are hard and theatres are closing up, but I think that if I learn all that I can I'll get a chance sometime. Mr. Lewis Townsend, who was chief projectionist at the Eastman theatre in Rochester, says that there is a lot of room in this field yet. Do you think that it is an opportune move on my part to plan on entering it?

"I hope that all this hasn't bothered you too much and take this opportunity to thank you in advance for the information."

I, myself, am not, and never have been, so very certain as to the value of a monitor horn. My own view is that it would be far better if some sort of a speaking horn arrangement be run from the horns themselves to the projection room. That would, it seems to me, be not at all difficult to do, nor a very expensive one either. It need be only a sheet metal pipe, perhaps two inches in diameter, which could be run either through the basement or over the ceiling. It could be joined to the horns by means of a rubber hose attachment and could end in the projection room in a mouthpiece so that the projectionist could listen to the sound at any time he wished to, without the annoyance of the continual blaa-blaa-blaa of a horn located in the room. I don't know through just what length of pipe sound would be most distinct, but I do know that one time when I was engineer at a coal mine, I ran a two-inch iron pipe more than 200 feet and used it as a speaking tube. It had one right angle bend and worked perfectly. I agree with Friend Allen, that the monitor horn is more or less of an infernal nuisance. I merely offer the foregoing as one possible satisfactory substitute.

As to the second question, there is, in my judgment, no good reason for sending out reels as short as those referred to. They are a nuisance to the projectionist, and as far as I am able to understand, they serve no really good purpose. With the projection room properly ventilated, so that all smoke and gas will be carried away in case of fire, it seems to me that there is no objection to the 2,000-foot reel which overbalances its many advantages. I do not believe the 2,000-foot reel should be discarded, if it is possible to retain it. Of course, it must be remembered that the length of a reel is now partly dictated by the considerations of disc recording. With discs there is not only a changeover of film, but a separate changeover of sound record, and the disc record is made to end at the most advantageous place.

With regard to question three, the only thing one could do would be to install a narrow cloth curtain on the left side to match the screen border in color, so arranged that it can be moved in and out. A manager certainly should cooperate with the projectionist in a matter of this kind. One is very much in error in supposing that that blank strip of screen at the side does not detract very much from the beauty of the picture, and anything that does that, affects the box office unfavorably.

Brother Townsend is right—there is still plenty of room in almost every field of human endeavor, but it is a mighty hard time to “bust” into anything right now. The Rochester union doubtless has men out of work, and those men live in Rochester. The union naturally feels that it has a right to the jobs in Rochester, and it has, provided the men be thoroughly capable men who respect their profession, study their business and try to get the best possible results on the screen and in the house. If the union has men who are not in that class—well, that is another story. I hope, however, that it has no such members in its organization.

VARIUS THINGS

JOSEPH PLAZA writes from Oceanport, N. J., as follows:

“Dear Mr. Richardson: Many thanks for the sample of Grandeur film you sent me. Some day, Brother Richardson, I hope to be a great big man like yourself. I am studying hard to that end. I have the Bluebook, which certainly is worth far more than the price I paid for it. And now for a few questions:

“My picture seems to have a great deal of flicker. I use Simplex projectors, with D. C. at the arc. Use a two-wing shutter which I made myself from cardboard. Current is taken through a mercury arc rectifier. I am using 22 amperes at the arc, which latter is perfectly steady. What can I do to eliminate the flicker?

“Secondly, suppose you were going to change a reflector arc lamp which employed a condenser to a straight reflector arc lamp—that is to say, you were going to eliminate the condenser. How would you determine the right kind of reflector to use?

“Thirdly, what kind of cement do they use on the double-bearing intermittent to keep the oil from leaking out? What would you do if the oil leaked out of the glass oil sides?”

(In the first place, Brother Plaza, you gave me quite a laugh when you said you wanted to be a “great big man like me.” If you mean physically, all right! I’m six feet tall and weigh 230—about. Otherwise, I’m not particularly “big.” I only claim to be one of those chaps who has tried through many years to do the best he could. Quite a number seem to think my work has considerable merit. Maybe it has, but I wish it might have been a whole lot better.)

One of the finest possible things in any man’s life is the desire to advance in knowledge and in excellence of performance. If he has no such desire, then he certainly will never get very far.
The First Projectionists' Union? Here Are New Orleans' Credentials

OWN in the city of New Orleans, I was told by members of local 295, that it was the oldest motion picture projectionists' organization in these United States of America. I questioned this statement, believing that while it was made in good faith, the New Orleans men were nevertheless in error, especially when they told me that the New Orleans union was organized in 1908. It seemed to me other unions had been organized prior to that, notably the one in Chicago, where I was working as projectionist during that year. My doubts were set at rest, however, when E. M. Snyder went home and dug up the two working cards which are herewith submitted for your consideration so you can judge for yourself whether or not Snyder is supported in his contention.

You will take notice that the first card bears the name, "International Brotherhood of Electric Picture and Projection Machine Operators." It is probable that in a cut the seal will be invisible, but it is nevertheless there and reads, "I A T S E Branch Number 1 Moving Picture Operators Union, New Orleans, La. Organized January 1, 1908." The second card bears the same seal, but you will observe the name has been altered. It reads, "New Orleans Motion Picture Operators, Branch one, I A T S E." However, on the cover of the card case, the following appears, "M & P M O, New Orleans Local Number one, Branch of the I A T S E."

There, gentlemen, conversation is all right, but it really seems to me that these cards settle the matter, insofar as has to do with what projectionists' union the I A T S E chartered first. Anyway, it will be interesting to see now what you other men have to say about it.

Brother Snyder was good enough to loan me these cards for publication, an act of courtesy which your editor and I am sure, the thousands of our readers will appreciate. Friend Snyder is now stage manager in one of the big New Orleans theatres.

or leave any "footprints on the sands of time" that won't be washed away very soon and very completely, As to Brother Plaza's questions: Friend Daughter succeeded in deciphering part of the first one, which reads, "I made a cardboard shutter and cut two squares about 2½x2 inches each, off the blades, substituting therefor a couple of pieces of perforated sound screen."

If Plaza is using 22 amperes of current with a Peerless lamp, and is getting a bad flicker, either he is showing silent pictures and running at a low projection speed, or else there is something radically wrong with his shutter. However, flicker tendency also depends to a considerable extent upon the brilliancy of illumination of the screen. The more brilliant the illumination, the greater the flicker tendency at any given projection speed. I would suggest that Plaza order from the Simplex people, a three-wing shutter blade and try it out—that is to say, if the cardboard shutter has the same proportions as the regular two-wing shutter that comes with the Simplex. If, however, he has altered the dimensions (width) of the cardboard shutter blades, as compared with the regular shutter blades, then I can offer no advice until I know exactly what has been done. A small alteration in the width of shutter blades may have quite an effect on flicker tendency.

If I were going to eliminate the condenser, I would consult the maker of the lamp, asking him to send the proper reflector, provided he can supply one that will fit the carrier. As a matter of fact, I doubt the advisability of attempting that sort of stunt, I think, though some projectionists have reported excellent results by using one of the reflectors made for a Strong lamp in the smaller type of Peerless. I am under the impression that in doing this the condenser is eliminated, but of that I am not sure. (Will some of the men who have pulled this stunt be good enough to make a report?)

As to the last question, the only "cement" used, as far as I know, is a good heavy brown shellac. One should remove the cap, clean it very thoroughly, apply the shellac with a brush, put the cap in place and tighten it down quickly, remembering that shellac sets very rapidly. If oil comes out around the edges of the glass in the oil sight window, I would remove the intermittent movement from the projector, clean the glass and the surrounding metal very thoroughly, wash it off with benzine or gasoline, then flow some heavy duco varnish around the edge where the glass contacts with the metal. One should let this set good and hard and probably there will be no further trouble.

GREASY FILM

IN the great city of New Orleans, A. S. Johnstone, president of local No. 295, and I had a pow wow of considerable magnitude. Incidentally, I am not handing out undeserved bouquets when I say that Brother Johnstone impresses me as a very capable man and one whom the international officers might give considerable consideration to when offices are handed out. He impresses me as the type of man needed, both in projection rooms and in A executive positions.

President Johnstone is on the projection staff of the Saenger (Publix) Tudor theatre. He has just set before me details of a condition recently encountered in that theatre and all too often met with in other theatres using first-run film. It is a condition against which the projectionist is almost altogether helpless.

Recently the Tudor received a print carrying sound on the film. On the sound band side of this film, that portion of the film passing under the pressure of the aperture tension shoes, was covered with some sort of gummy substance, which did not appear to be wax. It would even adhere to the fingers when they were pressed upon it. The other side of the film, the opposite sprocket hole track, was not thus coated. It was all right.

There is, of course, but one way to express the damage such a mess will cause. It will raise [deleted by censor] with the film, with screen results, with the sound, and will do the projectors themselves no especial good. Such a mess will leave a deposit upon the Simplex aperture plate tracks, or on the tension shoes of other projectors. As a matter of fact this was so bad that it made a deposit in the plate tracks and on the tension shoes. It will also leave a deposit on the sound gate, which will in all human probability, scratch the sound band. In this case it also made a deposit on the sound sprocket, the effect of which is, of course, very bad indeed.

It requires no Solomon to understand what will happen under such a condition. The picture did some sort of highland fling on the screen. The sound was like anything and everything it should not have been, and in addition was the damage done to the sound band and the film itself.

Now, gentlemen, that sort of thing is outrageous. It happens altogether too often. It is too bad that I am unable to advise the producer as to exactly what print this instance deals with, because that company itself is injured by such work, through the carelessness or stupidity of the employee who permitted this print to be sent out in such a condition.

AN EXCLUSIVE FEATURE

The Ilex Standard Adjustable Lens permits the exact adjustment of the focal length to the individual screen size of the theatre in which it is installed, when within the equivalent focus range. This arrangement overcomes unsightly slopover or incomplete covering of the screen. Short focal lengths in the Standard Adjustable series are specially recommended for enlarged features and news events of the magnascope type.

Certainly the heads of producing corporations do not wish faulty prints to be released. It is not in the nature of things that they should, but they are at the mercy of employees, and employees are not always what they should be.

I suggest that each print be marked with some number, or in some other way, and that projectionists be invited to report to the producing corporation any faults found in the print. This would give the producer a chance to check up, ascertain exactly what employee is responsible for the print being sent out in faulty condition, and supply means for eliminating carelessness.

WANTED: A STEPLESS FADER

ONE of the really big faults found in sound technique in theatres is lack of means for sensitive control of volume. The "steps" in all the faders now in use are altogether too great. Many times the sound is too loud simply for the reason that if the next step were used it would be too low, or vice versa.

The thing that is needed is a stepless fader, and I believe such an instrument can be made. The two projectionists in British Columbia, referred to in a previous article, are using a device involving the "stepless" principle in connection with their monitoring horn.

Even if the engineers cannot devise some scheme for a stepless fader, they certainly can increase the number of present resistance units so that there will be many more steps. Of course such an instrument would be larger and some what more expensive, but as I have before said, the issue is not what the instrument costs (within reason, of course), but the relative excellence of the results produced. And certainly every projectionist will tell the engineer that better results would be produced if there were either no jumps at all, or less extensive ones.

I have many times sat in theatres and observed the projectionist produce decided jumps in volume in an endeavor to make up his mind which was best, the one above or the one below. Certainly that is not a pleasant effect, and the projectionist receives blame for something that is beyond his control.

May I suggest to the sound engineers that among the improvements in sound equipment to be made, stepless fader should be listed?

INSUFFICIENT SCREEN ILLUMINATION

BEN BRINCK of West Point, la., writes, "In one of my theatres I am having difficulty in securing sufficient screen illumination. At this particular theatre the projection distance is 47 feet. Am using a silver screen. The light source is a 900-watt mazda lamp. The projection lens is 2½ inches EF. It is an old lens and I am wondering if the trouble doesn't lie in it. I can get plenty of light to the aperture plate, but beyond that it seems to get lost. Thought possibly if I would get a pair of Cinephor lenses it might cure the trouble. However, I will let you solve the matter for me."

As to getting plenty of light to the aperture plate, and not enough beyond it, the trouble would seem to lie in one of two sources; first, size of the spot; second, the diameter of the light beam at the point where it meets the lens with relation to the diameter of the projection lens itself.

Light is lost with rather amazing rapidity as the diameter of the spot is increased. I haven't the figures with me, but as I remember it, with an inch-and-a-half spot—that is to say, a spot one and one-half inches in diameter—something in excess of 50% of the light is lost.

However, that applies only to the arc light source. The mazda light source spot is very different. I am 3,000 miles from my office and have not the "dope" on that particular thing available. But regardless of what the light source may be, the spot should be kept just as small as it is possible to keep it and have pure white light on the screen.

As to the diameter of the light beam where it meets the lens, draw a black circle of equal diameter with the free diameter of the rear lens of your projection lens on ordinary white writing paper. Measure the distance of the aperture from the rear surface of your projection lens. The picture is in focus on the screen. Remove the projection lens and hold the paper a distance from the aperture exactly equal to the distance the lens was from the aperture. Block the fire shutter up, light your mazda and looking in through the hole where the lens was. You can instantly see whether or not all the light enters the lens. If the light beam has equal or less diameter than the black circle, then there is no light loss there. If the contrary condition obtains, then there is light loss, and you need a lens of larger diameter.

I am glad to have projectionists troubles left to me, as Brother Brinck puts it, but just now I am not as able as I should be to give those troubles proper attention. This traveling around the country (as I have been doing all summer, lecturing before projection organizations), hasn't given me the time and the materials to be thorough. However, it won't be long now, for I am back to the place I shall, for the time being, at least, call home and shall be properly equipped to serve you.
PLANNING THE THEATRE
A Department of Architectural Assistance Conducted

By PETER M. HULSKEN, A.I.A.

QUESTION: I received your letter of September 17, and am very grateful for your offer to give me assistance and information.

My knowledge of the motion picture industry is very limited; hence, the details which I give are very incomplete. Probably it will at least give you a sufficient idea of the theatre I am planning, however. I would like for you to outline the establishment and operation costs of a theatre of the following description:

Seating capacity, 1,500; adequate theatre service, sufficient advertisement, complete sound system, with two projectors; adequate lighting facilities, good ventilating, cooling and heating systems; miscellaneous theatre equipment [other items here submitted refer to non-architectural matters and have been answered directly] no orchestra, no vaudeville, all other equipment necessary for the successful operation of a modern up-to-date theatre.

The kind of theatre which I am trying to describe is a facsimile of a theatre here. I don’t know whether this information will help you to compile the desired information, but the theatre is exactly the type of theatre I want to establish.

Also, I would like to see the difference in costs if I should build a theatre in a town where this is no other theatre.—F. W. G.

ANSWER: The answers to your different questions in regard to operating cost equipment and income will be, or have been, answered directly by the heads of those different departments.

As I understand it, you are interested in a 1,500-seat house, and I am really sorry that I am not familiar with the theatre which you describe, the more because you state that this theatre is exactly the kind that you want to duplicate.

There is absolutely no difference in cost if you build a theatre in a town where there is no other house located, as that does not have anything to do with the cost of building construction.

The cost of a 1,500-seat theatre varies to a great extent and mostly depends on the design and material used.

If I understand you correctly, I believe that you wish to know the most economical cost of a theatre seating 1,500 seats. I am going to describe some theatres with which I am quite familiar and which were built at a very economical cost, and you can see whether the type of these buildings on general description equals the theatre which you describe in your letter.

I have in mind a theatre built of absolute fireproof construction, nice ornamental lobby with tile floor, ornate ceiling, poster cabinets, etc., two or three store rooms according to the width of the theatre with basements, office space on the second floor, foyer with women’s and men’s rest rooms, check room and manager’s office, main auditorium seating 1,100 to 1,200 seats, stage and gridiron with dressing rooms underneath, a balcony with seating capacity of from 300 to 400 seats. Theatre designed in an atmospheric or classical or modernistic type. The front part of the building is in face brick with terra cotta trim. There will be an air cooling system, heating and ventilating system and high grade plumbing according to the various state codes. The marquee will have attractive signs.

A theatre like that can be built for between $120,000 and $150,000, as a minimum basis. Should you not care to have a stage and make it a strictly picture house, your cost can be reduced considerably.

These questions do not include seats and booth equipment or furniture and stage equipment. Of course, the size of your lot will have something to do with the cost. To build on a lot from 80 to 90 feet will be more economical than on a lot 60 feet wide.

NOTE:

- IN THIS DEPARTMENT “Better Theatres” will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary considerations involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to “Better Theatres,” 407 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago. The answers will be prepared personally by Mr. Hulskken, who is a practicing architect and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

QUESTION: At present I own a dance and skating pavilion in a town of about 400 population; it is a real live small town. I would like to convert this building into a talkie theatre. It is built of brick and tile with composition roof and maple floor. The inside dimensions are 50x70 feet, with a 13-foot ceiling. I have the ceiling treated with sound absorbing material, never has been painted. I would like to make a modern small town theatre out of this building.

The building would have to be rebuilt somewhat, and I would have to buy all the talkie equipment and inside furnishings. I would be willing to spend from $5,000 to $5,000 on the project, besides the monthly installments for the talkie system. About what do you think it would cost me to make a modern theatre out of this, with heating and cooling systems, rugs, decorations, etc? Would a 13-foot ceiling be high enough? Please let me hear from you.—G. E. R.

ANSWER: The inside dimensions of your building, 50x70 feet, I do not think are too large for a modern theatre, but since your town has only a population of 400, I believe your present building could be transformed into a very cozy, intimate and up-to-date small house. It is too bad that the ceiling is only 13 feet high, which is not high enough, as there will be no difficulty in putting in a projection room and have space underneath for a foyer. I do not know how your roof is constructed, but I presume the roof joists are carried on roof trusses. The contractor may be able to jack up your roof, say from about 4 feet to 5 feet, but I hope that your first floor level is above the grade line so that you may be able to lower the entire first floor. If this is the existing condition, it would be a great deal to your advantage, as the floor should be sloped, anyway, toward the stage, and I do not think that a building used for the purpose of a skating pavilion has a basement underneath.

I am of the opinion that if you go about the remodeling in an economical way, you would be able to get your work done for about $5,000. This, however, does not include projection equipment.

There are on the market today some cooling units which sell for about $500 a unit, and which are splendidly adapted to a small theatre like yours and will give very satisfactory results.

nettled a profit, and the former stated that one of the partners and a relative of his were helping themselves to money out of the cash drawer. Starkey contended that he should not be held responsible for false statements of the broker because he was hired by the original purchaser of the theatre. However, in view of this testimony, the higher court cancelled the contract and held Swartz entitled to recover the $1,000 down payment, saying:

"It is evident that Will M. Starkey, at the time of the negotiations, knew that the theatre was heavily in debt, and that the purchaser had been unable to successfully operate it. While Mr. Butterfield (broker) was retained by the purchaser in an attempt to salvage something out of the wreck, the evidence clearly preponderates in favor of Swartz' contention that Starkey knew that at least some of the representations that Mr. Butterfield was making to Swartz to induce him to agree to purchase the theatre were false. . . . Will M. Starkey signed personally the receipt for this money and cannot now, in an action against him for the return thereof, shelter himself behind the fact that Mr. Butterfield (broker) was not primarily his agent."

In still another leading case, Williams v. Modern (282 P. 203), in an action by a purchaser for rescission of a contract based upon false representations and fraud by the seller, the court held that the seller was liable for false representations made by a person to whom the seller had referred the prospective purchaser for information.

LIABILITY OF SELLER IN FRAUD

A PERSON who has been induced to enter into a contract for the purchase of property by the false representations of the seller concerning the quantity or quality, may pursue either of three remedies: First, he may cancel the contract, and by returning, or offering to return, the property purchased within a reasonable time, entitle himself to recover whatever he has paid upon the contract. In the second place, he may elect to retain the property and sue for the damages he has sustained by reason of the false representations of the vendor as to the property; and in this event the measure of the damages would be: the difference between the real value of the property in its true condition and the price at which he purchased it. In the third place, to avoid a circusy of actions and a multiplicity of suits, he may plead such damages in an action for the purchase money, and is entitled to have the same recouped against the surety or endorsers.

An example of this phase of the law is illustrated by the outcome of the recent case of Held v. Mansur (28 S. W. 2d 204). In this case an owner of property represented to a prospective purchaser that it was dry. Afterward the purchaser discovered that during a rainy season the water flooded the property, and he sued to recover the difference between the purchase price and the actual value of the property. In holding the purchaser entitled to a recovery, the court stated the following important law:

"If the vendor (seller), having actual knowledge of the matter, or in reckless disregard of the truth induces the buyer to rely on his false statements, he will not be heard to say that the purchaser could have ascertained the truth. In the first place, the false representations relied upon may have caused the purchaser to forbear from making further inquiry; and in the second place, as is true in the present case, the purchaser may have lived in a distant state, and it was not practical for him to come to the county in which the land was situated and make an examination of it. . . . These cases all hold that, while ordinary statements of value of property are mere expressions of opinion on which the purchaser is not entitled to rely, yet statements of fact which affect the value of property, if false, and made for the purpose of inducing the purchaser to rely thereon, are false representations which will constitute fraud in law."

LIABILITY OF FIRM HEAD

UNLESS an agent, employe or official properly signs a contract intended to obligate an employer or corporation, the signer may be personally liable. So held the higher court in Drill Construction Company v. Rosenthal (151 Atl. 399). Here the firm declared that the contractor wrote to the president of a theatre corporation the following letter:

"Mr. Louis Rosenthal, 4 Main Street, Orange, N. J. Dear Sir: We propose to do the following work at the Colonial theatre, Orange, N. J.: First, . . . Then follows an itemized statement of the various repairs and construction work proposed to be done. . . . We will do this work at cost, plus ten per cent for overhead and ten per cent for profit, with the understanding that the final cost will not exceed $4,405. Very truly yours, Drill Construction Company, per Max Drill."

This letter was endorsed by Louis Rosenthal (president of the theatre corporation) as follows: "O. K., Louis Rosenthal."

It was conceded that the contractor did all the work and furnished all the materials specified in this letter, and that when he demanded payment from Rosenthal, such payment was refused by him on the ground that Rosenthal was not personally liable because he was not the president of the corporation and not personally liable because he was not the owner of the theatre premises. However, notwithstanding this contention, the court held Rosenthal personally liable, saying:

"The evidence adduced to be introduced was offered for the purpose of showing that Rosenthal acted as the agent of the Bieber Amusement Company and not as a principal in making the contract . . . . The fact that Rosenthal, the person to whom the offer was made and who personally accepted it, was not the owner of the theatre premises but was the president of the corporate owner, is immaterial. . . . An agent who contracts in such form as to make himself personally responsible cannot afterward relieve himself from that responsibility. . . . Where the body of the contract . . . is signed by him personally and not as agent or representative of the corporation, he is personally obligated to perform the contract."

LIABILITY OF EMPLOYEE

IT often has happened that an employe, or the official, of a corporation made himself personally responsible by the form of words in which he has expressed himself in a written contract, when he may have intended to bind his principal only.

In business, a person will always act in one of two capacities: First, in his personal capacity, whereby he binds himself; and, second, the capacity in which he stands for some civil interest other than his own individual interest. Usually an employe or official of a corporation is personally liable on any contract, note, or the like, which he signs in such a manner that an ordinary and prudent holder believes that he intended to bind himself. For illustration, in Charles Nelson Company v. Morton (288 Pac. 845), a note was signed as follows:

"Trustees of Greater San Francisco Speedway Association (a Trust) . . . Frew Morton, Pres. . . . "C. C. Loser, Sec."

Later the holder endeavored to hold Morton and Loser personally liable. However, since it was proved that when the note was delivered the holder knew that it was intended to obligate the "Speedway Association" exclusively, the court held Morton and Loser not personally liable, saying:

"The signature on its face is the signature of, and purports to bind, 'Trustees' and only the trustees, and not the individuals who compose the trustees; and under the findings of the court, this is precisely the sense in which the note was understood by the payee at the time it was executed and delivered."

The distinction between the personal and the representative capacity is emphasized also in Orpherts v. Smith (66 N. Y. S. 976). There a draft was drawn for goods purchased by a receiver authorized to carry on the business of a corporation. The draft was addressed, "To Receiver, Worcester Manufacturing Company," and when presented, was accepted by writing across the face these words, "Accepted, Frank Smith Sullivan, Receiver; Louis F. Wilson, Attorney."

The draft not being paid when due, suit was brought against the receiver personally. In holding the receiver not liable, the court said:

"We are therefore of the opinion that the defendant was expressly authorized to make the purchase, and that the Wilmot & Hobbs Manufacturing Company knew it was made by the defendant as receiver, and not individually, and with this knowledge, sold and delivered the merchandise to him and drew the draft in question, intending to give credit to the receivership alone."

Also, in another leading case (123 Mass. 148), the court had before it a note beginning, "We as trustees but not individually promise to pay," and signed by three individuals, opposite whose names was written the word, "Trustees." The makers acted as trustees of a business association known as Brookline Avenue Association, and in an action on the note the attempt was made to charge the trustees personally. In holding the trustees not liable this court said:

"It is to be borne in mind that this was not a case of agents acting for an undisclosed or unknown principal."

Officials' Liability to Creditors

Various courts have held that a stockholder or officer of a corporation is no more immune for his false representations, which result in a loss to one who relied upon the representations, than any other individual. In other words, the rules of common honesty and common sense apply alike to all persons, without regard to the capacity in which they act. Therefore, any official of a corporation is personally liable where the testimony proves that he used fraud to induce another to give credit to the corporation which later becomes insolvent. So held the higher court in Pacific v. Modern (290 Pac. 859).

The facts of this case are that a man named Hansen was president of a corporation. The manager rendered a false financial statement. Later the corporation became insolvent, and the creditors filed suit against both Kuehl, the manager, and Hansen for the amount due. It was shown that Kuehl had overestimated the assets of the corporation many thousands of dollars, and that Hansen, while not actively engaged in the conduct of the business, consulted daily with Kuehl and instructed him about the affairs of the business.

The lower court decided that the financial statement was made for the purpose of securing a line of credit; that it was made by and with the knowledge and consent of all the parties, and while it is true that Hansen was not actively par-

Is Your Theatre Up to Date and Ready for the Future?

Modern Motion Pictures need, for their most successful presentation, a screen of various picture sizes, automatically adjustable by the operator, to effectively portray the outstanding scenes of the picture. This new type of screen control is an absolute necessity for the showing of Magnascope, Grandeur, Spoor and Real-Life films, and will play an even more important role in the film developments of the future.

The PETER CLARK AUTOMATIC SCREEN ADJUSTOR fulfills all the demands of the present Motion Picture and has anticipated the needs of the future.

With over 200 successful installations to their credit, Peter Clark, Inc., are prepared to serve any theatre owner or manager who sees the trend of the times and desires to install a screen that will not only serve for the projection of any of the enlarged picture systems, but will also lend itself to almost instantaneous reduction to standard size pictures projected from 35 mm. film.

participating in the management of the business, yet he was the president of the corporation, owned practically all of the stock and that for these reasons, both Kuehl and Hansen were personally liable.

The higher court approved this verdict, stating the following important law:

"We think the record also fairly discloses that Mr. Hansen thoroughly understood the necessity of making a good showing on this so-called financial statement. . . . If the charges are true, the appellant has suffered a loss because it relied upon the respondents' (Kuehl and Hansen) representations as to material facts, which representations were false and known to be false when made."

Also, it is interesting to observe that in Schley v. Dixon (24 Ga. 275), it was held that it was a legal fraud for trustees of a corporation to make false official reports which prejudiced the rights of the creditors of the corporation.

On the other hand, in order that readers thoroughly understand the various phases of the law on this subject, it is well to know that no official of a corporation can be held personally liable for the corporation debts on the basis of a false financial statement, unless the testimony proves conclusively that the creditors relied exclusively upon the financial statement when extending the credit.

For instance, in the leading case of Cohn v. Broadhead (71 N. W. 747), a statement made by a mercantile agency, such as Dun's or Bradstreet's, contained not only positive statements of fact made by the official sought to be held liable, but also in addition contained estimates made and opinions given by the mercantile agency itself. Credit was extended on the basis of the entire statement and not solely on the fraudulent item made by the official. Therefore, since the creditor did not rely solely upon the official's false statement, when extending credit, the court held the corporation official not personally liable.

AGREEMENT TO REPAIR

Usually all reasonable provisions in a lease contract are valid and enforceable. This statement is particularly applicable to clauses which relate to repairs on theatre buildings.

For example, in Cote v. Landau (29 S. W. [2d] 224), it was disclosed that a person named Landau leased a theatre building for a period of nine years and three months, at a monthly rental of $200. The lease contained provisions that all necessary repairs to the interior of the premises should be made and paid for by Landau.

Controversy developed between Landau and the owner of the building over the fact that in April the theatre was closed by order of the fire marshal pending the making of repairs to the walls and exits. Landau contended that the bad condition of the building was from natural wear and decay, which rendered the building dangerous and unfit for the occupancy contemplated under the terms of the leasehold and that to render the premises fit for occupancy it was essential that the building be rebuilt.

The owner of the building sued Landau to recover the cost of the repairs and the rent during the period of the controversy.

It is interesting to observe that the court held Landau liable and explained that any reasonable provision in a lease contract is valid and therefore is enforceable.

OPERATING SHOW ON SUNDAY

Ordinarily the various higher courts in all states have upheld reasonable Sunday closing laws. Of course, any unreasonable law of this nature is invalid.

Also, it is important to know that the higher court will reverse the lower court's decision when the instructions to a jury do not conform with the law upon which the conviction is based.

For illustration, in Brockman v. State (28 S. W. [2d] 820), the manager of a theatre, and the operator of the picture machine were convicted of violating a Sunday closing law. The warrant, or indictment, charged that they were "the proprietors, agents and employees of a place of public amusement, to wit: what is commonly known as a picture show, etc. The testimony in this case sufficiently showed the employees to have been guilty of doing the thing charged, and it was shown that the manager was the manager of a picture show owned by the Paramount Picture Show Corporation.

In his charge to the jury the judge submitted the question of the guilt of the manager and operator "as agents and employees of the proprietor of a motion picture show."

Since it was shown that the state law provided that the owner of the theatre must be specified, the higher court reversed the lower court's verdict, which held the employees liable. The higher court said:

"It is elementary that the charge (of the court) should be confined to, and limited by, the allegations contained in the indictment. . . . The legislature has written in this statute that persons who are agents and employes . . . must be characterized as the agents and employes of some private person, or else agents and employes of some firm, corporation or company. In charging the offense in the language used as descriptive of the attitude of appellants, the learned trial judge fell into error. We know of no authority, and are cited to none, holding that to merely characterize the employee or principal as 'a motion picture show,' or as 'a place of public amusement,' describes any person, either natural or artificial."

EVIDENCE OF PRIOR CRIME

The general rule is that the law will not consider evidence that a person is guilty of a criminal act, because he has committed a crime similar to this at another time.

In other words, evidence that a person committed a crime at a particular time is not admissible to show that another crime was committed at another time, unless the two facts or occurrences are connected in some special way. This rule of the law is applicable in all cases involving trial of a person charged with a criminal act.

An example of this phase of the law is supplied by the recent case of Prymek v. Herink (289 Pa. 412). In this case it was shown that a person accused of arson confessed to burning a dance hall. Soon afterward a theatre building was burned and the same party was accused of this crime. However, the court refused to admit testimony relating to the confession of the previous crime, stating the following important law:

"Other similar acts may be shown when the evidence of malice is material, or when a course of conduct or dealing is in question, or in certain instances when a question of habit or custom is involved, or in a criminal case to show motive. Here the similar acts sought to be shown were many months later than that which formed the basis of the action on trial... It is sufficient to say it is not admissible under the general rule."

INJURY TO THIRD PARTY

Generally speaking, where a theatre owner, or amusement company, employs a general contractor to perform work on the theatre, the theatre owner is liable for injuries to the contractor's employees, if any control of the workmen is exercised by the theatre owner.

For illustration, in Fair Park Amusement Co. v. Kimbrough (129 So. 275), an amusement company employed a contractor, who hired a workman named Kimbrough to perform the work. The company reserved the right to direct and control the workman in the performance of his work. Also, Kimbrough was paid daily wages by the amusement company. He was injured while working and the amusement company attempted to avoid liability on the grounds that the employee was employed by the contractor. However, the court held the amusement company liable, saying:

"These are the essentials of the common-law relation of master and servant, and the evidence is without dispute that the workman was paid a daily wage for his services."

LIABILITY IN ASSAULT

A theatre owner who intentionally and maliciously inflicts bodily injuries on his employee occupies no better position than would a third party and when sued at law for damages he cannot plead either that the injury was accidental or that it arose out of the employment. By committing a felonious assault upon an employee the employer willfully severs the legal relation of master and servant and new products

. . . in the motion picture theatre field are naturally everlastingly interesting to motion picture theatre people. Much time and money is therefore spent in efforts to announce them, to describe them, so that motion picture people may keep abreast of the times.

Unbiased descriptions in the editorial columns of a publication form one example of the effort made to give this highly desirable information. But supplementing such reports are the advertisements. To give information concisely and accurately, a compromise of advertisements, and the wise buyer looks to them, too, for the information he needs about new product.

to a purchaser where the former misrepresents the value or other material facts regarding the property which he sells, causes the amount of damages allowable from a sale induced by fraudulent representation is the difference between actual value of theatre property when purchased and the value as represented by the seller.

For example, in Molnar v. Beriswell (171 N. Y. 150, 65 N. Y. 217) it was held that a prospective purchaser was induced to enter into a contract to purchase property by fraudulent representations with respect to the income derived from the property. Later, when the purchaser discovered the fraud, and misrepresentations, he sued the seller to recover the difference between the actual value of the property and the amount which he had paid for it. In holding the purchaser entitled to a recovery, the court said:

"The measure of damage in such cases is the difference between the actual value of the property and the price at which the property was sold and its value at that time."

THEATRE SALE CONTRACT

Contrary to the opinion of the majority of persons any person who fraudulently induces another to enter into a contract may be held liable in damages, and the other party may legally rescind the contract. An example of this point of law is found in Irwin v. Burgan (28 S. W. 5d 1017).

The facts in this case are that a theatre owner named Burgan sold his theatre to a man named Irwin, accepting $5,000 down and balance in notes. Soon afterward the construction of a new theatre was started in the same block. Irwin sued Burgan for rescission of the contract and requested the court to order Burgan to cancel the notes and pay back the $5,000 cash down payment made when the contract was completed.

The testimony was clear that Burgan represented to Irwin, in the negotiations for the sale and as an inducement therefor, that no competing theatre was in contemplation, so far as he knew. In view of this testimony, the court rendered a verdict in favor of Irwin.
Added Income

A department devoted to amusements and services which may be allied with the motion picture theatre—presenting ideas for their successful operation, comment on their equipment and supplies, and news of the people who make them.

Readers who are not just becoming acquainted with Better Theatres with this issue, will recognize that under the above heading a new department is making its debut. The reason for it lies, of course, in the developments all of us have noted in the motion picture theatre business during the last year or so, and more especially, during the last six months.

While it is the business of the motion picture theatre to present screen entertainment, occasionally augmented by stage and pit features, it has been found that exhibitors may pursue various other lines that combine well with theatre operation without sacrifice to the show and to the enhancement of his income.

To such activities—amusements and services which may be allied with the business of presenting motion picture entertainment—this department is devoted, and we shall discuss and comment concerning the products and people in these fields, descriptions of actual methods and stunts will be offered as sources of practicable ideas.

Let ‘Em Make Talksies of Themselves

Something new under the sun—just as there always will be, despite the axiom, which has been pretty well repudiated by now. This something new would seem to lend itself to adaptation to motion picture theatres as a form of auxiliary amusement, and therefore as a source of added income.

The interesting little innovation in question is self-recording of the voice—or, for that matter, of one’s self playing an instrument. A number of theatres are reported already to have taken advantage of this novelty and have installed equipment in a booth in the foyer for the benefit of patrons. It is plain that the growing interest in self-recording (which is somewhat analogous to the self-photographing which has become so popular) may be taken advantage of by exhibitors, inasmuch as the space required is not more than the average theatre could spare.

The possibilities seem considerable. The device could be used to amuse patrons who are waiting for seats, either with or without a charge other than the price of admission to the theatre. If no extra charge were made, the stunt could doubtless be turned into some very effective exploitation. In either case, the innovation seems capable of delivering extra profits to the exhibitor.

And here seems to be something that Young America might simply “eat up”

—recording themselves singing the theme song from the picture! There is equipment now on the market which requires only an ordinary telephone booth and an attendant. This equipment, which is put out by the Callophone Company, 222 Meree Street, New York, N. Y., includes high-grade amplifiers, besides all the other necessary apparatus for making a complete recording in two minutes. The records to be played, it is stated by this company, at from 25 cents to $1.50, depending on the size. It is possible for the theatre to advertise this activity as a free service, charging only for the records. The records are unbreakable.

The Callophone equipment can be bought and rented. It is stated that the same machine can be used, without any additional cost, for making announcements and for playing records as part of a lobby ballistic.

Miniature Golf—Great Help

That swift-growing form of amusement, miniature golf, is doing its bit for prosperity. Our attention has been called by Miniature Golf Courses of America, Inc., to the recent statement of J. S. Lockwood of the textile division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, saying that this unique pastime has brought about an added demand for cotton goods and has thus helped the cotton market. According to Mr. Lockwood, there are now 25,000 courses in the United States, with a value of over $125,000,000. Not only has there been little expenditure beyond the buying of the big, expensive game of golf helped out the markets in several lines of products, but, according to Mr. Lockwood, it has given employment to thousands in about a dozen trades.

Regarding the growing adaptation of miniature golf as an amusement enterprise allied with the motion picture theatre, either for commercial or promotional purposes, it is interesting to note the statement of the Butterfield circuit in Michigan. According to an announcement of this chain, the management expects the game to be a popular winter sport, hence several of its closed or poorly paying theatres may be equipped with golf layouts.

This circuit regards the course built with natural hazards for putting as the best, on the grounds that the average player only wants to keep up his putting during the winter. The statement declares, “a miniature golf course established in a good location, well heated and lighted, should be a paying venture.”

The company referred to above, Miniature Golf Courses of America, Inc., which has its headquarters at 41 E. 42nd Street, New York, N. Y., has designed a new layout especially for indoor use, and from the photographs, it resembles an outdoor course very closely and therefore would seem to retain most of the advantages of the outdoor layout.

MAGNASCOPE FRAME

Eliminate excessive weight, head and stage space—accomplished by removing objectionable mechanical equipment from the frame and placing it in the grid and side of stage where it belongs.

Do this and you have a simple, free operating magnascope frame, entirely fool-proof. Yes, it will fly in one complete unit. Either hand or electric operation.

Smaller frame both in height and width, less in weight, positive in operation is the new Channon magnascope frame. The price is within reason.

Send specifications giving size of both small and large pictures wanted and you will receive detailed information and price.

news and comment about products and people in the field of theatre equipment and supplies

Conducted by G. J. Reid

How he came to invent the Goldol changeover device, and why he devised it, are details recently described to us by M. H. Goldberg. Mr. Goldberg is president of the Golde Manufacturing Company of Chicago, makers of this projection accessory which is called the "Manumatic" changeover.

Wishing to devise something that would effect a smooth changeover rapidly with just the pushing of a lever placed in some handy place Goldberg at first began a series of experiments using electricity. He ultimately rejected electricity, he said, because he felt that electrical apparatus might give off radio waves that would set up stray noises in the sound channels. Fire hazard was another reason for his rejecting this. Also he feared that the necessary magnets and solenoids might stick at the wrong time. He finally decided to make his changeover device mechanical.

The changeover device was designed to be attached to the projector between the framing light shield, or rear shutter, and the fire shutter. It is contained in an oblong box with a black cracker finish, which is screwed on the projector head. Out of one end of the box projects a nickel-handled, while from the other end a very thin brass tube runs overhead to device identically the same attached to the other projector.

Light is let through for framing by pulling the lever out as it is pushed down. This holds the gate up without tripping the other shutter mechanism. When the frame is in position, the lever released, and the gate drops back, while the changeover automatically becomes ready to snap the gate open.

The operating lever has a pin through its inner end, and the pin catches on the hooked ends of two levers, which move the wire in the tube to trip the shutter on the other projector, and also to receive the action of the wire when the changeover is operated from the other projector.

Prior to bringing out his automatic changeover device, Mr. Goldberg invented a number of projection accessories now being widely used. One came soon after the appearance of sound-on-film recording, with its narrower frame. Mr. Goldberg's device, now well known as the Universal, is a device for changeable apertures on one unit. Other inventions of his are an automatic rewind, a framing light shield and a device for assuring true contacts in the lapping of carbon jaws.

A NEW VARIABLE GEAR

One of the recent designs in variable speed transmissions, and one said to be the first all-metal product of this kind on the market, is the P. I. V. (positive, infinitely variable) gear, a product of the Link-Belt Company of Chicago.

This new speed change unit consists of two pairs of wheels of the opposed conical disc type, between which a chain of unusual construction transmits power. On changing speed, the self-pitching chain rises in one set of wheels and descends in the other, so that while the input shaft connected to the motor, or other source of power, turns at constant speed, the output shaft is brought to the desired speed.

A feature of the P. I. V. gear is its use of a positive chain drive to transmit power. Radial teeth are cut in the conical faces of the driving discs, and the self-adjusting teeth projecting beyond the sides of the chain are arranged to engage positively the radial teeth of the discs.

The chain, which has been mentioned, is made up of a series of steel leaves, or links, with joints made of hardened steel pins, which turn in segmented bushings. It has no teeth on the inside surface of the cups or packs of hardened steel laminations, which extend through clots in the links at right angles to them, projecting about one-eighth of an inch at either side. Individual containers holding the packs of laminations, or slats, are secured in the openings of the metal slats.

The teeth on the discs are uniform in depth but widen from the center outward, being staggered relatively on each pair of wheels, so that the slats move back and forth into them to mesh correctly as the chain comes in contact with them, giving it the "self-pitching" feature. The slats are re-grouped within their containers at each engagement of the chain and wheels, the movement in engaging being completed before the load is applied.

An oil-tight housing covers all the elements of the gear, which are automatically splash-lubricated. The hardened steel wheel faces are mounted on cast iron hubs backed by all thrust bearings, and move axially on the shafts, which are mounted in radial ball bearings. A pair of pivotal levers operated through a hand control shaft, and left hand screw motion, controls the movement of the pairs of wheels together or apart. Initial chain tension is provided for by an external adjustment screw, and two hardened shoes, which ride lightly on both upper and lower faces of the chain, under constant spring pressure, maintain the operating tension at all of the ratio settings.

LIGHTING EQUIPMENT

The line of the Belson Manufacturing Company (Chicago), manufacturers of Bel-Sun-Lite lighting equipment and accessories for flood, trial and other types of illumination, is presented with the latest data on these products in a new catalog just issued.

The booklet presents Bel-Crome as a newly discovered alloy of chromium to be used as reflecting material at all indicated parts of Belson equipment. The kind of product treated are reflectors, lenses, borderlights, footlights, reflectors, striplights, stage lighting units, flood projectors, spotlights, exit and directional signs, louvre lights and also units for display lighting.

For this product is given all necessary information for selecting and ordering descriptive data, sizes, weight, models and prices. The booklet is profusely illustrated with diagrams and halftones.

ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT

A new and thoroughly catalog has just been issued by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company (East Pittsburgh, Pa.). This issue is its General Catalog, 1931-1932, containing 1,352 pages and describing and illustrating the great array of products put out by this company.

The catalog includes a complete listing of distribution apparatus, switchgear apparatus (except large oil circuit-breakers and power switchboards), lighting equipment, domestic appliances, gearing apparatus, and current-collecting devices; condensed listings of industrial and institutional apparatus, industrial heating apparatus and commercial cooking equipment; and descriptions of other products. Style numbers, assigned to pieces of standard apparatus to facilitate ordering and the classification of records, are given for the standard equipment listed.

An interesting feature of the new catalog is the "Instant Index," which appears on a two-page spread, printed on a heavy blue stock and placed in the center of the book. In this index, the 24 groups of equipment described in the catalog are listed in large bold type, and from the name of each group an arrow points to the index notch of the section of the book covering that equipment. Because all the groups thus listed can be noted at a glance, and because two large notches at the bottom of the pages make it easy to locate the "Instant Index," finding the information for which one is looking is greatly facilitated.
The Market for American Motion Picture Equipment in the Far East

[The following is a compilation of reports on the markets in Asia for American motion picture equipment, following a survey conducted by the U. S. Department of Commerce. The reports began in the August 23 issue. The survey also included the markets of Africa and Oceania. This material on the Asiatic and African continent will complete presentation begun in Better Theatres over a year ago, when government reports on similar markets in Europe and South America were published. The compilation of the reports is by Nathan D. Golden, assistant chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce.]

Iraq (Continued)

Generators.—The possibilities for the sale of American generator sets for use in motion picture theatres in Iraq to convert alternating current to direct current is said to be nil. The Central Cinema of Baghdad, the Iraq Cinema of Baghdad, and the National Cinema of Baghdad all have their own Ruston Hornsby engines producing direct current of 110 volts and 120 amperes. The Depot Cinema at Hinaidi also has its own engine. The Basrah Cinema, the Royal Cinema at Ashbar, and the National Cinema at Mosul have generator sets which convert direct current of 220 volts to direct current 110 volts.

Arc lamps and screens.—High-intensity and mirror-reflector arc lamps are in use in some theatres in Iraq. The screens in use are cotton cloth. Until recently the Iraq Cinema had a whitewashed wall, but a cotton cloth screen was installed.

Visual education.—The only visual education attempted in Iraq so far consists of a collection of photographs showing the Arabic or Moorish architecture in Spain, brought in by Saty Beg al Hasri, who is now the head of the High Training College, and a collection of photographs of the works of great painters, brought from Paris by Mrs. Alma Kerr, principal of the Girls Training College. Motion picture projectors and worthwhile educational films might be a great help and will doubtless come in time.

Turkey

From report by Julian E. Gillespie, Istanbul

A s yet Turkey is a relatively small market for the sale of motion picture projectors and projection equipment, owing to the very small number of motion picture theatres in the country. It is estimated that the total number does not exceed 100, of which 25 are located in Istanbul. In that city there are five large theatres having a seating capacity of 800 to 1,200 each. All other motion picture theatres are much smaller in size.

1,741,215. SPEAKER. Roy J. Pomeroy, Hollywood, Cal., assignor of one-half to Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, Los Angeles, Cala, a Corporation of New York. Filed Aug. 9, 1927. Serial No. 211,633. 3 Claims. (Cl. 181—32.)

1. In television apparatus, a device having means for directing a beam of light through a scanning disk and a lens, means associated with said lens for directing the light emanating therefrom in any one of several directions comprising an arc on said device having an extension projecting to a point adjacent the outer end of said lens, and a mirror adjustably mounted on said extension in the field of view of said lens.

1. In apparatus for producing light variations in accordance with variations in a controlling current, the combination of a discharge lamp having means providing for a plurality of arcs therein in parallel, means supplying existing current for said arcs, and means for causing the controlling current to vary the relative distribution of existing current to said arcs.

1. In apparatus for producing light variations in accordance with sound variations recorded on a record, the combination of a lamp having means for providing an arc therein, means for supplying current to said arc, and means for varying the current in response to sound variations on said record.

1. In sound producing apparatus, the combination of a primary vibratory diaphragm flexibly supported so that in vibration the diaphragm moves substantially bodily, and an auxiliary vibratory diaphragm enclosing a space at one side of the primary diaphragm.

The prices quoted for other German makes are more or less in line with those quoted on Ernemann products. The French Gaumont projectors are stated to be sold at a slightly lower price.

In a general way, modern photographic apparatus has always had the reputation in Turkey of being the best, most precise, and most attractive, and to represent the latest achievements in technical perfection. Moreover, theatre owners consider them simpler to operate and that they run smoother and generally present a number of other advantages. American motion picture projectors are practically unknown on the market. It is reported that just after the war some four or five American projectors were imported, but it has not been possible to learn by whom they are being used at present, and what the reaction of their owners is with regard to their operation. One of the above American projectors is stated to have been sold at auction in the Turkish custom house for $150.

The consensus is that American projectors are too expensive for the market and, in addition, too complicated for the average operator in this country. Cheapness of price, solidity of construction, and simplicity of operation are the dominating factors in the sale of projectors in Turkey. It is believed by local dealers and theatre owners that American manufacturers of motion picture projectors would probably not be in a position to supply cheap and simple products similar to German projectors, and that in view of the few projector sales at the present time. American manufacturers would probably show little or no interest in entering the Turkish field. Furthermore, it is not believed that they would be disposed to make liberal arrangements with either an exclusive sales agent or an individual dealer.

In the event American manufacturers are interested in the Turkish market, and are able to furnish motion picture projectors and equipment competitive in price with German products, they should furnish a supply of adequate descriptive and illustrative literature, price lists covering the projectors and spare parts and equipment, and an outline of the most favorable agency, sales, and credit terms which they will allow.

In view of the fact that the total annual sales of projectors at present are only about ten to fifteen units, and that these sales are entirely of the German and French machines, it would be difficult to induce local agents or dealers to invest in American projectors which are unknown locally and which are considered to be expensive. However, if an expert, aggressive, reliable, and financially responsible agent or dealer were offered favorable consignment or credit terms, appropriate advertising allowances, and cooperative assistance by American manufacturers until American projectors become known and appreciated, it might be possible to arouse a certain interest in American products, especially in theatrical types. Practically all motion picture theatres in Turkey own and operate a single projector. There are four or five theatres which have two projectors. By far the greater proportion of the projectors used in the larger Istanbul theatres, as well as in the better establishments in the interior, are of the latest models. Late models are also used to a certain extent in second and third class theatres. A certain amount of second-hand equipment, which has been acquired from the larger local theatres and repaired, may be found in a number of small theatres both in Istanbul and in a number of towns in the interior.

Generators.—With the exception of Istanbul, which has the largest electric light and power plant in the country, only four or five other cities in the country have electric-generating plants. Motion picture theatres in towns where there is no electric plant have individual motor and dynamo installations for the production of their electric and lighting requirements.

The larger theatres in Istanbul and those towns which have central electric light and power plants convert the alternating current to direct current by means of generator sets, which are supplied largely by the Allgemeine Elektrizitäts-Gesellschaft, the Siemens-Schuckert Werke, and to a lesser extent by the Ganz company. The small and poor theatres operate to a great extent with the alternating city current, using cheap transformers merely to reduce the voltage to their own requirements. This procedure is due to the low purchasing power of owners of small theatres, who can not afford generator sets for conversion of alternating into direct current. This is, of course, objectionable.

The German generator sets are supplied from consignment stocks of the local branches of the German companies, which extend liberal credit and also sell their equipment to local theatre owners on installment plans. The German prod-

Seat Indicators

Through a misunderstanding, the Bilmarjae Corporation, manufacturers of seat indicators for theatres, was listed in the directory, Where the Buyer List in the Fall Buyer List of Better Theatres (October 25th issue), as the manufacturer of usher signal systems. This company does not deal in usher signal systems, its product being a patented seat indicating device and should have been listed accordingly. Better Theatres is happy to make this correction.

THE FINSBURY PARK ASTORIA is the fourth Theatre to be opened in the chain originally visualized by the Directorate two years ago. The Theatres already opened include the Brixton Astoria (August, 1929); the Old Kent Road Astoria (February, 1930); and the Streatham Astoria (June, 1930). To open four Theatres of the magnitude of the Astorias in just over twelve months is a record of which the Directorate are justifiably proud, while the success of the Theatres already opened is confirmation that the policy originally laid down and carried out was a wise one.

The policy of the Directorate is to provide:
(1) Theatres of Unequalled Size and Magnificence in suburban areas.
(2) Entertainment unexcelled by even West End of London Houses.
(3) Music by picked Orchestras and Grand Organs.
(4) Comfort, Courtesy, and Service.
(5) Strictly suburban prices.

THE ASTORIAS have been acknowledged by the Press of this country—and America—to be real super Theatres presenting super Entertainment in Pictures, Vaudeville, Stage Production, and Music, and the ideals which have proved so successful and acceptable will be continued.

The Directorate and Management are sincere in their endeavours to raise the standard of Entertainment and Entertaining, and the maintenance of their declared policy is accepted as a duty to the public they serve. A. SEGAL.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Supreme Court Decisions

LEADERS in motion picture trade circles see no occasion for the industry to become disturbed by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States to the effect that the arbitration provisions of the Uniform Exhibition Contract are in violation of the Sherman Act.

The new contract and arbitration proposals, drafted as a result of the 5-5-5 Conference and expected to be in operation within a year, were drawn with the thought in mind to conform with the practices approved by federal agencies.

M. A. Lightman, re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, informed the exhibitors at their convention in Philadelphia that the exhibitors' organization through its representatives at the 5-5-5 Conference had "offered many constructive thoughts and in most instances got what we wanted."

Abram F. Myers, president and counsel of the Allied States Association, while holding that the decision "has an important bearing on other activities of the producers," points out that "fortunately the way is left open for the solution of all problems by negotiation between the real parties of interest, such as was attempted in the 5-5-5 Conference."

Thus in the statements of the presidents of both national organizations of exhibitors there is found an indication of the conviction that the industry has no reason to be alarmed at the Supreme Court decision affirming the opinion of Federal Judge T. J. Thacher.

Even more conclusive is the fact that the industry has gone along with its steady progress on an even keel for the twelve months since the Thacher decree was handed down, a period in which the film business has been adapting itself to the stipulations of the decision while at the same time, by the 2-2-2 and then the 5-5-5 Conference, undertaking through its leaders to write a new instrument which will satisfy the changed conditions brought about by that decision.

It is to be expected that in a similar manner the industry also will approach the requirements of the United States Supreme Court decision that the Credit Committee system is unlawful. This opinion overrules the decision of Judge Thacher, who had held that the credit requirements of the distributors were not in restraint of trade. The Government in its argument had maintained that it was illegal to require that persons acquiring theatres, by purchase or otherwise, be responsible for the consummation of exhibition contracts entered into by the previous owners or operators.

While this ruling will require readjustment of the method of disposing of such contracts, leaders are confident that the industry will settle this problem to the mutual satisfaction of all branches concerned, as it has done with its major problems in the past.

It appears now that each distributing company must work out its own contractual regulations. One possible action as a result of the decision is a return to the deposit system.

A Notable Opportunity

THE theatre building program announced by Mr. Joseph M. Schenck for United Artists is of dimensions and character offering a notable opportunity for intensive development in motion picture theatre design.

Twenty-five new theatres are to be constructed. Such a number represents a broad field for architect and engineer to work in concertedly, pooling the special knowledge of each through project after project, experimenting with this idea and that, and in the solution of the aesthetic and utilitarian issues so dynamically involved in this highly specialized type of structure.

Then, each theatre is to seat in the neighborhood of 900 patrons, turning the course of theatre design in a direction opposite that which the development of the motion picture theatre has generally been conducted. The splendor of mere magnitude will be here ignored in an attempt to realize a more fundamental beauty, and because of the relatively small investment permitted per theatre, it is likely that function, rather than a mere architectural style, will dictate the forms by which that simpler idea of beauty shall be expressed.

Vision and audution—these are the predominant functional factors to which every aesthetic impulse of the designer must be subordinated. The physical comfort of patrons, achieved through a truly scientific method of air conditioning and (with justified emphasis) through ample spacing of chairs, is also of paramount functional importance. Only after these come "looks."

The time has also arrived for a new consideration of the problem of vision. Already we are preparing for the establishment of the wider screen image, and quite probably it may be taken for granted that United Artists will anticipate this innovation structurally in its new houses. Such preparation will give the architects and engineers an extraordinary opportunity to consider the reallocation of the projection room so that the angle of projection is reduced to a minimum—and preferably, of course, to zero. And they will also be able to confront auspiciously another readjustment that is invited, if not demanded, by the wider screen image—the reduction, both horizontally and vertically, of the angle of vision from the main floor.

As a program, therefore, the 25 theatres to be erected by United Artists by next August offer a splendid chance to place the motion picture theatre in an up-to-the-minute laboratory—a laboratory, if you please, of both science and art—out of which can come a series of buildings perfectly adapted to the process of presenting, with complete effectiveness, the new motion picture.

PLACING in practice the plan announced by M. E. Comerford at the exhibitors' national convention in Philadelphia for theatre cooperation in general industrial aid, the board of managers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania has made the commendable decision to donate the proceeds of a special matinee for the relief of unemployment.

If member units of the M P T O A should do likewise, the added good will only be more than repay them.
Return to Deposits Plan May Follow High Court’s Decisions

Will Decide Exhibitor Credit
By Individual Case, Says Hays

New Contract Conforms to Thacher Ruling, Declares
M P T O A—“Smashing Victory,” Asserts Myers

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Return to the deposit system in the contractual relation between motion picture distributor and exhibitor is seen in trade circles here as a possible result of the decisions handed down by the United States Supreme Court this week in holding illegal the arbitration clauses of the Uniform Contract and the Credit Committee arrangement.

The Hays Organization has under consideration whether or not to move for re-argument of the case. A sixty day period is allowed in which to take such action.

Means Individual Credit
Commenting on the court’s opinions, Will H. Hays, president of the M P T O A, said in a statement that “the new decision simply means that individual distributors will determine with individual exhibitors a system of credit in each case.” This was taken to mean that the individual companies may deem it necessary to require deposits on pictures in order to safeguard their interests.

Hays also declared that the decisions serve definitely to clarify the relationship between distributor and exhibitor as to both credits and arbitration.

Complaints Brought Uniform Contract
The deposit system was the source of constant complaint from exhibitors, complaints which eventually led to agreement upon the Uniform Contract, whereby the deposit requirements were eliminated.

There are many who believe that the return to the deposit system will be detrimental both to the distributor and to the exhibitor, especially the smaller theatre owner.

They point out that with deposits in force the field of production is opened to many mushroom companies employing high pressure salesmanship.

Another man asked: “If we return to deposits what is the exhibitor going to do who already is burdened with the cost of sound, many now having their theatres in hock?”

There has been some question as to the future of the Film Boards of Trade. It is definitely known that these will continue in operation as in the past for they represent the industry’s field force and their activities have become so diversified that arbitration was but a small entity in the scheme of things.

It was pointed out at the offices of the Hays organization that ever since the Thacher decision was handed down in October, 1929, holding the Uniform Contract and its arbitration provisions illegal, the forms of contract used by distributors have not contained a compulsory arbitration clause. A new standard license agreement, providing for voluntary arbitration, was agreed upon at the S-A conferences of the distributors and exhibitors. This proposed contract was officially indorsed at the M P T O A’s recent convention in Philadelphia.

Abraham F. Myers, president and counsel of Allied States Association, while declaring that the Supreme court action “has an important bearing on other activities of the producers,” stated that “fortunately the way is left open for the solution of all problems by negotiation.” He said that as a result of the rulings “the Hays Organization can no longer impose their arbitrary will on the exhibitors.”

The court decisions were read Monday by Justice McReynolds. The one on arbitration upheld former Judge Thacher’s ruling in federal court. The Supreme court opinion holding the Credit Committees unlawful was an overruling of Judge Thacher, who last fall had declared them legal.

Progress Being Made, Says Hays

Hays in his statement on the arbitration ruling said:

“The Supreme court affirmed the decision of Judge Thacher of the U. S. District court in New York which rendered a year ago last October. Since that time the industry has not operated under the plan questioned by Judge Thacher. Since then distributors and exhibitors have been developing a new system of voluntary arbitration to the end that the values of arbitration may be saved without including any compulsory provisions, and progress is being made in that direction.”

Of the ruling on the Credit Committees,

Blue Laws of Two States Face Legislative and Court Fights

Wisconsin Assemblyman Believes Next Senate Will Wipe Out 75-Year-Old Measure—Constitutionality of Vermont Sunday Closing Act Up to Supreme Court

Prediction that Wisconsin’s 75-year-old blue laws will be wiped out by the 1931 legislature, and action that will give Vermont’s Sunday closing law the acid test of a ruling on its constitutionality by the State Supreme Court, were two developments this week of more than unusual significance.

These developments follow the victory of the theatre men in California at whose November elections when the proposed Sunday closing bill was downed at the polls by 700,000 plurality, or six to one.

Assemblyman John W. Groeschmidt, of Wisconsin, who fought for repeal during the last session only to see the movement defeated in the senate, declares he believes the senate of the 1931 legislature will kill the measure.

The move in Vermont that brings the blue law before the supreme court of the state follows a protracted of arrests made in the last two or three weeks in connection with the operation of theatres on Sunday in Rutland, as well as the indoor golf courses. J. W. Mackay, manager of two theatres in Rutland, was arrested recently. In court last week it was decreed that the case be sent direct to the supreme court without jury trial in the lower courts. Mackay, since his arrest, has continued to operate on Sundays.

Mayo’s “Sunday Shows

(ALBANY, Nov. 28.—Advocates of Sunday motion picture shows scored a notable victory yesterday when the court, in Binghamton, affirmed last week, when the mayor signed an ordinance which will permit Sunday shows from now on. The mayor vetoed a similar ordinance last spring. Since that time his viewpoint apparently has changed.

Kentucky Theatre Cleared

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 28.—A jury in the Richmond police court has held that the Phoenix Amusement Company, of Lexington, makers of the Metropolitan theatre in Richmond, was not guilty of violating the State Sunday closing law by exhibiting moving pictures.

It was the third time a jury of that city had so decided.

New Ear Phone for Deaf Announced by RCA, Dictograph Co.

Newark Earphone, in collaboration with the Dictograph Products Company, perfected a device known as the “Acousticat Seatphone,” by which it is possible for people who are hard of hearing to hear sound motion pictures with ease.

It has been estimated that 10,000,000 persons have been lost to the motion picture theatre since the advent of talking films. indicating the interest which the announcement of the deaf phone has aroused, petitions have been circulated among the members of the New York League for the Hard of Hearing who have pledged themselves to bathe theatres which are equipped with the Acousticat Seatphone.

Similar petitions are understood to have been distributed in Boston, Albany, Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Washington and several smaller cities, with the total number of signatures put at 10,000.

The RKO Mayfair is one of the larger, Metropolitan theatres to be equipped with the new system.

Leon Roos Exhibits New 90-Pound Recording Set; Wafilms Will Handle It

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A new portable sound recording apparatus, which its sponsors believe is particularly well adapted to use in newsreel work, was demonstrated last week by the inventor, Leon R. Roos, at the Miles Projection rooms here.

Said to be the lightest and most reasonably priced outfit on the market, it weighs 90 pounds, and costs $4,250 complete. The apparatus, which is being marketed by Warfilms, records on film and of the variable density type. Either Mitchell or Bell & Howell cameras can be equipped to record sound with this machine, which is produced by the Tanar Corporation, of which Roos, the inventor, is vice president.

Individual Credit System for Each Exhibitor, Says Hays

the president of the M.P.A.D.A. declared: “In this decision a year ago, Judge Thacher upheld the industry’s practice in the operation of credit cards. This decision was reversed yesterday (Monday) by the Supreme court. The new decision simply means that individual distributors will determine whether exhibitors a system of credit in each case.”

The statement from the M.P.T.O.A. headquarters read:

“The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has been working in cooperation with the individual distributors and the Allied States organization in working out contractual and other arrangements which will be in conformity with the Thacher decision.

“All have agreed on a contract and this was approved at the national organization at Philadelphia. We have not received a complete copy of the Supreme court decree and cannot tell whether or not it makes any change in the Thacher decision.”

“Smashing Victory,” says Myers

Myers’ comment was as follows:

“The smashing victory won by the Government in the Arbitration Committee cases means that the producers acting through the Hayes organization can no longer impose their arbitrary will on the exhibitors.

“This is a complete vindication of the principles for which Allied States Associations stands, and has an important bearing on other activities of the producers. Fortunately the way is left open for the solution of problems between representatives of the real parties in interest, such as was attempted in the 5-5 Conference Cases.”

The New York Times, editorially, believes that all industries will read the decision with much concern. “Business men in branches of trade which have been treating their problems on a group basis will scan carefully every line of the decision of the Supreme court with a view to the operations of the film boards of trade and credit committees,” the editorial reads.

Coercion Ruled Aide in Credit Committee Plan

(Washington Correspondent of the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Arbitration provisions of the Uniform Contract and activities of the Credit Committees of the Fifth Boards of Trade are both in violation of the Sherman antitrust act. These rulings were handed down by the United States supreme court Monday in passing upon the appeal of the distributors on the arbitration matter and the appeal of the Government in the case of the Credit Committees.

Contentions of the Government that the arbitration provisions had “a necessary and inevitable tendency to produce material and unreasonable restraint of commerce” in violation of the Sherman act” were well based, according to the decision in that case.

Remanding the Credit Committee case to the court below for action in conformity with its decision finding their operations illegal, the supreme court asserted that the “credit system” of the Committee arrangement was to “cocere” certain exhibitors. The distributors had contended that the Credit Committee requirement that the purchase of the uncompleted contracts to avoid fraudulent transfer for the purpose of escaping responsibility under an unsatisfactory agreement for films.

Brisbane Thinks Film Industry Deserves Chance

In commenting upon the recent decision of the Supreme Court, which finds the 20 largest companies in the industry breaking the anti-trust law, Arthur Brisbane said in one of his columns:

“The Supreme Court knows. But let us hope that nothing will be done to destroy prosperity in this great industry, that destroys the world. Even if moving picture men are breaking the anti-trust law, which is more or less of the biggest companies in the industry, the public is entitled to remember that they are also breaking the hearts of competitors in France, Germany, England and all over the world.

“If we have something successful, like automobiles or movies, let us give it a chance.”

John Barrymore Recovers

HOLLYWOOD.—John Barrymore, who contracted jungle fever on a trip into the interior of Guatemala recently, has recovered and is proceeding on his cruise with his wife, Dolores Costello.

Will Someone Please Step in and Settle This?

Writing under the heading "Africa Is Collegiate," an editorialist in the Chicago Tribune slyly inquires whether African lion hunters get their ceremonies from football pep meetings in American colleges, or whether the pep meetings get them from the Africans.

The writer, evidently just back to his desk from a visit to a current motion picture, wonders if the "rah, rah" is not African and insists that "the college cheer leader is as natural as the leaping impala." If colleges didn't copy the ceremonies from the savages, then the savages must have gone "collegiate" listening to football broadcasts picked up on the chief's radio, he thinks.

Schenck Quits Studio Duties To Direct Circuit Expansion

Policy of Cooperation with Independents to Dictate Location of Houses Resulting from Fox Fight

(Special to The Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Out of United Artists' initial step in opposition to Fox West Coast Theatres—a theatre chain in California, Oregon and Washington for the showing of United Artists pictures—will grow a national string of houses, according to Joseph M. Schenck, head of the company. The Pacific Coast chain will consist of 25 theatres, an extension of the original 15 announced, all of which will be completed by August, 1931. This is a nucleus, however, of a more comprehensive system of theatres, which will operate throughout the United States and which will embrace the 20 theatres already operated by United Artists.

Schenck announced that he is abandoning his duties as head of the United Artists studios and that he will be succeeded by Samuel Goldwyn.

Goldwyn's production duties consist of making pictures, which are to be produced by the Art Cinema Corporation and four by Samuel Goldwyn Productions. Eleven other United Artists films on the 1931 program comprise one Douglas Fairbanks, one Mary Pickford, one Charlie Chaplin, three Roland West, three Howard Hughes-Caddo and one Gloria Swanson.

Lesser and Anger Assisting

Sol Lesser and Lou Anger are Schenck's chief aids in his campaign to erect a big Western theatre organization. Schenck will give his entire time to construction, distribution and financial problems. Lesser is devoting most of his time to choosing sites for the erection of houses.

Each of these will have 900 seats. The first two are to be built in Pasadena and Santa Ana, while six others will go up in nearby cities. Five will be in Los Angeles.

Negotiations are said to be underway with Harold B. Franklin, former head of Fox West Coast, who may link the new circuit he is organizing, with that of United Artists. Schenck refused to give any details in regard to these negotiations.

Schenck made it clear that United Artists will not build in opposition to any exhibitor who already shows United Artists pictures. He asked that the fact be emphasized that he wishes to cooperate with all independent exhibitors "in the interest of individual members."

Cost Up to $200,000

Schenck will spend all his time next year on the West Coast, supervising the chain as construction and development progresses. The cost of each theatre will be between $150,000 and $200,000, he said.

"For several years," Schenck declared, "United Artists has operated about 20 theatres in principal cities of the United States, but now we plan to build many theatres in smaller cities, and in smaller neighborhood in the larger ones."

"We plan to cooperate thoroughly with the independent exhibitor and do not intend to go into a territory where an independent has an adequate theatre. If an independent exhibitor in a certain territory has an old house with obsolete equipment, I hope to help him rebuild the house in partnership with him and build a new one.

"United Artists does not plan to sell any stock, the building program being financed with our own money. Fifty-one per cent of the stock of the new theatre company will be taken by the United Artists Company, the rest by individual members. Among the latter are Chaplin, Fairbanks, Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Goldwyn and myself." D. W. Griffith is another.

Caddo to Continue with UA

"Due to the vast expansion of the United Artists theatre building program," Schenck continued, "and the growth of the distribution organization, I have prevailed upon Samuel Goldwyn to take over all production activities of the Cinema Art Corporation. This will be in addition to Goldwyn's activities as producer for the United Artists Corporation. I will now be permitted to devote my entire time to the enlarged construction policy of the theatre expansion and the distribution organization. Goldwyn's remarkable success as producer assures the public and exhibitors of a high standard of entertainment."

Schenck disclosed that the proposed purchase by Howard Hughes of a block of stock never materialized, but that Hughes will continue to produce pictures for United Artists distribution. The production schedule calls for an expenditure of approximately $15,000,000 during the balance of this year and 1931. The theatres will be modernistic in design.
A CONVERSATION overheard in the lounge of one of Broadway's cinema emporiums might be considered illustrative of the public's reaction to the tendency of the theatres to take in sidelines for additional revenue. "Vending machines," said patron No. 1. "Yeh, an' sheet music," said No. 2. "And phonograph records," added No. 1. "And voice recorders," spoke up No. 2. "Everything but speakeasies in these theatres nowadays," said No. 1.

Lou Guimond is making the feathers fly in Joe Gallagher's advertising department at Columbia.

And speaking of Columbia, Joe Brandt thought he was a good picker of football winners until he got into the M G M pool.

With a major portion of the Warner-First National advertising and publicity staff now grinding out copy on the fourth floor of the home office, Al Zimbalist has that woe before look of lonesomeness.

The supreme court decision on arbitration and credit had Mrs. Parkhouse, C. C. Pettijohn's secretary, handling the boys of the press diplomatically.

It seems we can't get out of the Columbia office. The company this week had one block of Seventh avenue decorated with transcontinental buses bearing signs advertising "Tol'able David" at RKO's Mayfair.

Howard Dietz has returned to his desk from a much needed rest. Now it's Si Sedar's turn.

They may deny persistently the merger of RKO-Pathe but there is one merger within the two organizations that can't be denied and that is of the social life of the employees. Witness: The RKO-Pathe basketball and dance affair November 25. No significance, of course.

Congratulations to Charles Steele of Tiffany. It's his twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and in honor of it he and Mrs. Steele were presented with a 40-piece silver serving set by the company's employees.

Max proved a good salesman and vaudeville artist in conducting the Thanksgiving raffle at the Motion Picture Club. Turkeys, baskets of fruit and sweets, cocktail shakers and whatnot were raffled at 10 and 25 cents a throw. Some were lucky but we bought our bird.

Donald McDonald Ewing, an old pal of newspaper days and now in the Washington, D. C., office of the Hays organization, was in conferring with his chief during the week. And also discussing advertising problems with Frank Wistach.

Harry Reichenbach believes in speaking out in the open whether it hurts or not. Somebody's ears must have burned after his talk at Ampro. Others' chests expanded.

Let's hope you left the gizzard at least for the poor dog to chew on.

Hundred Musicians Get Work
As St. Louis Strike Is Ended

Thirty-Week Working Season
Is Guaranteed by Settlement

Fox and Ambassador Theatres Resume Stage Shows—Dispute Reached Climax September First

(ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—The musicians' strike is over. Settlement of the issue with musicians employed by the motion picture theatres of St. Louis was reached at a conference held in New York City November 24, by a delegation from the St. Louis local of the Musicians Union, headed by President Samuel P. Meyers, and national representatives of Warner Brothers, Publix, Fox, Loew's, and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Circuits.

Under the terms of the agreement 100 musicians are to be employed in the St. Louis theatres as follows: Ambassador, 27; Fox, 19; St. Louis, 13; Granada, 15; Missouri and Loew's State each, 12. The St. Louis Amusement Company in addition to those used at the Granada. According to Associated Press dispatches, the musicians are guaranteed a thirty-week working season.

Resume Stage Shows

Both the Fox and Ambassador theatres have announced they would resume their stage shows on Thanksgiving Day. While complete details of the New York agreement have not reached St. Louis, it is understood that all of the difficulties between the musicians and the management were ironed out satisfactorily for both sides and that peace will reign for at least another year.

Reached Climax September 1

The dispute this year reached a climax on September 1, when the contracts of the St. Louis and Fox theatres with the union expired. The theatres refused to accede to the demand that the status of the St. Louis theatre be changed from a vaudeville to a motion picture de luxe house, thus increasing its orchestra from 12 to 20 men. The union also sought to have the Fox increase its orchestra if stage shows were continued.

When the musicians failed to reach an agreement with the managers on September 1, the Skouras Theatres and the St. Louis Amusement company dispensed with the services of their musicians although their contracts with the union did not expire until September 19.

K. C. Non-Unionists
To Settle All Disputes

With Union by Law

{Special to the Herald-World
KANSAS CITY, Nov. 28.—Battles of the non-union Sound Projectionists Association with union men will be fought out only in the law courts, declares F. E. Burroughs, legal advisor to the organization.
Several suits are now pending against the local union, which is affiliated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Employees and the Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada. Charles Potter, owner of the Kansas City and St. Joseph, and suburban houses, filed suit November 18 against the union and the following of its officials: W. J. Croft, Mr. Meyers, Marion Randall, Jack Herrin, Marion Crawford and W. E. Higgins. The suit was filed in connection with the bombing of the Balts in October.

Burroughs has filed injunctions against the union, seeking to restrain it from picketing and placarding the Art, Gauntier and Pershing houses.

Photoplay Medal

Goes to "Disraeli"
As Best 1929 Film

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—"Disraeli," Warner Brothers picture starring George Arliss, has been awarded the gold medal by the Photoplay Magazine as the best motion picture picture released during 1929. This follows another medal award to George Arliss, by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which pronounced his performance in "Disraeli," the best individual portrayal of the year. A third medal was awarded the writer for the purity of his diction, by the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

The Photoplay award is said to be significant in that it represents the opinion of members of the picture going public, thousands of whom voted in the contest. The formal presentation of the medal to Warner Brothers will take place some time in December.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The Stanley Company of America, which is a subsidiary of Warner Brothers, which owns 99 per cent of the stock, reports a net profit for the year ended August 30 of $1,366,992. In addition to this there was a so-called intercompany profit of $5,926,138 from the sale of FN stock to Warner's.

What Could One Officer
Do In a Case Like This?

CO L UM B U S, 0 H I O, Nov. 28. — Exuberant over the winning of a football game, 50 students of the Ohio State University attempted to crash the gate at Loew's Palace recently. Eight of the students were arrested, Meniker was restrained to press charges. However, from now on, there is to be a policeman stationed at each theatre to care for small disturbances, according to Chief of Police French, but—what would one policeman do if those 50 students really wanted to get in?
Now Comes Plan to Unionize Models!
50,000 of 'Em in New York

Estimates Say 5,000 Are Used from Time to Time As Film Extras—
Would Seek to Regulate Wages and Overtime
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A union of models, of whom there are said to be about 50,000 in New York alone, to be known as the International Theatrical Art and Fashion Models' Union, is being formed under the leadership of Hugh Frayne, organizer for the A. F. of L., and Leo Le Claire of the International Stage Employees' Union.

It has been estimated that at least 10 per cent of the 50,000 girls employed, as models in the city are from time to time used as extras in film productions. The planned union, it was stated, would act as a centralized bureau where motion picture casting directors may find the extras they need without inconvenience.

Expect Free Employment Bureau

In this connection it is anticipated that a free employment bureau will be part of the organization, which not only will keep the members informed of positions with producing companies which are available at all times, but also will attempt to place models in positions with other industries requiring their services when the amusement field has little to offer.

Mrs. Mayme Angel will act as business agent for the new organization, which will have its headquarters at 251 West 42nd street here. Mrs. Angel was for ten years business representative of the Wardrobe Women's Union. Application already has been made to the American Federation of Labor for a union charter. A meeting will be held on December 2 at the headquarters to discuss further plans.

Would Regulate Wages, Hours

An initiation fee of $5 will be required, with monthly dues of 50 cents, but it is said these figures probably will be increased later. As part of its work, the new organization will seek to regulate wages and overtime for its members, though at no point in its constitution, it was understood, will it conflict with either chorus or Actor's Equity.

Cooperating in the effort to establish the new union are the leaders of allied organizations, including Francis E. Zisse, business agent of the International Photographers Union, and J. Austin of the Actors Equity Association. These two, with Mrs. Angel and Le Claire, will function as an organizing committee until the new union has been definitely established.

U. S. Navy to Install
300 Photophones
On Land and Sea

RCA Photophone will have more than 300 sound sets aboard United States war ships and in Navy shore stations and hospitals when the government contract is fulfilled.

Navy officials have announced that talking pictures will first be installed on the large battleships, with work to begin April 1, 1931. It is expected the entire job will be finished by January, 1932.

The contract, awarded to RCA sometime ago, originally called for only 250 installations, but the number has since been increased to include 20 battleships, 60 cruisers, 120 destroyers and a large number of Navy shore stations and hospitals throughout the world.

Training schools will be opened at the U. S. Navy yard in Brooklyn and at the Naval base at San Diego for instruction in the installation and operation of sound equipment. Another training school will be located on the Philippine Islands.

Present plans call for the schooling of 300 men in a six weeks to two months course. They will be tutored by RCA Photophone engineers.

British Movietone News
Films Taken 5,000 Miles
In Five Days from Africa

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Truman H. Talley, general manager of the Fox Hearst Corporation, in a letter to a member of his staff in New York, calls attention to the speed with which a British Movietone News plane brought to London the pictures of the coronation of Ras Tafari as Emperor of Ethiopia in Addis Ababa, East Africa.

The Emperor ascended his throne on November 2 and the British Movietone News presented the picture on November 7. Only 10 days later the same film was shown in the United States. The record flight, made by Captain W. Lawrence Hope, was accomplished in exactly five days, having covered 5,905 miles from Addis Ababa to Croyden, England.
One wouldn't think of Robert Elliot as a detective, but that is the part, a slow moving, sympathetic and relentless role, in which he is splendidly cast in Warner's "The Doorway to Hell."

A new and charming study of Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera star, who made her screen debut in MGM's "A Lady's Morals." She has recently completed work on "New Moon."

Bela Lugosi comes from the vampire land himself, and it is no wonder he was chosen to play the role of "Dracula" in Universal's picture by that title which is being directed by Tod Browning.

Frances Marion, writer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, being presented with the award given each year by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for the best story written. In this case it was "The Big House." Jack Cunningham, representing the writer's branch of the organization, presents the award.
Explanations and more explanations, but—no amount of explaining will bring back a life that's been frightened away by a piece of lead. Who did it, and why? This is one of the tense scenes in the Big 4 production, entitled, "The Breed of the West," which is soon to be released. In this picture, which has for a background for its rugged, outdoor action, the "old" West, is starred Wally Wales and Virginia Browne Faire.

Walter Huston, genial star of David Wark Griffith's, "Abraham Lincoln," a United Artists picture, arrives in New York enroute to Europe, where he plans to visit his friend, Eugene O'Neill, at his French castle.

Each camera study seems like a new and more charming Joan (if that is possible.) The lovely MGM star will be seen next in "Within the Law" under the direction of Sam Wood. It marks her dramatic debut.

$500 reward for—can't be these two happy gentlemen that the sheriff is apparently so eager to apprehend? The smiles look familiar, and so do the figures, but the change of heart, or rather, color, leaves us in some doubt. And so is the sheriff, from all appearances. Laurel and Hardy do a "bit of blackface" in the final reel of their first feature length Hal Roach-MGM comedy, entitled, "Their First Mistake."
Music with their meals and plenty of it, but somehow or other, the dulcet, "soup oily" strains don't seem to appeal to Lee Moran and James Bradbury, Jr. Just a quaint old Oriental custom where wooden bowls and wooden spoons never have to be polished. As for washing the dishes—well, we don't know about that. However, the scene is taken from the Educational-Ideal Comedy with apt title, "My Harem."

Pajamas and a bathrobe make an excellent habit for "motorizing," according to Joe E. Brown. Director William A. Seiter and Joe have a little fun in between scenes of "Going Wild," a First National picture.

"Now let me see. What is the best approach for this shot?" says Mr. Tiffany Chimp as he contemplates possible errors in his daily round of miniature golf. Scene from the Tiffany Chimp comedy "The Little Divorcee."

A rather dangerous game of hide-and-seek, and bare walls are no place to look for a hide-out. Edward G. Robinson looks as though he wouldn't have much compunction about pulling the trigger of that wicked little "gat," while Alice White is sincerely hoping that he doesn't. Neil Hamilton may break up the party. A scene from the First National picture, "A Widow from Chicago," a story of the gang underworld.
Exhibitors and Producers Urged To Confer on Product Problems

Director Archibald Says Present Method of Conveying Public's Wants Too Slow—Yearly Meetings Between Theatre and Studio Executives Suggested as Substitute (HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Studio executives, including directors, supervisors and producers, should meet annually with exhibitors throughout the nation at least once a year to speed up the now gradual improvement of talking pictures, according to George Archibald, veteran Radio Pictures director.

Archibald, in an interview with a HERALD-WORLD representative, declared that if exhibitors could tell studio executives what millions of motion picture fans wanted, and if the executives could tell exhibitors the problems they face in production, the conferences would do more for the industry than any one existing factor.

Present System Too Slow

"By the time that information reaches the director, the player and the studio executives as to what the public wants, it has passed through at least a half a dozen sets of ears and so many months that it is garbled," he declared. "The present system is for the salesman to contact the exhibitor, they lay it on the wants and preferences of his superiors, who in turn pass the information to the producer.

"From here it filters down to us, who are doing the actual work of production. Such information is both confusing and misleading. I believe that if we could all get together that we'd be far less bickering and far more box office return."

Wants More on Public Reactions

Archibald, who has been directing since 1915, said practically all of the outstanding stars through their passes during this period, admits that he doesn't know a third as much about the reactions of exhibitors and the public to his pictures as he would like to.

"At the same time," he continued, "exhibitors do not understand many of our artistic and our financial problems. This is not their fault, any more than it is our fault that we do not always understand their needs."

In fifteen years of experience, he has come to the conclusion, he declares, that the best impressions of the wants and desires of the public are the cast. He has always chosen the best casts he could get, believing that competent players could get the public to accept better, understand better and help turn out smoother pictures, which in turn click at the box office because of their names and their recognized abilities.

Would Limit Dialog

In common with most of the other old line directors in Hollywood, Archibald is of the opinion that much of the talking should be eliminated from the present product and that directors should lay the foundation of their stories with action and with camera, rather than with an endless flow of words.

In his forthcoming picture, on which he has been working for the past Betty Compson, John Darrow, H. B. Warner, Margaret Livingston and Ivan Lotterdoff. He will concentrate on using the camera rather than words, and is working with Wallace Smith in making the dialog brief and to the point. The product will carry the title, "Children of the Streets."

Berlin Chamber Hits

Unfair Critics When

Talker Sales Slump

But Hamburg Company with Eight

Theatres Send SOS to Trade

Press for Good Pictures

(By Berlin Correspondent to the Herald-World)

BERLIN, Nov. 18 (By mail).—The Berlin Chamber of Commerce has taken the unusual step of voicing an attack on the Berlin newspaper critics by asserting in its latest monthly report that the sale of German theatrical abroad was hadicapped through a number of unjustified reviews in the German lay press.

The criticism by the lay press in the me-necia has been simply justified by other people whose opinions carry great weight.

Herr Heinrich Schunzel, a popular producer and actor, has written to a trade paper that the talkers of 1930 are approaching the level of the silents of 1910. The Henschel Concern, the Berliner Company, holding eight houses with 10,000 seats, has sent out a real SOS cry to the trade press with the headline: “Gentlemen, things cannot go on this way!”

Says Business Fell Back

The Henschel Concern says it did not expect the golden age to come when it had its houses wired, but it thought to have the capital investment amortized in 15 or 18 months. It was not realized, however, that a few initial success in business led to a back rapidly, and any run on the theatres is now out of question.

The producers, the letter continues, adhere to the principle of quick and cheap production, and all the houses which really draw the public into the halls. Then the writer enumerates the few productions which patrons felt compelled to see (no Americans among them, as there were hardly any on the market):

Demand Better Pictures

There the list ends, the Henschel Concern says, and whatever else is offered is apt to draw the executives out.

The letter ends with an appeal to the producers for outstanding pictures and to Tobis and Talkfilm to be kepters under terms which the small exhibitor can bear.

Quittner Suit Brings Damages

Asked of MPPDA to 10 Million

Hays Organization, Paramount Publix and Netroco Accused of Destroying Business of Exhibitor as Well as Value of Theatres—Action Filed in U. S. District Court

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The $5,000,000 suit of Edward Quittner against the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America and Paramount Pub-lix brings the damages sought from the Hays organization and various of its members to a total estimated at more than $10,000,000.

Quittner, an exhibitor of Middletown, N. Y., and the Middletown Combined Buildings Company filed papers this week in the United States district court here charging monopoly and conspiracy.

The defendants are the Hays organization, Paramount Publix, Netroco Theatre Corporation, Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent and Sam Katz.

Ask $5,000,000 Damages

The plaintiffs ask treble damages of $5,-

000,000, claiming that their business of their theatres has been destroyed by means of a conspiracy among the defendants and other film companies of the motion picture industry. They claim also that the value of their theatres as such has been totally destroyed.

Complaint also is made of the acquisition of hundreds of theatres by companies identified with the Hays organization, of the practice of block booking and of alleged threats to build theatres for the purpose of intimidating independent theatre owners to take their picture.

Charge Contract Conspiracy

The papers charge a conspiracy to adopt a uniform contract containing “harsh and oppressive” terms and to organize film boards of trade which, it is charged, have coerced exhibitors into accepting unfair methods of arbitration adopted by the boards.

It is further charged that members of the boards control more than 95 percent of the motion picture distributors and that the independent exhibitors have been compelled to accept their demands if they wished to get film.

The plaintiffs allege that when they refused to sign a five-year contract to exhibit pictures in which they were made that a competing theatre would be built and that they would be forced out of business. Later, it is alleged, a theatre was erected directly across the street from one of their houses and the Paramount theatre resorted to unfair methods, including price cutting, the purchase of substantially all available films and the employment of persons to stand in front of plaintiff’s theatre to attract their patrons.

Graham & Reynolds are attorneys for the plaintiff.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—“All Quiet on the Western Front” has passed the censor of German Censors, without a single change being recommended.

Immediately following the decision of the censors was the announcement of a premiere of the film, which will be shown at the Mozartsaal theatre on December 4. Efforts are being made to induce Erich Remarque, the author, to be present at the opening. With the Berlin showing, the picture will have played in all but five of the important world capitals. The latest performances were given in Tokyo, at the Roxy theatre in Antwerp, and Paris, where it is understood to have been hailed by the press.

Portland Censors Push Drive Despite Warning from Mayor

PENDLETON Will Swing in Other Direction If Board Goes Too Far, Says Executive—Hamrick Arrest Ordered on Complaint of Representative of "Cleanup" Faction, But Latter Backs Down

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

PORTLAND, ORE., Nov. 28.—The Censor Board of Portland has redoubled its efforts to "clean up" pictures following the meeting two weeks ago with Mayor George Baker and members of the council and despite a warning from the mayor against becoming unreasonably severe. All pictures were viewed in the light of what would satisfy a committee from the churches, teachers and parents.

Despite the rigid censorship, according to Chester A. Lyon, who represents the "cleanup" faction, another picture "got through that did not meet the approval of the socalled reformers, together with a number of billboards. Lyon asked that a second conference be called with the mayor and in attendance, as well as the members of the censor board and exchange officers.

Mayor Opposes Severity

In discussing various pictures and film companies at yesterday's meeting, Mayor Baker pointed out that laws governing them must be reasonable and that the city cannot go too far or the pendulum will swing the other way on censorship. He also stated that the theaters have their right to appeal to the courts, and the decision was just how far the city can go and get convictions unless a picture is really vicious. He pointed out that stories of real life often are as vivid as the motion pictures but that convictions that come into the city are as suggestive as any picture.

"The public will not stand for rigid censorship," he said, "and I don't want to see censorship abolished. That would be terrible. We must strike a happy medium some place if we are to continue censorship."

Woodlaw Opposes Censorship

G. T. Woodlaw, theater operator here for the past 25 years, and frequently with war with the heads of the operators union, dared Lyon and his committee to have John Hamrick arrested for the advertising of "A Soldier's Plaything" and stated that he was opposed to all censorship, believing it better for the courts to determine whether the state law or the city ordinance has been violated. He predicted that trouble would be maintained for the picture against which complaint was made.

Walter M. May, advertising manager of the Oregonian, admitted that he recently had called a meeting of the theater managers to eliminate objectionable advertising in newspapers and found that since much of the advertising comes from a distance, Mr. May warned against radical steps. He suggested that it is a matter of education and said that the newspapers had brought about chances in advertising matter and had refused to run some of it that they considered objectionable.

Urges Elevating Public Demand

He pointed out that the payroll of the industry in Portland is $500,000 a week and that 200,000 persons see motion pictures every week. (Figures provided by Miss Ruth Doyle of Portland Film Board). He also said that highly constructive pictures have proved to be box office failures and that one job would be to elevate the demand of the public for films.

Also as a last and decisive step Mayor Baker ordered the arrest of John Hamrick, owner of the theatres, on the complaint of Lyon that the theatre had displayed indecent advertising. However, Lyon demurred on the complaint, stating that his was a mission of prevention and not prosecution.

Other sources said that if strict censorship was to be enforced to the latter, all stage productions, dances, and other forms of amusements should be curbed to conform to the blue laws.

"CHIC" CHAT

NEW YORK

Al Selig, publicity boss of Tiffany, found a letter on his desk the other morning which is worth a full quote. It speaks for itself.

Listen: Sir, I understand you are about to start production on a new picture (an Underworld picture). You undoubtedly have added much to your knowledge of Underworld life. If you visit with your crew to Chicago, but when it comes to actual portrayal of those underworld humanitarians, there is to lose the true characters, their moods, actions, etc.

I would like very much to help you attain a perfect picture of American underworld life. I can be of utmost assistance to you, as I know through living as one of those, the actuality of the underworld life. I do not ask any reward for my services, just let me help you if I may. If you think that I can be of any use to you give me what you feel it will do in Chicago.

I have been waiting for the longest time to help attain that near perfect picture, please try me out I assure you, that you will not have any cause to be sorry.

Hoping anxiously to hear a reply,

I remain,

Al

Al hasn't decided yet whether or not he should take a chance. Can't tell, it may be a find. When again they find something lost after he arrives around the Tiffany location. Anyway, here's a great opportunity for Tiffany to make a sale, and to make the most of the modern age, with the unknown chief assistant to James Whale in the production of the Marx Bros. that doesn't specify whether his specialty is stick-up, second story, rackets, or just general underworld facts.

When Frank Heath, casting director at Paramount's Eastern Studios in Astoria, needed a certain chap for a part in "Stolen Heaven," now being filmed, he found the actor's telephone wasn't working. The latter had asked for work several times, and Heath knew he needed it. He had the inspired thought of asking for help, and called the following one company, the traffic manager that unless he could get hold of the actor in time to report for work with Nancy Carroll, he would lose the part. The traffic manager saw the point, sent a man around to the home of the actor, and the actor was playing his part opposite Nancy the next morning. That's good service.

From Philadelphia comes the note that a judge of the Superior Court has upheld the contention of the director who claims that talking motion pictures are admissible as evidence in the courtroom, in just the same way that fingerprints, phonograph records and the like have been previously accepted. It will be rather tough for the boys when Television becomes an accomplished fact, and that doesn't look very far away.

An R C A sound truck drove down Broadway the other morning, it was followed by six large busses loaded with children. Four motorcycle cops acted as escort. Sign on the busses said: "The big parade: "We are on our way to see Richard Cromwell in 'Tobable David' at the RKO Mayfair." Made quite a stir on the street, but it doesn't take much to do that in this man's town.—"CHIC" AARONSON.
HAYS PLEDGES HELP
Of Industry to U. S.
To Push Prosperity
Will Aid Hoover Committee in Every Way Possible—Plans Are Already Under Way
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Will H. Hays has pledged to Arthur Wood, chairman of the President’s Emergency Committee for employment, that the organized motion picture industry will cooperate to the utmost "to help counteract unsound psychological factors that have retarded both prosperity and employment."

Plans thus far developed for cooperation, according to Hays, are:

First, an editorial committee has been organized to cover significant facts of industrial recovery through the newsreel.

Second, leading producers are planning at their own expense to help dispel the psychological forces that retard prosperity through the production of short subjects, a few of which have been made.

Third, their interests, cooperating with artists of the stage and screen, are helping to arrange benefit performances for the immediate relief of the needy.

For the past three years the theatre men have pledged that they will cooperate in the distribution of stills to urge the cause of employment.

Fifth, circuit managers throughout the country have been instructed to aid in local employment and relief campaigns.

The organized motion picture industry, Hays said, "will aid in every way at its command in such ameliorative measures as are designed to minimize the human suffering and want that come from lack of employment."

N. Y. Theatres Plan Series of Benefits To Aid Unemployed

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—All Broadway theatres and all stars on the "street" will be presented in aid of plans being laid by Mayor James J. Walker’s official committee, it is reported.

Commissions have been obtained from the Actors’ Equity Association, the Stage Hands’ union and the Musicians’ union, insuring voluntary service. The shows will be presented at special matinees on Sunday evenings and some at special midnight performances.

Movement Initiated by Eastern Pennsylvania M.P.T.O Expected to Be Adopted by Theatres Throughout Country—Better Business Group Guards Against Premium Makers’ Misrepresentation

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The M.P.T.O of Eastern Pennsylvania, has decided to donate the proceeds of a special matinee to aid in the relief of unemployment. The move is in line with the action which was taken by David Barrist who was adopted unanimously at a board meeting last week.

Following are outstanding phases of the decision:

Every theatre in the Philadelphia zone is to be asked to donate the entire receipts of one matinee performance for the help of the unemployed in the neighborhood of the theatre.

An honor roll of the theatres subscribing to this cause is to be published.

The 30 theatres represented at the board of managers meeting were pledged immediately and the members present agreed to hold these matinees without delay.

It is expected that the movement initiated and sponsored by the organization will be adopted by theatres throughout the country.

Name Better Business Group

A better business committee, similar to the Better Business, Legislation and censorship, to be appointed at the same meeting, the purpose of which will be to protect the theatremen against misrepresentation by the underworld interests, and other "unsavory practices within the industry."

The forming of this committee follows a series of complaints that certain of these manufacturers sell one product and deliver a much inferior product later. The committee will investigate each proposition thoroughly and endorse it for the theatre operator.

Not only the product but also the financial standing of the manufacturer will be studied.

The members of the committee as appointed are: David Barrist, chairman; Allen Benn and Ben Fertel. They will work in cooperation with the Better Business Bureau.

COOPERATION IS LONE
Key to Better Films, Mrs. Winter Holds

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Intelligent cooperation, not legislation and censorship, is the road to further elevation of the motion picture, because the public wants idealism and needs genius, and both of these are beyond and above command by law. This is the conviction of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, associate director of public relations for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who spoke last week at the World Theatre Owners of America convention in Chicago.

"This mode of approach is the coming and dominant one of the world these days when even those ancient differences that are built up through the ages of racial and national hatreds seem soluble, when men get around the table, look into each other’s eyes and find the common basis on which to rest and solve their differences," she said.

Mrs. Winter described the motion picture as a new thing in the history of the world, business and art, reaching millions and requiring special consideration of social values. Its public is extraordinary, it is impossible to talk with motion picture people as with human beings who are not so much unlike the rest of us that we have no common point of meeting.

Cites Corruption With Public

In her address, Mrs. Winter cited the corruption of the market. "We have a new public, and it is sensitive to it and it is sensitive to its public, she pointed out. So their correlation becomes important."

"To strengthen the attitude of mind," she said, "to convince the producers, most of whom would like to give us clearer and lovelier pictures, to convince them that they have support for such pictures for a clean minded public, is one of the jobs in which I am glad to have a small share."

Playing Time in 4,200 Houses Gives Universal $15,000,000 Revenue

Bookings Completed with All Big National Circuits—40 Smaller Chains Comprising 700 Houses Also Are Signed
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Universal has now completed its booking arrangements with all the big national theatre circuits, and about 40 independent circuits from which the company will derive a total revenue of $15,000,000.

It is understood that the amounts involved in these recent circuit deals are $5,000,000 on the Publix and independents combined; $3,000,000 for the RKO arrangement; $3,500,000 on the Warner booking; $2,500,000 on Fox West Coast circuit, and $1,000,000 for the Fox Metropolitan and Loew's New York circuits.

The two of the circuits with which negotiations were most recently closed were Publix and Fox West Coast, both deals having been consummated this week.

Previous to this, booking agreements had been signed with Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Warner Circuit, Fox Metropolitan, Loew's New York Circuit; 40 smaller circuits comprising 700 theatres have contracted for the 20 Laemmle specials and the short product.

The Fox West Coast deal is understood to have involved $2,500,000 in rentals for feature attractions alone.

Playing Time in 4,200 Theatres

Although the Publix deal has been under way for several months and has been virtually 100 per cent in operation, it was not until this week that the contracts were signed.

Signing of all the big circuits and of the 40 smaller ones gives Universal, according to company officials, playing time in 4,200 theatres, giving the greatest first run opportunity it ever has had.

Included in the big Publix chain, which is entrenched in all the key zones, are the Publix-Gordon, Publix-Goldstein and Publix-Neteco circuits in New England; Publix-Comerford, Pennsylvania; Publix-Walter Reade, New Jersey; Publix-Saenger, Southern six states; Publix-Rickards & Nace, Arizona; Publix-Shea, Buffalo; Publix-Balaban & Katz, Illinois; Publix-hostetter, Iowa and Nebraska; Publix-Finkelstein & Ruben, Minnesota and the Dakotas; and Publix-Sparks, Florida.

In Independent Group

In the independent group, the circuits are: Schine Theatres, up-state New York, 39 houses; Rupert Richards, New Orleans, 60; Griffith Amusement Co., Southwest, 54; Costan Theatres, Chicago, 56; the Co-operative of Detroit, 104; Glenn W. Dickinson, Kansas City, 24; Mid-Continent Circuit, Kansas City, 26; Robb & Rowley, Dallas, 24; Golden State Theatres, San Francisco, 34; St. Louis Amusement Co., 23; M. A. Lightman, Memphis, 22.

Also Marvin Wise, Atlanta; Lucas-Jenkins, Atlanta, R. B. Wilby, Atlanta; Consolidated Theatres, New York; Manhattan Playhouses, Inc., New York; Springer-Cocalis, New York; Leo Brecher, New York; Roenblatt Circuit, Staten Island; Confederation Amusements and Lawrance Theatres, Montreal; Harris Circuit, New York; Loew-Kich-Greenburger, Cleveland; Washington Circuit, Cleveland; Frank Durkee Circuit, Maryland; Interstate Circuit, Omaha, Nebraska; Theatres, Inc., Omaha; Victory Theatre, Kansas City; World Realty Co., Inc., United Theatres, New Orleans; Prite Circuit, St. Louis; Essanes Circuit, Chicago; Rogers Circuit, St. Louis; Leo Keller, St. Louis; Fourth Ave. Amusement Co. and Broadway Amusement Co. (Fred Dolle) Indianapolis; Spokane; Alex Schreiber, Detroit; Associated Theatres, Maryland; Lake Amusement Co., Minneapolis; and National Theatres, San Francisco.

Guns and Horses—But Dix Plunges In
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Richard Dix, in playing the lead in "Cimarron" is proving himself one of the bravest men in Hollywood. Since he was a child, he has been afraid of guns and horses. There are more guns and horses in "Cimarron" than in any previous picture in the history of the industry. Dix has been plunging deliberately into the picture, even in shots where he hasn't been needed, to get close to both the things which cause his "complex," and he is winning out over his fear of both.

Know Your Exchange Managers

The exchange manager is the direct contact between exhibitor and distributor, and therefore it is to their mutual advantage to know each other. The Herald-World presents a series of brief sketches of exchange managers and their outstanding activities in the motion picture field.

J. O. ROHDE, manager of the newly centralized Oklahoma City branch of Warner Brothers, First National and Vitaphone, started in business with A. G. Spalding & Bros., selling athletic goods. In 1919 he became manager for Lucas Theatre Supply at Dallas. Two years later he signed with Fox as a salesman, going over to Universal the next year. In 1923 Rohde joined Pathe at Dallas, working as a salesman until late in 1926 when he was sent to New Orleans as manager.

It was in January of 1929 that he joined Warner Brothers as manager in Oklahoma City.

J. P. O'LOGHLIN, Canadian district manager for Fox with headquarters at Montreal and entered the film business in 1917 with Sawyer & Lubin, who had the first Metro franchise in Canada. O'Loghlin was general manager two years later for Regal Films, Ltd., Canadian distributor for Metro and First National. Next he became general manager for Specialty Film Import Company, handling Pathe product in Canada.

From 1923 to 1924, O'Loghlin had his own company, Canadian Releasing Corporation, with the Canadian franchise for American Releasing Corporation's product.

GEORGE LEFKO, Seattle manager for RKO Distributing Corporation, started in the film trade in 1913 at Cleveland and was with World Film until 1917. The next three years found him with Select Film, still at Cleveland, and from that connection he went in 1920 to Robertson-Cole, out of which organization came FBO which in turn became part of the RCA affiliations. He was city salesman for Robertson-Cole. Lefko was made Albany manager in October, 1929, and remained there only a month, being transferred to the Seattle office, over which he has continued to hold sway up to and including the present.

SIN TAKES A HOLIDAY

With the hand of a craftsman similar to that of Lithich, Paul Stein has made of "Sinn Takes a Holiday" one of the most delightful talking pictures of the season. It is light and cheerful. It is not the kind of drama that requires ponderous thinking. It is much more the breezy, witty and spontaneous piece of entertainment that makes weary men glad they came to it for relaxation.

Added to that is one of the most finely directed pictures of its kind that I have seen. Stein has always known how to direct motion pictures and has succeeded in his art where a great number of his show altern have failed.

The picture is another of those that are giving the Pathé program its class, prestige, style and bookings. It therefore follows closely upon the heels (chronologically, at least) of "Holiday."

It features a great actress, Constance Bennett. She shows in this work that others of her successes were not accidents. She plays a part that is not the easiest and does it well.

Opposite her is Kenneth MacKenna, a young man who has had great experience reading lines on the stage. He does well as her admirer, employer and husband. He could not have done better. However, his type isn't perfect for this part. His manner does not suggest the things that it might have.

Possibly the best actor of a superb cast is Basil Rathbone. He has often done himself credit but in this he does more than that. He uses hands, lips, eyes and eyebrows to express the feeling the author desired to give the audience.

The story is that of a young lawyer who believes he is immune from marriage. He boasts of it. He makes much of it. His secretary realizes it. At last he is in a position where he shall marry or become socially embarrassed. He marries. But the girl he chooses is the secretary (Miss Bennett). That naturally complicates the situation and gives a plot. It is a story in which the love theme follows the marriage ceremony.

The dialogue is smooth and the words flow naturally from the tongues of every member of the cast.

The stage direction is of a very high type throughout the production.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

HERO OF THE WEEK

CONRAD NAGEL gives an exceptionally fine portrayal in "Today," made by Majestic Pictures from the stage play of the same name.

MAJESTIC Pictures has done an excellent piece of work in the screen adaptation of the stage play of the same name, with honors going in particular to William Nigh, the director, for an intelligent and dramatic film, culminating with a real punch; and to Conrad Nagel, the star, for an exceptionally fine portrayal.

Nagel takes the part of a young man who had built up a fortune in Wall Street, only to have it crumble about his ears. His wife, played by Catherine Dale Owen, once having become used to luxury, cannot bring herself to give it up. The manner in which she permits herself, under the guidance of a false feminine friend, to slip into an easy way of regaining the finery she had lost in the crash, and the efforts of her husband to start afresh, make up the theme of a highly dramatic story, to which added effectiveness is given by the work of Nagel. His discovery, quite by accident, of his wife's conduct, and the final sequence which is interesting as it is surprising, ends the film with a world climax.

The supporting cast is on the whole decidedly competent. In the early stages of the film, Miss Owen runs away with things. Her work does not come up to the high standard set by Conrad Nagel.

Photography is on the whole good, with most of the film set in interiors. The home to which the couple move with the husband's parents after the bankruptcy, however, is rather too sumptuous to appear genuine, and the circumstances to which they were supposed to have been reduced.

It is essentially a highly sophisticated story of the modern day, with a cleverly implied contrast between the young wife, who could not bring herself to stick by her husband when their circumstances were poor, and the mother whose only thought was for the son.

Nigh has succeeded admirably in conveying the theme of his story by means of successive dramatic highlights, leaving much to the imagination of the audience. It is probably true that not all types of people will readily appreciate this picture, as far as theme and treatment is concerned, but the performance of Conrad Nagel should be enjoyed by anyone.—Charles S. Aaronson, New York City.

BEAU IDEAL

BUILDING on a theme similar to that of "Beau Geste," Herbert Brenon has given the screen a picture with adventure, love, suffering, and a dash of idealism. It is from the pen of Percival Christopher Wren, author of the best-selling novel of that title, and it stands out among a class of pictures based on sacrifice and altruism.

Radio Pictures well may be proud of the subject for its pretentiousness and the message it bears. There are many elements in it that evidence a desire on the part of the studio to create something sensational and commanding. There is an awe-inspiring sandstorm in it that is as realistic as any storm hitherto shot. Tons upon tons of fine silt blow across the lens of the camera in such a gale that the illusion threatens the audience. It terminates, the trees buried beneath it.

That scene closely precedes one of mutiny. The troops discover that their leader has lost

FREE LOVE

A SOPHISTICATED and broad comedy drama of domestic trouble is "Free Love." Excellent acting, combined with good lines and a cleverly motivate plot, make it interesting entertainment. The plot closes with a moral—and that moral is that modern love is getting to be a little bit too modern if marriage is to continue to exist as an institution.

Outstanding in the production is the intimate treatment of married life by Hobart Henley, and the scenario work of Winfred Dunn, who, by incomparable lines, brings to the audience a very open manner. The capable portrayals in these scenes done by Conrad Nagel, the husband, and Genevieve Tobin, the wife, make both the situations and lines acceptable.

The play opens with a shot of a honeymoon suite on a ocean liner and jumps ahead with five years of happy wedded life. Then some quarrels which Henley, through delicate directee, reveals are caused by the wife. She is psychologically lower that she and her husband are not suited to each other—that she must find outside interests. These interests include a job at a newspaper office, the convincing young friend of Nagel.

Nagel runs wild, gets well under the influence of liquor, smashes Osweley in the jaw,小型火災の予防, and ends in jail after an automobile crash.

His uncle and wife call at the jail to get him out and they find that a night club hostess is with him, standing tall of his size. Then some lines about Miss Tobin heads for Reno, Nagel persuades the night club entertainer to run down to Atlantic City, to which he had invited Miss Tobin previously. Incidentally, Ilka Chase is great as the entertainer.

The entire picture is crowded with incidents based entirely on sex, but is given delicate direction and clever acting.

Running through the play is a love affair between Zasu Pitts, the domestic, and Slim Summerville, the gas man. Their work lightens and deepens the excellent portrayals. I found it interesting to watch Miss Pitts' hands, which have a knack of bringing out her lines—very unusual combination.

The photography was done with deft touches throughout.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

ONLY SAPS WORK

WHEN Leon Errol assumes the role of an accomplished burglar, and his leg begins to "buckle," it is time to laugh. And when the huckstering couple of the few remarks favored with true "Errolitan" humor is time to laugh heartily. And when Richard Arlen, the poor boy just out of school, finds that a diploma doesn't mean a thing and decides to take a job as a pantry boy at an exclusive health farm, and then meets Mary Brian, the daughter of a man who is planning (after she meets him) to spend the summer there with her father, well—you have the ingredients which go to make a wholly entertaining and delightful comedy.

A remarkable bank robbery, which Errol executes in broad daylight by just walking into a bank with a bag and coming out with the bag filled with money, starts the complications that are too involved to attempt to mention here. Arlen as his unwitting accomplice, adds to Errol's remarks, while the "wealthy girl" thinks, for some reason, the newly hired pantry boy to be sympathetic. He, of course, believes Errol to be a great detective on the trail of the robbers and wants to take lessons from him. Errol, who is not as cubby as the two boses plain clothes men who attempt to wrest the money from Errol.

Unusually well cast, progressing with a smoothness that commends the direction, interspersed with situations that are compliments to the adaptors, the picture should enhance any program.

The title was somewhat of an unfortunate choice, in that it needs a bit of cogitation to work it out, but that makes the comedy no less delightful.—Jim Little, Chicago.

THE DANCERS

A YOUNG man who put honor above every thing and a woman who did not are the central characters in this psychological tale, "The Dancers," produced by Fox. Misunderstandings between the young man, Phillips Holmes, and the young woman, Lois Moran, motivate the plot. Walter Byron is the heavy in this sac- sacring fourth member of the quadrangle.

Chandler Sprague, the director, did well with a story which is hie not at the edge. The photographers stands out, there being a scene of an airplane receding over the ocean which is exceptionally good. The locale carries the au- audience around the land to castles in England, and the backgrounds are authentic and not at stage.

Lois Moran seems more attractive than ever, and she is a very fine young girl who makes a misstep and redeems herself. Phillips Holmes is as excellent as the honorable young girl, and Walter Byron is as ef- eective as a dishonorable young man. Mae Clark makes the most of her part as the girl who wins and loses.

Holmes' love and his faith in love are very touching, but one feels, in this day and age, that the role as played is a trifle over-senti- sentimentalized.

The story is built to appeal to the younger generation, it reveals—for it treats of problems which young lovers perennially face.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

FAST AND LOOSE

I have never found a way to prevent myself from becoming a victim of a girl who thickens on me. I have tried to get away from her previously from the same story or the same play. In the case of "Fast and Loose" it profited by such action. It is based on the play, "The Best People," on the stage in numerous cities a few years ago. It has been revamped consider- ably for adjustment to talking screens but it has lost nothing in the revamping process.

It is play material, novel material or screen material. There is no doubt about it. It has a very definite and obvious premise, objective, plot, setting, characterization and in short a plentiful supply of strong motivation. In addition it lends itself readily to good com-edy.

The screen number has lost none of these highly important assets. The heaviest portion of the comedy has been served by Ilka Chase and David Hartford with craftsmanship and good taste.

Major interest in the picture has been shifted to the male instead of the feminine lead. That interest falls upon Charles Starrett. He is the mild and meek mannered Honore Henry Mor- gan who admires simplicity and homely things. He is the young mechanic, working in a garage, who becomes quite infatuated with the daugh- ter of a very wealthy and social family. Her (Miriam Hopkins') infatuation for him is much more pronounced, and at one point in the under- way concerning the beautiful heiress and the toiling laborer.

Complications form when her inepted brother announces plans to marry a poor chorus girl. The father (Frank Morgan) determines in a quite fatherly fashion upon breaking up both marriages.

There is strength of direction and story—extraordinary strength of story, that is to say. The working of the two leads is devoted to weaving the highest social families is extremely well sold to the spectators. There remains no doubt in your mind that those two social people have the right ticket for the order of things that is represented by the Lenox family. The complex situation works itself out smoothly and quickly into a fadeout, as was done in the play. The denouement of the play was never more forceful than this and I prefer to think it was less so.

Humphreys has no difficulty in her role and creates a fine screen impression. Carol Lombard has less to do but, for a young woman who less than three years ago was atmosphere on the old screen, she deserves a great hand for her excellent performance.

Wadsworth is handicapped in that most of her scenes require him to portray a drunk. Nevertheless, herrecital is admirable.

The picture has been cropped to its shortest. The pantomime is there but the wordiness has been removed. There is much more of the former than there was in the play. That is well.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

ONE NIGHT AT SUSIE’S

HERE is another underworld picture, with a story which is somewhat different in certain of its aspects. Doug Fairbanks, Jr., playing a young theatrical press agent who goes to jail for libel, meets the woman he shoulders the blame for a crime committed by the chorus girl he intends to marry, is excellent as he always is.

Therein the story conforms to a plot theme which has been done and done again. Billie Dove plays opposite Fairbanks as the chorus girl who sticks by until the inevitable conclusion and happy ending. The narrative is a bit different in that it is the story of an elderly man, called Susie, who appears to be the big boss of two rival gangs, causing them to obey her orders without question.

Helen Ware plays well, in the role of Susie, giving a sympathetic performance. Fairbanks is supposed to be the orphan son of a former crook, and the scene has raised the boy from childhood, during the entire time keeping him perfectly straight. Miss Ware is particularly good when she indicates the contrasting character of nature first, in the stern rule of the gangs, then in her maternal feeling for the boy.

As may be expected, there is the crook, by name Houtham, who does his best to take the girl from the young publicity man and to finish him at the same time. At the conclusion, he is put on the spot in an approved fashion. James Crane is competent in the role.

Billie Dove gives a performance which is intelligent and sincere, with an attainment on several occasions of real dramatic height in her acting. Tully Marshall, as the husband of Susie and a former burglar, makes an effective appearance in the part he portrays, though it is much too slight to have any consequence.

John Dyer and Claude Fleming are capable, the former as the theatrical producer whom the girl is forced to kill in order to protect herself from his advances, and the latter as another producer, to whom the actress sacrificed herself in the only means of having her fiancé’s play produced on Broadway.

The direction of John Francis Dillon is competent. The film indicates the capability of young Fairbanks in handling varied types of roles with ease and confidence. Photography is up to the mark throughout the picture, though there are a few distracting effects.

While in no way striking, this film is fairly good entertainment, from which audiences will in all probability derive a measure of enjoyment.—Charles S. Aromon, New York City.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., and Billie Dove do excellent jobs of their roles in "One Night at Susie's," First National underworld picture.

JUST IMAGINE

Here is a novelty picture that will provide an evening’s entertainment for anyone.

The story is off the beaten path, and in addition to novelty it offers comedy, pathos and melody. Do not judge for a minute, however, that it is of the musical comedy variety; it is not. There are songs in it, and there is dancing, but these are but a minor factor in the film.

An indication of the novelty of the story is the time—1908—when a noble experiment in marriage is being tested by the advanced people of that generation.

Settings are unique and are a credit to the imaginative genius of someone on the Fox lot. It is the age of air travel almost exclusively and every roof is a landing field.

El Brendel is outstanding in the cast although little Maureen O'Sullivan and John Carrick have a close second. Brendel, who, according to the plot, died in 1930, is brought to life by a process invented by a noted physician. There starts the comedy which sets a continuous pace throughout the picture.

Garrick is a likable juvenile with a very pleasant speaking and singing voice. Miss O'Sullivan is fascinating and should have many years of popularity ahead of her.

The story takes Garrick, Brendel and Frank Albertson to Mars in a rocket plane, the trip being undertaken so that Garrick may distinguish himself and under the marriage regulations of 1980 win the girl he loves.

On arriving on Mars the men find that each Martian has a double. One set of doubles is friendly to them, the other antagonistic, and this enmity almost results in keeping Garrick from his love. There is thus a final appeal for the hand of the girl he loves.

It is a novelty subject that will be appreciated.—Jay M. Shreack, New York City.

THE RIGHT TO LOVE

"The Right to Love," produced by Paramount, is a Ruth Chatterton picture. It was selected for her, built around her, and she plays two parts in—it of those of mother and daughter. She does both well and leaves the audience feeling that it has gotten rather well acquainted with her. Her background and location setting is a good one, while the period and make of the picture is such that it shows the historical and complete background which through sheer artistry of photography is in itself a poem, is filled with strong situations admirably handled by the cast and developed by Wallace.

Chatterton runs through an entire scale of emotions, including the birth and the death of love. At times her grief is so strong that she needs only her eyes to tell her story and again her portrayal verges on hysteria. At times, she is silent in her grief and again screaming in her triumph. The plot revolves first about the mother, who loves not wisely but too well. The man, David Manners, dies a ghastly death. If it had not been for objections on the part of both their parents, they might have married. Miss Chatterton, at her father's request, is married to Irving Pichel and moves from her loved one to the rough country of Southern Colorado. Her daughter is born, and grows to love a wealthy young wastrel. The mother, knowing of her own unhappiness, tells her daughter that she should escape with the youth, if she loves him, against the wishes of Pichel.

The girl, learning of the clouded circumstances surrounding her birth, sides with Pichel. She goes to Chicago, becomes a missionary, and is about to marry without love. Paul Lucas appears on the scene, she finds she loves him and goes through a struggle which ends in the renouncing of a loveless life and departure from the mission with Lucas. The eventual victory, following the long struggle of wills by Chatterton (the mother) and Pichel, goes to her as she dies.

The treatment, possibly, is a trifle overdone; a Glendale audience at times tittered. But the plot is logical and well developed, and the dialog fits perfectly with the backgrounds, which are rural. The characters are all simple-minded folk, with the exception of Miss Chatterton, who finds a beauty in love not usually associated with farm maids. She therefore is misunderstood.

Several shots, which include strolls by the brookside and a scene in a cemetery with Miss Chatterton wreathed in mist, are exceptionally good. The delicate work of Wallace is clearly shown, and the characters, Lucas, Manners, Pichel and William Stack, are true in their portrayals. The backgrounds are well nigh perfect, much thought having gone in fitting them to the period in which the story is laid.

MICKEY'S BARGAIN

DARMOUR PRODUCTION

Radio Pictures

Larry Darmour had Radio's "Cimarron" in mind while making "Mickey's Bargain," one of the Tenonville Short Series being produced for RKO release. It was a good idea. Following a popular trend, Mickey (Himself) McGuire and his troupe turn Oklahoma cowboys and Indians for two reels of excellent comedy.

Stinky Davis, Mickey's rival, and his gang are mixed up with the Indians who are routed by especially prepared "fire water" that throws the whole comedy into a panic of laughs. A large bear comes into the mixup and ends the 20 minute reel. We doubt if, to our mind, would fit into the same bill with the aforementioned Radio special.

TALKING PICTURE EPICS PRODUCTION

Talking

Blue whales, over 100 feet in length, cavorting about in the icy waters of the Antarctic ocean, huge sea elephants fighting for supremacy in the herd, birds that cover the surface of the water like a blanket, walls of ice towering skyward. This gives a brief idea of the remarkable pictorial record made by Dr. Cushman Mussey, curator of the American Museum of Natural History, in collaboration with Dr. Ludwig Kohl-Larsen of Germany, on the latter's expedition to South Georgia, a tiny island within the bounds of the Antarctic Circle. Men live there and carry on a huge whaling industry, long thought to be lost.

At the little settlement of Gyttviken, the great rendering plants that prepare the whale products for shipment are located. Here one may see the huge carcasses of the deep-disemboweled whale, as though by magic, after having been caught in a thrilling battle at sea. The scenes of the harpooning that turns out to be the man he fought at the cafe the previous evening. The Kid scores a knockout, and at the same time, wins the hearing of the man who has disinfected him, to the idea of his son being a fighter. This is popular material, and by sound and talking is vastly improved over the old silents of the same type. "Kid" Roberts, or Kane Halliday, is excellently played by a young man with a pleasant voice and good appearance.—Running time, 20 minutes.

THE OFFICE BOY

AN AESOP SOUND FABLE

Pathé-Sound

Milton Mouse, the office boy, goes through many of the antics seen often enough before, and the stenographer, little Sue, does a few new tricks on the typewriter. The boss and his wife have a battle, and the office boy takes the steno mouse. Good for a few laughs, here and there. Running time, 8 minutes.

AUDIO REVIEW—NO. 6

Pathé-Sound

"Americana" pictures several examples of old covered bridges found in Pennsylvania. One of the forerunners of the modern plumber, called the virginal, is explained and played by Lotta Van Buren, historian. The instrument, it is said, was famous in the days of Queen Bess of England. "Cinderella's Slipper" is a glass shoe used by one of the large companies in the fitting of children's shoes. "The Key" is a novel dance of marionettes, showing a little Chinese fisherman and a mermaid under water. The marionettes are the work of Sue Hastings, and the picture is done in effective Pathé Coloratura process. The accompanying music is appropriate and good, done by the Audio Review orchestra and the Symphonic Ensemble.

—Running time, 10 minutes.

DANGEROUS YOUTH

A MELODY COMEDY

Pathé-Sound

Daphne Pollard becomes one of the new rich, and proceeds to become greatly intoxicated at a dinner party she gives for her niece, after taking a sip of liquid. The featured player tumbles about with no particular rhyme or reason, there is no real point to the comedy and there are few laugh spots. In the cast are Lucile Williams as the niece, Don Dillaway as the sweetheart of the girl, and Ray Cooke as the stuttering chum of the boy, who also takes a great many falls. Running time, 21 minutes.

MARDI GRAS

THE LEATHER PUSHERS—NO. 5

Universal—Talking

"Kid Roberts" and his fight manager, Rooney, whoop things up a bit in New Orleans during the Mardi Gras, and the young boxer gets mixed in a scrap. When he enters the ring the other fighter, his opponent of the night, turns out to be the man he fought at the cafe the previous evening. The Kid scores a knockout, and at the same time, wins the hearing of the man who has disinfected him, to the idea of his son being a fighter. This is popular material, and by sound and talking is vastly improved over the old silents of the same type. "Kid" Roberts, or Kane Halliday, is excellently played by a young man with a pleasant voice and good appearance.—Running time, 20 minutes.
DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Say, what day of the month does Christmas come on this year? We have been away from home so many times on Christmas that we have come to wonder if there is such a thing as Christmas anymore, and if we have a home. The reason we want to know about this is that we have a dozen or so big, fat mallard ducks in cold storage up in our town, and really, ducks on Christmas have got a turkey pushed clear off the roast, and the way our wife can roast mallard ducks is nobody's business.

Now all of you boys who can keep sober on Christmas are invited to a roast duck dinner, and this includes the HERALD-WORLD staff and Doug Hodges, Larry Urbach and Norm Krause out in Hollywood, but you will all have to agree to stay out of our cellar.

If the Hollywood boys will bring along our two good friends, Louise Fazenda and Irene Rich, it will suit us fine. And if the boys don't think the party will be lively enough, they might bring Polly and Marie, and if they don't like roast duck we will give them an Irish stew. Now, don't say you haven't been invited, and if you can't come you can send the money. That's fair enough, isn't it?

Norton, Kan., had the biggest day yesterday in her history, the occasion being the national corn husking contest, and it was reported that 30,000 people were in attendance. The newreel boys were on hand with their cameras, and you will soon be showing pictures of this contest on your screens.

We are sorry we were not in that contest, for we would like for you boys to have had a chance to see us throw corn. Back in Newton county, Indiana, in our palmy days, we were considered some corn husker. If we got an early start, we could always husk enough corn to feed the team at noon.

A man couldn't get a room in Norton for love or money. We had to drive to Oberlin, 30 miles away, to find a room. A few days ago we fell in with Bob Ringler, who sells for United Artists. At Oberlin they gave a cot in our room for Bob, and the next morning Bob said he liked to occupy the same room with us because it made him think of home. He said our snoring reminded him of the switch engine that makes up trains in the yard right by his residence. We tried to kick Bob in the stomach but he dodged us.

As soon as we got over here to Goodland, Bob and Sprague went into executive session on United Artists service, and while Bob was drawing up a quietclam deed for the Sherman theatre, Sprague was moving the furniture out of the United Artists exchange office preparatory to moving in.

The battle was fast and furious, nothing but heavy artillery being used on either side, and it raged far into the night. We acted as chaplain and assistant stretcher bearer and powder monkey for both parties, and before the battle was over we hoped to be able to bury both of 'em.

At 12:30 a. m., Sprague ran up the white flag, the firing ceased and an armistice was declared, and to celebrate the event, we went out and bought three amber-colored drinks (all soft), and then we all sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and Sprague said "It will hold all right."

We have mingled with these film hounds and exhibitors so long that we have reached a point where we don't know whether it is best to try and tell the truth or keep our mouth shut. But we have arrived at the conclusion that old Amos was a film hound, an exhibitor, or a column writer for some magazine.

We will bet a hundred dollars against Crockett Brown's bullbound pup, or Al Christie's skewaddle, that we are snowed in here for a week. There is a blizzard raging here this morning and we can hardly see across the street, and Myrtle, if you think we are going to buck snowdrifts without a snowplow on April Shower, you've stepped into the wrong garments. It's just our luck to be going wrong-end-to all the while, and yet some people say they would like to be a rambling correspondent. There's one born every minute.

Sprague recently returned from Denver, where a blacksmith took a pair of tongs and removed his tonsils. He had been told that a tonsil operation was synonymous to a Fourth of July celebration with ice cream, bands, fire-crackers 'n' everything, and he looked forward to the operation with much joy. But now he looks back with much murder in his heart.

His description of his experiences, as received in an editorial in the Sherman Theatre Post, a house organ, reminds us very much of a fellow we once took through the Encampment degree. This chap was pretty nervous and was about to back out, but the boys told us to go out in the anteroom and quiet him down. We went out and asked him what was the matter, and he said he was not feeling very well and guessed he'd go home and come back some other time. We asked him if he had taken the Rebekah degree, and he said he had. Then we said, "Well, there's but very little difference. It's just about like that degree, and besides that, you needn't be afraid, for we will stay right by you all the while. And so we persuaded him to go ahead.

After it was all over and we were in the anteroom taking off our regalia, this chap came out there and he looked at us like he wanted to cry, so we flashed him a tissue, and he said, "Just like the Rebekah degree. You stayed right with me all right, you—puerulianous reprobate."

Sprague's description of his tonsil operation has got Irwin Cobb's "SPEAKING OF OPERATIONS" looking like a Sunday school leaflet. He says that they X-rayed him from head to foot, and he says he is glad they did this because the X-ray disproved a commonly accepted notion with Sherman county people, that his gourd was solid ivory between the ears. He also says that the X-ray disclosed a lot of wheels, carburetors, spark plugs and emergency brakes that he didn't know he had. He says it also settled the question as to his politics, that since he saw what was inside of him he found he had been voting the wrong ticket.

Every once in a while we run into a real surprise in this business. We drove into Almena to call on Rabourn & Bennie, and they ushered us into the finest decorated theatre we have ever seen in any town of less population than 19,000. The Rabourn seats about 390, and that is about one-third of the population of Almena. If you want to see what a swell theatre looks like, it will pay you to drive to Almena and look this one over. The house has DeForest equipment, which is giving excellent results, and the theatre is enjoying good business, which proves what can be done with a small town theatre if properly equipped and properly handled. The reputation of the Rabourn is far from being local, as it draws patronage for miles around.

A couple of old-time scouts whom we list among our friends, are still operating the theatre at Oberlin. Beardsley & Stephenson enjoy the confidence of the community because of the splendid service they are rendering. Their sound equipment is giving universal satisfaction, as is evident at the box office. Oberlin has a new hotel and we are glad of it, because the other one burned a few years ago while we were asleep in it, and the next morning we went out and played golf with Stephenson and he beat us.

Radio and Pathé Discourage Use of Amateurs’ Scenarios

Need Highly Trained People with Technical Knowledge, Says Derr —Radio Pictures Studio Is Making No Attempt to Read Works of Any But Known Authors and Agents

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—The scenario problem has brought about a fresh diversion of opinion in Hollywood's studios.

In the face of statements made recently by Warner Brothers, calling upon newspapermen for ideas for pictures, and the encouraging attitude shown by Universal and others, Pathé and Radio Pictures this week issued statements discouraging amateurs.

“The deluge of manuscripts into the Radio Pictures Studio now is so great that no attempt for his title or scenario which does not carry the name of a reputable author or agent,” declared Betty Roberts, head of the story department of that organization. “We return all manuscripts unopened,” said E. B. Derr, president of Pathé. “If one is opened by mistake, we return it unread.”

Need Highly Trained Writers

“To amateur writers trying to get jobs inside the studios, I give this advice—don’t try. We can’t use them. We need highly trained people with technical knowledge. An amateur writer, even if we could get him for nothing, would be a liability. There is no place for inexperienced writers in the motion picture field.

“We choose our stories with great care and for very definite reasons. Only experienced writers, in close touch with the public, can furnish the material we need.”

While most of the other studios are not so drastic in their indictment of young writers, they usually draw the line against beginners’ work without bothering to read it.

Columbia Goes Foreign

Harry Cohn, of Columbia, following his trip to London this week, announced that foreign language versions would be made of certain Columbia pictures. Features to receive first consideration are “Brothers,” starring Bert Lytell, and “Criminal Code,” with Walter Huston and Phillips Holmes. Ben Pivar will handle Spanish versions, which will begin immediately. Decision was reached after an extensive survey of work being done by other producers.

Farnham Re-contracted

Joseph W. Farnham, noted screen writer and former stage and screen producer, will continue under the MGM banner for some time as the result of a contract signed this week. He recently won the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for his screenplay of “The Big Parade.” He did work on “The Big House,” “The Flying Fleet,” and “The Cameraman.”

Music Director

Dr. Francis Gromon, graduate of the Royal Conservatory of Music at Budapest, and an ecstatic condition of international note, has been appointed director general of music for Pathé to succeed Josiah Zuro, killed recently in an automobile accident. Dr. Gromon has been in this country since 1923, and has been active in motion picture music circles most of this time.

Caught Cheating

“Caught Cheating,” the new Charlie Murray–George Sidney starring product, is under production at Tiffany studios. Frank Strayer is directing. Tedious Pivar, noted character actor, for years with M G M, is a recent addition to the cast, which includes Robert Ellis, Nita Martan and Dorothy Christy. Story is by the prolific F. Scott Darlin. It’s comedy of underworld.

All Done

“Resurrection,” the Edwin Carewe picture with Lupe Velez and John Boles, is in the cutting stage and will be previewed within the next week, probably. Finis Fox did screen play and dialogue, with Herman Rosse.

Sidney Fox Signs

Universal has signed Sidney Fox, 19-year-old ingenue, to make her screen debut, following her stage triumph in “Lost Sheep.” John Murray Anderson, rests in “The King of Jazz,” probably will direct her. She has had talking picture ambitions for some time.

Ken’s New One

Tiffany is grabbing for a title to Ken Maynard’s Western special, as yet untagged. There is a lot of riding, and there are many beautiful backgrounds in the product, which is a story of the Early West. Cast includes Jeannette Loffi, Carmelita Geraghty, Wallace MacDonald and Lafe Keefe.

Additions

Eddie Baker and Jack Duffy have been added to the cast of Ford Sterling’s current Educational–Christie comedy being produced at Metropolitan Sound studios under the direction of William Watson.

Del Ruth Loaned

Roy Del Ruth will be loaned to Fox by Warner Brothers for a special production, following “OK” by Jack Warner and Darryl Zanuck. John Considine, Jr., Fox associate producer, wants him.

Jack London’s Widow Sues Columbia to Share Profits

(HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Jack London has filed suit against the Columbia Pictures corporation for an accounting of profits from the film, “Smoke Belle.”)

After That, Alexander Was Home for Conference

(HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—When duty calls, J. Grubb Alexander, Warner Brothers scenario writer, answers. Recently, he was far from a small town in British Columbia. Word reached him, via native runners, that he was wanted for a conference in Los Angeles.

He climbed into an automobile and drove to Vancouver. He chartered an airplane to Seattle. He caught another fast plane at Seattle.

He landed in Hollywood several hours less than two days from the time he got the message."

Hookups with Television

And Trailers Doubt Within Next Five Years

(HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Faced with reports that several motion picture producing companies had completed plans for hookups with television in the near future and that trailers would be used in commercial advertising by television, officials at the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences declared that they had heard nothing concerning the stop.

“People are not equipped for such an experiment,” declared Don Gledhill, Academy executive. “If any plans of this nature are underway, technicians are keeping them well under cover.”

Carl Dreher, chief of the sound department at Radio Pictures Studios, declared that present indications are that nothing of this sort would be attempted within the next five years.”

Jack Warner Silent on Report Fox to Take Over Warner Houses on Coast

(HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Upon his return from New York, J. L. Warner declined to comment on reports that the Warner Brothers Pacific Coast theatres might be taken over by the Fox West Coast organization. He declared that motion pictures will lead the country back to prosperity and that more than 70 feature pictures will be made by First National and Warner Brothers. Production starts within 30 days.

“Boy Friends” Series to Continue Indefinitely

(HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—So successful have been the two releases of the “Boy Friends” series, that Warner Bros. and Mickey Daniels, once leads in “Our Gang” comedies, that Hal Roach has decided to continue the series indefinitely, according to announcements from the studios.
Most Unusual Sets
In U History Used
To Film "Dracula"

Cobwebs 18 Feet in Diameter Stretch Across Ruined Castle—Beautiful Crypt in Abbey
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26—Some of the most remarkable trade and horror scenes in the entire film, and mainly the most unusual ones ever erected at Universal studios, are being used in the filming of "Dracula," the strange story which brings to the screen the legend acclaimed as "the most weird character in fiction"—Count Dracula, a human vampire who lies dead in his casket during the daytime only to rise during the hours of darkness and feast on the blood of living persons.

The earlier sequences of this terrifying drama are laid in Dracula's Transylvanian castle, a great stone structure fallen into ruin and decay, and deserted for 500 years except for its one ghostly occupant. Massive columns support the ceilings, and even the floors are made of stoneflagging. The great central hall is higher than a man can reach.

Cobwebs 18 Feet in Diameter

The castle interior, beguiled with the dust of centuries, is fastened with cobwebs, one of these great silken meshes being more than 18 feet in extending entirely across the grand stairway. The wall hangings droop in tatters, blackened with age and dust. Fallen blocks of granite litter the floors, and enormous trees thrust their dead branches in at the window openings. The scene is one of utter desolation.

Later the scene of "Dracula" shifts to England, and here the sinister Count takes up his abode in a deserted abbey, one place in the country, which resembles his castle in Transylvania. The ancient building is of stone inside and out, and much of the action takes place below the level of the land, in the vaulted burial crypt, where Dracula lies each day in a semblance of death in a great box-like coffin lined with his native earth.

Architectural Beauty

Perhaps the most beautiful setting in the picture is the steep, narrow stairway leading down from the castle to a landing, formed by endless succession of steps in a single unbroken curve. As an example of simple architectural beauty, this scene is a beautiful triumph for Danny Hall, art director of the picture.

Belu Lugosi, the Count Dracula of the original New York stage production, plays the same role on the screen, and two other members of the stage cast, Edward Van Sloan and Herbert Bunston, are seen in the roles which they created four years ago. Other impostors of blood in the picture are played by Helen Chandler, Dwight Frye, Frances Dade, David Manners, Charles Gerrard, Moon Carroll and Lon Chaney. "Dracula" was directed by Tod Browning, famous as author and director of many of Lon Chaney's films.

Trem Carr in New York to Confer with Grant L. Cook
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Trem Carr, producer of Western pictures for Tiffany, has arrived in New York for conference with Grant L. Cook, vice-president of the company, on the future product.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 27—Louis Heifetz is now staging his screen adventures at Darmour studios. He is also handling the studio publicity.

Paramount to Do 17 Features
In East by August Next Year

Largest Schedule Attempted by an Eastern Plant Since Sound Came

In, Says Lasky—Warner Vitaphone Studio Turns Out
Four More Shorts—Sennett Studio in Plane
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of production for Paramount, has announced a total of 17 feature productions to be completed at the Astoria Studios of the company between now and August, 1931.

Maurice Chevalier will star in two pictures to be directed by Ernst Lubitsch; Nancy Carroll, who is now at work on "Stolen Heaven," will make three films; Claudette Colbert, Frederic March, Clive Brook, Charles Ruggles and other stars, will contribute to the program.

Ernst Lubitsch will direct one other film in addition to the pair for Chevalier; and George Abbott, Dorothy Arzner, George Cukor, Edward Lachman and Edward Sloman are scheduled each to direct one or more pictures.

Largest Attempted Under Sound

The list of writers who will prepare script for the feature programs includes Donald Ogden Stewart, Preston Sturges, Austin Parker, Ursula Parrott, Ernest Vajda, Dana Burnet, Rosamund Guyon, Hackett, Gertrude Purcell and several others.

Commenting on the new schedule, Lasky said: "The Paramount studio in New York is numerically the largest and most ambitious ever attempted by the Eastern plant since sound came to the screen. Every production is designed as a worthy successor to recent hit pictures produced here."

10,546 Extras Employed

During the period from July to November of this year, the Paramount Studio here employed 10,546 extras in various productions. Frank Heath, casting director, has announced that 400 additional will be taken on for the film, "Stolen Heaven," with more to be hired as the 1930-31 program gets well under way.

The cast of "Stolen Heaven" now includes Louis Wolheim, Pauline Lord, Edward Keane, Joan Carr, G. Albert Smith, Dagmar Oakland, Joseph Crehan, Buford Armitage and Joan Kenyon. George Abbott is directing.

The title "Strictly Business" has been replaced by "Another Man's Wife" as the tentative title for the Claudette Colbert vehicle which is scheduled to go into production about December 1.

Four More Vitaphone Shorts

Holding to its production pace, the Warner Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn, has turned out four new shorts. Arthur Hurley directed a mystery film.

Bannister Is Still
Ann Harding's Lead
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—And he's still her leading man! It was disclosed this week that the first time since Harry Bannister, her husband, she engaged him as her leading man for the stock company she headed in Detroit during one summer season.

"Good leading man and a delightful husband," is her comment.

"The Strange Case," in which Charles Halon, Gerald Oliver Smith, Florella Montague and Ray Collins are cast. Martinelli, famous Metropolitan Opera star, has recorded two popular songs in English as a Vitaphone Varieties number. They are "Song of Songs" and "Morning."

Joe Penner is featured in a two-reel comedy, "Making Good," which was written by Stanley Koth and directed by Alf Goulding. Others in the subject are Ultra Tuggeron and Irene Blair. The fourth of the films completed this week is "The Hangover," a one-reel comedy, in which Roy Mack directed Neally Edwards, who wrote the script, Bernard Granville and Josephine Williams.

William H. Lytell, brother of Albert, has been signed to appear in a comedy at the Brooklyn studio, which is shortly to go into production. It will be his talking screen debut. Casey Robinson, a member of the scenario staff, has been selected to direct "Mardi Gras," a two-reel color picture he wrote the script. It is said to be one of the most elaborate films ever planned for Vita- phone Varieties.

Elaborate Sennett Comedy

Mack Sennett is producing an elaborate comedy for Educational, which will feature a transcontinental chase, in which several different mediums of transportation will be used, including planes. Shooting will take place at the Newark Airport, where Sennett has arranged for fitting up a complete studio in one of the planes. During the flight across country, it is part of the comedy to be made for the shooting of points of scenic interest. The picture will be filmed in natural color, through the use of Sennett's own process.

Mack Stark of Simple Simon Comedies has started production on the second of his series at the Ideal Studios in Hudson Heights, N. J., with direction in the hands of Mort Blumenstock. Louis Simon is featured in the comedy, "Radio Madness," from an original story by William A. Grew. In the cast are Nina Sorel, Rubie Welch, who assisted in the adaptation, Peggy Cunard and Ernie Melrose.

Three more of the Music Masters, series have been turned out by Fitzpatrick Pictures. They feature the voices of Giuseppe Verdi, Johann Strauss and Felix Mendelssohn, with accompanying music rendered by Nathaniel Shilkret and his orchestra and by the Vocal Radio Artists.

Billy Clifford, Actor
And Exhibitor, Dies
(Special to the Herald-World)

URBANA, O., Nov. 28.—Billy "Sing" Clifford, operator of the Clifford theatre, died at his home here a few days ago. Clifford had operated the theatre bearing his name for three years, leaving the stage to his son. His full name was William Cliff- ford Shyrgin but he shortened it when he went on the stage. He was a deputy state fire marshal.
Let Talking Film Say Nothing That Can Be Acted: Garnett

Ideal Picture Would Have Two-Thirds of Footage in Pantomime and Without Subtitles of Any Kind, Declares Pathé Director (Hollywood, Nov. 28.—A talking picture, according to Tay Garnett, the young Pathé director who has given the public “Her Man” and has won greater acclaim than those who appear in it, is a picture from which you can take all dialog and still have a picture.

“Although we have the oral, the ocular is the predominant element in the manufacture of our product,” he declared. “My whole aim in making ‘Her Man’ was to get away from the theatre and do a motion picture.”

Garnett declared that motion picture producers have only one thing which the legitimate stage does not—and that it must be utilized to the fullest extent to hold the attention of audiences.

“The one value we have is the ability to portray, actually, those things which are brought to the stage through the conversation of the players. For instance, we can give our audiences war scenes when on the legitimate stage it is necessary for someone to say ‘there’s a war going on outside.’”

Expresses Action with Action

Garnett, in working with Tom Buckingham, writer of script and dialog, devoted all his attention to expressing action with action and with pantomime wherever possible. He let nothing be said which could be acted, and “Her Man” has revealed this treatment. It is so clearly revealed that editors have written stories of it.

“The ideal picture,” Garnett said, “would be done with two-thirds of the footage in pantomime with no subtitles of any kind. Plenty of action will make such a picture, but it will take some time to achieve it.”

Garnett has been one of the few instinctive directors. By instinctive is meant an ability to originate and to portray in an unforced manner. The instinctive director is the opposite of a mechanical director, who lays his plans and goes ahead with his picture in a routine manner.

Inspires Players

The players who work with him feel this intuitive ability which he possesses. He is not forced to direct them. They give inspired performances. Seven extras were injured in a fight scene in “Her Man,” not because Garnett was directing, but because they wanted to make a success of the scene for Garnett. He couldn’t stop them.

Garnett puts a great deal of responsibility up to the public.

“The exhibitor and the public help make our pictures,” he declared. “Their reactions mean everything to us. A good director is one who never fails to picture an audience behind him as he works, looking at everything he does.

“We do the things which we think would entertain us if we were out in the audience. We do the things which seem worthwhile to us. We think, being normal, that those things which interest us will interest our audience.

“Our feelings are the only things on which we can base.”

Says Wide Film Hurts Intimacy

Garnett does not have a great deal of hope for wide film—he has the belief that the wide film makes intimate scenes less intimate.

“Wide film was Corot or Michelangelo we could compose pictures on wide film which would still retain their focal point,” he said, “but we won’t make. Our pictures are not masterpieces of art. Our problems are not artistic, but deal with kitchen stoves and backyards and studies.”

Garnett feels that the sound track on the side of the film has made it square and awkward, but believes this will be remedied before very long.

“It has handicapped us as far as range is concerned,” he asserted. “As I pointed out, this range, or scope, is the most important element in motion pictures, in contrast to the stage. Elasticity of space and background mean everything to us.”

New Warner Theatre Is Opened in Quaker State

By Company Executives

(West Chester, Pa., Nov. 28.—Following a dinner given by the local chamber of commerce for Warner executives, the new Warner theatre here was formally opened last Friday night.

Seating 1,600, the house is modernistic in style, and is said to have a projection room which is a model of its kind, containing the latest apparatus for securing light effects in connection with the screen offering. “The Life of the Party” was the initial attraction.

Warner San Pedro House Opened on Silver’s Return

(West Chester, Pa., Nov. 28.—M. A. Silver, general manager of Warner Brothers Pacific Coast theatres, left Friday to confer with home office executives. He will spend a week in Boston and a week in New York.

Upon his return December 8, the Warner Brothers theatre at San Pedro, the second in the $15,000,000 expansion program, will be opened.

Moves Openings to Friday

BOSTON.—Loew’s State theatre has joined with the rest of the first run houses in starting its weekly feature on Fridays instead of Saturdays.
What a Lot of Baths!
He Has 117 Bathrobes
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—William Bakewell will have to do a lot of bathing to keep up with his wardrobe! In "Dance, Fools, Dance," in which he plays a leading part with Johnnie Ray, it is proved that he is a wastrel and a profligate—as far as his screen activity is concerned. In order to do his part he opens a close in his home while the camera cranks, and inside are 117 bathrobes.

Donates 10 Per Cent of Four Weeks' Receipts to Aid Unemployment Funds

ALBANY, Nov. 28.—Cooperating with other agencies in bringing about relief from the results of the unemployment situation, C. H. Buckley, president, and Harmanus Bleecker Hall motion picture theatres in Albany, N. Y., stepped to the front last week with the announcement that he would donate ten per cent of the gross receipts of the two theatres for the next four weeks to the Mayorga Unemployment Fund. It is expected that Mr. Buckley's offer will net several thousands of dollars that will become almost immediately available for the relief of the unemployed in Albany. Buckley said that there had been too much talk about what should be done, and too little action. "It is up to somebody to take the first step," he added, "and I am going to take it. I sincerely hope that this lead will be followed by other Albany business concerns."

Arrangements for the relief program will be in charge of Alex Sayles, general manager, operating the special midnight show and the theatre received mention on all the advertising and circulars distributed by the association. In addition the event received a break in each of the city's daily papers, as well as several photos.

Machnovitch Is Made Pathe's General Auditor
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Arthur B. Poole, a director of Pathé, has appointed Samuel Machnovitch, general auditor of Pathe Exchange, Incorporated, as controller of the company. He has been associated with Pathe since 1910, recently receiving a 20 year service pin. After time spent in various company offices in the East, Machnovitch returned to the home office in 1922 as head accountant.

Wolheim Will Act Only In "Gentlemen's Fate"
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Louis Wolheim, who recently directed "Sheep's Clothing" for Radio Pictures, is going back to acting exclusively, it was revealed here this week. He has been signed to play the evil brother of John Gilbert, in Gilbert's new production, "Gentlemen's Fate." The story was done for M.G.M by Ursula Parrott. Mervyn Le Roy will direct.

"Scandal Sheet" Is Title
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—"Scandal Sheet" has been "Unfit to Print" as the title for George Bancroft's new starring picture for Paramount.

Racket No. 1,435,678,921:
One of the prettiest little pieces of flamboyantism being pulled off in Hollywood, Home of Hokum, is the "Stars' Homes Racket." This is a flourishing little industry engaging the attention of not more than a dozen sharpshooters in all. Half of these work at the business regularly, the others indulge only in weekends and holidays, or when a convention is in town. "The Stars' Homes Racket" is nothing more than the business of showing yokels where the stars live.

For fifty cents you are privileged to climb into an automobile, usually a touring car with the top down, and have pointed out to you the home of every player you care to call out.

The king of the racket is a gentleman called, for obvious reasons, "Bandy." Bandy wears a cap and charges seventy-five cents.

Since most of the gorgeous homes in Hollywood and Beverly Hills are NOT owned by picture stars Bandy is forced to fabricate a bit. Should he point out the home of a Mister Darrow Dutledge, and say that this gentleman controls over 20 per cent of the industry the yokels would feel they were being cheated. What they're paying to see is where Greta Garbo lives!

Well, it's a tough story, mates. You can't see Greta's house from the road. So Bandy, and he feels badly about the deception—honest he does—points to the beautiful home of Darrow Dutledge and announces, "Before you spreads the magnificent home of glorious Greta Garbo, built in May, 1929, at a cost of one million two hundred thousand dollars, exclusive of a mineral water swimming pool, inlaid tennis court and a sun parlor. At this very minute glorious Greta Garbo is in her sun parlor taking her sun bath. No peeping now, ha, ha, ha."

Sometimes someone pipes up that he's read that this or that star lived in an apartment. This makes Bandy angry. "Those lousy press agents," he says. If the car is filled, meaning there are six yokels, he takes them around for twenty minutes, pointing out about forty houses, some of which actually are stars' homes, although Bandy admits he doesn't know more than one or two of them to be actually what he says they are.

If the car is half filled, Bandy takes them out for ten minutes, still showing them the same number of stars' homes. The thing is easy. If there are only three passengers in the car he puts all the stars close together. "There's Garbo's home, and there's Fairbanks', and there's Chaplin's, see it, that one, and there's Barthelmess..." It seems they're all neighbors on slow days.

At the end of the trip Bandy makes a little speech to the bunch. It seems that by much stealth and labor he has been able to procure the telephone numbers at which the stars may be reached personally. "How would you like to hear Charlie Chaplin's own real voice over the telephone for twenty-five cents?"

Almost everyone buys one. We asked Bandy how he had been able to get these exclusive numbers, or were they faked, too. "Oh, they're not fake," he says, "They're the numbers of the studios where they work." Beautiful.

He had only one setback. It seems that Mervyn LeRoy, the director, took a ride in Bandy's car. Bandy didn't recognize him until the car started, and then was afraid to open his mouth. Finally he caught LeRoy's eye and LeRoy winked at him when he wound up his speech at the end of the twenty minutes he said, "For twenty-five cents I'll introduce you to a real, live director," but by that time LeRoy was forty miles away.

Warner Program Calls for 70 Pictures for 1930-31
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Jack L. Warner, vice president in charge of production for Warner Brothers has announced that that company, in conjunction with First National, will soon launch the largest production schedule in the history of the company. The program calls for 70 pictures for the 1930-31 season. Work is to begin December 15 on the first picture.

SOUND REPRODUCTION

THE BLUEBOOK SCHOOL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 61.—(A) Explain in full detail, just what will be the effect, or the effects, of dirt, dust or electrolyte, or a combination of all three, on the top of storage batteries? (B) What is meant by “battery examination day,” and what attention should the batteries have on that day? (C) Of what does a dirty battery job speak?

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 44

The question was: Provided the plate be connected to the grid, is the grid an advantage or a disadvantage (and why) when the tube is used to rectify current? Explain just why the plate and filament of a tube act as a current rectifier. Is current rectified by a single tube direct current?

There were many excellent answers. I have selected that of brother Daugherty for publication because of its clarity, correctness and conciseness. Daugherty says:

"If a tube containing a grid is used as a current rectifier, the grid may prove to be an advantage if it is connected to the plate, because of the fact that the useful area of the plate will thereby be increased, since the grid itself then becomes a part of the plate. But if it is not connected to the plate, it is more than likely to detract from the efficiency of the tube, as it may collect a charge of its own, and thus interfere with the flow of the electrons.

"The plate and filament of a tube act as a current rectifier because of one important fact, which is that the current can flow only from the filament to the plate. This is true, because electric current consists of small particles of negatively charged electricity, known as electrons, which are attracted by positive and repelled by negative. The filament, being negatively charged with electricity, produces electrons. This the plate can't do since it's not heated; also, because of the fact that it is positively charged during half of each cycle of the alternating current. The electrons, then, being attracted by positive, flow from the filament to the plate during the half-cycle in which the plate is positively charged. During the succeeding half-cycle in which the plate is negatively charged, the electrons, being repelled by negative, could not flow at all. It follows, therefore, that any flow of current through the tube could only be in one direction.

"Current which is rectified by but a single tube is not true direct current. This is because only one-half of each cycle of the alternating current is able to pass through the tube, both the plate and filament being negatively charged during the other half. The result is a highly vibratory current, which uses only half of the total amount of power available and therefore is not a true direct current."

Incidentally, one correspondent says, "Why do you never publish any of my answers, though my name almost always appears as having answered correctly?" For the simple reason, my brother, that almost always there are many correct answers from which I must select one for publication. If they are all correct, then I must make my choice between them upon other points, such as neatness, correctness, etc.

For example, my old friend Budge, has apparently stopped answering very likely because, while he evidently expended much time in looking things up and preparing a thoroughly correct answer, still those answers were very seldom more correct than some others, and they were seldom worked in the best way for appearance in print. Therefore, while his answers were correct and were given due credit as being correct, they were not published.

This "school" is being run for the benefit of those who follow it, and when you have done your best to prepare a correct answer and have sent it in, you have had all the possible benefit because you have studied and learned all you were able to on the particular point under discussion. Also, you have learned how to use your Bluebook in the best possible way. You really gain nothing from having your answer published. The "school" is valuable for you only in that it leads you to study and tells you wherein you have been right and wrong in your answers.

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 45

The question was: Describe in detail the method by means of which two tubes may be used for rectifying current, and thus both halves of alternating current be made available. Does the double connection (two tubes) produce direct current? How is non-pulsating current derived from a two-tube rectifier? How would you clean the contact points of a rectifying tube?

THERE were many excellent answers to this and many which were in need of considerable fixing. The following sent in replies that were passed as correct—Van Buskirk (very good, indeed), Frank Dudiak, Karl Friederich, Carl F. Daugherty, Gayle Grubbaugh (also excellent), G. T. Baldy, G. L. Doe (very good), T. R. Davis, Theodore Rantley, William Post, S. L. Allen, Robert Cirker, Frank L. Lee, W. D. Arnold, A. D. Henley, L. Thomas, Bert Rindle, Henry Singleton, Phillip Arnold, Frank T. Simmons, T. R. Mathews, M. R. Harrison, George Lavenburgh. Tyron Deffier, Bill Doe, Andrew Schaefer, T. G. Bryan, L. Herman, T. Robert Rhodes, Sydney Crowley, Wilson Smith, Jacob T. Rudd, Ernest B. Black, John Erick, Andrew Hahn, Oliver Brady, David Fiegel, Robert Richards, G. B. Alexander and F. T. DuBoise.

It was hard to select from the answers, but I think probably that of Carl Daugherty will perhaps serve a bit the best, because it is possible to reproduce the drawing without retracing it. (When drawings are sent, please make them in black ink.) Daugherty says:

"Two tubes may be used in the following manner to rectify current and make both halves of alternating current available:

"As may be seen in the accompanying illustration, the two transformers, T1 and T2, are connected through their primary windings with the 110-volt alternating current supply. These transformers are used to step up and step down the current, T1 being used to supply the necessary high voltage to the plate and grid of each tube, and T2 being used to supply the necessary low voltage to heat the tube filaments. As may be observed in the drawing, wire C and wire A, coming from opposite ends of the secondary winding of T1, are connected to the plate and grid of V1 and the plate and grid of V2, respectively. Wires A-1 and C-1, coming from the opposite ends of the secondary winding of T2, are connected to the filaments of V1 and V2. Therefore, when the current in the secondary winding of T1 is making wire C positive, the grid and plate of V1 will be positively charged, and the current would then flow from the filament, it being negatively charged, thence, following the same path as the current coming from V1, during the preceding half-wave followed. During the time the current is flowing through V2, of course, no current could flow through V1, its plate and grid being negative. It follows from this that both halves of the alternating current will be used if two tubes are employed in this manner.

"The use of two tubes does not produce true direct current because of the fact that the peak of each half-wave of the alternating current is not reached instantly, but increases and decreases gradually. Therefore, the product of a two-tube rectifier, unless the further use of a filter is employed, is not true direct current, but a strongly pulsating current."

"Non-pulsating current" is derived from a two-tube rectifier by the use of a filter, which is a combination of condensers and choke coils. The condensers act as electrical shock absorbers, and the choke coils act as electrical inertia, thus smoothing out the vibrations in the current and making it into true direct current.

"The contact points of a rectifying tube should be cleaned only with a rubber eraser or some other non-abrasive material. The use of anything of a rough character is likely to do more harm than good."

Sound Pictures Not New in Omaha; Had Them Back in 1906

Talking pictures of a kind were presented to Omaha theatregoers as far back as 1906. Records show that the Elite theatre, on Douglas street near Fourteenth, had a presentation called the "Cameraphone." It was an attempt to use an Edison graphophone backscene in synchronization with the recital of the story shown on the screen.

Mrs. Blanche Scott Lee, of Council Bluffs, in a newspaper feature story interview published in Omaha, describes how she entertained "nickelodeon" fans of a quarter century ago in both Council Bluffs and Omaha on the same day crossing the Missouri river between acts to be at one or the other theatre in time and then rehearsing for the next day’s picture before calling it a day after the last show late at night. Songs she sang in her day included "After the Ball," "Ben Bolt," "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," and similar popular melodies of her time.

Italians Disappointed With Language in First American-made Talker

(By Special Correspondent)

ROME, Nov. 28.—Exhibition of the first American-made talker in the Italian language proved disappointing entertainment when it was shown in this country. The picture was "You Are the Love." It was screened at the Odeon theatre in Milan. Italitone Film Productions is the producer.

The principal defect was in the dialog. The actors did not speak true Italian and one had a heavy Lombard accent.

N.Y. Local Sponsors Inspection Service in Union Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Sam Kaplan, president of Local 306 of the Motion Picture Machine Operators Union has inaugurated a detailed inspection service to cover every union operated theatre in greater New York.

The personnel of the inspection staff will be composed of carefully selected expert projectionists and technicians who will check on every phase of projection and sound reproduction. The service is a voluntary offering on the part of the projectionists’ union and will involve no charge to the exhibitor.

In addition the members of the inspection group will be available for emergency service at any time during the day or night.

A set of regulations which have been prepared by Kaplan in order that the service may be effective and efficient note in particular that any operator found smoking in the projection booth will be liable to instant dismissal by the union; that a man who leaves his machine while it is running will be brought before the executive board and severely penalized; and that in case of an emergency necessitating the operator leaving his booth, he must first call his relief operator to take charge.

Other regulations are as follows:
1. All fire department regulations must be strictly adhered to.
2. The booth must be in a clean and sanitary condition at all times. No oil or grease on the floor. No pieces of film on the floor, no dirt of any kind permitted.
3. All ventilating shafts must be free and clear of all dirt and dust.
4. No doubling of film permitted.
5. Absolutely no visitors permitted in booth.
6. No eating in the booth allowed.
7. All film must be carefully inspected before running. Any imperfections in print must be noted and reported to theatre manager.
8. Any and all fires must be reported immediately.
9. Before starting show, operator must see that machines are in perfect condition, check up on all sound apparatus and have one more present than will be needed such as extra carbons, amplifier tubes, exciter lamps and photoelectric cells.
10. No film or not actually in use must be kept in cabinets.
11. All fire and sand pails must be in place and pyrene extinguishers must be inspected and full.
12. Working schedule must be posted in a prominent place.
13. No changing of shifts or of days off is permitted without permission of the executive board.
14. Any or all questions of doubt in regard to any procedures must be submitted to the inspectors who are the official emissaries of the union. Appeals from their decisions may be made to the executive board.

Fire Destroys Sound Equipment of Theatre

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN AUGUSTINE, TEXAS, Nov. 28.—Fire believed to have started in a projection machine caused damages estimated at $1,500 to sound equipment of the August theatre here.

The loss is partially covered by insurance. There was a crowd present but all marched out in orderly fashion and no one was injured. Firemen confined the blaze to the projection room. Mrs. W. M. Wade is the owner.
BOX OFFICE PROMOTION

Capitol Gives 400 Overcoats to the Jobless; A Good Deed and Good Exploitation

Just now, while winter is bellowing its first chill blasts, there comes the opportunity for people in the motion picture industry to aid in relieving unemployment in their localities.

Exhibitors have gained a name for their willingness to assist in community enterprises. A number of theatre operators expressed at the recent MPTO convention their intention of helping the jobless. The exploitation value alone of this will mean much to them. Many others are following in their footsteps. Fred Perry, manager of the Capitol theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., is one of these.

In his theatre, Perry assembled a movie collection of 400 used overcoats which were distributed to the unemployed. This netted him a wealth of publicity in local papers and several pictures showing the line of men waiting outside the Capitol for their "new outfits."

Two Tickets for Every Coat:

Perry's method of obtaining the coats was just as novel as the idea of giving them away. He offered two free tickets for every old coat brought in. One of the news stories describes it as follows:

"Realizing the suffering which the winter may bring to the city's unemployed due to improper clothing the Capitol, operated by the Binghamton Theatre Company, is inaugurating a campaign to provide the needy with overcoats. The Capitol will be the center for collection of these overcoats and later for their distribution to the unfortunate. The theatre will give two tickets to each person who brings an overcoat to be given away November 14 to 19, inclusive. This is an opportunity to do an act of brotherly kindness."

Then Came Another Story

Three hundred applications for coats were received in advance. After the first few days of contributing to the fund, Perry found he would be 200 coats short unless something was done. Again the newspapers sent out a call and the response was more than filled.

Another promotion method carried out for relieving the unemployed was a benefit dance. It was organized by Kornblit and Cohen, operators of the Capitol and the Binghamton Theatre Company. The news story, a long one, said in part:

"An opportunity to 'get into the movies' is being offered by Kornblit and Cohen of the Binghamton Theatres Company in connection with steps to establish a fund for the relief of unemployment. It was announced today. The fund is to be administered by officials of Binghamton Post No. 80, American Legion, according to Fred Perry, manager of the Capitol theater.

Dance Swells Fund

"The initial move will be in the form of a dance to be staged Friday night of this week in the General Cigar Company's factory. At this dance motion pictures will be taken of the dancers and the pictures will be shown at the Capitol theatre next week. Prizes will be awarded for the most unique costumes and dancers will have a chance to see themselves in the movies.

"As an added feature, the theatre management has planned to present at each benefit, including the Friday night dance, selected vaudeville acts which are playing at the Binghamton theatre."

Such stunts as Perry and the Binghamton Theatres Company have used are not beyond the reach of any exhibitor. They may need to be cut down to a smaller scale, but they will make good exploitation. They offer the showman a chance to establish himself in the esteem of his fellow citizens and then there is always satisfaction in giving the other fellow a lift. Try it!

Creager in Wilmington

Alfred Creager has been named to succeed Ben Hook as manager of the Murphy house, Wilmington, Ohio, the latter being assigned to manage another theatre in the chain. In Springfield, Ohio, Hook had been in charge of the Murphy for about seven months.

Putting Green in Lobby Helps Boost "Love in the Rough"

Russell Lamb, manager of the Fisher theatre, Danville, Ill., installed a putting green in the lobby for his showing of "Love in the Rough," a golf comedy.

The artificial green was a one-hole affair, with three hazards. Every patron who made the hole in one was given a free ticket to the show. There were a lot of golfers who came to see the picture and they made good use of the miniature course. But they were not the only ones.

Further playing up the sports angle of the film, Manager Lamb negotiated a swap with two local distributors of Spalding sporting goods and obtained window displays of golf accessories, with stills and posters scattered about. Balls and clubs were given to patrons in a prize contest.
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

November 29, 1930

One of the tieup windows obtained by Pathé for "Her Man," starring Helen Twelvetrees. This particular window was located on Broadway in one of the leading drug stores. Stills of the star were featured. The hookup was made while the picture was showing over the RKO circuit in New York and Brooklyn.

"Life of the Party" Campaign Is Lesson in Cracking House Records

Warner Brothers' exploitation staff in Los Angeles gave a lesson in cracking attendance records when it staged a high pressure advertising campaign for "The Life of the Party."

Practically all the exploitation centered around advertising, either in newspapers or on billboards and throwaways. At the time the picture opened in two first run houses of the city, there happened to be some undeniably strong competition. Will Rogers was playing in person at a nearby house and an oppressive heat wave was playing all around.

24-Sheets Doubled in Number

In the face of such odds, the exploitation staff decided to concentrate on advertising. The number of 24-sheets was doubled for the picture. One-sheet posters were plastered in all available locations. Fifty thousand copies of a tabloid were distributed from house to house with humorous comments on the picture and players.

A balloting system, carrying posters on the film, worked all important streets. All newspaper ads featured the star, Winnie Lightner, with the opening day announcement running four columns wide. Radio hookups made it possible to broadcast several announcements of the picture's opening, together with popular tunes from the film.

Ale Tieup Gets Chain Stores

The exploitation also penetrated several hundred chain stores, through tieup with a variety of tieups, including a "Dry ginger ale," which sent out cards and literature.

The highlight of the campaign was a double page spread in a local newspaper on opening day, containing several special promotion stories and the rest advertising.

The Los Angeles staff believed that the campaign was a double page spread in a local newspaper, containing several special promotion stories and the rest advertising.

Many Use Letter Contest

A considerable number of exhibitors throughout the country are employing a letter contest to exploit "The Life of the Party." Newspaper stories invite readers to submit letters telling of occasions when they have observed examples of "the life of the party." Prizes of cash and admission tickets are offered in most cases.

Building Sentences From Film Titles Is Gaining Popularity

"Talkiegram" contests appear to be rising in popularity for exploitation purposes. Although not a brand new idea, they serve well in promotion and there are numerous hundreds of communities where they have not yet been used.

Theatres often promote these contests independently, but in San Francisco a newspaper has set out to put one over with no aid from any theatre. Naturally, this is excellent publicity for houses there.

The paper provides cash prizes amounting to $100 a week. A few theatres have cooperated by donating admissions. Rules of the contest call for arrangement of advertised theatre titles into a readable sentence or paragraph of correct continuity. Contestants may use not less than five titles or more than eight. Among the contributions already received, there are numerous clever pieces of work. Thousands are said to be participating and theatre advertisements in San Francisco are receiving a thorough going-over by readers every day.

Patrons of London Capitol Count Laughs in "Feet First"

Guessing the correct number of laughs which one ought to emit at a showing of "Feet First" was part of the ballhoo in London. Out of the Capitol Theatre, R. S. Roddick, manager, gave a radio to the winner. The official number of laughs was kept under a seal until the end of the engagement.

A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

(Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. They may be lifted as a whole or in part and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.)

The following article can hardly qualify as an editorial but it illustrates the.spelling which a column of humor adds to a house organ. Written by one who signs himself "Jake Blunderbust," it appeared in Filmland, a weekly published by the Roxian theatre, McClees Rocks, Pa.

Vox Pop

Katherine Jones of 814 Thomson ave., took pen in hand and dashed off a little note which immediately follows: She writes, "Dear Jake: We all get great pleasure out of reading your column. (Already shy of 100 pages) I'm only saying that's a good way to start a letter. I think you must have found the owner of the bird seen yesterday from all the chirping and singing on Saturday night. (As a matter of fact we did find the owner of the bird seed. Read last week's column.)"

"Why don't you have community singing on Wednesday nights? All the music lovers are present then. (If enough music lovers will write me, the management will arrange for organists on Wednesday nights.) Sometimes those sentiments tend to lead to the altar. (Very true, but I have noticed that on Wednesday nights the women outnumber the men about ten to one. Why don't you locate reading your program friends? It will bring the altar so much closer.)"

"Now I do get to the main purpose of your letter. "Now Jake, I want you to do me a favor. Publish in next week's Filmland, the name of the piece given away this week."

There then follows a list of uses to which Miss Jones' friends have put that piece. She then closes her letter with, "Hope to read your column every week."

Those last are kind words. I can't promise how long I'll be writing this column because I've heard that there is now in process of organization a U.S. JAKE BLUNDERBUST ON THE SPOT club. Some fellows are getting together to write letters to them.

They'll put a stop to that by putting Jake Blunderbust "on the spot." But don't you worry, girls, just go writing letters to me. They'll never put me on the spot because no one knows who or where I am. I'm as hard to get near as Al Capone. What will probably happen is they'll get the wrong guy and have plenty years in a nice cool cell to reflect on the mistake they made.

But I've forgotten to answer Miss Jones' question. The piece was a Shoetree. A very good one. The other one will be given away soon."

How'd you like the show last Monday?

Ties Up with Sorority for "Let Us Be Gay" Prize Dance

Don Hamm, manager of the Mars theatre, Lafayette, Ind., tied up with six fraternities and five sororities at Purdue University there to plug "Let Us Be Gay." Cards announcing the playdate and theatre were posted at the breaks in each of the houses. Cooperation of one of the sororities made it possible to stage a "Let Us Be Gay" prize dance in which only freshmen and freshman coeds participated.
How Do Your Ads Compare With These?

If your theatre ads are as good or better than these, send us some. If they are not as good, send them anyway, for reprinting on this page. Those shown above were run by the following theatres: 1, Capitol, Oklahoma City; 2, United Artists, Portland, Ore.; 3, United Artists, Detroit; 4, Fox, Detroit; 5, Capitol and Avalon, Chicago; 6, Alamo, Louisville; 7, Rialto, Louisville; 8, Embassy, Seattle; 9, Fillmore and Mission, San Francisco; 10, RKO Lyric, Cincinnati; 11, Paramount Publix, Boston; 12, Palace, Chicago; 13, Strand, Albany, N. Celebrating An Anniversary Is No Problem When Merchants All Help

What shall I do to celebrate the anniversary of my theatre? Many an exhibitor has asked himself this question, and so did the manager of the Orpheum in Omaha. Here is how he answered it:

A huge birthday cake was obtained through a tieup and placed in the lobby. Patrons were invited to guess its weight. Approximately 30,000 guesses were received. A local baking company, specializing in Dolly Madison cakes, baked the huge batch of sweet. It was brought to the theatre under police escort. Half a dozen men were required to unload it in such a way as to keep from damaging the frosting and the rest. Throughout anniversary week, the delivery trucks of the baking company carried posters heralding the fact that the cake was on display in the Orpheum lobby.

When the theatre had finished with it, portions of the cake were turned over to a boys' home and an institution for crippled children, there to be portioned out to youngsters.

Another tieup made it possible for the theatre to improvise a merchants display in its lobby. The hookup was in connection with the Chamber of Commerce's "Buy Now Week." A dozen local firms cooperated to rig up the exposition in the Orpheum with the message, "Buy Now." A feature of the exhibit was a replica of a retail toy department, with Santa Claus himself running it. The man who played the part took down the names of hundreds of youngsters and jotted down what they desired for Christmas

Plenty of Ways to Win Publicity; Here's Another

Many are the ways to win publicity, but the Weaver Brothers, traveling stage troupe, have a stunt with a new "fragrance.

When they played the Majestic in San Antonio, they presented the Brackenridge Park zoo there with a skunk from Arkansas. The presentation was made from the stage, it is reported, and the animal was announced to be an "odorless one," at least no one in the audience could prove that he wasn't. The newspapers liked it.

Hitchison to Halifax

Harold Hitchison, veteran manager of houses in Toronto and Hamilton, Ont., has been appointed manager of the new Capitol in Halifax, N. S., where T. S. Daley has been temporarily in charge. Daley is returning to Famous Players' home office in Toronto.

North Dakota Manager

STirs City with His Parade

Hal Cuffel, manager of the Orpheum, Grand Forks, N. D., dug up a stagecoach and created a batch of home-made cowboys to exploit "The Santa Fe Trail." The troupe paraded down the main-stem of the city, with four loudspeakers mounted on the stagecoach. The same type of stunt would work out well on a number of current pictures for other exhibitors.

Live Wires Please

Step This Way

What's the matter with the times? "Not a thing, if you tend to your publicity." That's the response of Albert Knopp, the vigorous, alert publicity director for the Stahl theatres in Fredericksburg, Texas.

We have just received a letter from Knopp and it contains so much pep and fire that we couldn't refrain from putting it into type. Here it is:

"What we're looking for in the theatre is real live publicity. We live and learn. Every day new ideas come along. Make use of them, for the new ideas are the ones that bring dollars at the box office. "Fellow publicity men, keep on working! If one idea fails, try another. Don't give up the ship. If times are hard, make 'em pay.

"One man complained to me the other day that the theatres are hard hit. Well, well! I never heard of that before. Business is not so bad if you go after it, no matter how hard the times may be. "The theatres should not be 'hard hit.' They'll go to the theatre anyhow.

"So let's GO and let 'em in. The show is still going on and all we have to do is LET THE PUBLIC KNOW IT.

"Give my best wishes to all the live wires and the dead wires."

We have never met this man Knopp, but apparently he's a live wire with high voltage.
Detroit RKO Gets Healthy Boost From Paper's Novel "Swap" Ads

Classified ads have many times and in varied ways been used to exploit pictures, and now the want ad section of a Detroit paper has given birth to a "Swap" contest.

Forest D. Freeland, publicity director for the RKO Downtown, promoted the idea through a teip with the Detroit Free Press. The procedure is this: Any person having something to "swap" inserts an ad in the paper, such as this—"BABY CARRIAGE—Will trade for a phonograph." The newspaper published a large display ad to ballyhoo the contest, which is reproduced elsewhere on this page. Copy in the display read—"Remember you were a boy and liked to trade? Remember the trades you used to make—you got the best of the bargain.

Plays Up Thrill of Trading
"Later on, when you grew up and went to work you bought the things you wanted instead of trading, but that is a thrill in trading that you can get on other way."

"Now the Free Press offers you an opportunity to enjoy the thrill of trading—swapping all over again. Next Sunday there will be a special column in the want section of the Free Press, where you can list the things you have and won't want, in trade for things you do. Undoubtedly you have in your home many worthwhile articles you no longer need. These things can be traded for the things you want."

"Here's the proposition. Place a Swap Ad in the Free Press. Tell what you have to trade and what you want in return. It must be an actual swap—articles for sale will not be printed in this column.

Give Tickets to Downtown
"You pay regular want ad rates for your ad and have an interesting time swapping in the old fashioned way. In addition you get two guest tickets to the RKO to see 'The Cat Creeps,' too."

The arrangement between the paper and the Downtown theatre will continue for sometime, it is understood. Many have responded to the call for ads simply because they received two free tickets for each ad and got the additional advertising.

As for the theatre, it enjoys good business, getting the attention of the paper each week in displays. Each new attraction is mentioned in one or more layouts for the "swap" contest.

Reports from Detroit after the contest opened indicate that it is an eminently successful. On the opening day a total of 152 ads appeared, occupying almost two full columns. As a result, 304 got tickets to "The Cat Creeps."

Nuptials at Bow Film
"Her Wedding Night" gave the B. F. Keith theatre, Dayton, a good excuse for putting on a stage wedding. It took place on the closing night of the film. Two couples were married simultaneously before a packed house.

Bicentennial Films
On Washington to Be Available in 1931

Exhibitors will, during the coming year, have an opportunity to book a number of appropriate films for the George Washington bicentennial celebration to take place in 1932.

A federal commission at Washington has already announced that the government will produce a full length talking picture of the life of George Washington in color. This film will be made historically correct and is expected to live as one of the most accurate records of the life of George Washington.

The picture will be available for showings in churches, schools, lodge rooms and theatres. It will be both educational and patriotic.

In addition to this government production, it is expected that a number of producing companies will make both short subjects and features for release.

The Washington bicentennial will be celebrated throughout the nation. It will begin October 19, 1931, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of Yorktown, and last through 1932. The two hundred anniversary of the birth of Washington will be marked in 1932. President Hoover is ex-officio chairman of the commission in charge.

Victor Gauntlett
Heads Publicity for Fox Far Northwest

Victor Gauntlett, for several years associated with the John Hamrick houses in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma, has been named director of publicity and advertising for Fox West Coast Theatres in the Pacific Northwest.

He will have more than 100 theatres under his purview. His offices will be in the Skinner building in Seattle.

Gauntlett has risen in prominence in comparatively short time, having attracted recognition on the Coast with the popular appeal of his ads and copy while with Hamrick.

One Old Indian Fighter Sees "The Big Trail"; Next Day He Brings All His Friends

Memories of Custer's last campaign against the redskins and similar frontier episodes were instrumental in bringing a score or more of pioneer day Indian fighters to the showing of "The Big Trail" at the Fox theatre in Detroit.

J. K. Chalmers, commander of the Col. S. Y. Seymour Camp No. 15, of the National Indian War Veterans, first attended the performance at the Fox and thought it so good that he suggested the remainder of the veterans attend the show in a body, which they did.
Blending Type, Stills and Art in One Theme

Part of the dynamic day by day advertising in New York newspapers for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "War Nurse" at the Astor. Every ad stresses one point only, the title of the picture. The displays are almost a drama in themselves; that's real effect in newspaper advertising. Again Howard Dietz and St Seadler have put over a superb campaign.

Heroincs! They gave their lives! They gave their love. What woman could say "NO!" to heroes on the brink of hell!

STAGE SHOWS

Baltimore Century
Week Ending November 21

"Nightingale Melodies," a Loew-Capitol theatre unit staged by Arthur Keller under the personal supervision of Louis K. Sidney, is offered at Loew's Century for the week ending November 21. It opens in one against green velvet curtains with the orchestra in the pit and 24 Chester Hall girls entering from each side in routine steps of a color rhythm dance, the colors in regular lights being red, black and yellow. In other lights changing to purple and orange. Costumes are tight bodices with feathers and hennins of feathers with leg tights.

After this the curtain part on full stage with side drapes and steps in rear with back drapes parted for tableau, with the Dodge Twins (Beth and Betty) of the Pollas Brothers and "A Night in Venice," framed in center, upper steps. Large head-dresses with two bandeaux for body and long train. They go into a stately movement dance of sultans and posse, ending on the steps in backward bend with backs toward audience. Curtains close on this and John Byam enters through center and sings with orchestra, "Spread Your Little Wings and Fly Away.

Curtains part again on full stage revealing the Dodge Twins on again in white bird costumes with white head-dresses and tail feathers. They go into a novelty dance with a backdrop of a large tree with nest in the woods. One whistling "Charmaine" as a solo. Then they go into a bird act of one whistling love calls to the other, who is bashful (similar to Arno Brothers). They finish with going off stage and appearing as birds up in nest of a tree at back—gunshot is heard, they duck, comedy work ending with whistling in joy at escape.

Curtains close and 24 girls come on dressed as penguins and do a comic dance, imitating movements of that antarctic bird, with buzz blowers making a comic "razzing" noise as they move against a silver and blue (ice effect) drop. This finishes another drop with a "Crazy House" painting used, against which Walter Nielsen comes out and does a number of novelty stunts on odd looking cycles. After this the girls come on in routines in yellow costumes and bare legs.

The curtains part full stage with back drops of green figures on yellow and as the girls form a tableau the Devil Foursome, adagio dancers, one girl and three men, come on and go into their work. The finale is furnished by several show girls in novelty costumes entering from each side in rear on steps and walking down stage, with the Dodge Twins bringing up rear, and all in a posed tableau for the final curtain, with orchestra and organ music.

Omaha Orpheum
Week Ending November 20

Herb Larimer and Marlon Hudson, cyclists, the famous in clown, delight Omaha Orpheum under this week with their act. Larimer wears baggy trousers and generally loose fitting clothes. Miss Hudson appears in white tights and a green plumpage skirt. Their individual as well as their joint riding of cycles is a pleasing display.

The cycling act follows the playing of "Just a Little Closer" by "Edlino" and his R.K. Orlians or.

George Givot, who might be called the "It" boy of the stage, most appropriately, has returned to Chicago, where the fans who gathered to his "sweetful wit" have again rushed to his standard, and he's the same George that made such a hit here a number of years ago, such a hit, that he went to Broadway and—well, Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book" held him between its covers for two years, years in which he didn't get more witty, we might say, but polished that which he had (it's a gift) to a high lustre. For a while he was with Ziegfeld, and after an absence of three years (we've found that's the exact number) he's back again, as strong as ever. Instead of calling him the "It" boy, however, perhaps the title of Paul Piper would be more exact, for he really packs when his name appears on the "schedule"! They do!

Possible Uses Of New Method For Reaching

Lew White and Ted Fiorito Make Successful Experiment from Several Miles Away

There is nothing new—etc., but occasionally something pops up that is of unusual interest and may be placed, it seems, in a category not wholly "conforming" to the old adage. Recently, in an experiment completed through the cooperation of the telephone company, who furnished the remote control apparatus used, it was found possible to make a phonograph record without the artists being present in the studio. It is reported to have been a highly successful effort, and one that opens up a vista of possibilities that are interesting to conjure with.

Lew White, organist, and Ted Fiorito and his band were the central figures in the plan. Following several tests at the studio of the recording company, White began the master record of "When the Organ Played at Twilight," and, at a given moment, he dropped out, and Fiorito's band took up the number from there, playing from a location several miles away. This dropping out and continuing was continued throughout the duration of the song, and on a number of occasions, they played the song simultaneously.

Although this attempt at recording by remote control was made on the new Durium "paper" record, it has been mentioned and is expected that there may be a possibility that many of the wax records will also be made in this manner. The control is handled entirely by a system of headphones. Many uses are seen for this particular method of making records. It might be said, in doing some of the "conjuring" that was heretofore mentioned, that for one thing, there is a chance for a great diversity of selections. The fact that the artists need not come to the studio might mean that instead of making a special effort to make a record, all that would have to be done would be to "born in" on one of their regular programs somewhere and select what was needed. Among that many examples of what may be expected is the equipping of the schools of the country with a series of records which could only be made by chore. violin, piano and drums each in turn taking up the melody with the lights upon them as they carry the melody.

Jean Carr, youthful dancer who calls her part of the stage program "Yesterday and Today" presents a bit of finery in dancing and then introduces her mother and her father, each of whom to do tap dances, later joining their daughter in a trio tap dance number. Miss Carr wears a costume consisting of a silver and black bodice and flax skirt of yellow and green. She wears her hair long hanging below the nap of her neck.

Dol Chain and Artie Convey join in a selection on "love making," then barker mental telepathy and close their act with a Frank musical instrument stunt, ukulele and xylophone, playing part of the time in the dark and leaving a flashlight glow on the best of the rhythm.

Blossom Swiey and Benny Fields, climaxing the stage performances also star among them. Their stage apperances are beautiful and besides the drums background are transparent and translucent screens. Their colors and duets are now here and include a "Lulu Belle" number, a satire on "The Command to Love" a number of Statey ballad and dance numbers. Their Southern dialect and easy stage manner wins from quickly so the favorites in the vaudeville presentation of the week.

Omaha World
Week Ending November 21

Frank Hrech, director of the World band and master of ceremonies at the Omaha World opens this week's stage attractions with an overture, hits from "Shrink Up the Hills" by the Bunko Band, "Guns o'Guns." Cornet duets and saxophone trio feature in these hits. These are played in the pit. After the news flashes and coming week's attractions are projected upon the screen, the band appears upon the stage and plays a novelty, "Hey, Hey, You Had Your Corn Today?"

The Eight Marie Peterson Girls, with black plumage headresses and much plumage at their hips as features of their otherwise abbreviated costumes, present a tap dance. The colored men, following light effects to imitate lightning flashes, appear front stage and with the band accompanying do the Charleston. Featuring their act is a tap to rat-tat-tat of the "Chicago machine gun." Orville Renne, introduced as the late star of the "Student Prince" sings "Deep in My Heart." "The Night You Told Me Those Little White Lies," "Kiss Me, Sweetheart," and other selections, a varied program, concluding with "Lis Leo," as "Sunn by Al Jolson."

Frank Hrech assumes the role of a Hindu in his karem with the Peterson girls about him dressed in costumes to symbolize the garb of India, Oriental fans and gilded vases add to the atmosphere. They present an interpretive dance. Their black and silver costumes find a beautiful setting in the silver panels in front of each orchestra player's position at the rear of the stage.

Hyde and Barrill present a comedy act, with subtle humor, clowning and using splendidly built musical instruments—violin and bass. Hyde, a cornet with a key that explodes and megaphone end made of rubber; a bass violin that wabbles its neck, "flaps its wings" and "lays and egg."

Bee Boy Babylate and company, eight men, in attractive Roman setting and glider setting costumes present an unusual tumbling act and act that shows supreme muscular strength. Pyramids are built and acrobatic feats extraordinary are performed, winning much applause.

Before the Mike

BY BOBBY MELLIN

Jean Paul King, Chicago NBC announcer, finds that his script is catching up with him. Jean recently proudly exhibited a copy of the high school newspaper from Toms, Wisconsin, graduated from High School, containing a long story on his radio work.

But the eagle eyes of the "Before the Mike" paragraph stuck away at the bottom of his column. The paragraph read: "In the Senior Bunko Election," King was selected by his classmates as the "greatest force minds everybody's business, and second best blurfer and orator."

The radio work of this superb announcer has earned him to thousands of listeners, and has won for him a warm spot in the hearts of all those who have heard him over the air.

The golden voice of Frankie Sylvan, who is featured at the Music Box (formerly the Cinderella Cafe) can now be heard over station WIBO. Frankie has a great personality and should be a big drawing card at the south side cafe. . . . Wendell Hall, the bassist and Mosquito of the week weekly over the NBC chain, in a new program of songs and chatter.

George Devau, who is the condutor of Terrace Garden's orchestra is a winner for the unique violin effects for which the orchestra is fast becoming famous. When not thinking up trick violin arrangements, George busies himself trying to make the other members of the band believe he can play checkers. Coop Rowley leaves the Terrace Garden December 3 for southern parts. He hopes that he won't stay away long a time, for he is always welcome in "these here parts."

Promptly at midnight, the WBBM Nutty Club, one of the features that first made Chitown known on the air, holds court each week at Al Quickbuck's Granada Cafe. Besides the fun galore which has made this WBBM feature internationally famous, the new Nutty club programs offer the world's finest entertainment, presenting some of the stage stars appearing in Chicago.

If you've ever wondered how Paul Whitman's band maintains the unapproachably high standard of music that richly earned for the "King" his title as peer among musicians, visit a Whitman rehearsal. So finely attuned are Whitman's musical ears that the slightest wrong shading, rhythm, either above or below, is a speck in the "musical ointment" and corrected almost before it is flanked. And until those sensitive ears are satisfied, no number is played, either on the other or before an audience. Everyone who comes in contact with Paul finds him a regular chap and feels that nothing is too difficult for him to do.

Fred Waldner, popular NBC tenor, assumed a new role recently, when he became "Friendly Fred," on the Friendly Five Footnote program with Del Lampley's orchestra. It is no stretch of imagination to envision Waldner with the name of "Friendly Fred."

He has a wide infectious grin that does not come off and is ready with a cheery greeting for everyone in the halls and studios of the NBC. Fred is one of the veteran entertainers of the NBC staff and is probably one of the most popular performers from the local studios. Life for him has been just one sweet song.

Josef Koettner, conductor of the 43 piece Armour Hour program tells me that the members of his band are drawn from almost every corner of the globe. Of the 60 or so only twenty are native born Americans, of whom five are Jewish and one is a full-blooded Sioux Indian. The other twenty-three are divided among Germans, two Frenchmen, four Bohemians, three Italians, two Danes, two Englishmen, and a Belgian, Norwegian, Dutch, and Russian. Kenneth King, was himself born in Bavaria. The cosmopolitan nature of the orchestra, as well as the world-wide experience of its conductor, explain to a great extent, the unusual versatility of the Armour program.
Hillo Everybody—It's a Red Letter Day over at the Edward B. Marks Music Company. After being married to the writer of "Ramona," "Jeannine," and hundreds more, is back on the job as general professional manager, with the placing of promising songs in the firm's catalogue. Two of his latest numbers, "On Santa-Po," and "Something Moving In Your Eyes" (in which he collaborated with Abe Bar and Dave Drayer) are in the firm's pop catalog, sides A-51 and B-51, and "The Peanut Vendor" and these songs are expected to bring up the firm's popular song sales in a great measure. . . . The Dolly Varden, Brown & Henderson group tendered themselves an informal dinner and dance November 16th in the Empire Room of the Victoria Hotel. Miss Molly Rines, board member, reported that they succeeded so far beyond their fondest hopes that similar functions are to be regular features with this group of members of the Wisconsin Theatre. . . . The Winkle's Jones dampped the party somewhat, as Danny is quite a war when he gets started but Bobby Crawford did find occasion to attend and joined in the spirit of the party after a brief address. . . . After a most successful day's work doing which new contracts with foreign publishers were entered into and existing relations were maintained. Mr. Robbins, head of the Robbins Music Corporation, returned to New York on the Mauretania last Friday, November 21st. While in London, Mr. Robbins made a valuable contract with Keith Prowse & Co., Ltd., to represent the firm to the British trade for one year and six months. In Berlin, an advantageous deal was concluded with Musikverdihandlung Alberti and in Riga he signed an engagement for Francis Day to represent his firm in France. Both the British and Riga contracts are of considerable magnitude. Mr. Robbins reports that he found conditions quite satisfactory abroad, with American music still a great favorite with Europeans, due in large measure, to the success of the talkies. He was accompanied by trip to Berlin, with a large group of agents, attorneys for the firm. . . . All of Frank Swanee's friends will be happy to hear that he is doing very well at the Jersey City Stanley theatre, where he is known simply as "Swanee." He has been at this house for four weeks, and he'll he making the permanent Master of Ceremonies. Those who do not know him personally remember him as the boy with the beautiful voice. But also as the one with the striking resemblance to Jack Dempsey. Swanee is a born and bred American, and all, has a marvelous voice which will, one of these days, place him among the top-notchers. . . . Meet that great fellow, Jack Kelman, general manager of Davis, Coots & Engel, the other day for the first time, and believe me, he is the greatest fellow I have ever met. Cool head, level heads in love with his work and is one of the most laconic and level headed business men for his firm. . . . dance." "No and My Shadow," by Jay Mills and Joe After.

The Earle Rockets, dressed as dolls in white and blue sashes, put on a mechanical doll dance that shows careful training.

Frank Richman's star of "Sunny Side Up," activates the audience with his genial personality even more than his figuring. He was in a genial mood and sang "Walking with Stuio." "If I Could Be with You," "St. Louis Blues" and a new, humorous number, "Never Swat a Fly," Mr. Richard, who is a Philadelphia boy, is a great favorite with Earle audiences.

The voice of Willie, West and McGinty, knock about comedienne, put on their house holding or rather house wrecking act and the audience is kept in an uproar by the misadventures all through the number. They have added several new stunts the timing of which is remarkable and there is not a dull moment in their act.

The Earle is doing its bit to relieve the unemployment situation and Jay Mills announced that anyone with real talent would be given an opportunity to secure a week's engagement and a start on a theatrical career by appearing at the auditions which he holds every Wednesday night at 12 midnight.

"Melody Menu" might be called a "rare dish" as it concerns the category of stage shows, in fact, it has a great deal to do with dishes, but only in pantomime and song. The presentation opens with the Travellers gathered on the stage singing "Your Favorite Dish," going through appropriate gestures of stirring something while they sing. As they finish, the bullet comes through the scrim curtain which hides the band car, and does a tap routine. Suddenly the scrim goes up, and on bounces Madame Mereff, who certainly is pulling them in. His name in Lights and Sounds means much, so the box office receipts go, the patrons of the theatre.

A band number entitled "You've Got That Thing," in next play, featuring several members of the band, who do solos with their particular instruments. After this Laya Lay and Lee, acrobatic comedians, pull some clever antics, never being able to do anything right the first time, but after considerable effort finally manage to do it to perfection, winning a good share of applause from the audience.

The production number opens and the bullet comes on the stage, and back of them are the Travellers. They all sing a song about cooking, and then play several xylophones which are made to look like dishes from the front. Benny appears at the close to do a tap thing. That boy is clever, there's no doubt about it. Tryst everything and anything and does it well.

Hyde and Burrell put on a spell of songs, dances and plays which go over fairly well, several very amusing scenes in which they make their appearance, set off by a base violin that lays an egg. A bit different and very amusing.

Benny then has the floor to himself for a while, and impersonates delightfully such character as Pat Hock's Ted Lewis, Al Jolson and Noble Canteer. He sings and he dances and plays and—well, he ought to put on a whole stage show by himself some day!

STAGE SHOWS

New Orleans Saenger

Week Ending November 28

We uns and we all down in New Orleans are proud of the Saenger. There is a new pep, a new stage hand, Herbie, the demon organist, and superlims and last but not least, the visiting conductor, J. Chereablawski, who is responsible for the production of the Vagond King, with Benny Ross sitting the title role, as advertised by the front page of the Saenger Grand Orchestra, in the biggest hit of the season this week, as attested by the overcrowded houses at all performances. The critics, however, went over big.

The vehicle of the Public unit bears the label of "Forward March," and though small was exactly what the doctor ordered. Nina Olivette is a comedy comedienne, according to the gentlemanly press representative—she is more than that, being handsome, with a wardrobe of the finest, and all that goes to make a first class performer. Takini and Merit, lady and gent, comedy, high grade, and fast, stopped the show with wisecracks, clean as a hound's tooth, which tickled the ribs of thousands and left a pleasant taste.

Dick Mickles—Edie, a boy, good modest and retiring, rambled around the stage, up, center, right and left wing, and the bolder male on left. While it wasn't exactly a hurrience, Charlie Strong and his boys, one dressed as a girl, did some mighty interesting tumbling and intricate balancing, new to this section and pleased mightily. At the close the "girls" made a flying leap over the heads of the stage hand in a huddle—just like the old time circus performer "flew" over a herd of elephants while we kids held our breath.

Herbie, the organist, has many novelties and the console fairly talked—Herbie seems to have it tuned so it eats out of his hand.

"Song of the Big Trail" by the Jaybeys under the direction of Johnny ipperman, the ronchon of the Marco's "Wild and Wacky" idea. A circus showing scenes from "The Big Trail." It is flashed upon the stage behind which the ronchon and Marco unit sing "When It's Spring Time in the Rockies."

The scene of the first episode is that of a forest setting and the chorus of twelve stage a novel dance attired in white, wooly caps with a cowboy dummny between each pair giving the impression that each girl couple has a cowboy dancing partner. Bud Carle dis "St. Louis Blues" on his harmonica after which he proceeds to step a number of dance hits while twisting a tassel. He winds up his bit by twirling five ropes at one time, two of which are fastened to his hips.

Harv's Brazy Cats give a clever exhibition of tumbling, which is followed by a dance number by the chorus, who perform in red and white costumes with red ropes. A female tap dancer presents this bit with some clever stepping.

Doris and La Rue engage in a bit of comedy, the male member of the couple imitating a number of well known western characters including Buffalo Bill and Tom Mix, with them the appearance of riding horses.

remote control. Orchestral programs, vocal selections, speeches, etc., could be recorded at the time they were being given, doing away with the necessity of making a special rendition.

In the case of sound records only, this will open an unusual market for producers of them. Just as a closing citation, and still "consuming," think what a sound record the recent "Big Kettles" held at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, would have made. Thousands of voices, dozens of bands, crash of guns as they were interpolated into martial music; all this might have been recorded by remote control, as it is understood. But that is merely one of the possible possibilities.

Remick Music Reaching Up

"It's Not Worth Your Tears," a new song on the Remick list that is going to see some "decent" sales action for a while, according to Ward Perry, of the Chicago Remick office, is one of those melodies that turns one upside down and vice versa, etc. The melody was written by Harry Warren, while the lyric was done by Mort Dixon. It was a noticeable feature of "Sweet and Low," and if it is received as well in the new "It's Not Worth Your Tears" is another thing which gives them the appearance of riding horses.

Aussie Czech gives a clever exhibition of white-cracking and hat-wreaving. With his whis he matches a handkerchief from the pocket and his female partner, fights a match, which she holds in her hand, flicks paper from her mouth and sundry other interludes. He also has tricks into a waiting wood block with great gusto and accuracy.

For the finale the chorus does its stuff, attired in Spanish costumes, to the tune of "Under the Texas Moon." The curtain closes on a forest fire scene with flames crackling and the artificial trees trunks crashing to the stage. The illusion is realistic and well done.

New York Roxy

Week Ending November 27

Thanksgiving is welcomed at this house with a festive autumnal stage production called "Thanksgiv-"ing." (A) "Pilgrims Going to Church," (B) "Turkey Trot," and a second episode called "The Hunt." The "B" is an animated and modern version of the theme by the versatile Reys-ettes, in which they offer one of the famous precision routines.

The second portion of the program, idealizing the annual season, is called "Echoes of the Hunt!" and is depicted in two scenes by Douglas Stanbury, the Roxy Male Four, the Roxy Chorus, who contribute the vocal and choral parts. The second scene, a beautiful woodland setting, in which a fantastic hunting ballet is performed by a large cast of dance- ers, including Patricia Bowman, Leoside Massimo, Nicholas Duka, George Kibben, Karen and Sando. Grace Eastman, an Adagio Quartette composer of Andrew Demy, Ernest Jerome, George Severin and Salve Guns. The Roxy Ballet Corps and the Roxy Chorus also present novel songs and graceful dancing. The high-light of the entire pro- duction is the dance by Patricia Bowman and the one by the Adagio Quartette.
ORGAN SOLOS

RAL PEARL (Sheridan Chilogue), the "younger son of the concertos," has made himself an integral part of the programs at this theatre. Both adults and the children seem to get a great kick out of following the tantalizing lines that flash on the screen, while Hal purrs "music in their souls" by a mastery of the instrument that thoroughly belies his age. Now the Pop houses are forming Mickey Mouse clubs, with great success, just right in his element, for he is a success with the kids, and when that is true, that's about all that needs to be said.

His program for this week consisted of "Come- domesdal," which was introduced to the tune of "Congratulations." The opening slides get everyone in a jovial mood, and then he swung into "When the Organ Played at Twilight." Somehow or other, this number, and all of his always well received. Followed by "Swinging in a Hammock," "I'll Be Blue in a Little While" and a clever parody about shrimps, sung to the tune of "Around the Corner." It was a tongue twister into the bargain, and a good one. Then a "man and woman" (men sing one line, women the other) number to "Funny What Love Can Do," and had more good laughs. His closing number consisted of "Bye, Bye, Blues," always popular, and played as Hal played it, still more so.

ART THOMPSON (Clarksburg, W. Va., Ritz) presented, for his solo last week, a very clever独乐 solo entitled "One for My Baby." There are plenty of funny gags on married life and love in general, which serve to keep the audience in a good humor. In this week's numbers "By All the Stars Above You," "Love You the Way I Do," "Moonlight on the Colorado," and "Ro-Rolling Along," Art's crowd really sings, and show their appreciation of his work with splendid applause. This solo may be早日 said to be another of Art Thompson's hit performances.

JOHN HAMMOND (Staten Island, N. Y., St. George) ended his entertaining solo in "There's Something About an Old-Fashioned Girl," and original solo with Hampton brings in a large lot of good old time songs, to which the audience sang with zest. Intermingled between songs, Hammond told a little story as he went along and also sang in a husky whispering baritone "Old-Fashioned Girl." (If you have heard Whispering Jack Smith, you will know the type voice we mean.) The audience went wild over it and Hammond should have taken an encore, but instead ad libbed and went on with the solo. Another feature of this solo, and one that received a great deal of applause was the pearl rudders (the right foot playing the melody, the left the bass, and the hands playing the accompaniment) of "Kiss Me." All in all, this solo is one of the best that Hammond has "put on" since he opened here.

AL HORNIG (Baltimore, Loew's Century) seated at the console in a spot with a mike to a loudspeaker over the ceiling. This brought the audience to sing "I'm Confessing," with the words on the curtains. Then he introduced his puzzle song within a song, with the request that come to the tune of "Should I?" After this he invited all in the audience to get after it and throw out their voices in "Kiss Me," following which he announced the proper follow up song should be "Just a Lot of White Lies," for which words were exhibited. He then offered a little advice to the audience with the song "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me," but took liberty with the words and had a parody flashed about vegetables winding up with a story about the mustard stick close to the hot dog's side because he brought a new kind of love to me.

MILTON SLOLSER (Philadelphia Bulle) after an illustrated "Lullaby of a Twilight," the audience followed to the letter, played and sang Irving Berlin's, "Little Things in Life," "Maine Stein Song" and "If I Could Be with You.

KENNETH T. WRIGHT (Lloyd's, Monmouth, Mich.) at his Saturday Midnite Songfest was a novelty with the introduction telling about the organist asking the manager for a rate, and his getting it depended upon the audience's sitting. The time for this was set to "Hollywood." Other depicting various stages of pettiness, etc., were "Am I Blue?" and "Ain't We Got Trouble?" Just follow the notes to "Springtime in the Rockies," "Goodbye to Old Kentucky," "Lullaby of the Ladies," and "When Thru the Tunnel." It introduced among the soloists in each week by mule the tunes of "I'll Be Blue Just WESLEY LORD (Paramount Omaha) at the console conducted a songfest at the Omaha Paramount, this week in connection with the showing of "The Big Trail." As an excellent tie-in with the picture, Lord suggests to the audience that it Join in singing songs, some for your folks, some for the older folks and others for all folks. "Well, Hell, the Gang's All Here" is used to start off with, as an organ number. With a colored slide showing flowers on the screen, the first song sung is "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree." Others include "After the Ball," "You're Not Safe Yet," "I Wonder Why the World Laughs at You" and "Bye, Bye, Blues."

THE SHORT FEATURE

Animated Comic Is Films' Gift To Generation: Chicago Tribune

Taking issue with those who would belittle the importance of the animated cartoon in motion pictures, the Chicago Tribune asserts editorially that "the animated comic is the moving picture's distinctive contribution to the generation in a new art of the fantastic."

The Tribune's editorial, entitled "An Animated Mouse," was occasioned by a series of articles by readers in the Vox Pop column, which, as the writer puts it, "carried several disparaging remarks about the animated cartoon in the movies, setting the mice and cats down with a passing word of contempt."

The substance of the editorial is as follows: "The animated cartoon combines fun and fancy in the best tradition of the humor of English speaking people. It is derived from the nursery and delights appreciative adults, proving that true fancy is universal. Sound has added to its range, and it should be irresistible."

The very necessities of its production invest it with comedy. The animation resulting from the multiplication of drawings is delightful parody of motion. Childhood's fairies seem to touch the animals, flowers and the gnomes and hominiform creatures who awake and ride, dance and dispel themselves in this world of fantasy. They are unsentimentalized fairy stories, it is true, and so much better. The two-gun man uses the steer's skeleton as a xylophone and the more tender-minded swain the stems of daisies as the strings of a harp.

"Dance has a new form when animated canniibals come out of the jungle. Horseman-ship in escape and pursuit, with elastic and disjointable mounts and riders, gives the plains and the mountains a new mastery of the saddle."

"It would be a pity if this world of fancy were lost because of the indifference of people who support the movies and in part account for their productions."

ENCLOSED YOU WILL FIND SOME articles published by the newspapers El Museo and Publix Press in the Award of Merit presented to my San Jose theatres. I thank you very much for your efforts in sending me this beautiful plaque.

Enclosed you will find a circular I sent to nearly all my patrons, informing about the award and, YEE! It has increased very much my business. I'm very proud of exhibiting this plaque in my lobby. With kindest regards,—FEDOR GILBERT, Teatro "San Jose," San Juan, P. R.

New Protest on Horwitz

ENCLOSED IS A COPY OF A TELEGRAM that Mr. Will Horwitz of Houston, Texas, sent to the exhibitors of Texas, also a copy of my reply to this telegram. If space permits I would appreciate it being published.

Thanking you in advance for whatever consideration you can give this.—C. H. DeWolfe, Manager, W. Duffney, Owner, Palace theatre (formerly Majestic), San Salo, Texas.

Following is the text of the Horvitz telegram to DeWolfe:

"State censorship of pictures cannot harm the exhibitor who wishes to be recognized as a decent member of his community. Any exhibitor in New York, Ohio or Pennsylvania will say so. Eight hundred thousand Methodists and six hundred thousand Baptists of Texas have endorsed through their conferences. Who of us is big enough to be identified as an opponent of moral decency by fighting that campaign to give Texas women and children clean pictures? Dare you antagonize your customers? Oppression has come only from distributors for the film companies making dirty pictures and from Jeff Strickland, head of Public in Texas. Will you wear his collar or make your own decisions? Please write me how you wish your cooperation with regards, Will Horwitz, Texas theatre, Houston, Texas." (And here is the text of DeWolfe's reply to the Horvitz telegram.)

"I cannot see why any small town exhibitor in Texas should agree with you in regard to your stand on censorship.

"I am a small town exhibitor and an independent exhibitor. The chain organizations don't owe me one cent, and I owe them less than that. They cannot make up my mind for me, and neither can you.

"You have made a suggestion that there be a censor board in the city of Houston until a state board can be appointed. Let me make a suggestion. If you are so stuck on a censor board, why don't you censor the 'vile' pictures that are shown in your own theatres; and let the rest of us uphold the morals of this great state if we want to.

"No, you don't want to do this; there would not be enough publicity in it. You are afraid that the rest of the state of Texas would not know who Will Horwitz is. Well, we know who you are now.

"This theatre has been a member of the Allied Theatre Owners from sometime, and has received some benefit from being a member, but since censorship has been introduced Horwitz-Cole, Inc., you are trying to use it to shield your own hide at the members' expense. When an organization gets into a row and divided up like this one is at the present time, it is of no benefit to anyone. Therefore we are withholding our support to struggle along without your assistance as president of this harmonious organization. I am truly yours—W. Duffney, C. H. DeWolfe, San Baba Bank, San Salo, Texas.

On "Madame Satan"

HERE IS A REPORT ON MADAME SATAN (a comedy). A good picture that would have been better for about a thousand feet less footage. It drugs in the love scene with Kay Johnson, and the Zeppelin sequence had too much that could be seen only dimly. You heard them but had to guess what was happening due to the night shots. It has too slow a tempo to be a real audience picture. Roland Young has a fat part in this one and is very good in the role. Altogether the fault is that it has too much footage and the story drags too much.

—Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

"Better Theatres" a Help

I KNOW I AM RATHER LATE WITH this, but I want to congratulate you on the recent Fall Buyers Number of BETTER THEATRES. I was particularly impressed with the makeup and typography which leaves nothing to be desired. BETTER THEATRES certainly is a decided help to theatre owners and managers. That of course, makes it a real teammate to EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD.

Now, with that off my chest, I have a few words to say about RKO and its recent pictures. I am temporarily out of the theatre business, but I believe my judgment as to pictures is as good now as it ever was. I have had an opportunity to witness several RKO pictures lately, both their specials and programs, and I have yet to see a really poor one from RKO. I do not want this, or what I am about to say, to be interpreted as a knock for any other company. It is merely a brief analysis of some worthwhile product made and released by RKO.

The Bele Daniels pictures have all been good, at least none of them were poor, and "Dixiana," in my opinion, outclassed a good many pictures of its kind by far. It had just enough of everything to make it good. The Richard Dix pictures, especially "Lovin' the Ladies" and "Shootin' Straight," were first class pictures. I did not see "Seven Keys to Baldpate" but everyone who has seen it tells me it was a very good picture. "Conspiracy," a picture which was released as a program feature but more enthralling to the square inch of film than 90 per cent of the so-called specials. The picture was not cluttered up with a lot of big sets and dancine girls, but it had action as well as dialog, and with the most clever piece of character acting I have seen in a long time done by Ned Sparks, as the eccentric writer, it was real box office entertainment all the way through.

And now RKO comes out with "Danger Lights," a most excellent railroad drama produced both on wide and standard film. We were privileged to see the world premiere showing of the wide film version at the State-Lake theatre, Chicago, last Sunday, and from what we saw, we would say that in this picture RKO will be shown with wide film or standard, RKO has a real box office attraction. It is 100 per cent entertainment all the way through, action does not lag for a moment.

And just a word about the Mickey McGuire comedies. They are knockouts each and every one of them.

And now we'll explain why the sudden burst of enthusiasm for these pictures. We have seen the pictures. We're tellin' you about 'em. That's really all there is to it. So far as I know none of the RKO fellows picked out the scene of this picture that they will show this until they see it in print. But if it helps RKO and the exhibitors each to make a little money then you can't blame them. Now, just a word or two about a couple of Columbia's pictures that are box-office, and I'll quit. "Ladies of Leisure" is one of those exceptionally fine dramas that are few and far between. Barbara Stanwyck (a new one to us) we did not see her in "Locked Doors," United Artist) contributes one of the finest pieces of acting we have seen for some time in talking pictures. Hope the producers don't spoil her by casting her in types. Ralph Graves gives the most satisfactory perfor- mance ever, since we first saw him. To our notion his work was not any too good, but in this he carried his part in first class manner. The second of Columbia's pictures that we cannot refrain from saying a good word for is "Around the Corner," the Irish-Jewish story with Charlie Murray and George Siddel, one of the ten comedies who can do this type of story right. It's a genuine entertainment from start to finish, and after all that's what people want when they go to the theatre.

Both RKO and Columbia's disc recording is very good. I saw all of the fore-mentioned pictures with sound on disc with exception of "Danger Lights," which I believe was shown with sound-on-film, and the sound was very good in all cases.

Well, I will lay off now, and give someone else a chance to say a word or two.—KENNETH W. THOMPSON, Adams, Wis.

Plans Special Program

I TAKE GREAT PLEASURE IN THANKING you for bestowing the Honor of the Merit of Award to the Balboa theatre. I have not as yet had the plaque presented to the theatre, as I am planning a large program tocommemorate same. I am going to ask a favor, that you write to Governor Burgess, of the Panama Canal, asking him to present the plaque in behalf of EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD, to be presented at the Balboa theatre.

Hoping this is not asking too much.—PAUL E. KLING, Manager, Balboa Clubhouse, Bal- boa, Canal Zone.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

THE idea of establishing Mickey Mouse clubs in the Fox theatres in Chicago is drawing widespread attention, especially among parents, and when the favorable attention of parents is drawn to the theatre as a place for their children to while away several happy hours, and at the same time get something instructive out of it, the theatre is serving an excellent purpose. In Milwaukee the plan has been tried and found to fill a need that has been apparent for some time, that of renewing the interest of children in the motion picture, and of having parents favorable to the idea of their children spending an hour or two on Saturday morning at the theatre.

At the Terminal theatre the other day, the theatre was held and was assured from the start. Fox officials attending the "debut" were highly impressed with the response which came from an announcement of the forming of these clubs. For some time, theatre programs have had a tendency to be a bit tiring for children, and this effort to again establish their interest is a good thing.

So well did the meeting go over, that the ragged edges of similar clubs in all their theatres in the city, and probably elsewhere. The Sheridan theatre is to formally begin its "club" work in about a week, and in a brief talk which we had the other evening with Manager J. Keough, it undoubtedly will be a knockout. The kids are all peped up about it, and Hal Pearl, the organist at the theatre, is busy preparing special programs for the children.

The Educational exchange would certainly rank high in any collection of "swanky layouts," and yet it is quite simple and very unostentatious. That is probably where its "swankiness" lies. And Freddy Martin sits like a supreme judge on his purple carpet, casting his eye upon the glittering Mar- cinette. (We beg your pardon.) However, the ceremonies were conducted in traditional and somewhat theatrical manner, when Max took everybody over to Coffee Dan's, and the evening was a huge success and everybody was happy.

We started to write about Educational with the thought in mind of congratulating Max on his recent debut in the great Masonic fraternity. Last week he was made a member of the Isaac Custer Lodge, and the ceremonies were conducted by many of his friends, among whom were Bill Weinhoven, Sol Goldman, V. A. Nomokos, Edward Saifer and your Uncle Henry—we mean Freddy Martin. Ah! Here we are! Freddy's is a night club in a rug-covered Mar- cinette. (We beg your pardon.) However, the ceremonies were conducted in traditional and somewhat theatrical manner, when Max took everybody over to Coffee Dan's, and the evening was a huge success and everybody was happy.

Cress Smith, genial division manager of United Artists, manages to peck at his Chicago desk every once in a while, but it's usually "just setting in from St. Louis and starting for Milwaukee in the morning."

Howard M. Winner, the pleasant little chap who sometimes goes around the Educational exchange, or else seated at a little desk over in the corner, and, to all appearances, very, very busy, has returned to Chicago after a week spent in Philadelphia. Perhaps he went on the trip to take a few snapshots. He got a chance to play with a camera. Who is he? We didn't know ourselves until we were introduced to the fellow himself. He's the "guy" whose camera helps make Kinograms so interesting.

And now and then, Paul Polka drops down on the Row from his numerous outside interests, interests (theatres) which are located in many places, among them being Geneva and De Kalb, Ill.

Jack Rubel, who is sought after by "airmail special" now and then, has taken himself the managashership of the Shore theatre.

Ted Levy, special representative for the Filmmack company (the company where you place your order at two-thirty, and it's ready by three) is back from an enjoyable trip to the great metropolis on the East coast.

Fred Mindlin, who was formerly connected with the Little Playhouse idea in Chicago is now managing the American theatre, succeeding George Budrich, re- signed.

Willis Kent, who has been in the picture producing game for some time has another picture that is soon to be, or already has been released, we understand, entitled "Gold Diggers of Hollywood," the theme of which, we understand is about some of the sidelights of the moving picture city that is not heard of too often.

Ludwig Sussman, the minute manager of the Adelphi theatre on North Clark Street, who put over such a good show the week set aside for one-third of the receipts to be turned over to the American relief fund, took a brief respite from his arduous duties the other day and "sailed" for New York for a short rest.

Erroneously, in the issue of November 22, it was stated that Robert Gumbiner had already left to take up his manager duties at the Los Angeles theatre on the Coast. That would hardly be possible, however, for a farewell dinner was tendered him on December 1 at the Hotel Cabrillo by his brother, Max. It was a fitting gala event for such a departure, and of course a lot of well-wishing at the evening. May we add our humble hope that all success will attend his new effort.

At a recent "replacement" election of officers for the Illinois Cooperative Buying Circuit, the following men were voted into office: President, Nate Wolf, secretary, S. A. Mindlin and treasurer, Sol Meltzer.

W. R. Mars, who has been with the Photo Play Title company for a number of years, will be in charge of the business and will handle the same as called prior to J. W. Aston's, who is president of the company, moving to his beautiful new home in Carlin, Ill.

There is a new and very sweet voice at the R.K.O exchange, so sweet that you really can't give it away. The voice is especially modulating as they float over the wire. But, if for any reason, you have occasion to wait to be announced to that very busy man, Bill Brumberg, or to someone else (they all seem to be busy down there, which is excellent) just pay particular attention to the very charming lady that takes your name, and how sweetly you'll forgive us for overworking the adjectives) she speaks (her manner is, is certain to sound "melodious"), and now, may we introduce the young lady. She is Florence Lipshitz, formerly with Universal, now adding grace, and very much sympathy to the R.K.O exchange.

A comedy king passed through town the other day but it was one of those flying trips that only permits an occasional phone call. It was Mack Sennett.

Whenever we speak of football, we always are reminded of Dan Roché, not that we ever forget about him, but the fact that he can reel off football maneuvers as though he were reciting last year's gets you, and it's almost as good as seeing a game (and from some of the games that have furnished newspapers with scores, a lot better). We had the pleasure of a short stroll with Dan the other day north on Wabash, and he philosophized a bit and told us about his sons. He's a wonderful father, and that is probably what makes his philosophy ring so true.

"The Liberty theatre and the Wallace theatre in Peru, Indiana, it's been leased by the Miami Theatre corporation of Indiana, and it is expected that this company will remodel the Liberty. It is said that after the installation of the improvements, was to open the house about Thanksgiving. The lease was negotiated through Albert Goldman of Chicago."
The Public Wants Color

These positive films supply it, through beautiful, over-all tints—at black-and-white cost

THE public’s appetite for color has been whetted. Colored pictures are the cream of the show.

With Sonochrome Tinted Positive Films any picture can be made in delicate, atmospheric, over-all tints that help to express every turn of the plot.... to bring out the prevailing mood of the picture. And this color costs nothing extra.... for the Sonochrome price is the same as that of ordinary, black-and-white positive.

Sonochrome reproduces sound faithfully.... of course. It’s designed particularly with that requirement in mind.

ONE THING IS SURE!

At this time when box-offices are recording the achievements of the Marie Dressler-Wallace Beery picture “Min and Bill,” the thrilling business done by “War Nurse,” and when showmen are looking ahead to Joan Crawford in “Paid” and Greta Garbo in “Inspiration,” it again becomes evident that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, year in and year out, comes through with unfailing dependability.

Excellent. Rogers' acting is, if anything, superior to that in "They Had To See Paris" and "So This Is London", pictures that have brought him a tremendous following, which was attested to by the crowds that filed into the Roxy for the first performance and by the fact that in spite of the wintry blasts a line of patrons was waiting outside.
— Mordaunt Hall, N.Y. Times

A long riot of laughs. It's Rogers' best picture. Everybody will enjoy "Lightnin'".
— Bland Johaneson, N.Y. Daily Mirror

Rogers' hold on the public was proven at the Roxy over the week-end as the pews filled rapidly.
— John S. Cohen, Jr., N.Y. Sun

Will Rogers gives the rarest of his gem performances in this crackerjack production. Highly amusing, always interesting...
Simple, appealing, delightful.
Don't miss "Lightnin'"!
— Irene Thirer, N.Y. Sunday News

The kind of a picture that moviegoers who like to laugh with tears in their eyes will hug to their bosoms. An ideal Will Rogers picture and as such should enjoy heavy patronage.

Clean Advertising

CAPITALIZING in lurid display type on the fact that censors have limited the showing of a motion picture to adult audiences should be eliminated from the advertising of every theatre organization.

The Advertising Code has been accepted by the industry at large as a positive, forward step in promotion of the best interests of the motion picture business. The evidence in the newspapers that those responsible for the advertising policy of some theatres have not fallen in step with the movement toward clean copy is to the discredit of those individuals and serves to retard the progress of the majority that has avowed its intention to do the right thing.

There is no justified championing of political censorship. Too often the trade has seen its product made the football of politicians and of those currying political favor and jobs. No further proof of that is needed than the recent instance in Ohio of the statewide barring of "The Big House" for political reasons. After protestations had made the Ohio censor board known nationwide as a sample of unfairness and inconsistency, the ban was lifted. This showed itself in that the original disbarment was fallacious.

The industry is well able to take care of regulation of what should be and what should not be in motion picture advertising, to a degree that not only meets with public approval but even sets a higher standard of propriety than that public itself asks, and all to the greater ultimate advantage of the theatre box office. The Advertising Code is itself an expression of the industry's own determination to set such a high standard and of its confidence that clean advertising eventually will pay larger dividends than unclean advertising.

At the same time that it is true that political censorship defeats its own purpose—and cannot do otherwise because of the erroneous principles upon which it is grounded—the theatre advertiser who builds his copy upon a premise of drawing patronage by calling attention to the censors' activities is helping to perpetuate the theory of external censorship.

For one thing, such a theatre advertiser often deceives his patrons and himself. By writing in screaming type "Adults Only" above the title of the motion picture he calculates to intrigue the prospective customer. Suppose that he does succeed in attracting the patron into the theatre. Then what? Then the very inconsistencies that are the fundamentals of political censorship assert themselves. The patron finds that the picture is no different from others that he has seen and is probably less sophisticated than others that bore no censorial limitations. He turns on the theatre, concluding that the "Adults Only" line was merely a concession from the copy writer's imagination. The reaction upon this patron's good will toward the management is self-evident.

Another reason why such an advertising course is headed toward danger lies in the fact that the copy writer is providing additional ammunition for those who favor regulation of motion picture content. There is continuously before the industry the threat of action in Congress at Washington on one or another of the several proposals for federal regulation of motion pictures. To attempt to defeat city or statewide censorship by making capital of the action of the censor on one picture is only to invite the conviction in the minds of some individuals that federal censorship is justified and advisable.

A more judicious and more commendable treatment of the problem is suggested. It is proposed that the "Adults Only" phrase be permanently dropped, and that to comply with the requirements of the local censor board which has barred a picture to minors the copy writer should include a sentence in light type, with approximately this wording: "As this is an adult subject, children are not invited."

A Five-Day Week

THE five-day week, proposed for manufacturing industries and seemingly gaining more and more proponents, should meet with the indorsement of motion picture theatre owners, if and when it is adopted.

Motion picture entertainment has come to be established as a necessity of life. No longer is it considered a luxury. The axiom that the motion picture industry is the last to feel an economic retarding and the first to return to normal figures after a general slackening of business activity is evidence enough of that. Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Publix Corporation, recently was quoted as citing this fact in a symposium on trade conditions in an issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

The economic principle set forth by business leaders who advocate the five-day week is that intensified work in the shorter period will bring about mass production equal in quantity as well as quality to that of the present general schedule, and at the same time will give the workers more leisure time in which to enjoy living.

This is the point at which the plan would have a direct bearing upon the motion picture industry. More leisure time means greater opportunity and desire to visit the theatre. It is presumed that the theory of the five-day week is that wages will remain at least at the same level as under the old plan. Therefore, the proportion of those wages available for use in visiting the motion picture theatre would remain the same. In fact, that proportion might even be considered larger, in the cities at least, in view of the incidental expenses of the average workday in transportation and lunch costs.

It is believed that the motion picture industry would effectively adjust itself to the changes in productiveness which would be caused within its own forces by the five-day week, and that the increased receipts would far more than balance any increased costs of theatre operation due to the revised working schedule.

The motion picture industry may well look with pleasing anticipation upon the prospect of a five-day working week.

Papers Signed in RKO-Pathe Deal, Herald-World Informed

Only Consent of Stockholders Remains to Close Purchase

RKO Is Understood to Be Planning Expansion of Theatre Chain in Larger Cities

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Papers in the RKO-Pathe deal were signed today, it was learned tonight from an authentic source. All that remains now to bring one of the oldest producing and distributing companies into the Radio Corporation fold is ratification by the stockholders.

Under the reorganization which will follow completion of the merger it is understood that Lee Marcus will be taken from his post at Radio Pictures and transferred to Pathe. Although this has not been confirmed, the report persists, making it evident that such a move is under consideration.

There is little possibility that the Pathe name will pass out of existence. It is believed that the stockholders will insist upon this.

The merger is a $5,000,000 deal and gives RKO certain of the Pathe assets but does not include the Dupont-Pathe Company.

When called on the phone Joseph P. Kennedy of Pathe declared that any statement would have to come from the Radio-Keith-Orpheum offices. Hiram S. Brown, president of RKO, stated, however, that he knew nothing about it.

Gain of 40 Per Cent In Fox Bookings Is Report by Grainger Reaches Conclusion After Tour of South—To Leave for Coast To Confer with Sheehan
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—J. R. Grainger, vice president in charge of distribution for Fox Film, reported an increase of 40 per cent over the same period last year in the total number of film contracts, with domestic billings running decidedly ahead of last year as well.

Grainger made this statement on his return from a trip to St. Louis, Texas, New Orleans and Atlantic territories, during which he analyzed the first run situation in various Texas cities, where the company is scheduled to complete next August a 5-year franchise with the Interstate Amusement Corporation for first run exhibition in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

He reported business rather "spotty," with theatre receipts off in some communities and ahead of last year in others. In general, however, he said he found business especially good in Texas.

Grainger is expected to leave shortly for Los Angeles, where he will go on an extended trip of three weeks with Winfield Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox Film. On the way to the Coast, Grainger will stop off at the company's offices in Kansas City, Omaha, Salt Lake City, Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

$1 Protection Racket On N. Y. Musicians Ends As the Police Intervene
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—According to Joseph Dukin, secretary to District Attorney Crain of New York County, one of the city's many rackets, the exacting of money from musicians, has been abandoned.

Musicians had complained that they were forced to pay racketeers $1 a night in order to play without being molested in various city theatres. It is understood that several men from the district attorney's office visited one of the clubs where leaders of the "musicians' racket" were accustomed to gather. He lined up 20 men for questioning. They said they were not in that racket and that the leaders had gone to Europe.

Grosses of New Warner Features Show Film Business Is Good, Says Sam Morris
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Warner Brothers executives point out attendance figures and grosses reached by a number of feature productions throughout the country as indicating that the general depression has not affected the film industry.

Sam E. Morris, general manager of Warner Brothers Pictures, said: "Reports coming to us daily prove that as much business awaits good pictures as ever it did in the past. In fact, I think there is more business today than ever, for a number of Warner and First National pictures have succeeded in establishing new records."

He pointed in particular to the case of "The Doorway to Hell," which grossed $135,000 during a run of three weeks at the Strand on Broadway; and "The Widow from Chicago," which took in $22,000 in one week at the Earle theatre in Philadelphia. On Broadway, according to Morris, "Kismet" is selling out and "The Life of the Party" is playing to capacity audiences.
Seek New Orchestra Pact on Coast; All Racine Houses Dark

San Francisco Downtown and Neighborhood Theatres to Make Separate Agreements with Musicians—Operators in City in Wisconsin Refuse 20 and 7½ Per Cent Decrease

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—Negotiations are underway between the management of downtown theatres, represented by Fox-West Coast Theatres, Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuits, and the Musicians Union, for a new contract to clarify the present orchestra problem. The three-year agreement between the Musicians Union and the Allied Amusement Industries, Inc., expired August 31 and since then the old arrangement has been carried out by mutual agreement. The labor problems of the various houses are no longer handled by the Allied organization, according to manager Thomas D. Van Osten, and the new contracts will be made direct with individual houses and groups of houses.

A. M. Bowles, manager of Fox-West Coast Theatres in the Northern California district, says that the advent of talking pictures has so changed conditions that it is no longer possible for the large downtown theatres and the neighborhood houses to act together in dealing with the union. The downtown theatre group will make its own arrangements with musicians, leaving the neighborhood houses to reach an agreement in accordance with their requirements.

The old agreement required all theatres to purchase standard orchestras which could not be discontinued or reduced. In the new agreement the theatre managers will have the right to discontinue or cut down their orchestras upon giving due notice. None of the downtown theatres plan to discontinue their orchestras at this time but merely wishes it understood that it must have the privilege to do so at a future date if it so decides.

All Eight Racine Theatres Go Dark

(Special to the Herald-World)

RACINE, WIS., Dec. 4.—As the result of labor difficulties between local exhibitors and projectionists, all eight local theatres were closed Monday and will stay closed indefinitely. Attempts have been made since September 1, when the contracts between the parties terminated, to reach some kind of agreement, but without success.

Book 20 and 7½ Per Cent Cut

Exhibitors are seeking a wage reduction of 20 per cent for the neighborhood houses and 7½ per cent for the downtown theatres. High expenses resulting from the present system which requires two operators are said to be the cause for the request.

The operators, however, refuse to take a cut, although they proposed a 5 per cent salary cut for five neighborhood theatres but none for the three downtown houses. This proposal was rejected by the theatre managers. The three downtown houses include the State, Fox-Midwesco house; the Venetian, Warner Brothers, and the Mainstreet, RKO.

It is not considered probable that the theatres will employ non-union operators and the managers are contemplating appealing their case to Mayor William Armstrong.

Estimate 10,000 Turned Away

According to the present scale, as revealed by the president of the Racine Theatre Owners Protective association and manager of the Granada theatre, the wage scale in the theatres involved is as follows: Douglas and Crown theatre operators receive $50 a week for four hours a night; operators of the Granada, Capitol and Upham theatre, $62 a week for four and one-half hours a night, and those in the Mainstreet, State and Venetian, $57.75 for five-hour shifts.

It was estimated that 10,000 theatre patrons, representing a revenue of about $4,000, were turned away Sunday. All theatres had run their usual ads announcing Sunday's attractions. Vaudeville acts in three houses also were cancelled.

200 Patrons Marched to Safety as Film Blazes

(SEATTLE, Dec. 4.—Firemen wearing gas masks fought a film fire in the projection room of the newly renovated Coliseum theatre here on Thanksgiving Day, and some 200 patrons were marched hurriedly out of the house to safety. Robert Cameron, projectionist, stated the blaze was caused by friction as he was rewinding a reel of film.

Two Akron Nonunion Theatres Are Made Victims of Renewed Dynamite Attack

(AKRON, OHIO, Dec. 4.—Dynamite bombs were exploded almost simultaneously in the Peoples and Spicer theatres, two neighborhood houses here, causing damage which, it is said, will run into several thousand dollars. Both theatres are reported to be using nonunion operators.

The lobby of the Peoples house was bombed while the night watchman was in the rear of the building. The entire front of the structure was demolished and windows in nearby structures were shattered. The explosion occurred at 1:45 a.m. A few minutes later the blast at the Spicer took place. In this case the night watchman was standing in front of the theatre. The bomb was hurled to the roof at the result the rear of the theatre collapsed.

Immediately after the explosion at the Peoples theatre, two men were seen driving away. The theory is that a lookout watched the movements of the watchman and his accomplices, who threw the bombs as they passed, and new same houses were bombed several months ago. At that time the trouble was blamed on a union and wage dispute.

Vincent Lopez Signs To Make Short Series For Theatre Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The Theatre Service Corporation has signed Vincent Lopez and his St. Regis orchestra for the production of a series of "Screen Broadcasts" as the first part of its program for the making of these screen advertising subjects that are to be shown in more than 4,000 theatres, including the Paramount-Publix circuit.

W. Johnson, president of Theatre Service, commenting on the Lopez contract, said, "Entertainment is more important than advertising, and this is tangible evidence that our Screen Broadcasts will possess the very highest of entertainment value."

The orchestra subject will go into production at the Paramount Eastern studio in Astoria this week. The Dictators, radio quartette, will contribute to the musical program.

Through this so-called "new use of the screen," it is claimed, the company, theatre owners may enjoy an additional income from advertising and at the same time have high caliber entertainment on the bill.

Fire Damages Bradley's House; Business Center Threatened; None Hurt

(SEATTLE, Dec. 4.—A fire, which is thought to have started from a defective furnace, swept through the Moon theatre here, badly damaging the interior, and for a time threatening the business district of the town.

The blaze occurred during the hours of 6 and 7. In the evening Manager Bradley stated that he had started the fire about 3 o'clock, in order to have the house warm for the first show, which began at 7 o'clock. Fortunately, no one was in the building at the time, and the excellent work of the firemen checked the blaze in time to save further damage.

No Film Legislation Placed On Congress' Clogged Calendar

Solons to Waive Any Measures Expected to Disturb Business

Doubt Whether Proponents of Pending Bills Can Muster Strength to Pull Them Out of Committee

[WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Little legislation affecting the film industry, other than the increase in income tax which is expected as a result of recommendations of the administration that the one per cent cut in normal rates made on income last year be not continued, is expected to be enacted during the present session of Congress.

Lack of film legislation will be due not so much to lesnrin of deference on the part of the reform element as to the lack of time for its consideration. The present session is limited to three months, requiring automatically on March 4, next, and there are so many matters of more pressing importance pending that it will be impossible to give consideration to measures in which there is, to say the least, no widespread interest.

All of the bills which were introduced last session—block booking, prize fight pictures, and so forth—are still pending and can be called up if their proponents can muster sufficient strength to move the bills out of the committee files where they are now reposing peacefully. But it is doubtful whether that strength can be worked up.

The Government departments, bureaus and commissions; unemployment; elections; world court and other outstanding matters have so filled the congressional calendar as to make consideration of minor matters practically out of the question. There may be a little talk on the floor regarding so-called evils of the motion picture, but that will be largely for home consumption, as so much of congressional talk is, and not necessarily an indication that any action will be taken.

As a matter of fact, Congress will make every effort to keep away from legislation likely still further to unsettle business. It is bound to be loathsome to S. E. C. and the leaders in the Senate and House will endeavor to keep it to a minimum so that business may have a breathing spell to get back on its feet.

The brightest ray of the whole situation is the fact that any measure pending at the expiration of a Congress "dies," and if it is to be considered a future session must be reintroduced and sent through the same procedure of committee hearings and consideration which it may have already passed through.

Film legislation now pending, therefore, will drop into the dim, musty recesses till the past on March 4 unless Congress can be induced to act on it in the meantime.

Bombers Sentenced to Six Months Jail Term; Also Draw $500 Fines

(PORTLAND, Dec. 4—David Hefferman and Jack Cunningham, charged with throwing bombs made of skunk oil in the Capitol theatre on November 24, were convicted on charges of disorderly conduct and sentenced to six months in jail and a fine of $500 each.

Both admitted the charges. Cunningham de claring he had been paid $25 by an unidentified man, and Hefferman promised $40, but arrested before the money was paid him.

In reviewing the case Judge Tomlinson suddenly queried, "You don't insist that the oil be brought into court, do you?" Both sides assured him that they did not.

Court Rules Against Aegograph in W. E. Suit; Says It Failed to Establish Any Infringement

[Special to the Herald-World]

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—An announcement has been received from F. T. Woodward, general patent attorney for ERPI, that Federal Judge West in San Antonio, Texas, has rendered a decision against the Aegograph Company in its patent infringement against the Western Electric Sound System.

The action, which was brought late March, claimed that the patent which was asserted to cover the standard theatre equipment of ERPI had been infringed. The particular patent, No. 1,949,514, is entitled "Art of Producing Motion Pictures and Sound Synchronized Therewith" and relates to a mechanical connection between the turntable and film projecting apparatus and several other features of sound picture reproducing equipment.

Judge West gave his decision from the bench that the plaintiff had failed to establish any infringement, and since there was none, the court did not attempt to pass on the validity of the patent involved. This decision marks the fifth patent infringement suit successfully defended by Western Electric and its affiliated interests within the past year.

Columbia to Do Foreign Versions of Picked Films

THE old idea of digging a little deeper at Christmas time to buy the big bosses a present (probably a duplicate of something he already possesses or has thrown in the dump) is obsolete insofar as the Fox theatre company is concerned.

Fox theatre executives have labeled it a racket and are determined that it shall not be practiced this year. In other words, the guy who would stand ace high with the boss must produce honest, sincere labor, and not gifts, to do so. It spells the end of personal aggrandizement of a nature which was never in high repute.

That noise? That's applause from the ranks!

Jimmy Clark, ad sales manager for Paramount, has produced a Christmas lobby poster of unusual merit. It is one sheet in size, and in three colors a head of Santa Claus with the greeting: "Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, The Management." There is no tieup with any company or product. Get your orders in early.

Walter F. Eberhardt, to make us green with envy, postcards the following from Rome: "Hope I get back to the U.S.A in time to wish you Merry Christmas."

The famous "Trags" of Neillsville, Wis., was in to add a pessimistic note to the day. Always a good showman, "Trags" decided to take a whirl at indoor golf over in Flatbush. Everything would have been fine, said "Trags," but he got dizzy looking at the figures on the red side of the ledger. If we are not mistaken he will be back shortly showing some of the boys how to make the shekels roll into the box office.

In addition to having a live publicity and advertising department, Glen Allvine numbers among his staff members several expert bowlers. His department is now leading all others in the Fox bowling tournament.

Glen has a versatile staff. Fred Rath, once of Russ Holman's staff at Paramount, has just had his first play produced on Broadway. May "First Night," Fred, be the first of a series of successful dramas from your pen.

Hy Daub, he of the Amos 'n' Andy advertising campaign, has made some thoughtful observations on Hollywood. "It's not the same old Hollywood," he says. "There is not the spirit of camaraderie which used to prevail."

Herman Stern, once popular film man of the Middlewest and now president of the Universal Club at the home office, has a treat in store for those attending the club's get-together dance on December 11. Through the courtesy of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation an airplane ride will be one of the novel prizes of the occasion.

Jack Hess is becoming acclimated to the Big Stem. Temporarily at least Radio-Kith-Orpheum has him ensconced on the fourth floor of the Palace annex. Jack has buckled down to the job of nationally advertising pictures playing the RKO circuit. Best of luck.

Warner Begins Two New Houses in N. J., 3rd in Pennsylvania
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Warner Brothers plans the construction of three new theatres, two in New Jersey and one in Pennsylvania, with construction due to start not later than January 1, 1932.

The first house in Hackensack, N. J., for which contracts are now being let, will seat 1,800, and is said to be planned as a pretentious motion picture theatre. Thomas W. Lamb, who designed the Hollywood theatre on Broadway, is the architect.

The second house will also seat 1,800, with John Eberon as architect in charge of construction. In connection with the theatre building, there will be a commercial structure containing business offices. The third house is to be erected in Wilkinsburg, Pa. Bids are now being received for the construction work, with Eberon again in charge.

$5 Per Thousand Admissions Is Plan For Warner Industrial Shorts

All Set to Launch Distribution with Arrangements Completed—Chesterfield and Listerine Manufacturers Among Firms Signed

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The first concentrated effort by Warner Brothers in the industrial field, since the Stanley Film Advertising Corporation was taken over as a subsidiary six months ago, is about to get underway with arrangements already completed for distribution in all the Warner houses throughout the country of short subject films sponsored by commercial houses.

The cost to advertisers in the theaters of the circuit, which will total approximately $5 for every 1,000 admissions during the run of the picture, with payment to be made following a box office check, similar to the system in use for percentage bookings. Advertisers, it is understood, have the option of utilizing all of the available theaters on the circuit, or any part thereof.

The Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Company, manufacturers of Chesterfield cigarettes, and the Lash Pharmaceutical Company, producers of Listerine, already have signed contracts, for the industrial film advertising, with several other manufacturers whose names have not as yet been announced also lined up.

In an effort to acquaint advertisers with the proposition, Robert A. Winthrop, director of marketing of Warner Industrial Films, incorporated under the name of the former Stanley company, will undertake a speaking tour, beginning December 15, in key cities throughout the nation and house by house, as a method of acquainting the trade and agencies attached with the purpose and value to the advertisers of the industrial shorts.

In addition, Winthrop has been booked by the Speakers Bureau of the Advertising Federation of America, for a series of talks before various luncheon clubs in 20 key cities of the country, where he also will address similar groups for the same purpose.

Advertisers to Talk Territories

Advertisers, under the plan now going into effect, are enabled to select the particular territories in which they desire their films shown, as well as expediting certain film exchanges within these territories. Through the box office checking method, the advertiser is able to ascertain, before signing, exactly the number of people taking advantage of his film on any given screen. With his choice of territory and theatre, the advertiser also is enabled to arrange deals with local merchants on his product.

In a further attempt to interest advertisers and agencies in the idea, Warner plans the publication and free distribution to a selected list of present and prospective film advertisers of national scope, of a monthly booklet of the type or type, which will keep them in touch with the progress of the film production and explain its purpose. Jack Lewis of the Warner publicity staff, will edit the new publication.

Definite Entertainment Value

The films, which will be made for the most part at the Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn, will have a definite entertainment value. Winthrop, in commenting on the proposition, brought out the point that real entertainment value is essential to the success of the idea. In theaters where experiments have been made already, he said, the audiences have shown a decided interest.

Though shorts of this type have been made previously, he continued, the difficulty always has been in the distribution. Under new method, this trouble he believes will be for the most part overcome.

The shorts will be of two types: those which definitely portray the story of the particular product; and those which will feature musical or other types of entertainment on the screen with the commercial house merely recorded as the sponsor of the film, as is done with radio programs at present.

Sign Stars for Shorts

Up to now the Warner industrial branch has been operating in clear up old contracts which were taken over when the Stanley company deal. This, however, were of the purely commercial type for the various companies themselves, with no idea of general advertising on the screen, and have all been finished.

A. Pam Blumenthal, formerly president of the Stanley industrial company, is now vice president of the Warner industrial division. Warner Brothers already has signed Clark and McCallugh, the legitimate and motion picture stars, as a number of other well known name acts, for appearance in what is to be known in the film industry as "industrial shorts."

It is planned to establish branch offices throughout the country, the first to be opened in Hollywood under the direction of Davis S. Warner, which it is understood will take in the territory included in the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Utah, New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming.

Pantages Refused Hearing on Old Tax By Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Pantages Theatre Company lost its fight to escape income and profits taxes assessed against it by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the years 1918 and 1919, when the U. S. Supreme Court refused to review a decision of the Court of Appeals for the Ninth circuit affirming findings of the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals that it was not necessary for the commissioner personally to sign agreements to waive the statute of limitations nor was it material whether such agreements were signed by him before or after the statute became effective.

The company contended that the statute had gone into effect with respect to its taxes before waivers signed by it were signed by the commissioner and also that he had refused to sign the waivers personally, thus making them of no effect.

NEWTON, N. J., Dec. 4.—Sidney E. Samuelson, president of the New Jersey Motion Picture Trade Organization, refused to participate in any zoning conferences, sees in the late ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court in the Sherman Act a distinct aid to independents.

Attacks Zoning Plans

"We know of no more potent manner," says Samuelson, "in which to kill all competition in the motion picture business than in the zoning schemes now being forced on exhibitors. We rejoice in the court's decision, which fully justifies our stand with relation to zoning. The distributors represented in the Hays Association and the film boards of trade should correct the unreasonable, stifling and illegal circuit protection which is designed to earn profits for chain theatres at the expense of the independent exhibitors. People have been good to the motion picture business and it is time that the business recognized its obligation to the public by eliminating all the tricks which tie the theatre owner to the juggernaut and prevent the exhibitor from exercising his own judgment".

"The days of storm is brewing: blind buying, block booking of features and shorts, protection, guarantee and percentage stifling, saloonism, and under the unfortunate legislative representation of the industry are combining to create a storm for which every one in the business—both innocent and guilty—will have to pay.

"The independent must and will survive bigger, stronger than ever. In such survival lies the only hope of the public that the film business will serve it in accordance with the law of the land."

Film Buckles; Booth Ablaze; Exhibitor Burned

NEWPORT, KY., Dec. 4.—John Patton, operator of the Strand Theatre, was painfully burned about the body as he tried to extinguish a fire in the projection booth, which resulted from a film buckling in the machine. The audience left the theatre quietly. Peter Kurbs, owner of the house, estimates damage to the booth at $250.

Clara Bow's Secretary In Plea of Not Guilty

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—Daisy De Vos, former secretary of Clara Bow, pleaded not guilty in Superior Court in answer to an indictment charging her on 37 counts for grand larceny. She was found guilty of misappropriation of $17,000 of Clara's money.
4,000 Rush Police in Protest
As Blue Law Farce Bars Benefit

Thousand Enter to Band Tune
Of “Onward Christian Soldiers”

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—One of the most disorderly scenes in Phila-phia’s recent history occurred on the evening of Sunday, November 30, when police attempted to prevent the Allyn Capron Post No. 22, Veterans of Foreign Wars, from staging a Sunday motion picture show to provide relief for post members out of work. Twenty district policemen were tossed aside as an angry crowd of approximately 4,000 stormed the doors of the Kent theatre, in protest against Director Schofield’s decision on Saturday night to forbid the performance, which he claimed was in violation of the state blue laws.

Only 800 of the thousands of persons who milled around the theatre actually held tickets for the show, the others having been attracted by reports of defiance of police orders to see what would happen. The permit to hold the show which Director Schofield canceled had been issued two weeks earlier by the office of the superintendent of police.

400 Policemen Rushed to Scene

More than 400 policemen, a dozen motorcycle police and eight patrol wagons were rushed to the scene as the disorder increased.
In the midst of the disturbance the members of the Allyn Capron Post marched up the street, “with Christian Soldiers,” the crowd parted to let them pass and they marched straight into the theatre. The police guard gave way, the crowd surged against the doors and more than 1,000 poured into the theatre. The show started as Director Schofield sent an order to every police district in the city to rush men to the Kent theatre to stop the show.

Officials of Warner Brothers who had promised the use of the theatre hurried to the scene and pointed out to the veterans that valuable property and apparatus would be destroyed by the crowd. The order was that the peace would be reestablished. When the newsreel was over, Mr. Winkelman, chairman of the entertainment committee in charge of the show, mounted the stage and announced that as the place had been donated through the kind-ness of Warner Brothers and as the police were threatening to tear down the screen to stop the show, the only decent thing to do appeared to be to leave the theatre in order that the theatre owners might not suffer a loss.
The crowd rose grumbling, reluctant to leave

Charge Discrimination

It was announced that, if possible, another show would be held next week and everyone in the theatre was offered a redeemable return ticket at the door. As the number of persons who had forced their way into the theatre to view the performances was more than theatre far exceeded the number of tickets sold, the veterans face a heavy loss, in spite of the fact that the theatre, the films and some talent had been donated for the cause.

The veterans charge discrimination against their organization due to the fact that another show began at Fay’s theatre on the same evening was not so molested by the police.

This show was held by the 24th Ward Benevolent Association, a Republican political organization, for the benefit of the needy of the ward. The movement to call attention to discrimination against the veterans is expected to spread to other organizations.

W B and Brunswick Give 500 Thanksgiving Radios

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—During the week of November 23, Warner Brothers and their associated Brunswick Radio radio dealers distributed 500 in fully equipped radio sets to the outstanding charitable institutions throughout the country as a Thanksgiving gift. Over 500 institutions were recipients of the radio sets.
In order to solve the problem of deciding which organizations should receive the gifts, audiences at the Warner houses were invited during the seven-day period to vote for the charities which they considered most deserving.

The screens of more than 500 theaters and 200 broadcasts over 35 stations were used to bring this campaign before the public. Through the cooperation of radio dealers, 9,000 window displays were devoted to the same cause. Ballots were available in the theatres, with the number indicating necessary to pay admission in order to vote. H. M. Warner, commenting on the method of selection, said, “We should like to be able to give a radio set to every charitable body in the country. Since this is impossible, we have taken what seems to us to be the best means of making a selection.”

Glen Dickinson Starting
Circuit of City Theatres

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 4.—Purchase of the Biju theatre at 50th and Prospect streets is the opening shot in a campaign to organize a Dickinson City Circuit. Glen W. Dickinson Theatres, Inc., of which F. A. Regan is publicity director, operates 33 theatres in the smaller towns of Kansas and Missouri and the Biju is the first city theatre added to the chain.

Toledo Burglars Face
Ohio Safe; $1,400 Is Told

TOLEDO, OHIO, Dec. 4.—Burglars forced an entrance into the Ohio theatre here early Monday morning, blew the office safe, and escaped with $1,400. There is no clue.

New Valve Solves “Mike"
Altitude Problem on Grey Film

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—During the filming of the screen adaptation of the novel, “Flying Caravans,” Paramount is using specially built microphones, designed to counteract the effects of change in altitude.

The new microphone was constructed as the result of experiments made by the film’s sound engi-ere for the film. A tiny valve on the tube wherein the plates are located, which is switched on when the instrument is carried at high alti-dutes, equalizes the pressure inside out, since the diminishing of air pressure on the outward was the original cause of trouble.

Warner Brothers
Sponsor Benefit
For Unemployed

As their contribution to the aid of the unemployed, the Warner Brothers houses in Chicago will give benefit performances in 19 of its theatres here on the night of December 15. H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, invited James E. Coston, manager of the Chicago theatres, giving him authority to do something for the unemployed.” Immediately, Coston arranged for simultaneous performances in each of the houses on that date.

Employees at all the houses have consented to donate their services to the cause. The performances are to be held at midnight, and it is understood that every penny which reaches the box offices after 10:30 of that night will go into the fund for relief.

The houses taking part in the benefit are the Avalon, Capitol, Stratford, Cosmo, Grove,
Highland, Jeffery, West Englewood, Orpheum,
Shore, Symphony, Buckingham, Frolic, Hamilton,
Harvard, Julian, Lexington, Oakland
Square, Shakespeare.

Ufa’s Upward Movement
Progresses, Say Directors
After Balancing of Books

[By Horlina Correspondent to the Herald-World]

BERLIN, Nov. 29, (By Mail).—The Ufa balance sheet for the last financial year, ended
May 31, 1930, shows a gross profit of 23,25
(1 year before 23.10 million marks). After writing off for depreciation of films and pro-

erty and deducting for taxes, commercial expense and capital interests there remains a net profit equivalent to $3,385 to be brought over to new account.

The upward movement noticed at the end of the last financial year, the directors declare, is progressing, but further development must depend on the economical situation

Yes, Horwitz Did Start Something! 46 Exhibitors Call Session

Theatre Owners Summoned by Circular Letter to Fight Censorship and Blue Law Proposal—Cole Also Under Fire

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

DALLAS, Dec. 4.—Forty-six motion picture exhibitors of Texas have called a mass meeting here at the Adolphus Hotel to discuss the campaign for censorship and Sunday theatre closing, which was started in Houston by Will Horwitz, exhibitor and president of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas.

A CIRCULAR letter mailed by the exhibitors indicates a fight on the Horwitz regime and opposition to state censorship and invoking Sunday closing laws. Horwitz has pleaded his case in advertisements in Houston newspaper and has written Baptist and Methodist ministers, the recent convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and finally has circulated the legislators of the state vocating state regulation of motion picture propriety.

Horwitz was elected president of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas in October, succeeding Col. H. A. Cole of Dallas, who has headed the exhibitors' organization of the state for many years.

Cole is also under fire in the call letter, it being charged that he insured Horwitz's election by his own refusal to accept renomination.

Colonel Cole declared that he had not been invited to attend the mass meeting.

Public Interest Grows In Weekly Concerts of Musicians in St. Louis

(STL LOUIS, Dec. 4.—The public is showing increasing interest in concerts given by the St. Louis Local of the musicians union at the Coliseum. When the second of the series of programs was presented, more than 3,500 attended, which is a considerably larger number than that present at the first concert.

The musicians inaugurated the system of public concerts sometime ago as part of a campaign against the theatres for their re-fusal to use pit orchestras, stage bands and organists. This issue has now been settled, but the musicians programs will be continued until the five scheduled concerts have been given.

Charles P. Seymour, veteran St. Louis bandmaster, directs the band, which has 145 pieces.

Gable Chosen to Manage Group of Warner Houses

(INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 4.—Maurice Gable, manager of the Circle theatre here, has been chosen to manage a group of Warner brothers theatres in Philadelphia. He will work under William Goldman, general manager of the houses in the Philadelphia zone belonging to the Warner circuit. Gable will be succeeded by Charles K. Long, who has been theatre owner and assistant manager of the Indiana theatre for the past year and a half.

In personnel changes as the result of the promotions, James Waller, chief of service at the Indiana, will succeed Long; Burt Darnell will succeed Walker and Shirley Williams will become assistant chief of service.

Manager Beats Yegg to Safe Holding Receipts

(PORTLAND, Dec. 4.—Yeggs broke into the Regal theatre and blew off the door of the safe, but arrived just too late, as the house manager and assistants had earlier in the evening removed the two days' receipts.

Outdoor Showmen Plan $80 Million as Investment in 1931

Plans calling for the expenditure of $80,000,000 in 1931, with the expectation of a profit on their investment, were outlined at a joint meeting of the International Association of Fairs and Expositions and the Showmen's League of America held recently in Chicago.

Showmen from all parts of the country were in attendance, and all expressed the faith that better times are coming in the near future, at least as far as they were concerned. More than 3,000 fairs and nearly 500 other outdoor shows are planned.

Son of Theatre Owner Indicted on Arson Charge

(FINDLAY, OHIO, Dec. 4.—The Hancock County grand jury in session here has returned an indictment against Joseph Abowd on a charge of arson.

Abowd is alleged to have caused the fire which destroyed the Abowd theatre here on the night of November 29, entailing a loss of $150,000. He was manager of the house which was owned by his mother.

Little Carnegie Returns To Showing Foreign Films

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—With the opening on December 15 of Rene Clair's French talking film, "Sous Les Toits De Paris," the Little Carnegie Playhouse here will temporarily return, revert to its original policy of sponsoring the first American presentations of outstanding European productions.

Raze Old Hotel to Make Way for New W B House

(MANSFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 4.—Work has been started on razing the old Vonsih hotel building which will be the site of the new Warner Brothers theatre to be erected here.

Contract calls for the site to be cleared by February 1, when active structural work on the theatre will be started.

SECURITIES PRICE RANGE

Week Ending December 4

(NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Increases in prices, fractional though they were, followed Hoover's message at the opening of Congress. Advances included the following: General Electric, 34; I. T. & T., 34; Radio Corporation, 34; Warner Brothers A, 34; while Eastman Kodak was off 34. Trading on Wednesday, however, brought slight declines in several amusement stocks.

A picture of a hill-top with Bill Boyd astride Ghost, the $12,000 equine star, looking down upon the locations in Arizona where he enacted scenes for Pathé's "The Painted Desert," where he, and a hundred players, spent weeks.

An interesting study in expression, and also of shadows. The two here pictured hardly need an introduction, but as it is customary, they are Robert Armstrong and Louis Wolheim, the featured players in Radio Pictures' drama of railroad life, entitled "Danger Lights," a tribute to railroading.

Anita Louise, Tiffany "find," who plays a prominent role in "The Third Alarm." Below, Kent Douglass, who plays opposite Joan Crawford in MGM's "Within the Law."

If it weren't that Joan Marsh was a decided blonde and Conchita Montenegro an emphatic brunette, they might be mistaken for each other in their twin evening dresses which they, girl-like, decided to wear. They are MGM players.

Now and then, but rarely, a camera catches the busy James Cruze while on the lot directing, the famous cap always tilted at exactly the right angle. The "location" in this particular picture is a railroad station, where shots were being made for the James Cruze production, under the title of "She Got What She Wanted."
Looking them over, we'll venture to say they have his full approval. Karl Freund, the ponderous chief photographer of Universal's brilliant comedy, "The Boudoir Diplomat," is using the cameraman's blue glass in his intensive study of several members of the cast. They are (beginning at the left) Ian Keith, Betty Compson and Mary Duncan, who have important roles in the picture.

Robert L. Ripley, famous cartoonist and author, in a scene from the fifth of the "Believe It or Not" series he is making for Vitaphone Varieties. He presents some more of his entertaining novelties through the medium of the talking screen.

Jack L. Warner, Jr., being greeted by M. A. Silver, general manager of the W.B. Pacific Coast theatres, on the occasion of the dedication of the Huntington Park theatre. Jack, Jr. is becoming extremely proficient as an extemporaneous speaker.

Who wouldn't be happy to get back from a wonderful trip abroad, if they received such a spontaneous and cheery welcome as this? It's no wonder Louise Fazenda's face is just wreathed in smiles. She has just returned after two months across the water, and is now ready to begin work. The Darmour studio retinue turned out to enforce. In the foreground, Louise, Lew Foster and Albert Herman.
This photograph was taken after the champion of champions, Bobby Jones, had signed a contract, which calls for 12 pictures to be made for Vitaphone Varieties. The series will be entitled, "How I Play Golf," and thus an admiring nation will be able to see the "skill" which won all those trophies. Left to right, Lewis Warner, Jack L. Warner, Bobby Jones, H. M. Warner and Major Albert Warner.

We'll say this girl's a tough "hombre," and we're glad we're not parked anywhere in front of that dainty little plaything that she is having such a good time aiming around. Daphne Pollard and Andy Clyde look as though they meant business, but Marjorie Beebe—there's no doubt about it. These three are the chief protagonists in the Educational-Mack Sennett comedy, "Racket Cheers."

Introducing lovely Anita Page as "Alias Jane Valentine," and we wonder whether she will be as famous as her brother "Jimmy." She will next be seen in the leading feminine role in MGM's "Reducing," starring Marie Dressler and Polly Moran.
Pathe Starting Busiest Season with Two Made, Four About to Begin

Final Editing Underway on Two Byrd Productions—Ann Harding, Constance Bennett, Helen Twelvetrees and Laura LaPlante Ready
(Special to the Herald-World)

CULVER CITY, Dec. 4.—Six big pictures from Pathe are in the editing stage or in final preparation and six short features are either nearing completion or about to go into one of their busiest periods since E. B. Derr took charge of production.

Ann Harding will start “Rebound.” Donald Ogden Stewart’s stage play, upon her return from Fox, to whom she was lent to play the lead in “East Lynne.” Director Edward H. Griffith and Horace Jackson, dialogist, who teamed in “Holiday,” collaborated in adapting “Rebound.”

Pascal Writing Story
Constance Bennett will star in a story written by Ernest Pascal based upon a suggestion by Paul L. Stein. Production is scheduled to start around Christmas, shortly after Miss Bennett finishes “The Easiest Way” for MGM.

Helen Twelvetrees will have the starring role in “The Price of a Party” on her return to Pathe from the RKO lot where she is playing the lead in “Millie.” Joseph Santley, director of “Swing High,” is the author of the “Party” story and again will direct her. L. B. Abbott heads the cast thus far engaged for “Lonely Wives.” Broadway stage play adapted by Walter DeLeon and to be directed by Russell Mack. Edward Everett Horton will also play a leading role.

Daphne Pollard Begins Another
Dame Pollard, leading two-reel comedy star on the Pathe lot, completed “Sectin the Indians” last week and immediately started on another comedy vehicle. Both were written by Paul Gerard Smith. In her present vehicle is supported by Ginger Connolly, Duke Lee and Bud Jamison, and in the latter by Ginger Connolly, Edgar Kennedy, Arthur Honeck, Herbert Prior and Marian Lord. Ralph Ceder, recently signed to a Pathe contract, is the director.

“Sea Goin’ Shucks,” latest story written by Bob Carney and Si Willis, has been completed by Wallace Fox with Emerson Treacy and Ray Cooke heading the cast which includes Mona Rico and Ed Dearing. Fox is developing the script for “Three Wise Chicks,” based upon a story by J. V. Jefferson.

Franklin Pangborn will be featured in two comedies, Mauri Grashin is writing the story and Frank Guilo and Arch Heath are collaborating on another.

Other comedy stories are being written by Maxine Tennyson, Harry Frazer and Charles “Chick” Callahan.

George Snazelle Takes Charge of Filmophone to Handle Big 4 in England
(Special to the Herald-World)

LONDON, Dec. 4.—George Snazelle has been appointed general sales manager of Filmophone Rentals, Ltd., distributors in England of the product of Big 4, producers of Western films. The appointment was made by Frank Green, managing director of the foreign company. Three of the American firm’s Westerns have already been trade shown and are now booking in the United Kingdom.

Educational Films Argues New York Taxes Unconstitutional in Supreme Court Fight
(Special to the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Supreme Court has heard arguments in the effort of the Educational Films Corporation to have held unconstitutional certain taxes levied upon it by the New York State Tax Commission. The company contended that franchise taxes levied upon its income were invalid as the income consisted in part of royalties from copyrights owned by it. It was urged that copyrights are Federal rights therefore not subject to state taxation. The company had appealed from a decision of the District Court in New York upholding the tax commission.

Know Your Exchange Managers

The exchange manager is the direct contact between exhibitor and distributor, and therefore it is to their mutual advantage to know each other. The Herald-World presents a series of brief sketches of exchange managers and their outstanding activities in the motion picture field.

A. H. SCHNITZER, manager of RKO’s Pittsburgh branch, has been in the motion picture business since 1916, when he began as a salesman for Universal in the Cincinnati branch. Early in the following year he was named manager of the Cincinnati office of Blue Bird Phonofilm, Universal branch. When he returned from the World War in February, 1919, he rejoined Universal as sales manager of short subjects in the Pittsburgh office. In April, 1922, he was made manager of the office of Robertson Cole, which later became FBO and finally a part of RKO.

S. N. BERGER, New York district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, entered the business eleven years ago as a salesman for First National. Later he was appointed manager of the Brooklyn territory for First National and remained with that company for three years. After spending one year with Paramount in the capacity of salesman, Berger joined the sales forces of Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer as a home office representative.

HARRY LUSTIG, manager of the centralized Los Angeles office of Warner Brothers, First National and Vitaphone, has been connected with Warner Brothers as district and branch manager for five years. Before that he was with Metro and Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer for ten and a half years as branch and district manager. Earlier than that he was for four years branch manager for Mutual Film Corporation at Denver.

All his activity in the business picture has been in the west
"CHIC" CHATS

NEW YORK.

THIS is not meant to be a complaint, but we honestly think the matter should be brought to the attention of the management, and perhaps it might serve as a word to the wise to other exhibitors, wherever they may be located.

At one of the Broadway theatres last Wednesday, a preview of the following week's picture was being shown at approximately 10 p.m. During the final performance for the week, the theatre was crowded to the doors. Shortly after 10, the new film went on and, naturally enough, no one left the house. Meanwhile, tickets were being sold at the box office, and more people were pushing their way into the theatre. A long line was standing on the mezzanine floor waiting for balcony seats and the lobby was jammed. Ushers, extremely courteous in handling the crowd, informed them that their present performance would be at midnight, necessitating a probable wait of something like two hours.

Numerous of people became annoyed and finally left the theatre, receiving a refund of the admission price as they left. It seems to us that the continued sale of tickets after the current theatre were no seats until midnight was a very poor judgment on the part of the management, principal because it created a definite antagonism on the part of the patrons, both those who were forced to leave and the others who had to stand.

The management should have posted notices to the effect that there would be no seats for such and such a length of time, and then permitted the sale of tickets to those who cared to wait as long as necessary.

A magistrate in one of the New York courts the other day suspended sentence on a man charged with disorderly conduct for having attempted persistently to "crash" the offices of various motion picture executives in search of a director's job. The defendant was a waiter from Berlin and he had already been ordered to make no such attempt. He should have been, but that's nothing new! When he was arrested in the Paramount building, he said he was trying to see either Adolph Zukor or Al Waxman who should have become "a movie director like Lubitsch or DeMille." The magistrate told him there was a much more pressing need for good waiters today than for motion picture directors.

Well, that's the judge's opinion!

Alfred W. McCann, well known pure food expert whose daily radio talks have made him the prophet of more than a few housewives, received a letter the other day recounting an argument between a certain husband and wife relative to the number of calories they were consuming each day. He said it put him in mind of the picture "Min and Bill" in which Marie Dressler, who can do more with facial expression than most any-thing the screen today, pursues Wallace Beery through the rooms of her boarding house on a wrecking rampage. She finally goes after him, with a. fire ax and heavy through a window to complete Beery's sub- juration. She calls herself an "old sea cow," andmode the way such a man should look in human form. McCann termed the scene as "illustrating a profound point in purifying" which is just a high hat way of saying "Jealousy."

MPTO Acts to Meet Costs of Code Demands Cooperatively

Seventy-Five Per Cent of Wisconsin Theatres Hit by New State Regulations Requiring Special Ventilation Equipment for Projection Rooms—Trial System Approved

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 4.—The MPTO of Wisconsin has taken action to provide ventilation of motion picture projection rooms in Wisconsin in accordance with the code recently adopted by the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin and the theatre owners and projectionists. The association is installing the new equipment on a cooperative basis to save the individual exhibitors as much of the expense of readjustment as possible.

One timer has been engaged to do all the work in the local houses, while the other equipment, including the motors, etc., is being purchased from one firm by the association.

Estimates 75% of Theatres Involved

Approximately 75 per cent of the theatres will be affected by the new code, it is estimated by the Secretary of the MPTO. Insofar as the code affects all theatres in Wisconsin, he asks that the state exhibitors and state of the Mil- waukee office concerning the matter and he will be glad to give them complete information.

The method of ventilating being used substitutes for the squirrel cage blower fan, another motor equipped with a door for oiling. A blade fan, made especially for duct work, is employed. This also can be placed on either side of the booth.

Requirements of Code

The code reads as follows:

1. Exhaust ventilation—Every booth or room housing projection, sound or any other equipment which vitiates good air conditions or requires the attention of an attendant, shall be ventilated as required under the provisions of order 5841, of the Heating and Ventilation Code, issued by the Industrial Commission. Fumes, gases and other harmful contamination shall be effectively removed by mechanical exhaust ventilation direct from the source to the outside air, or an approved disposal system. Mechanical exhaust ventilation shall be provided direct from the lamp housing and be independent of all other ventilation.

2. Air Supply.—In every booth or room which is required to have mechanical exhaust ventilation direct from the source to the outside air, shall be made for a supply of fresh tempered air to replace the vitiated air exhausted. The fresh tempered air shall be delivered under gravity conditions, unless the volume of air exhausted from the booth or room by mechanical means is greater than the supply.

Booth Ventilation Separate

The ventilation system for the building shall not be arranged to supply air for the booth or room unless the inlet opening is protected by one or more approved quick-acting fusible links, or other approved heat release devices, which will automatically and quickly close the opening simultaneously with the openings in the front of the booth.

A system of ventilation was first installed by Butler in his Elite theatre in Milwaukee, in accordance with the new code requirements, after which he invited inspection of it by the building inspection department. This was done in order that the system would meet with the approval of the department before installations were made in other houses. This Elite system has been approved by the building inspector as well as by the ventilating committee of the association.

Students Get Police Edict After Forcing Entrance to Show

(Special to the Herald-World)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Dec. 4.—Following a gate crashing episode staged by Ohio State University students at Loew's Ohio theatre after a football game, Chief of Police Harry E. French has announced further violations will be prosecuted.

His official bulletin reads: "Due to the conduct of certain students in forcing entrance into theatres last night, it is hereby ordered that extra police protection be afforded at the theatres in the congested business districts Saturday nights, especially so if Ohio State wins a football game. "Any and all persons attempting to make forced entrance into theatres on charge of disorderly conduct will be promptly ar rested. We will prosecute them to the fullest extent of the law. No further leniency will be extended to men who deport themselves as hoodlums."

"Thirty days in the workhouse will tend to cool the ardor of men who forget to act as gentlemen and law-abiding citizens."

On Hunt for Ideal Studio

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4.—Gaumont of Paris has commissioned a special delegation to seek souped up equipment in those production centers of the world for the stated purpose of studying the equipment of the ideal sound-film studio.

Proposed 10 Per Cent Amusement Tax

In St. Louis Meets Union Opposition

(ST LOUIS, Dec. 4.—The Central Trades and Labor Union has gone on record as opposed to the proposed 10 per cent tax on amusement admissions and restaurant checks. The legislative committee of the group has been vigorously urged to oppose the tax. It is understood that several speakers expressed the belief that the Board of Aldermen would take fewer "junketing" trips, at public expense, there would be no need for the suggested tax.

THE THIRD ALARM

This thrilling from even the earlier days of the "silent drama" has lived to achieve a greater realism through sound. Exploiting the various fascination of flaming buildings, the rousing dash of screaming apparatus down the streets, and the courage and affections of strong, simple folk, the story is permended in its appeal and therefore deserves this modern retelling.

Some may remember the main points of the story—how Milly Morton and the little brother whom she has mothered, lose their father to the flames, and how Dan and Beauty, young members of Morton's fire company, strive to keep the orphans out of an asylum, even going so far as to set about getting married, so that the youngsters can be adopted. It would be simple if Dan would realize that Milly is of marriageable age. But he doesn't until the girl he has intended to marry points out Milly's love for him.

Suspended for his suspected help in Milly's unsuccessful escape from the orphanage, he is sitting home while his company is fighting a fire—at the orphanage—but despite his suspension, at the third alarm he decides to go. Arriving to find Milly, little Jimmie and some other children trapped, he is instrumental in rescuing them, and carries Milly to safety, which means also the security of his love.

But poor Beauty! From among his innumerable "dames" he has found one to wed for the kids' sake, and by the time Dan and Milly reach home, the knot has been tied.

The comic element thus indicated by Beauty's situation, flows through the entire story, supplying comedy relief that is refreshingly part and parcel of the story.

Milly, though very young, has been matured by the circumstances of her life. The result is a rare womanly role for the youthful Anita Louise, and with it she reveals a fine sense of the pathetic. James Hall, however, never gives more than an outline of the possibility in Dan, so the laurels among the male players must go to Paul Hurst as the likeable, comical Beauty.

Almost always the treatment is meritorious, but it may be questioned if its endeavor to follow many phases of the action at practically the same time does not represent the most desirable technique. Such an observation, of course, may involve a general criticism of certain uses of the flash-back with sound, as exemplified by instantaneous shifts from a scene of great excitement to one of quietude in a home. However, the spectacular sequences themselves in "The Third Alarm" seem to lose some of their effectiveness through an effort to follow the event continually from points varied in character. Pictorially, this method might be merely a bit confusing. But with sound, it proved to some degree in this case a disturbance to the illusion.

Be that as it may, here is a good old story, competently acted and given new life by the sounds of life. And since everybody, it seems, is fascinated by fires and their fighters, the production is full of good exploitation material—George Schatz, Chicago.

HEROINE OF THE WEEK

EVELYN BRENT gives a masterful performance with Robert Ames in Columbia's drama, "Madonna of the Streets."

THE GREAT MEADOW

It is surprising that producers have never given more attention to the pioneer era of American history as a source of story material. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer appears to have been highly successful with "The Great Meadow," using as a background that period that embodied great hardship and adventure. Emphasizing the already dramatic situations of the story M.G.M. has placed this on the screen in Realife. So much of the picture is outdoors the wide film proves highly suitable. The snow storms and rain storms attain realism that is new to motion pictures.

"The Great Meadow" is a story of the settlers of Kentucky. It begins in Virginia Col- ony with the call from Daniel Boone to the young people to make the long and dangerous trek through the mountains to the fertile val- ley of the West. There is an epic-like story of privation that ends in death for many of the less hardy.

Prior to the departure the girl and boy (en- acted by Eleanor Boardman and John Mack Brown) have been married. The birth of their child is the last period before the Kentucky garrison and the death of the hero's mother mark a turning point in the narrative. The authors have suddenly found themselves with a new story, that has a new objective and a different theme. Where for the first half of the picture the menace in the natural hazards of the life, the menace in the last half is the third person who falls in love with the heroine.

The scenery in the picture has been obtained upon locations that have been chosen with a rare eye to beauty. The dialogue runs smoothly throughout and has been obviously done by one who knows his pioneers and their litany.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS

Though this screen adaptation of the W. B. Maxwell story is not new in theme, the cast is good, particularly in the person of Evelyn Brent, who is very appealing as the girl of the San Francisco mission house, and Robert Ames, who plays opposite.

It is a drama, with little to relieve the situation in the way of comedy. The adaptation of Swellinger shows care and intelligence, with only a good deal of attention having been paid to the original story, since the audience might well imagine a novel being portrayed on the screen as the picture progresses. Direction by John Robertson is equally competent, with a careful avoiding of overplay and over-length in several sequences, which might have happened under less capable direction.

Evelyn Brent acts well and handles her role sympathetically. The story of the young man who has inherited the estate of a wealthy uncle, and the headstrong girl who believes rightfully should be hers, she finds in San Francisco, heart and soul in the running of a mission house for unemployed men, with plans for a new $1,000,000 mission dependent on the settlement of the estate of the uncle. Ames rescues the girl as she attempts to commit suicide. The story is handled sympathetically, and the ending is so satisfactory that it is in line with his. His fancied approves of the interest he takes in the mission, and following a disagreement, he marries the girl he had displaced, as "Lightnin'" brings to the novel, the uncle had changed his mind, restoring the girl as the heir. Ames gives authority to his attorney to find the missing girl and restore the money.

She finally admits that she is the real owner of the money, and the disagreement which follows in her welfare. These are both wonderful, and she is in line with his. HEROES OF THE WEEK

ELEANOR BOARDMAN and JOHN MACK BROWN have leading roles in MGM's "The Great Meadows," a story of the settling of Kentucky.

COLLEGE LOVERS

This story of the college and its two football stars is different in that at the conclusion of the film, the big game between the rival schools ends in a tie.

There are several excellent photographic shots during the big game, which, obviously run in from one of the important western games, create an atmosphere and background for the concluding scenes of the picture, which looks real enough.

It so happens in this story that the girl in the co-ed school of Stanford is in love with the manager of the team instead of its star player. The two backfield aces, who are apparently the entire team when it comes to scoring for the college, is through with. Among this same girl. In order to bring them together on the eve of the game, she writes, at the dictation of the manager, identical love notes to the two. After scoring twice, they discover between halves that they have been kidded, and wind up on the bench, while the opposing team of College even the score.

In a desperate effort to save the day, the manager of the team engages himself to the girl in the short space of 10 minutes, and tells the two rivals the truth. They heave two audible sighs of relief and go into the fray. While the manager does his thing on the three-yard line, as to whether one is to have the honor of carrying the ball for the winning touchdown, the gun is fired and the game is over.

On the whole, it is entertaining, with a general good humor throughout which makes for more than success at any theatre. Jack Keefe is excellent in the role of the manager of the football team, with Marian Nixon competent as the girl in the cast. The Photoplay and Chisholm rivalry will win Alphone and Gaston act on the three-yard line, are played by Guinn Williams and Russell Hopton. Hopton has the edge in action, taken at least equal to that by Frank McHugh as the man Friday of the manager of the team; Wade Boteler as the coach; Phyllis Crane as the first flame of one of the stars at the opening of the film; and Richard Tucker as the father of the girl.—Charles S. Aaronson, New York City.

EX-FLAME

When Liberty Productions changed the title, "East Lynne," to "Ex-Flame," motion picture titles set up in surprise, and when they saw the preview they were even more surprised, because there was very little, other than theme, which even faintly resembled the "East Lynne" of legitimate days. With Neil Hamilton, Marian Nixon and Norman Kerry, the production is entertaining in its new and modern costume. The story, as it now stands, is the story of a wealthy British peer who marries his second love. The first love, or "ex-flame," returns, and it justly touts for the wife. She leaves her husband, finding comfort in the friendship of a rogue who inconveniently dies in her apartment. Newspapers scare the headlines, the peer gets a divorce, and the wife starts out to see the world with a succession of men. She reads of the impending marriage of her ex-husband to his ex-flame and rushes back to Great Britain to kidnap her son. She is caught in the act, but instead of tossing her from the ancestral estate, the peer realizes that he loves her, despite her transgressions.

The handsome Neil Hamilton, as the peer, gives a sympathetic portrayal. The attractive Miss Nixon also reads her lines well and, in addition, gives a good emotional performance. Little Bitty Haggerty, as the child, gets "oh's" and "ah's" from the audience because of his acting and his personality. Norman Kerry, as the rogue, gives a smooth performance.

It is a drama of emotions rather than actions. Photography is good, and so is the dialogue.

Helperin has done a good job of showing first love grow cold and then making it glow again as a deeper emotion in the case of Hamilton and Miss Nixon.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER

Eddie Cline has put anything about everything into "Hook, Line and Sinker," that Wheeler and Wooley have clowned their way through the picture with a lot of laughs and not too much romance.

The love interest goes on between Wheeler and Dorothy Lee. She carries herself admirably throughout the picture and is responsible for much of the plaudits the picture received the night of the preview.

The picture is done for a program length. In order to keep it down to footing Cline has cropped all the loose ends and at the same time has turned out a fast moving picture.

It begins with the shorty to the importance talking trying to make a policy to the heroine. She has little sympathy for the policy but a lot for the juvenile. She has a hotel that needs new management and the trio embark in the hotel management business. The place proves to be a reminder of that old resort around which "Seven Keys to Balambata" was written. After the cobwebs have been dusted away and the new guests imported, the villains arrive.

Some chintzy, lighthearted kind of underworld motives enter into the semi-serious story from that point on.

There is a lot of interest and a lot of entertainment in the picture. The three featured players in it are as lively as this as they ever have been.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

ARE YOU THERE

MacFadden unleashes laugh after laugh in this feature length comedy. It is an English cast, an English setting and is mounted excellently. It is a farce with sufficient story woven in to make an all-around production. It is quite un- likely to introduce a producer that is far ahead of the procession as this one aims to be.

Beatrice Lillie is without question one of the ablest stage comedians of the day. Her personality and grace are registered superly upon the screen in this picture. She is smart looking, clever, and mirthprovoking. Every movement of her hands proves her artistry.

Miss Lillie has with her a cast of able actors. With whom she has done better work than Lloyd Hamilton? Hamilton has been steadily forging his way to fame on the talking screen and has accentuated a picture that makes him an excellent feature comedian.

The remainder of the cast play straight for these two, and do a fine job of acting through the show.

There isn't great depth to the story. That is as it should be. Miss Lillie portrays a woman dealing with her husband in a buno game. Her victim is Oga Balanovanu.

One of the most entertaining nats of the picture develops when Miss Lillie goes into a song and dance with two men dressed as Arabs. During her accrobatica she sings a song called "Bagdad Daddies Keep Away From Me," which brought down the house at the preview.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

SIN TAKES A HOLIDAY

Pathe comes to bat with another picture of the "Beneath the Flowers" type. "Sins Takes a Holiday" is an attraction of general appeal and suitable story with acting and direction that are outstanding. Constance Bennett never appeared to better advantage. Paul Stein at the megaphone has given the
THE LITTLE DIVORCEE

TALKING CHIMP SERIES

Tiffany—Talking

This is as clever a satire as we have seen anywhere on marriages that go wrong, letters left for the husband and the final reconciliation. Horsemanship and the comedy situations, while the cowboy songs, heard at intervals, carry pleasing harmony.

Children especially liked the fast action and horseplay in the picture.—Louise Allen, Hollywood.

THE JAZZ CINDERELLA

"THE JAZZ CINDERELLA," produced by Chesterfield, is the story of the poor girl who wins the rich young man, after attempting to destroy his love for her by pretending to be a hulard.

While a number of the situations have been used here before, the beauty of Myrna Loy and the cleverness of Nancy Weller in some of the stronger moments prove to be outstanding. Miss Weller seems to be the perfect actress for the stage, did not get as much out of his role in this production.

There are music and songs but the introduction of the letter was not as well received as might have been desired and the action was retarded at times.

Heavy Booking Reported

For New Mascot Serial, "Phantom of the West"

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Nat Levine, president of Mascot Pictures corporation, reports that recent bookings for "The Phantom of the West," have established what he believes to be a record. The Scollay Square theatre of Boston, the Loew house in Hartford, Conn., and the Bijou in Springfield, Mass., have understood that Herman Rikin, of the Hollywood Films corporation, has booked the picture into 46 other Publicx theatres. The film is in 10 installments.

Levine, it is reported, is preparing for the early production of "King of the Wild," his third all-talking serial of the current season.
DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

When Jules Verne wrote "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," the people marveled at his wonderful imagination. Today we go Jules Verne several leagues better, for our undersea craft plow about in a sea on this earth. Edward Bellamy astonished the world with his "Looking Backward," but when David Butler produced "JUST IMAGINE" for Fox, he pushed Verne and Bellamy back into the A. B. C. class.

"JUST IMAGINE" is a picture that lifts you up in 1930, and sets you down in 1980, and what you see when it sets you down will be a revelation.

You will see a city built of skyscraper buildings higher than you imagine buildings could be built. You will see swarms of airplanes like flocks of blackbirds flying in every direction and all controlled by traffic signals. You will see airplanes that go straight up and settle straight down, and you will see the most gorgeous settings that the mind can conceive, and there will be an air of wonderment about it all that will be next to shaking.

A scientist conceives the idea of sending an airship to Mars. He completes the airship and selects John Garrick, Frank Albertson and El Brendel to man the ship, and when the ship is ready for departure it is shot off like a skyrocket, and after sailing around in space for some time, it finally lands on Mars on schedule time and according to scientific calculations.

Mars is found to be inhabited by swarms of beautiful girls, all decked out in the latest Mars styles, which consist mainly in Nature's smiles, and all of whom make a wonderful hit with El Brendel, who wants to establish a permanent residence.

The queen of these royal beauties receives the boys in true royal fashion, but they are unable to understand the Mars language. But that doesn't bother El Brendel a bit, for he starts in right from the kickoff to put on a whoopee party. And El Brendel knows what a whoopee party looks like!

If you have ever been in the Wind Cave in the Black Hills of South Dakota and have seen the fountains of stalactites and stalagmites glistening under the electric lights, you can form some conception of the gorgeousness of the scenery of Mars.

Space will not permit of a lengthy description of this picture—in fact, it is practically beyond description by the ordinary mind, but suffice it to say that when the boys return to earth, El Brendel brings back one of the queen's guards as proof that they have been to the planet. But a nasty wallop comes at the end of the picture when a man 50 years old walks up to El Brendel and says, "Did you once live at 649 Skemmerhorn street in Bowagar, Mich. [or some other place, we have forgotten the town]? "And when El Brendel says he did, he replies, "Well, I'm your little son Axel." And El Brendel says, "Come sit on my knee, sonny hoy."

"JUST IMAGINE" is the most spectacular production that ever came to the screen, and it will be the talk of the community months after it has been shown, and if we knew the brand David Butler used when he conceived that picture, we'd send to Hollywood and get us some, for we need it!

According to a report in the HERALD-WORLD recently, Houston, Tex., has become much exercised over the question of censorship. We are not a believer in censorship. We believe the theory is wrong. But we do believe that, were it not for the threat of it, God only knows to what extent some producing minds would go. The constant clamor of thousands of theatremen for clean pictures has failed, in many cases, to bring results. Will the industry finally force censorship upon itself?

John Flynn sells Columbia service out of Kansas City, and when John can't put Columbia service in a town, it is because the town went back to the government before John got there. We met John at Woodland and we saw that there was something on his mind. He seemed worried, and we asked him if a rich relative had passed on without knowing his address and the court was unable to locate him when the will was probated, and he said, "No, it is worse than that, much worse. I have been struggling along for years trying to do justice by my family, my government and the company I serve without the assistance of the HERALD-WORLD, but I have come to the end of the road. My life has been a failure and there is nothing in the future for me unless, perchance, you might have an extra subscription to the HERALD-WORLD that isn't working." And the tears streamed down John's face and, we felt sorry for him as we handed him a receipt for three bucks, and when he passed the money over to us we could note a marked improvement in him. He seemed to brighten up and get a new vision of life. There is a moral to this, if you can find it.

There's a guy on the radio singing, "Those Little White Lies," and if we were in reach of him with a half bat we'd plead guilty and take our medicine, for if there ever was a piece of music that will take the place of castor oil, this one is it. We wish they would tune in on that New Jersey henhose music again.

We have tried for a long time to remember where R. E. Menefee was located, but we found him at Hoxie this week. R. E. has re-modelled his house and reports business as improving, for, Madam Prosperity has hung out her shingle in Western Kansas, and if business don't pick up out here, then these United States of America are at a dead end for the howsaws.

When we called on Ma Welty at Hill City, she said to us, "What are you doing here? We sent in our subscription to your one-horse magazine last week." And we answered her, "Why, Ma, you did that very thing two years ago when we called. Don't you have any regard for your boy friend?" And she replied, "Well, don't get sore, honey, we didn't know you were coming." Nobody could get sore at Ma.

We have been copped up here in Plainville for two days on account of mud. We can't get east, west, north, south, straight up nor sideways, but the worst of it is we have laid to associate with three film hounds, and if you know of a penitentiary anywhere that wants to increase its membership, let us hear from you. Bill Flynn of Fox, Pat Garlow of Universal, and Ringer of United Artists, are the sharks we have had to associate with, and, boy, they haven't left us a thing but our unearned reputation. Mr. Lampman at Stockton tried to get us to stay there with him, but we wanted to see George Moore here in Plainville, and that night it commenced raining, and you know Kansas, Mahle. We believe we have told you about this state before.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore had the gang up to their house for a feed each night after the show, and Bill Flynn came near choking himself to death on turkey while he was trying to tell us that "JUST IMAGINE" was the greatest picture ever made. Bill and John Flynn are brothers, but they are not twins, as John is several years older than Bill. But Bill says there may be twins in the Flynn family before long and that's why he is anxious to get back to Kansas City. Hurrah for the Flynn family! May the shamrock cover the back yard fence.

Academy Studies Production
As a Phase of Enlarged Scope

Additional Standing Committees Named—Columbia Starts on Eight Big Pictures Soon—Laemmle Wins New Honors—
Archainbaud Assigned to Direct Betty Compson

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Production during the coming year will be watched more closely than ever before by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. This organization, to which most of the more important figures in the motion picture industry belong, gradually is enlarging its scope.
Not only is it interested in production but in practically every phase of the industry.

This week, William C. DeMille, president of the Academy, announced the appointment of the following additional standing committees for the year:

Producers-Technicians Committee
Irving Thalberg, chairman; M. C. Levee, Fred W. Beeton, Sol Wurtzel, Charles Sullivan, Howard Henryson, W. Keith Weeks, J. A. Ball, Fred Pickon, J. T. Reed, Carl Dreher, Nugent H. Slaughter, Frederick M. Sammis and K. F. Morgan.

College-Trade Public Relations
Lawrence Grant, chairman; Hobart Bosworth, Henry Kolker, William K. Howard, Henry King, Fred Niblo, John W. Considine, Jr., Joseph Johnson, C. B. DeMille, Roy J.
Pomeroy, J. A. Ball, J. Mitchell Leisen, Lotta Woods, Beulah Dix Fleibs, Ralph Block and Arch Roeve.

Awards
Louis B. Mayer, chairman; Lois Wilson, Jean Hersholt, John Robertson, King Vidor, B. P. Schulberg, J. T. Reed, Ralph Hammeras, Al Cohn and Waldemar Young.

Art and Technique Programs
Frank Reicher, chairman; Helen Ware, Edmund Lowe, Edmund Goulding, Harry Rapf, Jason Joy, William C. Menzie, Douglas Shearer, Howard J. Green and John F. Goodrich.

Dinner-Entertainment
Harry Rapf, chairman; Lawrence Grant, Mitchell Lewis, Reinald Barker, Donald

Actors' Adjustment
Dewitt C. Jennings, chairman; Jean Hersholt, Claude Gillingwater, Conrad Nagel, Hallam Cooley. Alternates: Lloyd Hughes and Hobart Bosworth.

Eight Big Ones
Columbia announced this week that eight big features would be produced in production shortly. They are "The Last Parade," a postwar story directed by Eric C. Kraven; "The Flood," directed by James Thin; "Subway Express," Broadway stage thriller; "Azriona," Augustus Thomas' classic; "For the Defense," an Evelyn Brent product; "The Miracle Woman," starring Barbara Stanwyck; "Virtue's Bait," and "Joan of Arc." Marion Orth, John T. Neville, Dorothy Howell and
Stuart Anthony are adapting.

Honor Laemmle
Carl Laemmle's rewards for letting Laemmle, Junior, produce "All Quiet on the Western Front," continue to pile up. The veteran producer has been notified that he has been selected to the Royal Societies Club, of London. He was made Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts several weeks ago.

Archainbaud Assigned
George Archainbaud, celebrating his 15th year as a director, has been assigned the task of making "Children of the Streets," starring Betty Compson, in Radio Pictures. Robert
Milton and Guy Bolton wrote it, and Wally Smith is adapting and doing dialog. Incidentally, Johnny Darrow is to play opposite
Miss Compson—his first big chance.

Alexander at Work
Signs of resumed action at the Warner Brothers studios, soon to move to Burbank to join First National, are becoming apparent.
J. Grubb Alexander, who did dialog and picturization on "Molly Dick," "General Crack" and "Outward Bound," has been placed in front of a typewriter and told to do "Trilby.
John Barrymore will start in it.

Graham Baker Praises
The script of "Mother's Cry," conceived by Lenore Coffee, directed by Hobart Henley, and soon to be roadshown, revealed a depth of feeling, and as it underlies and as it could be expected only from one inspired by a genuine devotion to children. Miss Coffee has written for years but recently retired from the screen prior to the birth of her first child.

New "Blimp"
Universal has improved the "blimp," soundproof camera box which deauns hum and whir. In other days, the heavy cameras were carried from place to place. Now, we have the "perambulating blimp," which is carried on wheels a few inches off the floor and rolled where it is wanted. Set screws hold it when it is in the position wanted.

Swedes Due Back
Columbia and Johnson, comedy team, are cuting their national tour, and will be back in Hollywood for work in February instead of next summer as originally planned. They'll appear in "Red Hot Sinners." Darryl Zanuck makes the announcement.

Sullivan Dodges Crime
Edward Dean Sullivan, who recently was graduated from the ranks of reporters to become a writer, is expected from Chicago this week by Tiffany. He will go to work immediately, helping to prepare the script for
"X Marks the Spot." James Whale directs.

'Twas Close Shave for "Barber John's Boy"

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Because Warner Brothers executives had been unable to find the name of its product, "Barber
John's Boy," a conference was called.
Executives made several suggestions.
Finally, Fred Archer, the still photographer, cut in on the conversation.

"Why not," he asked, "call it 'The Little Shaver'?

What happened thereafter is not recorded.

Academy Starts
Applying Standard Film Release Prints

Technical Coordination to Cover Entire Industry; Goes Into Effect This Week

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—The industry-wide technical coordination of studios, laboratories, theatre circuits, projectionists and service organizations, created for the establishment of the release print standard, went into effect this week, it was announced by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

For months, the work of standardizing the leaders and runouts has been under way. Projectionists have faced serious problems in threading their film reels because each has been different. With standardization, the problem facing the projectionist has been tremendously simplified.

Every production studio in Hollywood now is using the standard for pictures out after the standard went into effect. All major circuits are organizing affiliated theatres.

An educational campaign designed to reach every person handling prints is facilitating the introduction and use of the standard. More than 30,000 instruction booklets and 25,000 instruction cards are being distributed.

The projection advisory council, national organization of projectionists, is particing in the establishment of the standard.
Executive vice-president P. A. McGuire is appointing leading projectionists throughout the country as representatives of this council. Council President Thad C. Barrows has appointed Harry Rubin, Sidney Burton and Bert Griffin as a committee for "correlation with the academy. The American Projection Society, through its international president, George C. Edwards, also is cooperating.

Jackson Returns to Coast

HOLLYWOOD—Joseph Jackson, Warner Brothers' scenarist, has returned to Hollywood after three months in Europe.
Thanksgiving Day Late
But Extras Have It Anyway
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLWOOD, Dec. 4.—One hundred extras appeared in a dining room scene set in Eddie Cline's current work at Radio Pictures. It was shot the day following Thanksgiving and the scene represents a moment during a big dinner. When the shot was finished, the extras arose and left the scene. All the others remained until they had eaten all the food.

Melvin Shauer on Coast
To Discuss Paramount Productions in Europe
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Melville A. Shauer, chief of foreign productions for Paramount, following a three-months' visit to the Jointville studios near Paris, has arrived here for a series of conferences with West Coast executives regarding foreign picture production.

Marked Improvement
In General Conditons Is Near, Declares Fraser
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Following a few weeks' stay in New York, during which he conferred with Paramount officials and supervised the release of Harold Lloyd's "Feet First," William H. Fraser, general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, has returned to the West Coast.

Helen Ferguson Engaged To Harold L. Hargraves
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Helen Ferguson, stage and screen star, is engaged to Harold L. Hargraves, president of the First National Bank, New York. The announcement was made by the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. Emelie Ferguson.

It is understood that the wedding will take place sometime before the Christmas holidays. Miss Ferguson has been in retirement since the sudden death of her husband, William Russe.

Virginia Lee Corbin
Back Again on Coast
(Special to the Herald-World)
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—Virginia Lee Corbin is back again on the Coast, where she plans to resume her career in the pictures, which was interrupted by her marriage 18 months ago. During the interval, the couple has been honeymooning in Europe.

Cameras Shoot Six Minutes on
One Scene of “Stolen Heaven”
Paramount Also Erecting Sets at Eastern Studio for “Sex in Business” — New Pivotal Camera Base Designed for Moving Shots
Vitaphone Varieties Makes Two More Comedies
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The Paramount staff at the Eastern studio in Astoria is concentrating on the production of "Stolen Heaven," Nancy Carroll's current starring vehicle. A number of short but important sequences have been completed during the past week. One scene, said to be one of the longest ever filmed, ran approximately six minutes before the cameras. George Abbott, the director, is making excellent progress on the film, while sets already are being erected for the next production, "Sex in Business," in which Claudette Colbert will be supported by Fredric March and Charles Ruggles under the direction of Dorothy Arzner. Rehearsals are scheduled to start this week.

Joe Ruttenberg, cameraman, has designed a new pivotal camera base for use in photographing tracking or moving shots in "Stolen Heaven." It consists of two wooden discs mounted on a camera track. In the upper disc are ball bearings which enable the upper disc to spin on the hardwood lower one. The camera is mounted on the disc, and the photographer is enabled to get almost any horizontal movement in a two-second shot.

D'Arrast to Direct in East
H. D'Abbadic D'Arrast, now in France on a vacation, will report directly to the Paramount Eastern studio on his return to the city to direct a production along the lines of "Laughter," his most recent effort. Trans-Atlantic negotiations resulted in the signing of a new contract by the director, who will join Ernst Lubitsch, George Abbott, Dorothy Arzner, George Cukor and Cyril Gardner at the Astoria plant.

The latest output from the Warner Viatphone Varieties studio in Brooklyn includes two comedies, "Court Plastered" and "Sleepy Head." In the first, which is a two-reeler developed under the megaphonic voice of director Arthur Harari, are Helen Bordenick in the lead, and Lester Crawford, Dudley Clements and Harry Norwood as supporting cast. The series is sponsored by Borden.

"Sleepy Head," directed by Al Gould, includes Ann Codelle, Frank Orth, Thelma White and Gregg Blackton in the cast.

Now in production is "Mardi Gras," which is said to be a most ambitious effort, directed and written by Casey Robinson. The cast, which is imposing, includes Vivienne Osborne, born of the stage play "As Good As New" now playing the Broadway boards, in the lead. The other players are Roy Arace, Wilfred Lytell, brother of Bert, Frank McNollis, Ivan Servais and Ray Collins.

Mack Stark has chosen "A Shocking Affair" as the new title for the second two-reeler in the series of 18 comedies starring Louis Simons now being produced by Simple Simon Comedies at the Ideal Studios in Hudson Heights, N. Y. The previous title was "Radio Madness" and the short was completed last week under the direction of Mort Blumenstock, who handled Simons in the first of the series, "Hot Shivers."

Sign Vidor to New M G M Long-Term Contract; Will Direct Three During 1931
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—King Vidor has been signed to a new long-term directorial contract by M G M, under the terms of which he will make three feature pictures during the coming period. It was announced by M G M vice-president, "Benny the Kid," Realife production.

Vidor was born in Texas, and decided to become an author, first of short stories and then of photoplays. He was not detected, but the 52nd was accepted by a small Texas producing company, and Vidor was given a chance to play in it as well as direct. He worked around the studios in New York and on the Coast, was a cameraman, then assistant director, and now is a full fledged director.

M G M Acquires Rights to Rinehart "Tish" Yarns
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Motion picture rights to the famous "Tish" stories of Mary Roberts Rinehart have been acquired by M G M, and also the stage version of the Rinehart stories by Edward E. Rose, produced by Augustus Pitou under the name of "Tish."

The stories included "The Amazing Adventures of Leititia Carberry," "That Awful Night" and "The Three Pirates of Penzance."

Now Comes Biography Penned for Mickey Mouse
(Special to the Herald-World)
HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Mickey Mouse is getting very, very prominent in film circles. This week Walt Disney, his creator and sponsor, announced that he not only had had songs written about him, but that his biography had been prepared. The latter was written by Bobette Bibo, 12.

A march song has been written by Irving Bibo and Henry Cohen. There are plenty of drawings by Disney.

$45,000 Fire Wipes Out
Theatre in Elyria, Ohio
(Special to the Herald-World)
ELYRIA, OHIO, Dec. 4.—The Dreamland theatre, in the heart of the downtown business section, was last week completely destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. Loss is estimated at $45,000.

HOLLYWOOD

W E'RE repaving the city and building two city halls. One's a real city hall; the other is for the exterior shots for motion pictures. They figured it out would save the city's money if they could keep the real one free for work.

New York has a scheme for unemployment. They sell apples in the street, a commission for which goes to the salesmen, who are picked out of the unemployment ranks. We tried it out here with oranges. We gave two hundred people a box of oranges each and told them to take half the profits, the other half going back to buy more oranges. Not an orange was sold. The two hundred people ate them all.

There's a racket sprung up here within the last week that's quite pretty. You're driving along in your car at night when all of a sudden you hear a motorcycle right beside you. One hurried look shows you it's only someone in a white uniform. But this fellow keeps pointing at the front of your car and waving you to the curb. At first you think it's a dirty shame to have the secret service out as traffic cops but you shove over just the same, ready to convince the fellow you were going eight miles an hour.

But he doesn't intend giving you a ticket. It seems your front right headlight is out and this fellow'll fix it while you wait. Charge: fifty cents. This seems fair enough, that's what it costs you in a repair shop and it's certainly illegal to go around with one headlight working. You're glad to have this service.

Where the racket comes in is that every time you park your car you run a chance of having one of these smart boys in white fixing one of your headlights so that there'll really be something the matter with it.

Well, that's one way to get rid of unemployment.

Here's a tip for Herbert Hoover, personal: Please have a heart and don't dissolve that unemployment committee. That'll throw another fifteen people out of work.

One of the actors here, at a premiere, spent a half hour signing his name in autograph albums of his admirers. At the end of the month two checks came in for a hundred dollars each that he hadn't remembered putting his name to. But there it was, in his own handwriting. No more album signing.

This is a hard town. You can talk of Hollywood suckers until the cows come home, but all the bull is pulled on the visiting firemen. The natives see so much of an industry made up of make-believe and fantasy that they don't believe the things they should.

A case in point is the children. Out here, just like where you live, Christmas is coming. And just like they do in your town the department stores have set up appetizing toy displays and a Santa Claus to entertain the kids.

At about twelve-thirty, last Wednesday afternoon, I saw two Santa Clauses talking to each other on Hollywood boulevard. In the first place this was a sad mistake to let two of them come together. Santa Clauses should have their lunches brought to them.

One youngster was coming down the same side of the street I was, holding on to his mother's hand. I thought the mother was trying to hide the child from the vision of two Santa Clauses. But just when we got even with them the kid spied the red uniforms. He pulled away from his parent.

For a second he just looked. Then, to the skinny one, "Aw, George Arliss."

Kenneth Harlan Reopens
Hollywood Pom Pom Cafe
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Hollywood's Pom Pom Cafe has opened again under the personal management of Kenneth Harlan, screen star. He has engaged the Pearl Eaton Girls, formerly with KKO, as headliners. Marie Valli and Joan Clifford lead the chorus with Frank Braidwood as master of ceremonies.

STAR GAZER

HOLLYWOOD

After wandering through some of the larger studios—in fact, all of them—and being corded with suspicion by special policemen, I began to frown on by strange faces, and being as business-like as an executive about to close a million-dollar deal—it is a relief to take a run down to the Darmour studios and stick my head in to say a word of greeting to Lou Herbert of the Darmour studio, and just wander around to see how "things are going."

Presided over by the business-like Larry Darmour, the studios reflect an atmosphere of home-like hospitality. And, after you wander around inside for a while, you begin to feel as if you'd been elected to membership in the Darmour clan.

There is no disordered rush and bustle. There aren't innumerable strange faces, elaborate dining rooms, and countless people to clean your business to. Nobody has a highly technical attitude. And yet Darmour is busy as can be preparing comedies—the Mickey McGuire "kinks"—for the studios outstanding—for Radio Pictures release.

I dropped in recently and found Mickey (Himself) McGuire granting an interview to a big magazine writer—a trained seal running all over the stage after a mackerel in the hands of its mistress—Irving Bacon being supplied through a hole in the wall by a stagehand operating a mechanical bed as part of the fun in the Fazenda comedy series—innumerable youngsters under foot, and plenty of fun.

While Bacon was being tossed through the walls nonchalantly and cameras grounded, Louise Fazenda, for 15 years a comedienne, sat on a pile of boards, clad in gingham pajamas, awaiting her turn. She looks as if she did 15 years ago—not a change. When she talks, you get the idea that she's laughing. There's nothing serious about her.

She has been married two years. Her husband is Hal B. Wallis, co-producer at First National studios with Graham Baker, and she doesn't have to make comedies or do anything else to make a living. But she's busy because she loves to be busy.

Spec O'Donnell, the spindly-legged freedled youngster, also was in the picture. Spec is rather shy, and anxious to make friends. He gets kicks out of kicking from his work. He, like Louise Fazenda, is inferiorly interested amusedly, with a demure twinkle in his eyes. And, also like Louise Fazenda, he laughs when he speaks to you—without laughing.

The impression has been built up by humorists that those who supply humor for the hungry visibilities of the nation are inclined to be sour, morbid persons when out of character. If that is the rule, these two are the exceptions.

Jim Brown, craning away at the camera, his lens aimed at an ambling seal, and Jess Duffy, who looks as if the two things which are worth while in life are a square meal and a hearty laugh, add to the ease gaiety of working at the Darmour studio. Duffy by the way, is assistant director under Lew Foster, who hides a sense of humor behind a facade.

In the course of an hour's visit, one may drift through the entire studio, find out exactly what's going on, shake hands with Pell Mitchell, the business manager, and Larry (Himself) Darmour.

It's fun to visit a place like that. It's fun to find folks who are busy making others laugh because they love laughter. It's fun to find a jolly, congenial family which doesn't take itself too seriously.

Visiting Darmour studios is quite as refreshing as a day off.

THE BLUEBOOK SCHOOL
By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 65.—(A) What solutions are recommended for cleaning battery tops? (B) What precaution is necessary when using such solutions? (C) Just what would you do if you accidentally spilled some electrolyte on the battery top? (D) Explain in detail just what you would give your battery top.

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 46

The question was: A constant voltage is applied to the photoelectric cell. Upon what does the amount of current flow from it to the amplifiers depend? What is the strength of the impulses sent out by the p. e. cell?

I will publish two answers. G. T. Baldy says:

“When the exciting lamp has been lighted, thus illuminating the interior of the photoelectric cell, negative charged particles of electricity, called electrons, are thrown off, or emitted, by the light-sensitive material by reason of the action of the light thereon, and in exact proportion to the amount of light.

1. These electrons ionize the gas contained within the cell, in which condition the gas becomes a conductor of electricity in exact proportion to the amount of its ionization. The amount of light is of course in proportion to the density of the sound track at any instant of time, hence the conductivity of the gas is altered exactly in proportion to the sound track density from one instant to the next. Therefore the current flow is controlled by this action.

2. As to the strength of the impulses sent out by a photoelectric cell, they are very weak, so much so that they must be amplified approximately 100,000,000 times before they are available for use at the horns."

That is not just as Brother Baldy answered, but in rewriting his answer, I have not in any degree changed his meaning.

Friend Dudiak says:

“In the Western Electric system, the constant voltage applied to the p. e. cell is 90 volts. In the R C A system it is 200. The amount of current flowing out of the p. e. cell depends upon several factors, among them:

(a) Strong or weak cell (in a strong cell, greater ionization will take place, hence greater quantity of current will flow).

(b) Amount of light entering from the exciting lamp.

(c) Correct adjustment of slit.

(d) All parts being free from dirt.

(e) Good electrical contacts and connections.

“The strength of the impulses sent out by the p. e. cell depends on the difference of density between the white and black lines (Movietone); the greater the difference, the greater the current. More generally, this current is so weak that it must be amplified 100,000,000 times before it can be utilized to operate a loud speaker acceptably. This is why this part of the equipment must be given careful attention, as it will easily pick up extraneous current leaks and amplify them along with the sound current.”

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 47

The question was: What troubles may we expect to encounter with amplifier tubes? Upon what basis is the life of amplifier tubes reckoned, and what is it chiefly which lowers their length of efficient service? From what causes is current for heating the amplifier tubes derived? What is the voltage of the current with which the amplifier tubes are heated?

WATCH your steps, Old Timers! For some reason not quite understandable, there were an unusual number of very pun answers to this series of questions. One Broadway man actually said, “The efficient life of amplifier tubes is only lowered by one thing: namely, rough handling.” And he is in one of our best motion picture palaces, too!

Those who passed under the wire on all counts were Frank Dudiak, G. R. Needham, Gayle Grubaugh, Leo G. Sands, Karl Fried- rich, Carl F. Daugherthy, Sam Goodreau, T. R. Roand, W. T. Lathrop, G. T. Baldy, L. D. Felt, Bernard Hoskins, G. R. Egleston, Bill Doe, Sam Lathrop, L. Birch, Thomas Bundy, Tom Pitkins and Matthew Solley. They are all there were out of a great pile of answers, and even so I had to stretch things a bit to even let some of these through. I have selected the reply of Friend Birch as best suited to publication. He says:

“The troubles most often had with amplifier tubes are, (a) Filament burns out, (b) short caused by filament touching the grid, (c) low emission, and (d) dirty contacts. However, the tubes have now reached such a stage of perfection that they seldom give much trouble if they are cared for properly and not ‘rough housed’ or otherwise abused. Tubes will not stand abuse, though.

‘Amplifier tube life is reckoned by hours of actual service. A tube does not, so far as I am able to find out, deteriorate in any degree when not in service.

‘Length of efficient service for tubes is chiefly shortened by two things; namely, (a) operation at voltage in excess of their normal rating, and (b) abuse in the form of rough handling.

‘Current for heating the tube filaments usually is derived from storage batteries, though a transformer of suitable type may be used for this purpose with certain types of tubes. The voltage for heating the tube filaments would be dependent upon the type of amplifier and tubes. It may be anywhere within a range of from one to 15 volts. In Western Electric system, 12 volts are used, derived from two 6-volt storage batteries.”

Friedrich gives the following voltages: W E 229 A, 1 volt; UX 220, 1.5 volts; UX 227, 2.5 volts; W E 205 D, 4 volts; UX 245, 2.5 volts; UX 250, 7.5 volts; W E 211, 10 volts. The Arcoturns “heater type” tubes require 15 volts. He gives these merely as a few examples.

Effeece to Use RCA Sound Unit in New Australian Studio

(From Special Department of Commerce)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4—With the completion of a studio in Melbourne, Effeece Film Productions, recently formed Australian producing company, plans the production of sound pictures on a large scale shortly after January 1, 1931.

Negotiations have been concluded here for the acquisition of a complete RCA Photophone sound recording unit. Between executives of RCA and Thomas Holt, general manager of the film company, who is here as the personal representative of Frank W. Thring, president of Effeece.

Thring has up to recently controlled and actively directed Troys' Theatres, Limited, the second largest chain of theatres in Australia. The new studio is under construction, and it is said, will be complete in every detail, and equipped to produce any type of feature picture.

Holt, on his way back to Australia, will stop off in Hollywood to close contracts with directors and sound engineers, for which negotiations were started by Holt on a previous visit. Commenting on the plans for the new company, he said, "Effeece Film Productions proposes to make sound feature pictures and short subjects with all Australian casts."

Here's Reply to Bluebook School Question No. 48

The question was: Is it essential that amplifying tube current be kept at exactly the right value? What will happen if it is permitted to go too high? Is any benefit derived from using a too-high amplifying tube current? What are the results of a too-low amplifying tube current? Explain just why a too-high current shortens the life of an amplifying tube.

THERE has been a mix-up! I know there were a large number of answers to the question of making sound in a local sound picture which had disappeared, but where they have disappeared to is a dense mystery, both to myself and everyone else. In fact, two sets of answers have disappeared, and those to question No. 49. Sorry! It's the first, and I hope the last, time there has ever been any trouble of this sort. I will have to answer these two myself, so my response is to correct you may land on me with all four feet and no gloves.

First of all, quoting verbatim from the Bluebook, page 1044 (I don't permit you to do that, but I'm a privileged character), IT IS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT that the filament be maintained EXACTLY at the value indicated in the instruction book supplied by the installation engineer. If the current be too high, it will very greatly shorten the life of the tube, without any corresponding benefit. If the current be too low, then, while the tube itself will take no damage, the volume will be low; also, the quality of the sound probably will suffer.

The reason why the life of the tube is shortened by too much current is that the too-heat filament throws off electrons at an excessive rate, hence the oxide filament coating, which is the same substance of the electrons, becomes rapidly exhausted. This, of course, reduces the flow of electrons and finally brings about the destruction of the filament.

There, you see how easy it is for me to answer via the Bluebook.

Local Sound Film, Love Story and All, Made in San Marcos

F. W. Zimmerman, manager of the Palace theatre, San Marcos, Texas, sponsored production of a local sound picture which had both a love theme and the necessary local color.

The film was shot in the theatre. This gave the crowd an opportunity to see the entertainment and also to learn what there was to be said about how motion pictures are made. The opening was on the Palace stage.

Pioneers from everywhere in the region were there to take part. Perhaps they didn't make the best actors in the world, but the stage was filled and everyone had a good time. The camera and the lighting were different from those used in regular productions. The audience was made up of those who worked on the film and others who were interested in the project.

A local man and girl were the leading characters and all the love scenes were enacted in the theatre. The picture itself was made in black and white and was projected onto a large screen. The film was shot in a single day and was edited in a matter of hours. The sound was recorded on the spot and was used to complement the picture. The sound quality was not as good as what we are used to seeing in modern films, but it added to the overall experience.

The film was a great success and was shown all over the region. It was well-received by both the locals and the tourists who came to see the new film. It was a great way to promote the area and to show off its local talent.
Universal Signs Lloyd Hamilton
To Do Series of Short Comedies
(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 4.—Carl Laemmle, Jr., has signed Lloyd Hamilton, screen comedian, to star in a series of short reel comedies for Universal.

He will make three "Red Star" two-reelers for release in this season's schedule, and Universal plans to give them the same elaborate production effort that it has accorded the Slim Summerville series.

No announcement has been made as yet of the director and supporting cast.

Nine Educational Subjects Set for Release This Month

Educational has nine subjects scheduled for release during December, beginning with the Mack Sennett comedy, "A Hollywood Theme Song," Harry Grilben, Yola D'Avril and Patsy O'Leary are featured.

The Kinograms newssheet will continue to be released twice weekly.

Christmas' Origin Is Topic of Special Fitz-Patrick Subject
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Fitz-Patrick Pictures has completed a special holiday subject, called "The Origin of Christmas," in which Christmas songs are rendered by well-known recording artists, with an accompanying by Nathaniel Shilkert and his Victor Recording Orchestra.

Tiffany Shorts at Three Theatres on Broadway in Week
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Three Broadway houses are playing Tiffany shorts this week.

The RKO Mayfair is holding over "The Little Big House," a talking Chimp comedy, in conjunction with the feature; The Globe has booked "Piggy," one of a series of musical fantasies; and "The Voice of Hollywood," a one reeler featuring film stars, is playing the Strand.

Pathé Audio Review arranged to make sound pictures of Walter Damrosch, one of America's leading conductors, when he presented his Music Appreciation Hour over the NBC network. Photograph shows Damrosch all ready to begin his broadcast.
BOX OFFICE PROMOTION

Fox Midwesco Trains Patrons to Follow Ads By Using Type Boxes in Daily Displays

People can be trained to read advertisements just as they can be trained to read a daily humor column. But there must be something worthwhile in the ads.

Before setting out to prove our major premise, we will grant that the task of maintaining a day-to-day interest in theatre advertisements involves more problems than it would in a humor column. But it's not impossible. If it were, the Fox Midwesco organization in Milwaukee could not have accomplished it.

The Milwaukee Fox houses have instituted a system of carrying two small type boxes, bold face, in the upper corners of daily ads. All local houses in the circuit run their ads in combined form under the heading "Fox." One box is inserted on each side of the Fox signature cut, where the reader's eye cannot miss it.

They Plug Coming Attractions

What are these type boxes used for? A number of things. Most important is the plugging for coming attractions. Whenever one of the Fox theatres inaugurates a new feature, gives special service to patrons, or has an especially attractive act in its stage program, the subject is tersely described in a type box.

Milwaukee has come to like this system. Everybody who reads the amusement ads has come to look for these boxed messages. There are innumerable uses for these "extra ads." Each box is really an ad within an ad.

The use to which they can be put was recently illustrated in a checkup made of matinee business. The Wisconsin theatre in Milwaukee. A decline in afternoon business was stopped by playing up the low prices of matinees.

No Repeats in This System

On another occasion, the Wisconsin's free dancing school was exploited. Then there were the headphone sets for the hard of hearing, later the films of a University of Wisconsin football game, and so on. Any angle of the service offered by the houses makes good subject matter. But the same message is never repeated two days running, so the reader is kept constantly on the alert to read something new.

No better proof of the effectiveness of such strategy can be found than the success of the advance plugging for "The Big Trail." Each day, for approximately eight weeks before the picture opened, some little bit of information was published concerning the film. The early boxes gave concrete facts on the production. In later weeks this was changed to strong selling copy, and, finally, the date and theatre for the showing was given.

"Big Trail" Proves Their Worth

By beginning with facts and gradually coming into the selling arguments in this manner, the Fox Midwesco publicity staff is able to run live copy continually. The almost unprecedented attendance at "The Big Trail" when it was finally shown is credited in a large measure to the small ad's insertion.

It is significant that the type boxes play an important part in the group layout of Fox Midwesco loop houses. In addition, a long single column box is also run above the smaller displays of the Fox neighborhoods, with children's matinees and similar features stressed.

Through consistent use of the boxes (they are illustrated on this page), this circuit of houses have attracted consistent reader interest.

There is no reason why other exhibitors can't do it, too. All it takes is a bit of ingenuity and stick-to-it-iveness.

Pantomime Behind Sound Screen Gives Patrons Novel Act

Lionel L. Meyer, operator of the Star theatre, Shreveport, La., describes an interesting stage stunt he employed to give patrons an idea of the performed effect in a sound screen. Here is his letter:

"I recently pulled off a stunt that might prove interesting to other exhibitors, especially those just installing sound. At the end of the feature, I rolled my amplifier toward the audience, and let a drop down in front of them. Then I flashed on the screen the words 'You are now looking through our magic Superdaylite screen-watch closely and see what you can see.'

"Immediately afterward, the entire house was darkened, except backstage. You remember the old art poses, etc., that used to be staged behind gauze drops? I pulled off something like that, only more modern. Besides getting good entertainment the audience gained a new conception of the modern sound screen. I used colored lighting backstage with weird effects. It went over big."

Bovim Holds High School Football Rally on Opening Night of "Good News"

Russell Bovim, manager of Loew's theatre, Canton, Ohio, sponsored a high school football rally on the opening night of "Good News." Students sang their pep songs, cheer leaders led in yells and the entire student body of the school staged a parade to the house.

Advertising for the picture also appeared on a football scoreboard handed out at the game.

An antiquated car, driven by high school boys, carrying appropriate whirligigs on the film, comprised the remainder of the ballyhoo.
Convicts Parade, Paper Runs Serial On “The Big House”

Shortly after the censors had lifted their ban on “The Big House” in Ohio, Walter Caldwell, manager of Loew’s Valentine in Toledo, booked the picture and tied it up with a newspaper to run the serial story of the film.

The story made excellent reading for the newspaper’s readers and it cost the paper nothing, so in return the publication printed 90,000 four-page tabloid heralds which were inserted in all copies of the newspaper.

The press and officials of the city were invited to attend a special preview of the picture. Along with their invitation came a card on which the recipient was to express his personal comment on the film.

Caldwell used one more stunt, and it very nearly upset the town. He hired three men, dressed them in striped prison garb, with copy printed on front and back of the costumes, and sent them through the streets. The three men were chained together. They walked lockstep and stopped traffic on a number of occasions, it is said.

Carnival, Night Football Fails to Stop This Manager; He Has a Midnight Show

When Taft, Cal., an oil town, celebrated its twentieth anniversary recently, so many evening attractions popped up that it appeared the town’s theatre was doomed to “slim pickings.” A tent show came in for the occasion, and a night football game was on the program.

Did Manager James Gleason of the Fox Hippodrome call it Black Friday and quit? Nothing like that. He merely figured that the night would be young after the football game and the tent show.

So he went ahead with plans for a midnight show. The city’s anniversary committee worked with him, sold tickets for the show, did extra advertising to get the picture and supplied stage talent for a share of the receipts. The committee received a neat sum for its efforts. The theatre earned $70 more than its average evening receipts.

Texas House Wins Good Will by Backing Special Football Train

There’s nothing to be explained or described concerning this campaign. H. M. Rogers, manager of the Palace, one of the R & R theatres in Sweetwater, Texas, explains everything in his letter, and he pens an interesting line, too.

It’s his campaign, so let’s have him tell the story:

“Just a word from down this way. We have just finished a good will stunt for the theatre and thought maybe you’d like to hear about it.

“The annual high school ‘Class A’ football game between Sweetwater and Big Spring, a neighboring city, was played at Big Spring this year and is somewhat of a grudge affair, with lots of interest among the townspeople. So we sponsored a special train and called it the R & R Theatre-Mustang Football Special.

“Get More Than Enough

“We gave the railroad company a check to cover the guarantee and then they gave us credit on every ticket up to that figure. The train carried 250 over the guarantee. Ad receipts kept the R & R Theatre-Mustang Special before the people for more than a week before the game. All reservations were made at the box office of the Palace theatre and of course that kept our advance billing in the lobby before everybody that went.

“Next we put a full sheet card in every coach on the picture that was playing that night, so that every one riding the train was sure to see it. Next we took 500 feet of motion pictures of the football game, which was played on a Tuesday, and showed this film the following Saturday as an added attraction. That drew quite a few extra patrons.

“Students Send Letters

“Through letters received from the student body and faculty, we believe the theatre gained good will that could not have been bought with money.

“The local civic clubs got together after we had made the announcement of the special train and sent a 30-piece band and 75 girls in the pep squad.

“Oh, yes, we won the game and settled an old score. And everybody came home in high spirits to finish out the program by seeing Moran and Mack in ‘Everybody’s War.’

“I believe that such stunts along through the year do a great deal to bring the theatre and its patrons closer together in a bond of good fellowship and lets the people know that the theatre is something of a civic organization, too.”

Although we have not been sending so very much to the Box Office Promotion department, we always look for that section first when the old Herald-World arrives. It’s the best.”

He Gets Window Displays By Cleaning Up Old Stores

F. J. Sullivan, manager of the Fox, Napa, Cal., is getting window displays by cleaning up vacant stores and buildings. Through arrangement with the property owners, he has the litter removed and gets the window space without cost.

Sullivan is employing this system to supply his outdoor advertising. The cleaning of the stores has the additional advantage that it gets the unanimous approval of businessmen and is looked upon as a civic improvement.

MONROE 2257
Canine Matinee Organized by Gallinow for "Dogway Melody"

The current trend toward stimulating of child attendance has produced many effective methods of drawing juveniles to the theatre. One of them is the stunt promoted by Eddie Gallinow, publicity man for the Wisconsin house in Milwaukee.

In connection with the comedy "The Dogway Melody," he booked a preview for children and their dogs. Newspaper representatives were invited to attend at the same time to see the reaction of the dog audience to their canine actors.

The only credentials children needed for admittance was a dog. And there were many dogs. The free show was given on a Saturday morning.

Brings Stack of Publicity

Probably the biggest value of the program was the publicity it brought. The Sunday amusement section of one of the dailies contained a four-column spread 16 inches long. In it there was a long story on the dog matinee and a four-column cut showing dogs and their masters seated in the theatre.

Before the performance, the youngsters and their canines paraded through the loop to the theatre. With so many canines present, one would think that there must have been many dog fights. But there were not. Dogs were so numerous that the ungainly ones probably lacked the courage to "start anything."

Paper Publishes Story

One of the newspapers carried an interesting story of the preview. Here is a portion of it:

"A lady of the pavements got a look at Hollywood's high society the other day and the pavement lady was not impressed. She's not exactly naive, this Nellie. Her mother was no better than she should be, and her father, though he may have been Airedale, was certainly no gentleman. She knows the city streets and alleys better than the red leather luxury of the Fox Wisconsin theatre, where she loosed at ease at the first Milwaukee showing of a picture made entirely by dogs and given for an audience exclusively of dogs and their boy owners."

Edison Gives House A Lift; He Starts Show by Telegraph

Art Schmidt, manager of the Paramount, Detroit, exhibited a bit of the creative genius of Thomas A. Edison when he arranged a tieup in which Edison himself would purportedly press the button which would start the showing of "Billy the Kid" at the Paramount.

The hookup was made through Western Union. By telegraph, Edison was to obtain the contact from West Orange, N. J., which would set the projection machines going. Detroit newspapers were to announce this stunt and items on it were carried on both Associated Press and United Press.

Another idea in the campaign involved the employing of a girl dressed in Western Union uniform to ride a horse up the steps of the Detroit city hall where she presented passes to "Billy the Kid" to the mayor.

Tieup with "Ace High," a locally published Western magazine, brought 25,000 heralds on the picture. These were inserted in copies of the publication distributed in the city.

Six Louisville Houses Aid Merchants with Late Show

Six exhibitors in Louisville ran shows at 10:30 O'clock in the evening recently in connection with a parade and carnival staged by the Retail Merchants Association. The exhibitors made this move after local businessmen had urged them to do it, for the event marked the opening of the winter shopping season there.

Merchants cooperated in distributing theatre tickets, which were sold at 25 cents each, or half the usual admission price.

Denver House Gets Music Tieups for "Laughter" Week

Five tieups were negotiated by the Denver theatre in Denver for its showing of "Laughter." One of these tieups was with an auto dealer for use of a car. The machine was banned with copy on the film and sent through the streets four days in advance of the engagement.

Another tieup was made with a local wholesale food concern, which paid for and distributed 10,000 heralds in return for advertising on its food products by the Denver theatre.

A music store cooperated by placing a new type of recording machine on the mezzanine floor. An operator explained its workings. This store paid for and distributed 20,000 heralds, which split space with the theatre.

One of the other music stores tied up to boost "Laughter" in its newspaper ads.

Exhibitors Stop Student Stampede with Diplomacy

Sometimes diplomacy will succeed where all else fails.

When Indiana University defeated Purdue in a football game a few weeks ago, the Indiana students attempted to crash the gate of almost every theatre in Bloomington that Saturday night. The stampede ended in a compromise. The theatre managers agreed to admit all students at special matinees the following Tuesday, and everything ended peacefully for all concerned.

"Greatly Exaggerated"

"Smoky Bill" La Rue, who set some kind of record by sitting 77 days on a flagpole above the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, has been considerably proved by the circulated reports of his death. He thinks the reports got started because he stayed "up in the air" too long.

Neatness Pays!

Keeping his theatre clean should be the aim of every manager. A dirty lobby, dusty light bulbs and blotchy billboards won't attract the theatregoer. And one dead light bulb will offset the effect of a dozen live ones.
Will These Ads Help Your Layout Problems?

The above displays contain some type and art combinations that should help. They were carried by the following theatres: 1, Orpheum, San Francisco; 2, Broadway, Tacoma; 3, Fox, Detroit; 4, Fox, Seattle; 5, Fisher, Detroit; 6, State, St. Louis; 7, Empire, San Antonio; 8, Paramount, Detroit; 9, Criterion, Oklahoma City; 10, Strand, Albany, N. Y.; 11, Liberty, Oklahoma City; 12, St. Louis, St. Louis.

The football season is over now, but why can't this same scorecard system be used for basketball as well?

"Feet First" Is Slogan of Seattle Shoe Dealers for Lloyd Comedy

How to make the most of cooperative advertising is a problem that has stumped more than one exhibitor. They get the ads all right, without much difficulty, but their question is how they can lay out the page or pages of display with the most effectiveness for the picture.

The Seattle Paramount did a neat job of it for Harold Lloyd's "Feet First" by a method that could not fail to draw the reader's attention to the film. Across the top of the page in art lettering were the words "Harold Lloyd comes to the Paramount "Feet First"." The letters were two inches high. A comic sketch of Lloyd was placed between the two words of the title.

Every Ad a Shoe Ad

The interesting thing was that every ad on the page advertised shoes. Each shoe dealer had clever copy on why one should attend "Feet First." Boxed in the center of the page was a synopsis of the picture and the following exploitation story: "FEET FIRST!"

"They may be prompted by realization that care of the feet is vital to personal appearance and comfort—to obtaining or retaining a position and to business and social success—"Or they may be prompted by confidence that "Feet First," the new Harold Lloyd play opening tomorrow at the Seattle Paramount theatre, offers unusual entertainment.

"But whatever the cause, Seattle people are likely to give unusual attention in the next few days to feet first.

Proclaim "Feet First" Week

"And a number of leading merchants of footwear and the management of the theatre have determined that the occasion shall be a happy one. Acting cooperatively, these merchants and the Seattle Paramount management have proclaimed a Feet First Week and completed plans for appropriate observance of the event.

"The merchants are acting in full recognition of the fact that on the public convaneey and on the street; in the office, the store, the hotel lobby and the home; on the dance floor and in the drawing room, attention is likely to center on the feet and first impressions frequently are founded on the appearance made by the feet. Untidy footwear—to say nothing of uncomfortable footwear—penalizes the wearer. Properly and trimly dressed feet supply comfort of mind as well as physical ease."

"The management of the Seattle Paramount is offering 'Feet First' in the firm conviction that this latest vehicle of Harold Lloyd is a paramount gloom chaser.

Managers' Club Puts Stop to Walkathon

(Special to the Herald-World)

OAKLAND, CAL., Dec. 4.—Quite recently, a walkathon contest, similar to those that have been held in several Western cities, was promoted for Oakland and when theatre managers first heard of it a permit had already been granted by the police department.

The Oakland Theatre Manager's Club went to the bat and explained to City Commissioners how these contests had been operated in other cities, advising that they were fake affairs in addition to being revolting and that they offered unfair competition to tax-paying amusement enterprises. The result was that the permit was revoked.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Billy the Kid" gets a good plug at the Fox in Seattle. The tieup was made by Manager Golden of the Fox with one of the leading haters in the city. The hat store got a good model for its hats in John Mack Brown and the theatre got some valuable advertising for nothing at all.

Commercial Value Of Radio Tieups Illustrated by MGM

How radio exploitation of pictures may be facilitated by commercial tieups has been well illustrated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Through its Movie Club, the company has linked 28 radio stations in a regular broadcast program.

MGM presents a "Melodies from California" hour regularly, while another program is "Voices from Filmland," inaugurated in cooperation with the Auto-Grill Company.

In another hookup, the producing company gives programs over the Columbia broadcasting system with the aid of the MJC brand of coffee. Sun Oil and Sunoco are joined with MGM in another radio tieup.

One of the most interesting of these tieups is that with the Robbins Music Corporation, publishers of music from new MGM pictures. This firm has instituted a service for radio stations in connection with which leading song hits are provided, with credit, for broadcasting over stations everywhere in America.

Schoolboy Police See Free Show Through Theatre Tieup

The Fountain Square theatre, Indianapolis, in a tieup with the Hoosier Motor Club and a local newspaper, gave a guest performance for the Ho-Po-Ne Safety Club, an organization whose members are-girls traffic policewomen in the schools.

Tieup with the motor club gave the project the proper backing and helped to ease the expense. The newspaper provided all the publicity necessary.
Universal's New Tieup Still

Another step forward in exploitation is the type of still illustrated below, which Universal is using for "See America Thirst." This facilitates matters for the exhibitor, who needs only to obtain the tieups. The stills are sent out ready for a variety of hookups. Joe Weil, Universal's exploitation director, is creator of the idea.

Three News Tieups Give FN Wealth of "Kismet" Publicity

First National obtained three newspaper tieups in New York for the opening of "Kismet" at the Hollywood theatre there. Proceeds of the film's premiere went into the Christmas fund of the New York American. The paper has devoted generous space.

Another tieup was with the Evening Graphic which is conducting an essay contest. A cash prize is offered every day for the best essay on "The Best Turn That Fate or 'Kismet' Has Ever Done for Me."

The new Owl camera of the International Photo Service, which can take photographs in a darkened theatre, cooperated by snapping pictures of celebrities at the opening of "Kismet." These were used by both the American and the Evening Journal.

Michigan Theatre Presents Benefit Show for Relief of Unemployed in Detroit

Ted Lewis is scheduled to take part in the big benefit show being sponsored by a Detroit newspaper at the Michigan theatre December 6, it has been announced. Lewis is making a personal appearance at the Michigan and arrangements are being made for him to stay over an extra day so that he can headline the bill.

Tickets for the performance are on sale at the box offices of all downtown theatres, with all money to be turned over to Mayor Frank Murphy's relief fund for the aid of the unemployed. Members of the stage, operators and musicians unions have agreed to donate their services for the performance.

Acts from all local theatres will take part in the show, tickets for which are selling from one to ten dollars per chair.
Artist Paints Screen Stars for Waiting Crowds at Boston Rivoli

This is a story of the way one theatre entertains its patrons while they are waiting for seats when the house is packed. No, don’t be astonished, this house isn’t burdened with capacity crowds every night. It’s just ordinary, like scores of others. But there are times when a special screen attraction draws so many that some have to wait in the lobby. That’s the time when it’s handy to have a stunt to take the minds of the standers off the clock.

The subject of this story is an artist. He is to be found in the main lobby of the Rivoli theatre, Boston, any night when the house is crowded, and every other night, too, for that matter.

Artist Paints Film Stars

Each night the young artist sits, palette in hand, in a corner of the lounge and sketches film stars on white cardboard a foot square. He wears a smock of sparkling color, a black beret, flowing tie, black trousers, spats, and all the other accoutrements of the artist.

At the request of patrons he will draw any screen actor in the presence of the crowd. Often he works from memory. At other times he draws from photographs of the individual players. On a shelf beside him are dozens of finished sketches he has made.

Paintings Sold to Patrons

The paintings are for sale at a nominal sum, but there is no effort to sell, and absolutely no haggling. Every word spoken by the artist is in a low voice, leading spectators into the atmosphere of the thing, and everybody else speaks in a low voice. Subdued lighting about the lounge heightens the art effect, although a powerful light is focused on the finished paintings on the shelf.

In advance of each coming bill, the artist portrays each of the principal players on the white cardboards. These are displayed in the lobby.

Is this stunt expensive? Not so much so as to put it beyond reach. Many of the paintings are sold. Boston theatregoers have found in this accessory entertainment an added incentive for attending the Rivoli.

The theatre also has another incentive. It is a raffle in the lobby.

Roulette for “Monte Carlo”

Now to get around to actual exploitation, the Rivoli did this for “Monte Carlo”: A replica of a roulette wheel was ordered and installed in front of the box office. The imitation wheel was painted in a combination of bright colors.

“The Last of the Dunes” was shown immediately after a state election in Massachusetts. Two youths were engaged for an election “payoff” stunt. One of the youths pushed a wheelbarrow containing his companion. On his back was a placard bearing the news that he was paying off an election bet in this way. The wheelbarrow’s human cargo was placarded with information on “The Last of the Dunes” and its playing date.

In connection with “What a Widow,” the Rivoli management distributed 50,000 throwaways.

They Collect Potatoes

The Astor theatre, San Antonio, is aiding the poor by running “food matinees.” On Saturday mornings at 9 o’clock, school children are admitted free if they bring three potatoes of medium size. This is only one of the foods obtained in this way. The Associated Charities distributes the goods.

Film Stills Put Life In Merchants’ Ads; Theatre Gets a Plug

M. H. Frank, manager of Fox’s Odeon theatre, Beaver Dam, Wis., has been successful in prevailing upon the merchants to use photos of screen stars appearing in current attractions at the local theatre in their regular newspaper advertising copy.

As an example, in connection with the picture, “True to the Navy,” two large ads were carried in the local newspaper with a picture of Chara Bow and the name of the film in which she was appearing at the Odeon, along with the merchants’ regular advertising copy. On another page a merchant’s ad carried a picture of Nancy Carroll and the play dates of her picture “Devil’s Holiday.”

Some pictures lend themselves easier than others to advertising tie-ups of this kind and certain stills from various pictures can be made to fit in well with the product which the merchant sells. A photo of this kind used by a small-town merchant usually goes a long way towards livening up his advertisement, especially since many of the merchants use few cuts in their ads.

Waco Patrons Pick Best Film Still for Harrison’s Newspaper Advertising

Let your patrons decide how you should advertise. Maybe that plan is a bit unconventional, but it works, so says J. Harrison, manager of the Waco theatre, Waco, Texas.

In his lobby he placed a large bulletin board containing 14 stills from a film which was coming soon. In the center of the board was a placard reading: “Help us, please! We are in doubt about which of these pictures to run in the newspapers. The one that you vote the most popular will appear in the Sunday layout in the newspaper.”

A girl sat at a table in the lobby and registered the numbers people indicated. That’s effective advertising, says Harrison.
Food and Clothes
Gathered for Poor
By Publix Skouras

Relief for the unemployed is being given by the Skouras Publix houses in Indianapolis by a system of collecting food and old clothes.

Cullen E. Espy, director of the theatres, has negotiated a tieup with a newspaper. The food and clothes turned in are given to the Salvation Army. One of the methods used was an offer of a free show ticket to each child who brought a container of canned food over a Friday and Saturday. An abundance of all sorts of canned goods flooded the theatres. Through newspaper advertising, the stipulation was made that no wrappers be placed on the cans, thus preventing litter about the entrances.

The decision to collect food was made following a shoe matinee held at the Circle theatre there in connection with the comedy "Feet First." During one afternoon, approximately 2,000 pairs of shoes were turned in by youngsters.

St. Louis Fox Has a Free Matinee for Children Who Give to Community Fund

The Fox theatre, St. Louis, tied up with the Community Fund there to swell the charity contributions. The plan was carried out by admitting several thousand school children free to see "The Big Train," but each child was asked to give something to the Community Fund. Everything from one cent upwards was accepted.

This brought the theatre considerable valuable publicity. One of the newspapers assisted the theatre in sponsoring the show and published several columns on it.

Preview Features Opening
Of "Big Train" in Detroit

William Raynor, managing director of the Fox theatre in Detroit, and Frederic Schader, publicity director, were hosts to film executives, exhibitors, theatre managers and newspapermen at a special preview of "The Big Train."

John Wayne, star of the picture, made a personal appearance. A Halloween buffet supper was served after the screening. This picture introduces the Fox Grandeur screen to Detroit.

Boys Putt Golf Balls 30 Miles
In Contest for "Follow Thru"

William Wollson, publicity director of the Palace theatre, Dallas, unearthed one more way to draw out of town patronage when he tied up with chambers of commerce in nearby towns to exploit "Follow Thru."

Clever idea, too, was Wollson's. He promoted a putting contest for boys in three cities, Kaufman, McKinley and Terrell. All of these places are approximately 30 miles from Dallas.

Each city entered one boy in the contest. He was backed by his local chapter of commerce. Newspapers in each locality provided ample publicity.

The youths were to putt a golf ball the entire distance of 30 miles from their own town to Dallas—and they had to do it afoot. By the rules, they had to cover the distance in six hours or less and were to putt the ball past the front of the Palace box office.

The individual chambers of commerce saw to it that each lad was followed by a proper entourage of cars, filled with cheering townsmen. Each of the three processions had a itinerary planned so as to cover the territory where ballyhoo would do the most good.

To bring the stunt before the maximum number of potential patrons, each car was labeled with a banner, telling which town it represented, as well as the platde of the picture. For prizes, Wollson offered a $100 set of matched golf clubs to the winner. Other golfing paraphernalia comprised the remainder of the prizes. Practically all who followed their entrant in the contest stayed for the film in the evening.

He Opens Eyes of Sleepy Citizenry on "Eyes of the World"

It pays to keep your eyes open in exploitation. Manager Shuttee, of the Rialto theatre, Denver, not only did that, but also opened the eyes of a lot of citizens in his promotion for "Eyes of the World."

Here is an ad which he ran in the personal columns of a local newspaper—"Aaron: Maybe what I did was wrong in the eyes of the world, but I love you and do not care. Meet me at 1540 Curtis street, Friday—Sybil."

The address and day in the ad were the theatre location and opening date of the picture. You can imagine what a buzz of talk and gossip this must have set going in Denver.

Then Shuttee also mailed personal invitations to all school teachers in the city to see the picture's opening matinee as guests of the management. Moreover, he provided the city library with 1,500 book marks distributed five days in advance of the opening.

Why Not Publish a Timetable for Film Programs?

Why shouldn't newspapers publish a timetable of theatre programs as a courtesy to their advertisers?

In a number of cities the plan has been adopted with such success that exhibitors have remarked it would be profitable to houses everywhere. The Boston Traveler runs a daily column of starting times for both legitimate and screen entertainment. The column runs about eight inches long and is headed "Screen and Stage Timetable."

Theatregoers need no longer put up with the inconvenience of telephoning in advance, or entering the show somewhere in the middle of the feature picture. In addition, this system will do much to at least partially cut down the disturbance caused by continual entering and leaving.

Newspapers owe it as a courtesy to theatre advertisers to publish such timetables. They do it for radio programs. For theatres it is perhaps more justifiable.

Houses Help Unemployed

Two theatres in Grand Island, Neb., the Capitol and Majestic, are cooperating in a movement to relieve unemployment. Together with other business establishments, the two houses will help pay for removal of snow from the streets, the work to be done by the unemployed.
Old Policies Brought Back In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 4.—Settlement of the differences between the musicians and the picture houses of St. Louis has made possible the return to the old policies that prevailed prior to last September 1, when difficulties came to a head and "extra-curricula" entertainment was suspended for a time. The Fox and Ambassador theatres have already returned to the use of stage shows, organ solos and pit orchestras, and Loew's State and the Missouri are to use organists in conjunction with sound picture. It is probable that the St. Louis theatre will return to the Orpheum circuit vaudeville and sound pictures during the coming week, while the Granada, the de luxe house of the St. Louis Amusement company circuit is also to have a stage show once again.

With the settling of the music dispute, the opening dates of the Fox and Missouri theatre have been advanced to Thursday, and it is understood that the Ambassador, Loew's State and the St. Louis will follow by having their openings on the same day. Pianoch and Marco units are being used by the Fox theatre as its stage attraction. The Thursday opening date fits nicely into the schedule of the F & M organization because of the recent opening of the new Fox house in Joplin, Mo. Formerly the stage units jumped from Denver to St. Louis, but under the new arrangement, they can arrive in St. Louis from Joplin on Wednesday night.

Harry Rose is acting master of ceremonies at the Ambassador at present, but it is reported that the Skouras-Warner organization is planning an early return of Ed Lowry, who established a record for consecutive performances during his three years stay in St. Louis. At present, Ed is working in a Warner house in Pittsburgh.

The return of manual music has brought an advance in admission prices, but they are not up to the level of last Winter. At that time, most of the first runs had a 75 cents top, while under the new schedules 65 cents to be the maximum admission fee.

This particular presentation was a truly satisfying one. In that it was well-balanced, rounded out, so that every act seemed to be an integral part, without which it would not have been complete. And moreover, it was admirably linked up with the feature picture, which in this case was "Tom Sawyer." The stage show was introduced by the Lambert Ballet (the show was entitled "Rushin' Rhythm"), the members of which were attired appropriately in sort of modernistic Mother Goose costumes, which pleased the children, and there were plenty of them in the audience, mightily. In the background were huge mar & gros figures which swayed entrancingly to the music. At the end of the ballet routine, the huge figures row, and there was Al Evans and His Band, dressed in Russian costumes, from bright red jackets to polished shiny boots.

The house of the show were excellent and displayed a Soviet travesty that was a riot. Street singers exceptional, and they got a great hand. Two men and a girl, whose antics and vocal intonations made a bright spot in the program.

For the production number, the ballet appeared, wearing chic costumes, red and gold, which reminded one of Dutch raiment. At first, a fast tap was done, and towards the end, the stage was darkened, and by means of converting steps, the ballet members arranged themselves so that each had a separate step, and then they lights attached to their feet were snapped, an unusual and delightful effect, as they did a tap routine. Douglas and Webb appeared again and were through some excellent pantomime that drew plenty of laughter from the crowd.

Joe Griffis, tenor, appeared in the finale number, and as he finished his song, the drop at the back rose, revealing in silhouette the minaret towers of Moscow, in front of which were crouching figures, with soldiers standing over them, guns ready to fire. A lighting effect of flames sweeping the city made the scene intensely dramatic, and with a flare of trumpets the curtains closed.

The production was by Frank Cambria, and was excellently done. A most enjoyable stage performance one in which all consciousness of time disappeared.

H. Leonard Spitalny's rendition of his ouvertures called "Shades of Blue" was masterly, and will venture to say that all present were sorry when it came to an end. This brief resume fails to do justice to a wholly entertaining program, one in which we might say, there was no flaw.

With new fixtures, carpeting, and even the new Liberty is a thing of beauty and was greeted with pleased capacity business.

Manager Loughman was fortunate in selection of his initial vaudeville offerings. The four acts are well filled and will be repeated next week, with this making its own appeal, for the most part to the comic sense.

Archies and Newman headed the bill with strong arm swinging and slapstick plenty of cutup and wonderment among the audience.

Don Talbott on banjo and mandolin num and produced sweet strains of music to the delight of all present.

The Berkeffs, who are "on" excelled in their Russian acts, which were very pleasing and several encored. The chorus of six girls, all beauties, deserve special mention.

Pop Cameron and G, did some splendid dancing and acrobatic acting.

memories to oldtimers and giving the younger generation something to laugh about. It includes some settings of rare and rather right up to the top in entertainment value.

Walt Barnier and his orchestra are heard in "Metropolitan Memories," made up of airs from "Carmen," "Pagliacci," "La Giocandia" and "Faust," without the usual comment.

Charles Bennett, of Bennett Brothers, comes out before the curtain and makes a short talk, taking the pompos part of the owner of an old-time show. The orchestra plays and sings "Sweet Adeline" and the curtain comes down. The orchestra, reviving the Carla Tourey Dancers in the voluminous costume of years ago in front of an old theatre drop curtain. This curtain goes up, following a dance by the girls, and the Emperor of Harmony, a colored quartet, sing "Ain't It a Shame" and "Dinah," the group almost filling the small stage of the miniature theatre, a truthful replica of an early day American playhouse.

The m. c. proves a real entertainer and tells stories in a manner that pleases the crowd. He introduces the dancers, dressed after the manner of the old Teller Troupe, and the girls present a novel dance in front of a curtain fashioned after a crazy quilt.

Once again the m. c., m. c. comes with the hangover, a little English song written by Mayor Thompson of Chicago," a song that proves a delightful bit of nonsense. The Carla Tourey Dancers in the costume of years ago, in front of a curtain of black, and Madeline Du Val stage a dance. The girls, dressed at the rear parts revealing a huge violin and the dancing girls pose on a bridge high above the stage. Three little fellows sing a college song and do a lively dance suggestive of real college spirit. A trio of funny harmonists do their stuff and the girls offer a novelty number that pleases. The girls wear grotesque costumes, with huge white gloves for headress and white gloves embroidered on their black tunics. Two large hands on the curtain at the rear add to the fun and elation of the audience. (Continued on next page, column 2)

Herbie Kaye, the conductor of the marvelous orchestra that appears on station WNBG from the Trianon Ballroom, is a rapidly widening institution among radio listeners for his winning personality and original instrumental specialties. Although he has been billed as a "young man," his accomplishments are many. He plays many of the usual instruments in the band, has written a hit song and can sing a song that would do credit to a professional. Herbie Kaye is, indeed, a bright star in the musical firmament.

Jimmy Green and band opened at the DeWitt Clinton hotel in Albany, November 29th—Johnny Hemp and orchestra opened at the Congress Hotel December 1st for a limited engagement—Phil Levent at opens at the Vanity Fair December 2nd, and the Creations stage is set for a two year optional contract with the Premium Malt productive to do a five network syndicate broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System. It will also allow him to appear on the stage.

Henri Gendron and his Ambassadors will soon open at the New Bario Gardens with a larger orchestra and band and will begin broadcast training for the WPBN network. WIBBL—The Ashley Sisters have replaced the Wanderers Quartette, on the FloraShoe Follies. They will appear on this program for a period of thirteen weeks, every Tuesday evening. Those girls are really gals and should be more than an asset to this program.

Dan Bernard, program manager of the Chicago NBC studios, demonstrated unusual ability as a "pitch-kitter" in the Armour Hour broadcast, a few weeks ago, when it was heard trove. The last minute that Arch Bailey, guest artist, would be unable to appear in the program due to a wrong singing extraction of an uttered tooth. Bernard, who personally produces the Armour Hour, filled the breach by stammering through a monologue and then, in a last minute heurist, to sing the number previously assigned to Bailey, "Oh, Susanna," the opera. "H. M. S. Pinafore," Bernard is a singer of no mean repite himself, and like many others now prominent in radio, dresses down to his music for the executive end of radio work.

Muriel Pontius, sweet voice soprano heard from WGN, is a daughter of Walter Pontius, tenor of the same name. Her brother, Donald, is also on the staff and is a relief announcer—East & Danke, known as the "Sisters of the Silkit," will be on the air from 1:45 p.m. to 2:06 p.m. instead of 11:15 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. This program comes to you over the NBC network—A new voice will be heard from WGN, Bert Bowlen, a stage comedian who formerly was with Ziegfeld Follies.

Admiration for the voice of a man she never met changed the life of a western university and introduced her to the footlights and microphone as a "Moss" singer, Dr. Carlotta was a satisfied student at Oklahoma A & M. after studying home economics and classical music until she heard Gene Austin's crooning records. Then she began to do the same kind of innocent and wistful music and she began to give pleasure to students. After singing at the college, she began to accompany Gene on the phonograph. She found that she could croon and that she liked the blues better than anything else. Corey is now being featured at the Blackhawk Cafe and is under contract with the NBC.

Harry Keenan, popular conductor whose orchestra is featured in several well-known broadcasts, has properly impressed by the splendor of the new NBC studios in Chicago. It is understood that the studio that Harry even takes the trouble to put his hair in place between each number of his program since the studio was opened, has presented an appearance instantaneous at all times to harmonize with the beautifully decorated studio.

"Gems and Jams" from the Fanchon and Marcus producing studio, is a creation of stage entertain- ment which might be duplicated by other producers in the stage presentation business. There is a color and stage, stage beauty and sound, and a collection of talent that is talent. Sam Jack Kaufman as the "head man" keeps things going from start to finish, with a manner which makes it clear when he is "catching on" with patrons of the Fox theatre. John and Jane McKenna, act- tor-mother and mistress of ceremonies, and furnishing some good comedy, add momentum to the fun. Nancy Wey, a China boy, strikes one as a real cast of a far out, and is called back for encore. Will Cowans and Marie Evelyn, dancers, and Frangie Franklin and Florence Estelle, vocalists, will be entertaining in any production. Jim Penman has a novel and tricky time of it on a pair of wheels. The usual F & M Sanktist Beauty also gives evidence of real training. Coupled with "Just Imagine" the tongue feature, "Gems and Jams," furnishes Detroit movie followers with as much entertainment and amusement as it is possible to get in one place for admission.

The opening en- semble number presented a living didy with the New Yorker Idiot, and the familiar punch. OMAHA ORPHEUM

Week Ending November 27

Count Berni Vici, with his troupe of symphonic girls, heads the stage program. In a beautiful setting of purple and green lights upon the huge stage and with a treble voice screen foreground, Count Berni Vici opens his program with a violin solo. Two other soloists, a girl and a boy, are brought into the picture with light effects, each played by a girl at each side of him and standing upon a high pedestal effect platform.

In the group are also ten girls who take their positions across the floor and hold their large stage proper from underneath and inside the scenes. On one side of mobile stage back of these are three girls in the large tresses, draped a piano and the third a bass violin.

Their selection has been announced as a tribute to great American composers of the past and present. Members of the little symphony take parts in vocal numbers, with a baritone solo, given in pantomime; in aesthetic and interpretative dances and a comedy effect, on the subject of "The Boys." The presentation of Tchaikovsky's "Overture of 1812" with sound motion picture accompanying is by far the biggest attraction of the show. At the close a second motion picture, much smaller in size than the first, a brief scene of the flaming city at close of the terrific battle. "Eddie" and his R.O. Orphans open the stage program with the "Orphans Overture" by Offenbach. Berto Retar, in a clown act, features a stunt in which he felts wrestling, himself as his own partner, Bob Carlston and Julie Ballon, in some comedy skits, with considerable clowning, added the laded variety.

DETOIT HOLLYWOOD

Week Ending November 27

A miniature musical comedy is the offering at the Hollywood for the first four days of this week, with Will Higgle and his five gorgeous girls topping the bill. Eddie Isenberg has his energetic little band, the Detroit Merry-Makers, as usual, put on their excellent stage act. The various numbers are all four physically and facially attractive misses doing a unique routine, consisting of playing two musical selections with children fastened to their wrists and ankles, the first from a standing position, and the second while resting on the neck and shoulders with their feet in the air.

Russell and Marcello, who appear to be just "two boys from the band," proceed to knot the show tighter than a pair of shoelaces when a man's in a hurry. Russell plays the violin and has that kind of a voice, while the "pannkle" on Marcello is in itself a delight to witness. This is an act which hits the public so strongly, that the "AMOS AND ANDY" as they don't hit the "big-time soon, somebody will be wrong.

Arthur Ward, an eccentric juggler, is just that, his offering met with instant applause and acceptance.

The show closes with Higgle introducing Betty Fraser, who star over the beauty title at the Cleveland air show last year.

Bob Clark at the organ gets the crowd laughing with his sustained and eerieOrgan playing.

SAN ANTONIO MAJESTIC

The house orchestra featuring Jean Sarti and His Greater R.K. Orchestra offers a novelty orchestra that started off this lively uvashville hill.

On the operation of"Owen Brothers and Nelson in a smashing innovation that rooked the audience into laughter at every show, Edna Baw chemical and sung her way into the hearts of the patrons. This comédienne ran The Arkansan Travellers a close race for the headlining position. Her act pleased and went over well.

Then came James Wolfman, the Jacksonville, his solo of "Along," and makes a hit by just being jolly, natural and at ease.

HELLO EVERYBODY--Well, it looks like winter is here, only I wish it would really snow and let us see just what winter is like, instead of this miserable frost and rain that makes it pretty tough for pedestrians.

Dropped in to see E. H. Morris (Buddy to his friends) who is generally known as the manager of Sons and vice president of Music Publishers Holding Corp., for an interview with E. H. Morris, W.E. Ahlert have had their latest song accepted by Witmark's for immediate publication. The song is called "We're Friends Again" and it is the first time that these boys have had Witmark accept one of their numbers. John, Son of Witmark, E. W. Ahlert told me that "Kiss Waltz," one of the top-sellers in the Witmark catalog, enjoy the distinction of having "We're Friends Again" in their repertoire as well as three other songs of M. Morris, including "M. Morris," "91 Varieties," and "We're Friends Again," which I believe is the first time that any of the songs of a music company has been published in more than one music book. The song is as follows: "We're Friends Again"...

Real Vaudeville Bill
To Its Patrons
(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 4.—There is a new bill at the Gunter Nite Club this week. Some nappy and the latest entertainment is the floor show which opened Monday night and continues throughout the week. Supplanting Ruth Laird and her Ambassadors of Entertainments who has gone to Dallas to be routed over a big time vaudeville circuit via New York, the Gunter Nite Club is now featuring a qua-

Rumor of Cutting Out
Stage Shows Refuted
(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Dec. 4.—"Rumors Without foundation" was the declaration of N. M. Platt, district manager for Metro. The Colonel when asked about rumors that stage shows were to be eliminated from the program of the Michigan and Phoenix theatres, "It is extremely unfortunate that this rumor has become so widespread, for as a matter of fact we are adding to rather than decreasing our stage resources at the present time," he stated.
WESLEY LORD (Omaha Paramount, week ending November 27) played "Comin' Thro' the Rye," for a "Thanksgiving History Lesson" introduced upon the screen, starting his Thanksgiving week program. The "Kiss Waltz" followed and the audience was asked to join in the songfest. To the melody of "Then I'll Be Happy," a Thanksgiving theme was projected upon the screen, each stanza of which ended in the line "Then I'll Be Thankful." A letter next was shown upon the screen in which it was requested that Mr. Lord play "The Pilgrim Chorus," "Bye, Bye, Blackbird" (meaning a turkey), and parodies to suit Thanksgiving ideas of turkeys and feasting make a hit with the audience. Advantage was taken of unusual lighting effects upon the console and with a drop of beautiful oriental-floral design. The use of bells from the organ loft added to the charm of the organ program.

ELLIS BUTLER (Michigan, Muskegon, Mich.) puts over an organ solo, entitled "Michigan's Melody Moments," beginning with a few slides which tell all about the city. It is a long run to the theatre and then the port the organ plays in. This is all played to the tune of "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," after some work is done announcing the difficulty that is connected with pleasing everybody's musical moods and then he plays the aria from "Madame Butterfly," straight spot style. Then for popular tunes comes "Should I," with a tongue twisting chorus. The finale for the "nightingales and songbirds" consisted of one chorale each of "Maybe It's Love," "Just a Little Closer" and "I Still Get a Thrill.""

LETTERS FROM READERS

NOTICE

D. J. Harkins is not an authorized representative of EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD.

Metro's and am glad to report that nearly all of these are good. Laurel and Hardy, especially "So You Can't Have Them All." I wish to say that Paramount's newsreel is getting better right along, that it has more action and less posing of celebrities. Baseball, football, tennis, wrestling matches are fine. Give us more sports.

I saw a few new plays while out in the last week. "Three French Girls (MGM)" is from fair to good. With a big Saturday night crowd it should be all right. In a show about that would go over well. "Laughter (Par)," with Nancy Carroll, is not as big as Paramount makes out. It is good. Nearly all drama, one dance in it. Not a popular type of picture. Critics will enjoy it.

Midweek is best. "Heads Up (Par)," with Buddy Rogers, is a crazy kind of comedy, melodrama. A scene at a Friday-Saturday showing. Helen Kane boop-a-doos some music. Not a big picture. The play most talked about was "Mudlaffair (Par)."

The lowdown on Dixiana (Radio) was not so hot. I don't know whether to run it on my three best nights or not. If any exhibitor has run it, tell us how it went over. People are already asking for "Amos 'n Andy."—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Grateful for Plaque

RECEIVED BEAUTIFUL BRONZE plaque this a.m. There are no words to express my gratitude for your kindness in awarding me the plaque.

With very best wishes,—Robert K. Yancy, Tri-County's Paradise theatre, Mansfield, Mo.

Back Up Phil Rand

I WOULD LIKE TO REPORT ON SOME pictures just played, "The Virginian (Par)," a dandy. Everyone said okay. "Mania (T)," not what the small towns want. Hardly anybody had one good word for it. "Hit the Deck (Radio)," good. "Mountain Justice (U)," with Maynard. The people who like Ken were well pleased. But after you play "The Virginian," the other Westerns will look like a ring on a hog's nose. "Beau Bandit (Radio)" ought to sell for two bits. "The Last Zepplin (T)," a good Friday-Saturday show, but didn't compare with "Flight." "Runaway Bride (Radio)—" I wish she had kept running and they had never discovered she was a he. Perhaps they certainly got to stop making these little 24x pictures. "Case of Sergeant Grischa (Radio)—" do not play it if you can trade it. They sold it to me as a special and, boy, what a flop! Good deals of Westerns are the best we ever played. "Rio Rita (Radio)" is another good one. I played Party Girl (T) to adults only and cleaned up. "Heart Over (T)," a dandy. It will put them all in a good humor. "The Cuckoos (Radio)—book it and watch them pack your house. Some of them were so short they were over before they had started. "Hot Totty, Twisty," with Bennie Ruben, bali! In Old Madrid (T), not bad. Mickey Mirey (Radio), good. Old Black Joe (T), good singing.

I read Phil Rand's letter in the HERALD-WORLD, and Phil certainly hits the nail on the head again in that we certainly make a bunch of Radio, also Columbia, bought and I do not know how I am ever going to work them into my show. A "Family Night" on "Family Night!" I could get rid of them. Well, to show you how dumb some of these bookers gets the weight should I say you? All of you know from experience. Well, I started "Family Night!" every Wednesday, and they sent me The Case of Sergeant Grischa for "Family Night." Now we really had Jazz Heaven, with one reel of film shot to the devil, so I have decided to run one more Wednesday night with another that makes me feel that I can send them a program in bad shape and it is okay, but just let you do something and how quick they raise 'em. Just a few days ago, the paper in Strattin, Colo., said our sound was perfect and our shows were so short, then Radio sent us a film all cut to hell. Wouldn't that make you go out and vote for light wines and beer and free lunch?—Vona theatre, Vona, Colo.

On Lots of Pictures

A FEW REPORTS YOU MIGHT LIKE to have. The Border Legion (Par) is the kind of picture people like. Jack Holt helped, and the Paramount trade mark on a Western makes people think of "Covered Wagon" stuff. Border Romance (T) is above the average as a Western and was sold at a price that enables one to make money. Captain of the Guard (U) is Laura LaPlante's finest picture, and we all liked John Boles, too. The period stuff does not draw at the box office, but you can be proud of the pic-ure, and it will please everyone who sees it. The Escape (Radio) is one of the punk English pictures that has a good plot and a foreign tongue. There is no excuse for shipping this out to a white exhibitor. We can take care of the boys out west, but we can't make them like English stuff. Let's admit that foreign things are out and not try to force them down their throats. I thought it was a cheap little slapstick comedy, and my folks thought it was great. Bennie Ruben, Colo.

Timely Dope from Rand

HERE ARE SOME PICTURES RECOMMENDED for your best nights. Light of Western Stars (Par), The Rogue Song (MGM), Bad Man (FN) and Unholy Three (MGM). The two Westerns are very funny, just what the small town needs. "Unholy Three" will give you a fine turnout. "Rogue Song" is problematical. Of its type, it is very fine. Honeys (Par), Devil May Care (MGM), Shadow Ranch (Col), will draw plenty, Fast Company (Par), Gentlemen of the Press (Col), Malaya to Heaven (Par) are good also. Floradora Girl (MGM) is good, very good for the type. It is a costume musical play of the 80's, sort of a burlesque. It did not draw well here. Wise Girls (MGM) was a terrible flop. The young people razzed it, older ones said it was good. Last badly on it at Long Beach (Par), but at all Men (FN), Lady Lies (Par) and Road to Paradise (FN) could be omitted easily and room made for something that would pull, though all pleased to a certain extent. All exhibitors have a play dates. I lost five chances to make a dime by running the last five plays mentioned.

Some time ago I said in my reports that all two-reel comedies were uniformly poor. Since then I have been running some of good, good, good, fellow down no said a and Laura could played well read thought, Hit special thought why above I Not taken Heaven... picture. The Love Trader (T) was another picture. Won't hurt to run this any day and people will like it. I doubled up and gave them a two-feature program and they liked it, and grosses held up better than average for the two-day film rental. The Party Girl (T) is a good show. It will please most not only girls. It can advertise it as the "1930 White Slave Racket" and tell them the truth and they will come even if they are not white.

All Quiet on the Western Front (U)—no theatre should fail to run this. Your duty to your patrons is to get this and run it. It is heavy. It will make people see, The Blaze of Glory (Sono Art)—Eddie Dowling and Betty Compson, two attractive people. Darrow, who put this nice show over, it is heavy but it is good. Hell Harbor (UA) is just another picture from pictures you have already run, and a feature, excepting the price. If they give it to you, run it. Danger Lights (Radio) is a nice picture. It was taken on the Millauhis suggestion

HERE ARE SOME PICTURES I WOULD like to report on. Big Money (P), with Robert Armstrong and Eddie Quillan, is good. When one has interest to go to the last film. The only fault is that Quillan has a tendency to ape Bill Haines for a short part of one reel, and how the director thinks that this stuff of Haines gets by is more than anyone knows. He is all right in other ways, but his smart stuff is being crook, gang-fight pictures, murders, etc.

Let's have more pictures like "Sally," "Whoppee!" and "Happy Days," "Harmony at Home," "Sunny-Side Up.

The Hippodrome theatre in Little Falls, N.Y., has been reopened by William J. Wood of Canajoharie, N.Y., who recently managed the Strand theatre there.

The theatre has Western Electric sound and is refurbished, seating capacity 650.

I hope it won't be long before all films will be movietone prints, and let the "wide film" come right along. The sooner the better for all theatres.—EDMUND M. BURKE.

Pleasure and Pride

WE BEG TO ACKNOWLEDGE, with many thanks, receipt of the plaque which was presented to the Madison theatre for excellence in sound reproduction and also your letter advising us to this effect.

Pleasure and pride to us that the Madison theatre has been awarded this plaque and we will endeavor to keep up the standard of reproduction.

Thanking you for your courtesy.—W. S. BRADY, Manager, Madison theatre, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

In Conspicuous Place

I RECEIVED YOUR AWARD OF MERIT and I wish to thank you very much for it.

We are very proud of it and have given it a conspicuous place in our entrance into the theatre.—JOHN MANSON.

Business Men Cooperate

WE DO NOT KNOW HOW TO EXPRESS the great joy and pride which your letter of the 13th, informing us that we had been awarded the plaque, brought us.

Our ambition and crew grew still greater when we received the plaque itself. We feel very remuneration for the efforts made to have better sound. And we do wish to thank you to, the public, and to our theatre name is now given still greater than ever before.

We assure you that we will always prize the award and pledge ourselves to do all within our power that we may remain worthy of the honor which this plaque stands for. We are placing it on the lobby wall.

The business men of the town have coop- erated with us in advertising in our county paper. Again expressing our appreciation and pledging that we will do all possible to live up to our motto, "Better Sound—Better Projection—Better Pictures" very truly—A. P. SITTON, Jr., Musc-U theatre, Tularosa, New Mexico.

An Honor to Have Award

THE HERALD-WORLD AWARD OF Merit was received by the Chic theatre a week or so ago and wish to thank you for it. It is certainly a beautiful thing, far better than I expected. I wish to assure you as projectionist and manager that we will continue to be deserving of the "Award of Merit." It is an honor to be able to have such a plaque and to have it live up to it. Thanking you again.—E. R. TINKHAM, Sound Projectionist, Chic theatre, Milo, Maine.
CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

AND now, instead of the tired "shopping" lady saying "Let's have lunch and then go to the Palace" after a hard morning of prowling around counters and looking at this and that, she will say "Let's go over to the Palace and have lunch and see the show." And while the "stunt" is on, we rather think that will be a very interesting topic in many conversations about noon. Briefly, here is what it is all about.

Through tiptoes with various companies, such as a tea company, a bread company, etc., each day at lunch time, and each evening, at supper time, sandwiches and tea will be served to the patrons of the RKO Palace, starting from a morning "looking around." The shopper may go to the Palace, park her troubles in a tasty sandwich and a cup of delectable tea, and then see the program. And the same goes for the tired little office worker at the end of the afternoon.

Somehow or other it sounds like a great idea. No bother to find a place to get a snack, or no trouble deciding on what to have. Just go and get it and then see the show. A boost for the theatre, a boost for the companies in the tieup, and certainly a big boost to the estimation in which the theatre is held.

The gentleman who is responsible for this is George Brown, director of the promotion and advertising for the RKO houses in the midwest. He's only been here a few weeks, but he's starting off with a bang.

We understand from Ben Judell, who—well, we'll come to that—that the Liberty production, "Ex-Flame," is to go into the Woods (flame in the woods. That ought to spell "forest fire") the latter part of December. Also "The Phantom of the West" is all ready for the serial "dishes." And now, what we were going to say is that Ben's charm on his watch chain—no, it's a ribbon—is most unusual, and very interesting. It's his initials in three different kinds of gold.

* * *

Eddie Quillan, whose Pathé pictures have received "post-screening" plaudits because of his splendid acting and charming personality, dropped into the Pathé exchange to say hello. With him was his Dad, whom we had the pleasure of meeting not so long ago, with some of Eddie's brothers and his very lovely sister, Marie. They only stopped a few moments, just between trains, as it was, but they were to Pitts- burg, where he was to make a personal appearance in the Stanley, in connection with his picture "Night Work."

Harry Gold, executive of United Artists, was in town last week, spending some of his time at the exchange offices.

Now that we've mentioned United Artists, we really should mention Cress Smith, who as usual, was off on another of his flying trips, this time to Minneapolis. And Sam Gorelick, who is certain to say "What's New?" unless you beat him to it, failed to get the first word the last time we were in. A siege by legionaries of exhibitors had worn him out, his desk ton was cracked from the weight of the contracts, and as for Morris Helman,—well, he wasn't around, and we missed watching the gyrations of the cigar that he so tenderly clasps, the inevitable cigar that resembles an orientator when he is talking over the telephone.

The Eden theatre, located at 436 East 61st street, was to have formally opened on December 6, the feature being "Three Faces East." It was formerly called the Vernon. Equipped and ready, it is all set to go after them, and with Lou Snyder as manager, there doesn't seem to be any logical way wrong. Sidney H. Zorakov is secretary of the Eden Amusement corporation.

Lou Ellman, branch manager of Pathe in Milwaukee, dropped down last week to say hello, and, incidentally, attend the game at soldiers field, the same that everyone found to be "all wet." With him was Jack Shapiro, salesman for Pathe in that town, and together they sat and suffered. And who but Eddie Richetto was to be found sitting out on a wet bench watching the mad scramble in the mud. He is pretty well thawed out by now, and—well, anyhow, we understand that the touchdown as the camera caught it is more thrilling than it was at the field (if you could find it) and that those people who relied upon their radios and newspapers probably saw a more "comfortable" game than the poor souls who wrapped themselves up in linoleum and shivered for a couple of hours.

And suddenly, with no warning whatsoever, with the Herald's (and your) pardon, please, Mrs. Brady's office but Oscar Florine. Upon saying hello we realized that we had hardly each other since we rode 1000 miles an hour on one of the North Western crack trains, watching a picture projected by one of those remarkable R.C.A. contrivances, which Oscar swears by. It seems that Oscar dropped down the other morning, car all groomed, ready to start off on one of those periphrasings that take him to the Cotswolds and the states which bound this noble "sovereignty." Everything was ready, and for some reason or other, it looked in his pocket, $12. Exactly. After some debate he decided that such a measure sum was hardly enough to carry him through a month, but what was most perturbing was the fact that he had had considerably more than that the night before. And finally it came to him—he'd slipped it under the little box on his dresser. But—he had a lot of fun trying to figure out when and where he had been robbed, and incidentally, he postponed his trip a day.

Walter Brown, well liked and admired by everyone that has ever had the privilege and pleasure to know him, "has backstage" and sends them in. They're a lot of fun and everybody likes to read them.

When Sam Schiller had his exchange in the Schiller building, using the building cut on his letterhead—when Ike van Roulke was managing exchanges for the General Film company—when the Bijou Dream (Stig Fuller, manager), was one of the big houses in the Loop—when the Laemmle Film Exchange was located on Lake street—and the Pop Plume Anti-Trust Exchange—when Abe Balaban was running the Circle theatre on 12th street—when Maurice Choughy was ballyhooing in front of his picture on Halsted street? Those were the happy days.

We are indebted to Sid for writing up this interesting little paragraph, and we hope it will inspire some of you who can remember about early film days in Chicago to "kick up their heels" and send them in. They're a lot of fun and everybody likes to read them.

Arliss Wins Plaudit

Of Chicago Club Women

George Arliss certainly is held in a most favorable light by the members of the Chicago Woman's Club, judging by the way in which they received the picture showing the recent awards made by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Clinton S. Wauber, executive manager of the organization, who is making a tour under the auspices of the Federation of Women's Clubs, addressed 500 members of the Chicago group one day last week at the very beautiful club headquarters on 11th street. The picture, showing the presentation ceremonies, caused a good deal of interest, and when George Arliss was shown, receiving the Academy award for his excellent work in "Disraeli," the house came down.

SAYS SID DECKER,

Nothing Definite As Yet on Double Features

Nothing definite as yet has been accomplished in doing away with the double feature "racket" which has swept the movie houses of Chicago, and which is causing a bit of consternation in some circles, according to the Jack Miller, president of the Chicago Exhibitors' Association. However, we understand that efforts are being made in the direction of bringing back single features, which "held the screen" prior to this.

IN the first nine months of 1930, Exhibitors Herald-World had received in excess of 3,000 letters from subscribers, telling how they read the magazine.

Although each one almost invariably stated "I first turn to ---" and named some particular feature or some particular department, all indicated that before the magazine was put away it was thoroughly read.

Mack Sennett is famous for his satires on the movies themselves. And this one, kidding the theme song, is one of his greatest. The critics call it "great fun", "one long howl", "a riot."

If you want to give them a rough idea of love as Frank and Johnny demonstrate it—and a very clear idea of how funny an "action comedy" can be—play this one.

America's collective sense of humor is one of the principal reasons for its greatness; one of the surest guarantees of its future. Among its most honored sons and daughters have always been those who made its millions chuckle. For they do more for public morale than most of its statesmen.

While you can laugh you’ll never be licked. Every time you play a good comedy you are helping your box-office to win. And you are adding your bit toward strengthening the public courage—and that’s all America needs now to start the ball of prosperity to rolling again.

 Paramount assembled a great cast of great kids and made the finest possible production of Mark Twain’s beloved "TOM SAWYER." A fine, big, clean motion picture without a divorce, speakeasy or gangster.

We take pleasure in announcing that, beyond doubt and based upon cold box office figures alone, "TOM SAWYER" IS A GLORIOUS SUCCESS!

Chicago wires: "TOM SAWYER' CAUSED THE BIGGEST AND EARLIEST HOLDOUT IN THE HISTORY OF THE CHICAGO THEATRE. Solid line four abreast extending a full block to Wabash Ave."

Los Angeles wires: "WE CANNOT BEGIN TO ACCOMMODATE TOM SAWYER' MOB. Finest comments and reactions we ever had to a motion picture."

Electrical Research announces

Noiseless

Noiseless Recording means talking pictures with all undesired sounds barred out. No humming, hissing or scratching noises mar the pure tone of recorded speech and music. Every word and note sounds natural, clean-cut, true to life!

This revolutionary New Process—developed by sound engineers through years of study—marks a great step forward in the perfection of talkies. Its introduction is just one more indication that Western Electric is fulfilling its promise to the motion picture industry: to continually improve apparatus and methods and to make these improvements immediately available to producers and exhibitors.

ERPI Producer-licensees have already installed equipment for Noiseless Recording. They are now making pictures by this New Process. The first—a Paramount production entitled "The Right to Love" and featuring Ruth Chatterton—will be released this month. You will Noiseless Recording will still further increase the popularity of talking pictures—build box office for you—attract new patrons to your theatre, even those who have always been most critical—bring old patrons oftener. They will demand pictures recorded by this method.

And remember—Western Electric reproducing equipment delivers sound exactly as it is recorded. That is why only Western Electric apparatus can do full justice to this wonderful New Process Noiseless Recording.

Cut-Rates—or Efficiency?

NOW is a particularly pertinent time for the theatre owner or manager to make a careful survey of the methods of operation in his theatre, to the end that the maximum of efficiency is achieved in all the departments that go to make up the successful presentation of motion pictures.

Such an analysis by the theatre man is more than likely to reveal to him the fact that real judicious and effective handling of one or more of the factors of appeal to his community will add to the box office receipts without the slightest increase in his expenditures.

To rush unseeing into a policy of “bargain shows” is to gamble with a possible loss of prestige. Double features, five-cent matinees, free tickets and the like too often become a “bargain” for only the patron and an eventual loss to the exhibitor. And the reason is twofold. In the first place, they constitute a false indictment of the motion picture itself, an unsupported charge that the entertainment value of the current product is not sufficiently high to attract the interest of the public.

The patron does not take time to learn for himself what is an indisputable fact, namely, that there never was a period in the history of motion pictures when the standard of product in general was as high as it is at present. Nor can the patron be expected to recognize that fact when the picture itself is being subordinated in the theatre’s appeal for his attendance. Furthermore, should he attempt to reason it out, he might well conclude that this theatre’s management has lost its grip, particularly if he notes good attendance at other theatres. If he reaches this conclusion he is coming significantly close to the truth.

A second reason why the exhibitor giving “bargain” shows is likely to find himself emmeshed in a losing policy lies in the fact that it is much easier to start them than to drop them. The reasoning originally behind practically all cut-rate shows is that they will tide the box office over a temporary period, whereupon they can be eliminated with at least normal patronage restored.

But the patron’s mind does not work that way. Give an employee a series of bonuses and they no longer are bonuses: to him they have become a part of his salary. So too in the relations between the theatre and the patron. If the latter has been led to expect “something for nothing,” he considers himself duped if the “bargain” is eliminated. Thus the exhibitor has no one but himself to blame if patronage drops off when he returns to his original program.

Instead of going outside his own field to obtain artificial restoratives for patronage, the theatre man may find the proper prescription in the conduct of the theatre itself, and that without doing anything further than improving the quality of the service which he is giving to the community, or best presenting the case of the pictures he is showing.

The first consideration is whether the theatre’s advertising has been made as effective as possible. Calvin Coolidge is quoted by the Hearst newspapers as stating the following:

“It is essential in the first instance to make good merchandise. But that is not enough. It is just as essential to create a desire for it. That is advertising.”

It is not enough that excellent motion pictures are available and that they have been booked into one’s theatre. Nor is it enough that the exhibitor has established a sizeable budget for advertising them. The fact that one is spending money does not in itself guarantee that one is actually advertising.

Has your advertising been effective? If not, careful investigation should reveal why it is not. Has the writing of your advertising copy been delegated to a cub on the newspaper staff, or are you and your advertising department giving it careful study?

Advertising of motion picture programs is subject to the same general rules as the advertising of other commodities, but how much more fascinating to the public at large are motion picture subjects than so many other articles of commerce? Evidence of effective newspaper advertising being presented week by week in the “Box Office Promotion” department of the HERALD-WORLD, in the reproduction of outstanding advertisements of theatres throughout the country. Yet the opportunity to create a desire in the community to see a particular picture is dissipated often by listless writing of newspaper advertising copy.

What of your exploitation paper? Have you made a test of the comparative returns from direct mailing and hand delivery? Are you placing one-sheets in the most advantageous places? Those are all vital factors which the forward-looking exhibitor will scrutinize with care.

Is the week’s program being arranged to suit the circumstances peculiar to the particular community? Study of the community itself, its likes and dislikes, should be introductory to any understanding of successful exhibition. For example, is the program shaped with special appeal to the children’s interest on Friday nights? Friday night as the end of the school week is still a definite consideration for good box office in the smaller cities.

There are the problems of efficient physical properties in the theatre. Is the projection service commendable? Are replacements of parts being made as early as they should be made? Do the seats assure patrons of complete comfort during the show? Is the theatre kept scrupulously clean? Every day should be cleanup day in the modern theatre.

Ventilation, courtesy of employees, active interest in community events—any enterprising exhibitor could double the number of factors just mentioned. But any one of these may be the factor which is building or leveling patronage. It is certain that the exhibitor who disregards them is handing his patronage to other theatres or losing it for all of them. Giving half-rate tickets to patrons is no guarantee whatsoever of increased patronage: looking good pictures, creating a desire on the part of the community to see them, and then presenting them under the most pleasing conditions—those are the surest mediums for box office success.

Pathe Stockholders Act Upon Purchase by RKO January 3

49 Per Cent of DuPont-Pathe Retained, Declares Kennedy

Estimates Film Manufacturing Company’s Earnings Will Exceed the $100 a Share of Last Year

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Pathe stockholders will convene January 3 at the company’s offices to act upon the merger with Radio-Keith-Orpheum, the papers for which were signed last week.

By the agreement Pathe would “become primarily a holder of capital stock of DuPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Company,” said John D. Kennedy, the board of Pathe Exchange, Inc., declared in his letter to the stockholders.

Kennedy called attention to the large earnings of DuPont-Pathe stating: “Earnings for 1929 amounted to more than $100 per share, and it is estimated the earnings for 1930 will be greater.” Pathe will retain an interest of 49 per cent, or 4,500 shares, of the stock of DuPont-Pathe, the remaining 51 per cent being owned by E. I. DuPont deNemours & Company.

Of the details of the RKO deal, Kennedy said in his letter: “The agreement with RKO involves the payment by RKO of $4,630,789 ($500,000 in cash and the remainder in 6 per cent notes, maturing in five equal annual installments, beginning January 1, 1932) to the Culver City Studios, Jersey City Laboratories, and Pathe News, Audio Review, stars’ and directors’ contracts, certain scenarios, furniture and fixtures, and three feature pictures now being released. Additional payments are to be made for such other stories as may be acquired; for prepaid expense items; and for stores and supplies inventory. Half of the net receipts from these three feature pictures, above $1,000,000, belong to Pathe. Under the agreement to be received from assets should be at least $4,850,000 and may substantially exceed this amount. RKO will continue distribution of our pictures not purchased, for account of Pathe, on a favorable basis.

Would Cancel Photophone Contract

“In addition to the payments to be made by RKO as aforesaid, RKO agrees to assume contracts with actors and directors and leases on rented quarters in this and foreign countries, and to enable Pathe to cancel its contracts with RCA Photophone, Inc. The amount payable under these contracts and leases over a period of years is not less than $2,400,000. In addition, there will be a substantial saving in studio overhead expenses during the period prior to the completion of the sale, since at least four feature pictures are to be made for RKO on such terms that a substantial portion of this overhead will be paid by RKO as part of the cost of such pictures.”

Kennedy said that DuPont-Pathe’s “volume of business and profits has increased steadily and rapidly since organization. Dividends are now being paid at the rate of 40 per share per annum.”

Cities Wide Film Possibilities

Of wide film he stated that “there are possibilities of a greatly enhanced market” on its adoption. “Each ‘frame’ of wide film requires about three times the raw stock that a present ‘frame’ consumes. The spread of color should also increase the market for film, since color scenes must be shot on two or three separate negatives. The home movie market is still undeveloped; however, 16 mm sound projectors have actually been built at moderate cost, and the development of home sound movies should help to enlarge the demand for amateur films.”

In view of these factors, Kennedy pointed out that the opportunity for retaining possession of the 49 per cent of DuPont-Pathe stock constitutes “one of the most attractive features of the agreement with RKO.”

Alexander and Rothacker Combine

Sales Promotion, Production, Service

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Arrangements have been completed whereby Alexander Film Company, large producer of short length motion picture publicity, and Rothacker Film Corporation, considered the largest producer and distributor of industrial educational motion pictures, combine their sales promotion, production and service efforts.

The plan contemplates an exchange of common and preferred stock. The two companies will retain their corporate identities, functioning as separate organizations with merged production and distribution effort. The new Rothacker board of directors will be controlled by the Alexander company with Douglas D. Rothacker as vice president of that firm.

Combined production, circulation and service centers will be maintained at Colorado Springs, home office of the Alexander company, at Chicago and New York. J. Don Alexander and Rothacker, presidents of the two companies, express the belief that the combination will result in better service and quality at lower cost.

The Capitol Grand orchestra, with Yasha Bunchuk wielding the baton, has been selected with Will Osborne and His Band as one of two official music making aggregations for the upper dance to be given West Point cadets and Annapolis midshipmen following the Army-Navy football battle on December 13. The roof of the St. Regis is the address, and the proceeds of the game go to relief of the unemployed, as some people may have heard already. The Capitol is all wrapped up in this football affair. The official football, bearing the personal signature of Herb Hoover, is reposing in the inside foyer of the theatre for one day. Not only that, but they sent along two Marines to guard the pigskin. Overnight the ball will have a private compartment in the theatre safe where it will repose on a cushion. Last Saturday morning at the Criterion theatre, Paramount held a special showing of “Tom Sawyer,” at which were three representatives from every high school in the Metropolitan district. For the four best reviews on the film, Paramount will pay $100 in prizes: $20 for first, $25 for second, $15 for third, and $10 for fourth. This will probably result in an exhibition of reviewing as it should be done.

General Pictures to Aid Idle by Adding 75 to Its Sales Force

Additional Staff Will Sell Parts for Phonofilm; Factory Output at Full Blast

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—General Talking Pictures Corporation, manufacturers and distributors of DeForest Phonofilm, are adding 75 additional salesmen to their staff before Christmas to push the present plan. The augmented force will work out of the home office in New York, selling spare and improved replacement parts for the Phonofilm.

The addition has been made at this time with a view to aiding the unemployment situation by M. A. Schlesinger, though original plans called for the sales growth following the completion of 2,000 Phonofilm machine installations, of which some 1,800 have been finished up to now.

Schlesinger, president of General Talking Pictures, commenting on the new development, said, "The company has lost its factory and manufacturing units working at full blast to make available $250,000 worth of spare parts for Phonofilm in anticipation of this drive to give employment to worthy and capable men. We certainly hope that the exhibitors will help us in our efforts to alleviate the unemployment situation."

An educational campaign will be immediately undertaken by the company, instructing exhibitors in the best operation of the Phonofilm and acquainting projectionists with the use of the machines.

This new sales effort will also mark the beginning of the newly developed plan for servicing the field. More than 80 engineers will be centrally located at 12 key points throughout the country.

Time for Unstinted Advertising, Better Films, Says Morris

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The need of the moment is better pictures and unstinting expenditure of money to advertise them properly, Samuel E. Morris, vice president and general manager, declared at a special executive conference held at the Warner home offices yesterday.

Sounding a note of optimism, Morris said: "The greatest error that can be made now is to cheapen product in any way. Business men who do this not only lack courage but lack faith in their own material."

He stressed the point that is now existing in industry have their origin within industry itself. He declared the outlook for 1931 is very good and commented: "Persons who are tightening their purse strings are doing the industry a lot of harm."

Speaking of the First National and Warner prospects, he said, "Warner Brothers and First National are in a wonderful condition regarding the future. We can look forward with enthusiasm to next year by reason of the product ready for release."

Palfreyman Advises Convention That New Plan Can’t Be Expected To Satisfy All at Start—Lightman Conducts Open Forum On Contract—Picquet Re-elected President

(Special to the Herald-World)

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Dec. 11.—Any detailed provisions of the new zoning system that proved unfair will be promptly adjusted, David Palfreyman of the MPPDA assured members of the Theatre Owners Association of North and South Carolina at their annual winter convention here Tuesday. Palfreyman reminded the exhibitors that the plan is new and that it could not be expected to prove entirely satisfactory to all at the start.

M. A. Lightman, of Memphis, president of the MPTO, was one of the principal speakers of the day, and conducted an open forum discussion after explaining the provisions of the proposed new uniform contract.

Charles W. Picquet of Pinehurst, N. C., was re-elected president of the association.

Albert Sottile of Charleston, S. C., was named first vice president and W. H. Hendrix of Greensboro, N. C., second vice president, W. T. Gray and Mrs. Walter Griffin of Charlotte were re-elected treasurer and secretary, respectively.

More than 100 theatre owners of the two states attended the convention, which was said by officials to have had the largest attendance of representative exhibitors in the history of the association.

The exhibitors concluded their meeting with a dance Tuesday night at the Woman's Club Building. Another social feature was a buffet luncheon given the members by John Mangum, of the Tiffany office at Atlanta. In the absence of Judge F. O. Bowman of Chapel Hill, who was scheduled to speak, A. F. Sams of Winston-Salem delivered a brief address.

Franklin Denies Negotiating or Closing Any Financing for Future Activities

Blanket denial of negotiating or closing any financing in connection with numerous reports as to the future activities of Harold B. Franklin, former president of West Coast Theatres, is made in an announcement by Franklin.

"Despite rumors to the contrary, I have neither negotiated nor closed for any financing in connection with future activities," Franklin stated. "My staff and I have made a careful survey of conditions throughout the country and the results of this survey will finally determine my future plans."

"It is a wellknown fact that business conditions are present warrant most careful consideration, and any activity that I finally undertake will be founded on a strong financial structure. At the proper time I will make known my plans."
Columbia Divides Distributing Forces into Two Major Units

Phil Dunas Named Sales Manager for Territory West of Detroit—Lou Weinberg Heads Eastern District—Both Promotions

Are Made from Within the Organization

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Columbia Pictures has divided its sales offices throughout the country into two major units, east and west of Detroit, in order to handle distribution and general sales activities more efficiently.

Phil Dunas, formerly district manager for the Midwest territory, has been appointed to the post of Western sales manager by P. H. Goldberg, general sales manager, Lou Weinberg, heretofore in complete charge of Columbia's short subject product in this country, will assume a similar position in the East. Both will make their headquarters at the home office in New York.

How Offices Are Divided

Dunas will be in complete charge of the following offices: Chicago, Denver, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Portland, Oregon, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, Missouri, and Butte.

Under the supervision of Weinberg in the East will be: Albany, Atlantic, Boston, Buffalo, Charlotte, N. C., Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Texas, Memphis, Tenn., New Haven, Conn., New Orleans, New York City, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Washington, D. C.

Any appointments are said to be in line with the company's policy of promotion from within the organization where it is merited.

Dunas joined Columbia after association with United Artists, where he was branch and district manager for the city of New York. Weinberg has been in the film business for six years, having previously occupied a position with the sales department of Fox Film, leaving that organization to become assistant sales manager for Selznick.

New St. Louis Legit To Test WB Stock Chain Plan: Report

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—A simple and effective manner of ascertaining the possible screen value of plays and the development of ambitious stage talent for picture work, is believed to be the thought behind the announcement by Warner Brothers that they will operate the Grand Central theatre in St. Louis, Missouri, as a legitimate stock theatre.

The film company, which owns the house, is already selecting a permanent stock company for the production of successful stage plays at popular prices. Though nothing in relation to the possibility of this house being the first of many was said, it is understood as at least probable that others will be opened, depending perhaps, on the success of this initial venture.

Joseph Hayden, who has in the past directed the summer stock company at Elkhart's Gardens in Denver, Colorado, with pronounced success, will be the stage director.

It is planned to open the house during Christmas week, with a Broadway success as the opening attraction. Jacob Wilk, speaking for Warner Brothers said in regard to the plan, "There is real need of a good stock company in St. Louis and Warner Brothers are going to supply it. It is the purpose to present all of the Broadway plays as rapidly as we can secure them. If we come across original plays in manuscript that we deem worthy we will make them known. We will get up production for all of the plays we present and give them with artistic attention to detail."

Exhibitors Ask Canadian Government to Prevent Charging of Music Tax

OTTAWA, ONT., Dec. 11.—The Canadian government has been asked to amend the copyright law to make it impossible for the Performing Rights Society to levy an annual music seat tax.

The request was made by the Canadian Association of Exhibitors at the Fall Fairs to prevent collection of the music tax for the playing of copyrighted music in theatres or fairs.

The $300,000 Bakersfield Will Open Christmas Day

BAKERSFIELD, CAL., Dec. 11.—The new Bakersfield theatre, erected at a cost of more than $300,000, and said to be the largest house between Los Angeles and San Francisco, will be formally opened Christmas day.

Report Dissatisfied Members of Allied Texas Unit Have Organized a New Group

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—Expressions of dissatisfaction with the Allied Theatres Owners of Texas, a group of independent theatre owners have been reported as forming the nucleus of a separate organization, which will probably be known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Protective Association of Texas. It is understood that the new group is made up of a large number of the Allied unit who have become dissatisfied, they have declared, with the stand taken on film censorship by the president of the Allied group, Will Horwitz. The meeting was held at the Adolphus Hotel.

Judge Roy L. Walker of Lampasas acted as temporary chairman. Walker I. S. Melcher of Dallas, O. E. Englebreth of Georgetown, O. B. Bridges of Houston, Henry Reeves of Meinard, Clinton DeWoff of San Saba, Sam Hefflin of Cameron and W. H. Gwynn of Terrell were elected directors.

Texas Allied Wants The Exhibitor, Not U. S., to be Censor

(DALLAS, Dec. 11.—A resolution has been passed by the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas qualifying its stand on censorship with the statement that the organization, "in principle, would deplore censorship, politically administered, either locally, state-wide or national." The resolution follows statements by William Horwitz of Houston, president of the association, which were generally construed to mean a demand for official censorship.

After citing the efforts of the AMPDA to control the moral tone of motion pictures and indicating that these efforts have fallen short of success, the resolution declares: "It is therefore essential that in order to avoid political censorship, this power be given at least a trial in that branch of the industry most affected by its abuse; and we, therefore, believe that the vested in the exhibitor and his organization, in order that an honest and sincere effort be made to do what has been promised, but promised with insincerity and dishonest intent.

"Unless some such plan is put into effect, we, as an association and as individual independent exhibitors, feel that we cannot reform motion pictures, even though it should mean a political system of censorship, to which in principal we demur," Besides Horwitz, the signers included Rubin Freis of Victoria, E. J. Callahan of Crockett, A. V. Wade of Gainesville and A. W. Lilly of Greenville, all officials, and ten others who are directors.

Casher Is Heroine of Second Holdup in Month

PORTLAND, Dec. 11.—Dorothy Ford, bartenter at the cash register at a Hollywood theatre, upon being compelled to again "hand it over" grabbed a few stray rolls of change and gave them to a near midnight rush of customers, successfully bilking containing several hundred dollars. This is the second robbery of this suburban house during the past month.

Keeping Hospital Busy

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—With the Fox West Coast publicity staff for Northern California recovering from an appendicitis operation here, Phil Weinberg, local manager of Columbia pictures, is also in a hospital for treatment.
Blue Law Is Unconstitutional, Says Court in Evanston Fight

Kentucky City Offers Another Important Sunday Show Development in Action of Chuchermen Seeking Enforcement Through Threat of License Revocation

Attacks in the spirited battle of words and writs over the Sunday show issue were conducted this week along two brand new fronts, with both assaults having possible outcomes of far-reaching effect.

The in-again-out-again squabble in Evanston, North Shore suburb of Chicago, bounced back into court, and this time not the recent referendum on the issue, but the venerable blue law itself came into the purview of the court, resulting in the precedental verdict that the law itself was unconstitutional and therefore void.

In Owensboro, Ky., the activity involved the licensing of theatres, placing in jeopardy the right of their proprietors to operate them. And these developments were aside from the dubious victory of Mattoon, Ill., where exhibitors, granted permission to operate on Sunday if the shows were opened by prayer prayer потребовали не и пропустить суд, предоставляя прецедентное решение, что закон сам по себе не законен и было разрешено.

In the case of Owensboro, the Strand Amusements Company, operators of two theatres, has appealed the circuit court decision holding it guilty of blue law violation. It is pointed out that if successful here, similar tactics might be resorted to by Sunday show opponents elsewhere.

In Richmond, Ky., Sunday show foes are having more difficulty, a resolution to opt the chief of police for not enforcing the blue laws having failed to receive any action. Richmond juries also have turned in guilty verdicts in the several Sunday show cases brought to trial, while efforts of Richmond churchmen to get the public to sign pledge cards promising not to attend Sunday shows, have met with no appreciable success.

May Give Benefit Shows

ALBANY, Dec. 11.—Although the village of Gouverneur, N. Y., turned thumbs down last summer on Sunday movies, the board of trustees last week decided to permit Sunday shows if given as a benefit to such institutions as hospitals, etc. James Papa-

Gives Up Sunday Attempt

MAPLE SHADE, N. J., Dec. 11.—After a prolonged fight over the question of Sunday movies in this town of Maple Shade, N. J., Jacob Becker, manager of a theatre, announced, on December 4, that he would give up the battle and not try to show films on Sundays, thus ending a meeting called by church officials to protest against Sabbath shows.

No Movies, No Gas, No “Nuthin”

(Special to the Herald-World)

BELLOW'S FALLS, Vt., Dec. 11.—Everything the last week was closed up as tight as a drum last Sunday, all because of the activity of a hundred or more motorists who threaded the country roads of the village and nearby towns. Villagers wandered about disconsolately, unable to attend a Sunday movie, without so much as a game of miniature golf to relieve the monotony, while motorists who had failed to load up their cars with oil and gas found themselves out of luck. No newspapers were sold in the town. Cinema shows were closed and even an ice cream soda was taboo.

Freuler Back from Coast Conference on Campaign For New Big 4 Westerns

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—John R. Freuler, president of Big 4, which specializes in Westerns, has returned from a tour of offices and production units on the West Coast, during which he held conversations with key executives and conducted sundry business matters. Freuler expressed the belief that the coming year should see a definite turn for the better in the industry, as well as being particularly important to the independent producer and exhibitor.
Erpi Experts Map New Service for Noiseless Recording Process

Fifty Supervisors and Technical Inspectors Cooperate to Effect Elimination of Interfering Sounds in Reproducing Equipment

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Erpi is concentrating on the development of a new system for servicing Western Electric sound apparatus, which was made necessary by the introduction of the so-called “new process noiseless recording.” More than 50 service department supervisors and technical inspectors are meeting here this week in the working out of the new arrangement.

H. M. Wilcox, operating manager for the company, in discussing the new development, said, “This new process of recording eliminated all extraneous noises from talking pictures, and if theaters are to receive the advantage of the new method, the reproducing equipment must, in itself be noiseless.”

He noted further that a complete upward revision of the present standards of “uneliminable noise” and reproduction is inevitable, no matter what the origin of the noise may be. Heretofore, he said, inherent film noises have almost completely covered the extraneous sounds of the theatre, but, with the new recording, such noise becomes objectionable to the theatre audience.

The Erpi organization is making every effort to check equipment immediately, anticipating the release this month of Paramount’s “The Right to Love,” the first picture to be made with the “noiseless recording.” At first these efforts will be concentrated on those houses showing films recorded with the new method, but eventually all theatres using Western Electric equipment will be similarly treated, it is understood.

The service department is cooperating with the engineering organization in the carrying out of this program.

Mogler’s Widow Pays $5,000 for Bond Forfeit

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Adelaide Mogler, widow of Senator Joseph Mogler of this city and administratrix of his estate, has given the criminal court a check for $5,000 in payment of a judgment against Mogler for forfeited bond.

Mogler, once a prominent exhibitor here, signed a bond in 1926 for Clyde Mitchell, who had been charged with robbery. Mitchell disappeared, Mogler, who owned the Bremen, Excelsior and Mogler theatres on the north side, was later murdered by holdup men at the Mogler theatre December 2, 1929. The police have never apprehended the bandits.

“Sunny” Breaks Record in San Antonio; Held Over

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN ANTONIO, Dec. 11.—So great was the business on “Sunny,” starring Marilyn Miller, which was scheduled for only a week’s run, that it was held over for three days and the result was that this first National picture set a box office record for ten days at the Empire theatre. This is the first holdover for this film house since it has become independent last January.

Beckerich to Manage RKO Palace in Akron

(Special to the Herald-World)

AKRON, OHIO, Dec. 11.—Al Beckerich, manager, RKO Hippodrome, Cleveland, Ohio, has been appointed manager of the Palace, the only RKO house in this city. He is replaced by Ralph L. Walsh, who returns to Warners as district manager for Ohio, with 26 theatres under his jurisdiction.

Arlen Gets Powder Burn in Screen Gun Battle

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Richard Arlen is suffering from severe powder burns about the face received in a screen gun battle.

A fellow actor fired a gun at close range in a new picture which stars Arlen.

Admission Taxes 10 Years Ago Amounted To $70,000,000; Last Year, $3,000,000

(Special to the Herald-World)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—According to the annual report of the Internal Revenue Bureau, made available last week, there is quite a contrast with a decade ago, when admission tax collections exceeded $70,000,000 a year, the collections during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, the receipts showed, were less than $3,000,000. Ten years ago, the tax was collected on admissions in excess of 10 cents; now it applies only to tickets selling for more than $2.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The new Dollar Line steamship, President Hoover, said to be the largest vessel ever built in America, is to be launched. President Hoover, said it will contain a completely equipped and perfectly appointed motion picture theatre, including special acoustical treatments.

RCA Photophone equipment will be installed in the floating theatre, in accordance with plans prepared by architects of the ship in cooperation with RCA engineers.

Hanson, Goe and Wilson Given New Posts at Tiffany

Grant L. Cook Announces Advances Made Within Organization Due to Expansion

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Three important promotions just announced by Grant L. Cook, executive vice president of Tiffany Productions bring Oscar R. Hanson, former general sales manager, to the post of assistant general manager of the company; Carl J. Goe to Hanson’s previous position, and Sterling Wilson to the occupancy of the post of assistant general sales manager to Goe.

These changes are explained as due to the company’s rapid expansion during the past year. Goe had been assistant to Hanson prior to this promotion and Wilson had been in charge of the contract department.

Oscar Hanson came to Tiffany two years ago from Canada, where he was in charge of Educational Pictures in that territory. Since his occupancy of the sales manager’s post, sales are said to have increased more than 80% over last year at the same time. As evidence of Hanson’s ability, Cook points to the acquisition of more than 3,000 franchise holders during the company’s franchise drive some months ago, which greatly expanded the outlet for Tiffany pictures throughout the country.

Hanson, Goe and Wilson have been in the motion picture business for a number of years, the former having been associated in an executive capacity with Universal, Pathés, and other large companies; and the latter before coming to the home office was Tiffany branch manager at Albany for several years.

These promotions are said to be in line with the expressed policy of the company to promote men from within the organization to executive positions.

‘Legit’ Goes Free as Film Houses Get Heavy Tax Under Victoria Rule

(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Victorian state government has voted an amusement tax on all motion picture admissions above a prescribed minimum. The law took effect December 1.

Motion picture theatres have protested against the new rule, since it provides for the lowering of the tax rate on legitimate entertainment. The latter step was taken because such houses were losing patronage, it is explained.

S.S. President Hoover Has Complete Theatre

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The new Dollar Line steamship, President Hoover, said to be the largest vessel ever built in America, is to be launched. President Hoover, said it will contain a completely equipped and perfectly appointed motion picture theatre, including special acoustical treatments.

RCA Photophone equipment will be installed in the floating theatre, in accordance with plans prepared by architects of the ship in cooperation with RCA engineers.
Distributor Can Sue at Court For Breach, Colorado Finding

Contract Is Held Enforceable Despite Suspension of Arbitration

Rules—Bench in M G M Denver Case Quotes Clause

In Thacher Decree—Other Decisions Cited

(Special to the Herald-World)

DENVER, Dec. 11.—Suspension of arbitration under the standard exhibition contract does not prevent a distributor from suing at law for breach of contract, according to a decision just handed down by the state court of Colorado, setting here, in an action brought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer against the Bi-Metallir Investment Company, an exhibitor.

After the exhibitor had raised the point that the standard contract provided for arbitration before a court, the court quoted from the Thacher decree, which recently was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court, as follows:

"Nothing contained in this decree shall be construed as prohibiting enforcement by any lawful means of any contractual obligation which is consistent with the provisions of the decree."

Holds Contract Enforceable

When the distributor, M G M, showed that a decree of usage did not require the arbitration clause to be applied as the distributor desired, the court held the contract could be enforced.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer points out other decisions handed down since the Thacher decree and holding the standard contract enforceable, including the decision of the United States district court at Denver whereby it was decided that any invalidity of the arbitration clause of the standard contract did not affect the enforceability of the contract.

Other Decisions Cited

A recent suit in the state court of North Carolina resulted in the overruling of the exhibitor's contention that the contract was illegal, and the ensuing trial ended with a verdict for the distributor.

Inability of the parties to arbitrate as provided in the standard contract was involved in a recent case against an exhibitor in the United States district court at Minneapolis. The court held that as this was prevented by the Thacher decree, the distributor was entitled to sue on the contract.

Another decision, in the state court at Pittsburgh, held that the arbitration clause could be eliminated, and the contracts enforced in the courts.

J. J. Parker President

Of Newly Organized Fox

Portland Theatres, Inc.

(PORTLAND, Dec. 11.—Negotiations have finally been completed between Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., and J. J. Parker who was president here before and assumes supervision of Fox Portland Theatres, Inc., operating the Fox Broadway, Fox United Artists and the Fox Hollywood in Portland, and the Liberty and Astoria theatres in Astoria, Ore. These arrangements were made during the recent visit here of Howard Sheehan, vice president of Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Transfer of stock gave Parker one-third ownership in the newly organized Fox Portland Theatres, Inc., Fox Portland with the change Messrs. Parker and Chas. C. Couch, Parker's assistant and who has been associated with Parker in his theatrical ventures for the past 15 years, has moved their offices from the Rivoli to Fox Broadway theatre.

Frank Maxwell, who has been in command of the Fox West Coast interests in Oregon has been transferred to take direct command of the West Coast interests in Oregon, supervision over the theatres in both Medford and Eugene, Ore., and has transferred his headquarters to the Music Box theatre building at Broadway and Stark.

Talking Films Credited

For 3½ Million Jump of British Amusement Tax

(LONDON, Dec. 11.—A report issued by the customs and excise commissioners shows that taxes on entertainments have increased 700,000 pounds, or approximately $3,500,000, during the past year.

This gain is recorded in spite of England's 5,000,000 pound drop in general revenue for the year.

The increase in entertainment revenue is attributed, in a large measure, to the large number of sound installations in theatres. Talking pictures are credited with bringing thousands of new patrons.

“Devil to Pay” Follows

“Hell’s Angels” at Gaiety

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The United Artists film, “The Devil To Pay,” with Ronald Colman in an original score play by Frederick Loewe, will follow “Hell’s Angels” at the Gaiety here on December 16.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 11.—In a letter to members of the M P T O of Ohio, P. J. Wood calls attention to the recent decision by the U. S. Supreme court concerning Judge Thacher's ruling on compulsory arbitration. In one case it affirmed it, and in another the reverse was true. The wording of the letter, in commenting on this, is as follows:

"Therefore, if undue advantage is taken of the distributor by unscrupulous exhibitors by reason of the two decisions, in the final analysis, the honest exhibitor must stand the entire additional cost to the industry."

Lack of Idealism in Industry Is a Dilemma,

Roxy Advises A M P A's

Declares There's Vital Necessity for Research Laboratory for Study of Films

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The industry is in a serious dilemma because of lack of idealism and too high commercialization, S. L. (Roxy) Rothafel declared at the AMPA's weekly luncheon today. Though the remedy is good production, it is doubtful how this can be brought about, he said. "When power goes to the head instead of the heart, the result is trouble," Roxy said. He expressed the belief that the most important thing for industry to do is to get together.

Urges Research Laboratories

There is vital necessity, he declared, for creation of research laboratories to study the art of the motion picture since, he said, "I don't think they know what it all about."

He declared that he believes the wide screen is here to stay and that it is a salvation for the industry in that it will create a new interest on the part of the public. In the same connection, he said, the balcony in the theatre must go.

The reaction which he predicted at the beginning of sound in pictures is now here, Roxy said. He declared they should have gone much more slowly in pictures. Such a thing he advises as is necessary in the present development of the wide screen, he added.

Predicts Something Different

Roxy said further that he sees a definite trend toward something different in the future, declaring that the industry must point to two channels in appeal: first, sound pictures, and, second, the human element, and that the two should not be mixed.

He expressed a plea for simplicity in advertising of pictures, getting away from excessive adjectives and the like.

Roxy would say nothing as to his future plans at this time. He declared he had as much faith in the future of the industry as ever before, if not more.

Dickinson Buys Reddish, His First House in Illinois

(KANSAS CITY, Dec. 11.—Glen W. Dickinson, president of the Glen W. Dickinson Theatres, Incorporated, has purchased the Reddish theatre at Jerseyville, Illinois, marking the first house in his chain to be located in Illinois. He now operates 33 picture houses in Kansas and Missouri. Leased for a period of 20 years, the house will be completely remodeled, and arranged to seat 700.

Mayor-Pastor Puts Prayer In Sunday Film Programs

(Special to the Herald-World)

MATTOON, ILL., Dec. 11.—Every Sunday motion picture performance is preceded by a prayer in the mattoon new pictures here as a result of action by Rev. S. A. Hughart, mayor. Rev. Hughart approved a city ordinance permitting Sunday shows on the condition that a Sabbath performance be preceded by prayer. Mattoon had been without Sunday motion pictures for two years.
NEW BOOKINGS

Goo, assistant general sales manager, has completed a deal whereby Publix will play the eight Ken Maynard outdoor Westerns in the following territories: Oklahoma, Marion, Enid and Chickasha; in Texas, Abilene, Brownwood, Brownsville, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Harlingen, McAllen, Odessa, Waco and Wichita Falls.

He also has closed with Publix for "The Third Alarm" and "Extravagance for Home" in the South West and Southwest. The entire Tiffany Western product has been booked by the Fox Midwest circuit.

Columbia

The Cooperative Theatre Service Company has followed the deal of last week calling for showing of the "Superior Twenty" in 26 houses of the chain, with a second arrangement covering 20 additional theatres. This gives Columbia representation in 46 houses in the Detroit territory.

Among the houses in the deal are: in Detroit, The Grand-Victory, Dexter, Park, Frontenac, Kramer, Martha Washington, Olympic, New Home, Garden, Warfield, West End, Imperial, Graystone, West End, Pasadena, Crystal, Oakman and Coliseum; the Rael in Ann Arbor and Ritz in Muskegon are also included.

Big

Two Warner houses, the Gem in William- atie, Conn., and the Strand in Waverly, Mass., have booked this company's Westerns through Marcel Meckeburg of the World-Art Pictures of Boston.

Sheffield Exchange System of Portland, Oregon, has completed arrangements for the first series of six talking Westerners with Fox West Coast Theatres for showing in Vancouver, Washington.

Another Big 4 deal, with the East Texas Theatres Corporation, calls for the entire series of Westerns to be exhibited in the following towns: Beaumont, Port Arthur, Orange, Lufkin, Nacogdoches, Longview, Marshalland, Jacksonville.

Sono Art-World Wide

Four independent circles have booked the entire product of this company, in addition to Publix New England closing for two of the current specials in 32 territories, "Costello Case" and "Reno."

The four chains are: Midwest Theatres circuit, Monomad theatre, Roy Cooper circuit and cooperative films, and Top Theatres offices of Detroit. These deals cover a total of 26 houses.

The entire product also has been sold for first run at Worcester, Springfield and Fall River, Massachusetts.

Pathé

The Danz-Lukan circuit, known as Far West and cooperative films, has signed for theatres in Van Beuren product, released through Pathé, consisting of the Grand Tino Riche, Spotl, Aesop's Sound Fables and the Vagabond Adventure series.

John Danz and L. O. Lukan, formerly branch managers for First National, recently have acquired these theatres, which were operated by Universal.

Fitzpatrick

The FitzPatrick Traveltalks, created by James A. FitzPatrick, have been booked by the Paramount Publix chain for theatres throughout the country. This deal marks the second of this series bought by Publix.

Fifth Stench Bombing

Brings $1,000 Reward

By Fresno Commission

(Fresno, Calif., Dec. 11.—Fresno officially has declared war on the stench bomber who for the fifth time has planted bombs in the noonday Majestic theatres.

The City Commission has placed a $1,000 appropriation in the hands of the mayor for a private sleuthing to apprehend the vandal.

The Majestic is a second run theatre operated entirely by its three owners. The latest bombing was successfully perpetrated despite the vigilance of two policemen who had been stationed at the house.

Remodel Dayton Colonial

(Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 11.—An expenditure of more than $30,000 is being made for the remodeling of the RKO Colonial Theatre here. The daily performances are continuing uninterrupted while the remodeling goes on.

Lichtman Speaks

At Gathering of Eastern Salesman

(NY, Dec. 11.—At Lichtman, sales chief of United Artists, held a sales conference last Sunday, at which all sales managers and salesmen from Eastern territories were present. Lichtman noted the assertion of Samuel Goldwyn to the Art Cinemas production people at the beginning of a new era in the company's history.

The sales head spoke at both morning and afternoon sessions and Paul Berger, chief of the Eastern Division, also spoke at the later meeting of the day. Sales representatives from New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, New Haven, New Orleans, Atlanta, Charlotte and Canada attended.

Next Sunday Lichtman will address a similar group in Chicago.

Louisville Paper Thinks

U. S. Needs Dime Shows

And 25 Cent Haircuts

(Dec. 11.—Suggesting and urging that 10 cent shows be brought back to the theatre, the Herald Post in this city publishes an editorial in which it endeavors to prove that the country needs, if not nickelodene, then dime shows.

"As the purchasing power of the dollar increases," reads the argument, "so does the purchasing power of the dime. And so, if we are not back to the nickelodeon, we are by way of being promised a visualized Dime Drama. That is what the theatre needs."

James B. Brown, publisher of the Herald Post, was president of the Banco-Kentucky and the National Bank of Kentucky, institutions which failed in a crash November 17.

Must be a rhino—well, a big animal somewhere in the not too far distance, if expressions tell a story while hiding behind a tree. George Sidney and Charlie Murray appear in Universal's "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa."

A delightful study of Marjorie Rambeau, who has recently been signed by M.G.M., playing a role in "Min and Bill." She is now working in "Inspiration."

Stepping right into his uncle's shoes, but as yet they are a little too large for him. Mickey Daniel's nephew also plays an important role in the Hal Roach-M.G.M. Boy Friend's most recent comedy entitled "Baby Talk."

From the looks of all the nurses and doctors gathered about this incorrigible patient, "Going Wild" must be a most interesting study as well as being the title of First National's picture which stars Joe E. Brown. Lawrence Grey, on the left, finds it rather amusing, but Ona Munson and Laura Lee, who are peeking over shoulders, are wondering if a blazer can do that to anyone.

When picketing is a pleasure. We hear a lot about picketing, and if this is what is meant—well, it's O.K. Don Rader and Patsy O'Leary appear in the Educational-Mack Sennett comedy, entitled "Don't Bite Your Dentist."

Sono Art Moves to Get Juvenile Appeal In New Productions Exhibitors All Want More Child Films, Budd Rogers Says After Sales Tour (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—As a direct result of his recent seven weeks' tour of the Sono Art-World Wide exchanges throughout the country, Budd Rogers, sales director, has announced as a definite part of the production policy in the future, an effort to incorporate such material in pictures as will stimulate the interest of children.

"My talks and analytic discussions," said Rogers, "with all types of theatre operators, left me no other conclusion but that there is a crying need for screen stuff that has the children in mind as well as the grown-ups. On all sides, I was informed that there has been too much of static themes and situations since dialogue took the screen, and that the real "guts" in story and situation such as won all classes and ages to the silent movie, has been woefully lacking."

Rogers pointed out that since the exhibitor is closest to the public, he is in a better position to judge what the public wants in the way of pictures. "When exhibitors in different parts of the country are in single accord, it certainly must be so. And it's up to us, for the sake of good business, to capitalize on it."

He noted that the 10 Thrill-O-Dramas, the first of which "Swanne River," is now in production under the direction of George W. Weeks, will be made under the same policy.

Columbia Books 20 More Houses in Detroit Area (Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—Cooperative Theatre Service this week contracted Columbia's product for 20 of its theatres in addition to those already set in a deal contracted a few weeks ago covering the exhibition of Columbia's Superior 'Twenty and short subjects in 26 theatres of the chain.

The new deal gives the Columbia product representation in a total of 46 theatres in the Detroit area.

Plan Appeal After Court Upholds 150 Year Old London Law Against Sunday Pictures (Special to the Herald-World)

LONDON, Dec. 11.—By a decision of the High Court of Justice in a test case brought by London theatres and variety halls, which claimed equal rights with motion picture houses, it was declared that the motion picture theatre owners' licenses to open on Sunday were invalid under a 150-year-old Lord's Day observance act.

The London County Council, which issued the licenses, is planning an appeal, pending which the theatres will open as usual. Theatre managers in the English capital have called urgent meetings in an effort to avoid a loss which is estimated at $75,000 a year. Normally, some 200,000 people visit motion picture houses here each Sunday.

The possible penalty for Sunday opening is understood to be $1,000. One theatre organization made the statement that "It might be worth while for the movies to open and pay the fines inflicted. It would be cheaper than paying all the profits to charity."

Racine Exhibitors Want More Time; Operators Say No! Wage Question Settled But Suburbans Stay Closed on Time Problem (Special to the Herald-World)

RACINE, WIS., Dec. 11.—Although a wage settlement has been arrived at, following a conference here between theatre managers, projectionists and Mayor William Armstrong, it is doubtful whether the neighborhood theatres now in dispute with the union will respond before Christmas eve.

The remaining stumbling block is the so-called "warming up time" issue. Under the former agreement, the operators in the downtown houses were to be at their stations with machines ready to operate 15 minutes before the time for the beginning of the picture. Under the new agreement, the managers of the downtown theatres seek an extension of that time to a half hour for each of the two shifts.

The operators maintain that increasing the hours by 15 minutes would practically amount to a reduction in their pay. If this difficulty cannot be ironed out, the theatres will reopen December 13. Otherwise they will continue to remain closed indefinitely.

Under the new wage scale agreement, the operators will receive $45 a week for the 33-hour schedule, which is the minimum. This means a reduction from $50 a week for that time or a little more than nine per cent, and applies only to the neighborhood houses. Operators in the downtown theatres are not being cut.

"Atlantic" Among First Of British Pictures to Be Handled by Columbia (Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Following the recent arrangement whereby Columbia is releasing the pictures of British International for general distribution in this country, it was announced that the first film to be handled will be "Atlantic," "Young Woodley" and "Murder," all previously shown at the Columbia theatres.

Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, commenting on the deal, expressed the belief that there is an obvious demand in this country for pictures made in typical English surroundings. From the commercial angle, he said, it gives the English manufacturers an opportunity to display their wares before the American public, as is done with American products in exported films.

Brandt also points out that this will bring about a spirit of reciprocation, with the English producers receiving some measure of return on the investment involved in the making of these pictures.

Chevalier Film Shown At Opening of Theatre In Dutch East Indies

When the Capitol theatre in Soekakoeeni, on the island of Java, opened, under the direction of Johnny Duell, the first talking picture to be shown at the theatre was Paramount's "Innocents of Paris," featuring Maurice Chevalier. According to the Bude, a daily newspaper in this territory, the programme was well received and patrons attending seemed to be-wholly favorable to the house. It is a 500 seat theatre and is equipped with Du-fon sound apparatus.
E. V. Richards Will Organize Chain for Publix in the South

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 11.—E. V. Richards, president of Stagner Theatres, Inc., has been named to organize and operate a circuit of houses in this territory to be affiliated with Paramount Publix.

It is understood that Richards will also take charge of a number of theatres in small towns which Paramount Publix has been operating.

Third Theatre Bombing Within Fortnight Does $100 Damage in Akron

AKRON, OHIO, Dec. 11.—The third attack on neighborhood theatres within two weeks occurred early Monday morning when an explosive was thrown into the rear of the Rialto theatre, at Kenmore, a suburb. The blast broke a number of windows in the building and nearby structures, but the damage to the theatre itself was slight, police estimating the loss at $100. No one was injured.

High Court Reverses Decision; Picketing Of Regent Is Banned

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, Dec. 11.—The Court of Appeals has restrained the Motion Picture Operators' Union from picketing the Regent Theatre. The picketing is the result of the theatre owners doing their own work and employing no union labor. The Canton Pleas court found in favor of the union, but the higher court reversed the decision.

Doorman Forced to Help Rob Seattle Theatre in Third of Holdup Series

SEATTLE, Dec. 11.—Forcing the doorman to accompany them to the box office of the Neptune theatre, a bandit held up Dorothy Akin, cashier, took $200 and escaped through the rear exit. This is the third of a series of theatre holdups in the uptown district of the city.

Educational Film on Investments Is Latest

The Burton Holmes studios, Chicago, claims the distinction of being the first concerns to produce an educational film dealing with the investment field. The picture, called "An Investment in American Prosperity," was given its first showing before a group of investment bankers at the Tavern Club.

In story form, the film relates the growth and progress of America's leading corporations. The importance of diversification in investment is emphasized.

Plans are being made to place the picture at the disposal of 800 investment houses and banking institutions throughout the country, which will arrange local guest showings.

"All Quiet" Is Attack on War Only, Laemmle Tells Germany

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—All Quiet on the Western Front" has done more to establish good will toward the German people than any other factor since armistice—Orders Original Version Shown Officials

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Supreme Film Censorship Board, the censor body of Germany, has banned the showing of Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front" throughout the country, according to cable advice.

The board claimed, in explaining its decision, that the film "damaged Germany's reputation."

The first showing of the picture was seized upon by the German fascists as a trumped-up reason for starting a demonstration in which snakes, white mice and stench bombs were used to force a closing of the performance without theater accident.

The demonstration was led by Joseph Goebbels, Reichstag deputy and Berlin fascist chief, with von Harnisch, Associated Press. Another news story declared that President Von Hindenburg has been asked to bar further showings in Germany, the fascists charging the picture is "nationalistic."

Laemmle in his statement, issued from California, calls attention to "the hue and cry which has been raised by the assertion in Germany that the German censors cut out portions of 'All Quiet on the Western Front' before showing in Germany."

Orders Original Version Shown

He adds that as a result he has cabled Universal's representative in Germany to "show to the German ministers of state and police officials, the official version of the picture which was shown in New York, in London, in Canada, Australia and throughout the world."

"It certainly was no intention of ours to cut or distort any portion of this picture," Laemmle states.

"I am amazed that 'All Quiet on the Western Front' has been threatened with hostility and misunderstanding in a country that has benefited most from the world war. Germany has done more to establish good will toward the German people than any factor since the Armistice," wrote Laemmle.

"The film carried this human story to millions. World leaders have hailed it and the international press has unanimously called it the finest human document of the war. German-American people and German officials in this country praised it and the German-language newspapers in America have been among the most enthusiastic of all the newspapers who have given this film some coverage. The German government has regarded it as anti-German or anything but complimentary to the German soldiers and the German people."

"I regard this film as the outstanding accomplishment of my twenty-five years in the motion picture business. Only a few days after this film was voted the Gold Award as the finest picture of the year by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences consisting of 600 of the leading producers, actors, directors and technicians of American films."

Proud to Have Germany See It

"I am proud to have the German people see it; I am proud to have them see it as the rest of the world saw it, too. No thinking man can possibly consider it an attack on the German people. It isn't an attack on any people or on anything except war itself. The picture indicates its nation, no individuals, but it records an international human experience that I am sure will have an effect on the future conduct of mankind."

"I am convinced that the good sense of the German people will not permit unfair treatment of this film, which has done so much for their best interests."

United Artists Affiliate Takes Oakland House

OAKLAND, CAL., Dec. 11.—The Duf-Win, a theatre showing dramatic stock productions, has been taken over by American Theatres, Ltd., affiliated with United Artists. The house has changed its policy to straight pictures and will operate under the name of the Roxy theatre. 'Whoopee' was the opening attraction.

Bandit Takes $150 From Cashier of Chicago House

A lone bandit ambled up to the window of the box office at the Madlin theatre and handed a note to the cashier which read: "Get me the money. Don't holler." He enforced his demand by displaying a revolver, and he received a sheaf of bills and about $20 in silver. He rejected the coins, and escaped.

Movietone News Wins Advantageous Position Overseas: Talley

Four Major Foreign Organizations Established by Fox in Past Year, Says Executive—Special Editions Now Total 37 a Week

(New to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Truman H. Talley, general manager of Fox Movietone News, reviewing the recent opening of newsreel theatres in the principal cities of Europe similar to the Embassy in New York, says that the Fox newsreel has won a very advantageous position in the foreign market.

Within the past year, Talley, working closely with Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager of Fox Film Corporation, has established four major foreign Movietone organizations and has brought the special foreign editions of Movietone News to the total of 37 each week. Furthermore, he has arranged for additional newsreel theatre openings in various cities of the world. The establishment of these theatres is expected to be announced soon.

One year ago was started the British Movietone News in London, followed four months later by the Fox Actualités Parals in Paris for continental circulation. Then the London Newsreel theatre was opened to a success equal to that of the Embassy in New York.

The latest of these European organizations to be established by Talley was the Fox Tonende Wochenschau, or German Movietone News, which was inaugurated almost simultaneously with its Australian counterpart in Sydney.

Eight Sound Camera Units

For each of the four centers it was necessary to develop individual production units, editorial offices and manufacturing plants. Eight sound camera units, scattered over England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, submit negative to the special editorial office for cutting, editing and printing.

From each of these centers, London, Paris, Berlin and Sydney, as well as New York, editions are made up for four surrounding foreign countries, with the necessity in each case of considering carefully local prejudices, customs and the like.

Talley particularly pointed out the importance of editing in view of the new spirit of nationalism, which is the characteristic of most peoples today. He expressed his belief that the advantageous position attained by Fox in this field is due in large measure to the great care with which subjects are edited to meet differing national requirements.

In New York reels are prepared for Canada, Philippine Islands (with Spanish and English titles), Cuba, Argentina, both with the double titles, and Brazil, in English and Portuguese. The general edition is made up with titles in English, Japanese and Chinese, and the general South American issue in English, Spanish and Portuguese.

Considered Native Institution

The Paris office issues editions to Switzerland, Greece, Turkey, the Arabic-speaking countries, Morocco, Rumania, Spain, and Italy. A weekly French magazine is also published from the Paris center.

From Berlin are distributed special editions to Holland, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Yugoslavia, all in the native languages, as well as to Norway, Sweden, Denmark and the Dutch East Indies. In addition the Berlin office supplies edition with English and German titles, for showing on the liners of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company.

Practically every theatre in Great Britain, it is said, which is wired for sound, shows either the British Movietone newsreel or a shorter edition known as the British Movietone Gazette. In London are made up the reels for India and South Africa.

According to Talley, there is the fact that the newsreel has its origin in this country; it is looked upon as a native institution by the people of all countries where editions are shown.

Columbia Starts
8 More Features; 7 Specials Finished

(Hollywood, Dec. 11.—Following the completion of seven specials, the making of which created a new record at the Columbia West Coast studios, eight more features are scheduled to go into production very shortly.

Included in the forthcoming group are: "The Last Parade," post war story to be directed by Edward Sedgwick; "The Flood," the direction of which will be handled by James Tinling; the screen version of the Broadway theatre success, "Subway Express," under Fred Newmeyer; Augustus Thomas' stage play, "Arizona;" an Evelyn Brent vehicle currently titled, "The Desert Damsel;" "The Miracle Woman," with Barbara Stanwyck; "Vivre's Bed;" and "Joan of Arc," a Buck Jones feature, which will go into production as soon as Jones completed his present work in "Desert Vengeance.

Columbia writers who are now engaged in the preparation of scripts for the various films are Marion Orth, John T. Neville, Dorothy Howell, and Stuart Anthony.

El Brendel Ought To Enjoy This One

(Special to the Herald-World)

PORTLAND, Dec. 11.—It happened during the daily rush at the Fox Broadway theatre in Portland—just at the dead-line between the 35c and 35c price change—a sweet young thing tripped up to the handsome and statler door executive, and ding attractively, asked "What is the Feature, Please?"

"JUST IMAGINE," the doorman answered in his usual oblliging way, and with a merry twinkle in his brown eyes.

"Oh-h" exclaimed the "S. Y. T." blushing slightly, "I guess I'll go in and see El Brendel and Company, instead."

"Shipwreck" Kelly, famed flagpole sitter, has been perched atop the flagpole of the Paramount Hotel building in town and is creating a near sensation. He's been living up there for the past week, and claims he will remain as a reminder all after Christmas. Rent is low but the location is high, and the steam heat isn't so good, either. The latest kick in the bank is the corner of Broadway and 40th street with field and opera glasses, selling looks at a nickel or a dime per. One had offered "money back" if you brought a man who is usually parked around 42nd street and Bryant Park with the telescope for plane-watching sights, but is back on 46th and is selling telescopic views of "Shipwreck" Kelly. Talk about the height of importance!
Exhibitors Watch Copyright Suit Against Nebraska House

Island Theatre Facing Joint Action by American Society, Remick
And Berlin Companies Charging Use of Two Songs in Illegal Manner—Damages Totalling $500 Are Asked

(Special to the Herald-World)

OMAHA, Dec. 11.—Nebraska theatre managers are taking much interest in a damage suit charging infringement of copyright and instituted a few days ago in Grand Island, Nebraska, against the Island Theatre corporation, which owns and until a few days ago operated the Island theatre. Infringement is charged in two instances by three organizations which jointly have filed the suit in federal court. Plaintiffs named in the petition are Gene Buck, as president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; Remick Music Corporation, and Irving Berlin, Inc.

In the past few months, it is charged in the petition, the Island Theatre exhibited pictures in which copyright, "Nagasaki," a Remick publication, and "Weary River," published by the Berlin company, were used in a similar manner in respect to copyright statutes.

Harry Warren and Mort Dixon were named as the authors of "Nagasaki," while Grant Clarke and Louis Silvers were named as authors of "Weary River." Judgment of not less than $250 in each instance, or a total of not less than $500, is asked by the plaintiffs.

Local theatre men said the Island was rating at 500 seating capacity, making the tax $50 a year.

Universal Will Have Four
On Broadway in Next
3 Weeks; 9 This Season

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Four Universal pictures have been booked for Broadway runs within the next three weeks, including the new special, "Free Love," opening on December 12 at the Roxy. The others are "The Boudoir Diplomat" at the Globe, "See America Thirst," also for the Globe, following "Boudoir Diplomat" and "The Cohens and the Coxes" following Slim Summerville comedy at the same house. These bookings continue Universal's answer to the "Goldwyn purchasing "Street Scene" for New U A Film Group

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—"Street Scene," 1929 Pulitzer prize winner, will be the first of Samuel Goldwyn's group of new productions for United Artists. This play played 600 performances on Broadway, and it is understood that it has been translated into many foreign languages

Incidental to acquiring the screen rights to this play, Goldwyn has arranged for the lease of the Gaity theatre, the completion of negotiations for which delayed his sailing for Europe by two days. While on the continent, he will select for new screen material and personalities.

Indicted, But Money and Culprit Are Still Missing

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 11.—An indictment was returned by the Jefferson County Grand Jury, Louisville, Dec. 8, against William C. Tarrant, former employe of the Blake Amusement Company, operators of the Savoy moving picture theatre, for the conversion of $386.57 on November 28, when the money had been in his care for deposit at a bank. Tarrant and the deposit disappeared, and no trace has been found of either.

It Sure Is A Tough Life

ALBANY, Dec. 11.—Every time that George Roberts, now of Brooklyn, N. Y., but who formerly ran a motion picture theatre in Albany, N. Y., has sought a new trial in connection with an action brought against him by an Albany resident who felt Roberts' theatre some years ago, there has been a higher verdict awarded to the plaintiff. That is enough, but now he has been denied a motion to appeal the matter to the Court of Appeals, the last judgment in favor of the injured man being for the sum of $4,000. Naturally, Roberts has just about decided to pay the judgment.

Stanley Company
Donates House for Jobless Benefits

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—The Stanley Theatre Company has donated use of the Metropolitan Opera House for three benefit programs for the city's unemployed to be given December 30, 31 and January 1. Proceeds will go to the unemployment fund.

Stage stars and musicians from theatres of the city will appear on the programs. Motion pictures will also be included in the performance.

At Darby, a suburb of this city, a similar project has recently been carried out, despite protests of the clergy and a threatened injunction.

The Collingdale G. O. P. Club Welfare Association sponsored the Darby benefit program, which was given Sunday, December 7. Three theatres, in cooperation with local charity organizations, sponsored the show. More than 1,800 attended.

Ready to Sign 1931 Orchestra Pact for San Francisco Exhibitors and Musicians

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—Downtown theatres and the Musicians Union are expected to sign a new contract here by the end of this month. The new contracts will, it is understood, provide for orchestras in all houses running stage shows.

Mortimer Singo, a special representative of the RKO interests here from New York, is dividing his time between this city and Seattle, where new contracts are also being negotiated for with the musicians.

Final agreement will probably be reached with N. A. Greenbaum, secretary of the local Musicians' Union, returns from New York late this week.

The new contract sought by theatre interests is similar to those now in effect in other parts of the country. It would provide that any house which abandons its stage presentation will also be entitled to dispense with the orchestra.
This department does not attempt to predict the public's reactions to pictures. It does, instead, present detailed and accurate information on product, together with the frank and honest opinion of the reporter.

THE ROYAL BED
DIRECTOR-ACTOR HERO!

BULGING like a Christmas stocking with humor, "The Royal Bed" is completed, cut, previewed and ready for distribution. There is nothing in this picture that has been left undone. It is one of the cleverest things Radio Pictures ever has turned out.

Everybody connected with the making of the picture apparently has borne his share of responsibility for the success of a production made from a play that could have been an only fair program picture but is in fact in a superlative class. It is of program length.

The star is likewise the director. He has directed three others in which he has played but never with the success of this one. The remainder of the cast have had to stay on their toes to keep him from stealing the picture by his ingenuity.

The story and the acting of the others come in for their share of the glory. In addition to the acting of Sherman there is the acting of Nance O'Neill. Every movement and syllable attracts attention and praise. She is the queen, and she deserves it.

Everywhere connected with the making of the picture apparently has borne his share of responsibility for the success of a production made from a stage play that could have been an only fair program picture but is in fact in a superlative class. It is of program length.

The star is likewise the director. He has directed three others in which he has played but never with the success of this one. The remainder of the cast have had to stay on their toes to keep him from stealing the picture by his ingenuity.

Mary Astor is again as good as she was in "Holiday." She is much more adorable in her part, and (incidentally) has lost numerous pounds.

Robert Warwick is back on the screen. He returns to it in armor as one of the most menacing villains you ever saw.

Anthony Bushell deserves a paragraph for his part as the young romantic lover. He is impressive and convincing in his role.

But to get back to Sherman. He shows you what a king does in these days in Europe. He plays checkers with the butler and gardens in his buttonhole. He has an everlasting sense of humor that makes him the kind of king his people love. By his wit and diplomacy he settles a revolution that would have ruined his kingdom. He breaks up a projected marriage between the princess and a neighborhood prince by suddenly marrying her to the man of her heart.

It's high class comedy throughout and is as clean as a pin.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

WAY DOWN SOUTH

Tiffany—Sound

Creatures and his band do a variety of southern songs with flashes illustrating the scenes. At the conclusion of the short the band is again shown, for the last number. The illustrative scenes flash by too quickly for the audi-tence to grasp their significance in connection with the music, but the band is quite capable.

Running time, 9 minutes.

THE PRINCESS AND THE PLUMBER

This is light screen fare and the lines are clever, the story is amusing, and the performances of the featured players in particular are good and in keeping with the character of the story.

When the young plumbing engineer comes from Venice, where he is employed in the plumbing concern of which his father is vice president, he meets the princess and tells her he is a duke. She discovers him the next day fixing the radiators and is sadly disillusioned. H. B. Warner, who is very good as the prince, leases the castle to a rich American, who is none other than Bert Roach. The millionaire arrives while the prince is in Paris, and takes possession with two friends. In an effort to make some much needed money the prince writes a threatening letter to the happy-go-lucky American moneyman, in which he claims the daughter has been compromised and a marriage must take place.

When the prince arrives he mistakes the young plumber for the millionaire and without listening to any explanation, forces an immediate marriage. The pair fly away in an airplane in the concluding sequence, and the prince turns to find that the real fish he was after is standing beside him. Of course, the princess was in love with the plumber all the time.

The lightness and the humorous touch with which the whole narrative (a Saturday Evening Post story) is handled for the screen, should make it welcome to any motion picture audience.

Charles Rogers plays the young plumber, who calls himself in his introduction to the princess, the Duke of Mamaronack. He is highly capable, and teams up well with little Maureen O'Sullivan, who is the attractive princess. H. B. Warner is as usually excellent, as the prince who needs money more than anything else. Bert Roach is most amusing in the role of the wealthy American, who is used to satirize the conception of the rich North American splurgling in Europe.

The best comedy in an already humorous film is contributed by Joseph Cawthorne. In this small, unknown principalcy which exists only in the author's imagination, Cawthorne is the man who is everything from the postmaster to the chief game keeper of the prince's preserves. His trick of raising his hat every time he mentions the word "prince" is amusing and sets the audience off into yelps of laughter each time.

The direction is clever and excellent throughout, with the whole film being aided greatly by some fine scenic photography of wooded hills and mountain backgrounds which are particularly good.—Charles S. Aronson, New York City.

SIN SHIP

Radio Pictures has retitled "In Sheep's Clothing" to "The Sin Ship" and has only this week got the picture completely and finally cut in shape for distribution. It has been previewed many times and many reports on it
EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

THE COMMAND PERFORMANCE

WALTER LANG has brought "The Command Performance" to the screen under the James Cruze, Inc., banner. That is to say that he has been responsible for the direction of it. It is translated from a stage play that has been highly successful. It is a piece of work that has a very creditable cast of actors and actresses, well chosen and well played. It has many fine things to its credit. Neil Hamilton is flawless. He acts to thorough satisfaction. He is confronted with the difficult problem of a two role and does admirably. One of his characteristics is that of a statesman who is far out for the hand of a beautiful princess.

That ever present menace of death threatens the lives of our leaders and an exalted one first when he is accused of assault and battery and sentenced to exile and death in the salt mines. The last act of the play is the leader's first meeting with his wife and the fact that he is ordered to impersonate the prince and woo the fair Katrinas, whose every suitor had met death by "a strange accident."

The Command's situations and many good comedy lines. Albert Gran is wholesome funny enough for any audience. The staging and costuming of the picture is

HEADIN' NORTH

"HEADIN' NORTH" is entertaining even if it falls short of being a gripping talking picture. It involves the efforts of Bob Steele, an actor, to get his chance in the world. He is an honest young man. Steele, with Barry Murdock, cast as his pal, evade the United States' laws in an effort to find the supposedly indispensable gambler who cast the shadow on him and sent him to jail.

They steal the clothes of two actors and do what the actors were supposed to do in a dance hall and gambling house. There is a pretty good fight between Steele and the gambler. Steele eventually is cleared, and all ends well.

Comment at the Glendale theatre, where the picture was previewed, was made that, while the various running scenes were supposed to be laid in different sections of the west, the backgrounds always were. There is enough action to hold interest throughout. There are spots which do not seem wholly real, but, out-and-out western from start to finish.

Musical effects are brought in with the dance hall, and there are four songs.

Barbara Luddy, an able actress, does not have the situations to prove her ability. A well instructed spectator in the dance hall offers good comedy effect. —Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

THE BOUDOIR DIPLOMAT

This screen adaptation of the stage play of Rudolf Lothar and Fritz Gottwald, has appeared, and is used from the original material for film purposes. Even to the settings, the stage atmosphere seems to cling closely in the picture. With the exception of a sequence or two shore interiors, practically the entire story is confined to two settings, one the interior of the Montevideo embassy in Lavaria, and the other the room of Baron Valmi, handsome young attaché, whose principal work seems to be the conclusion of negotiations of state by means of a certain influence exerted upon the wives of officials.

Ian Keith succeeds admirably as the bache- lor Lothar, and Betty Compson, who is given the boudoir diplomacy assignment relating to the ratification of a treaty, by the ambassador, just after he has become engaged, phme is both manly and man, true to story and the affairs of the young attaché. The first is the wife of the ambassador, the second, the wife of the minister of war of Lavaria, and the third the girl to whom Valmi is engaged.

He skips in attentions from one to the other at the ambassador's orders, finally leaving a pair to the strong in the feeling that his sud- den marriage and his intention of taking the post of ambassador to Peru, since Peru is as far away from the scene of his liaisons as he can conveniently reach.

This is throughout one of the most excellent comedy dramas, particularly suitable for a society comedy stage as it is now played. The dialog, which was adapted for the screen by Benjamin Glazer, fairly sparkles, with Koster and Bial responsible for the cleverly put-together in which it is put across, due partly to the polished and self confident appearance he conveys in the role. The dialog, which must necessarily take the plush tone of the stage to cause the film to dram somewhat in the earlier parts of the picture, through lack of pace, but this improves as the story progresses.

Women should enjoy the variety of costumes worn by the three feminine players, since the film has some occasional apparel almost like a fashion review. Betty Compson, Mary Duncan and Jeannette Loff, as the ambassador's wife, the war minister's wife and the fiancee of the military attaché are all admirably depicted in their parts, and each one knows how to ex- hibit the clothes she wears. Jeannette Loff, as the delicate and slightly self conscious, am- bitiously minor part, appearing in only a few sequences. Betty Compson does perhaps the most finished work of the three.

Lawrence Grant, as the attaché, acts the part with a proper sense of the position he is supposed to occupy; Lionel Belmore as the attaché, is not quite self important until he is alone with his wife, is good, and Andre Beranger as the lop-sided secretary of Valmi, counterbalanced with a touch of humor with his affected speech and peculiar facial expressions.

The direction of Malcolm St. Clair is ex- cellent. Photography is clear and uniformly good. This film is literally stage on screen, and by reason of an amusing situation, clever dialog and the performances of the principal players, is at least excellent entertainment.

—Charles S. Aronson, New York City.
THE THIRD ALARM
ACTION! Produced and distributed by Tiffany, Director, Emory Johnson. Dialog and adaptation by Frances Hylan and Jack Nattesford. Supervision, G. Cohn. Cameraman, Max DuPont. Sound Engineer, Buddy Myers. Cast: Anita Louise, James Hall, Jean Hersholt, Hobart Bosworth, Paul Hurst, George Billings, Mary Doran.

Plenty of action and suspense toward the close of "The Third Alarm," done by Tiffany, puts it in the thriller class. It also boasts of good acting and excellent sound and photography. The sound recording is exceptional, particularly of the sirens and roaring motors during some of the fire scenes.

The cast was well chosen. Hobart Bosworth and Jean Hersholt, who have only small roles, are both convincing and logical in reading their lines. Anita Louise and Mary Doran not only dress up the picture but give capable portrayals as well. Hall is good, and Paul Hurst, with his inevitably comic lines, gets across a couple of laughs which shakes the house.

The story has the fire department of a large city as its background. Anita Louise's father is killed fighting the fire, and Hurst and Hall are sent to adopt her and her little brother, Georgie Billings. Both Hurst and Hall decide to marry so that their adoption can be made possible. In the end, Anita Louise does up her hair and captures Hall at the expense of Miss Doran.

On one occasion, Georgie Billings and Anita Louise escape from the orphanage, are returned later, and are locked in their rooms.

While they and other children are locked in fire starts. An elevator plunges to the bottom of its shaft after the orphanage has been unlocked, the doors and they are trapped in rising water. The sound and photography at this point are exceptional.

Frances Hylan and Jack Nattesford, who prepared the adaptation and dialog, did excellent work with the lines which are logical, snappy and suggestive. Dialogue is highly humorous.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

SCARLET PAGES

This picture is another example of the fact that when stage plays are transferred to the screen, despite excellent story material, good dialog and fine performances by featured players as in this case, the action necessarily seems to be slowed to a considerable extent.

This is a picture, which is such an adaptation, however, makes a most effective screen presentation, due principally to the work of Elsie Ferguson as the woman lawyer, who defends a girl on trial over the murder of her father, and wins her acquittal after permitting disclosure of the fact, unknown to herself up to then, that the young girl is the daughter she had left at a foundling home years before.

Her opponent in the case is the district attorney, who is in love with her, whose circumstance adds greatly to the effectiveness of the courtroom scene. This scene though prolonged perhaps to a rather unnecessary length, is nevertheless striking and should be well received.

Ray Enright has done a very fine piece of work in the direction, bringing out the highly dramatic sequences with a masterly touch. There hardly seems to be a weak spot in a cast, which is uniformly excellent. Marian Nixon does very well as the young girl accused of the murder, with Grant Withers, the very able young star, in a comparatively minor part, but nevertheless good.

John Halliday plays the district attorney, and does his best work in the courtroom sequence, when he exerts every effort to convict the girl. The high point in a rather tense drama is this same scene, where Miss Ferguson in particular reaches a real height of dramatic acting when she delivers an appeal to the jury for the girl's life, which reminds one of the Porta role in "The Merchant of Venice." The audience was notably tense during the progress of this scene and, Stroud. There is little comedy relief in any stage of the picture, and it might have been welcome at certain times.

Photography is good, with several especially fine shots of the courtroom during the progress of the trial.

Marian Nixon makes a very appealing figure throughout the film, playing her role with a sincerity and earnestness which is attractive. Others in the cast, including DeWitt Jennings, as the trial judge, William Davidson as a play promoter involved in the case, Willard Mack in the part of the girl's foster father, and Charlotte Walker as the mother by adoption, are all capable in their roles.

This is not a children's picture, but the universal mother appeal which forms the major theme of the film, combined with the performances especially of Elsie Ferguson, Halliday and Marion Nixon, should carry the production a long way.—Charles S. Armour, New York City.

AUDIO REVIEW—NO. 48
Pathé—Sound
The kick in this number of the Audio Review is the showing of a comedy made in England some 25 years ago and featuring the devastating effects of a sneeze. This comedy was patterned after the first close-up ever made by Thomas Edison in 1893, also of the nasal explosion. Sound has been introduced to add to the reality. The novelty of the projection and the actions of the players should prove amusing and interesting to modern motion picture audiences. "Royal Home Sweet Home" is a camera record of some of the most famous of the French castles and châteaux occupied by kings in a bygone era. The background scenes are beautiful and the buildings themselves are architectural masterpieces, lovely by every photograph. "The Rollickers," well known radio quartet, render "In the Silence of the Night." This is said to be the first time the famous Rachmaninoff composition has been sung by a quartet. The voices are good and the recording excellent. This ranks as an interesting review.—Running time, 9 minutes.

THE DAWN TRAIL

COLUMBIA has in "The Dawn Trail" a picture that has been made with the director's eye focused on "pulse-pounding." His knowledge of theatre fare is apparent. Buck Jones and his splendid horse Silver do some cracking acting and the picture is full of exciting borsen-man feats.

The story theme is a familiar one—love versus duty. Jones, as the sheriff, must decide between loving the girl he has sworn to arrest, her brother for murder. Charles Morton as the weak brother gives a good portrayal.

The fighting and the cattle-herding for water provides the cause for some thrilling action and good dramatic situations. There are instances when one feels that a letdown could be remedied by minor cutting.

The treatment of the story is well done by Christy Cabanne. The scene wherein the hero wins his own son is one of the dramatic highlights.

The picture builds to a thrilling anteclimax in the cattle stampede from which Jones and the girl narrowly escape.

Hank Mann offers some amusing comedy and much of it could be seen throughout the picture. Miriam Seagar is attractive as the heroine but seemed conscious of her lines.

The scenic backgrounds are worthy of special commendation. Altogether this is a fine example of what fast action and camera work can do to enhance entertainment value.—Louise Allen, Hollywood.

DE WOOLD'S CHAMPEEN
Paul Hurst Comedy
Tiffany—Talking
Frank Strayer directs Paul Hurst in this comedy short. The latter is a stage fighter, who is framed by his manager to fight the real champion at a society benefit. Accidentally, the latter knocks out the champion when the former champion has arranged for a return bout to correct the error through the influence of his sweetheart, who up to this point thought he could be, the champ makes the mistake of calling Hurst a "paloeks." Hurst proceeds to mop up the place for a strong finish to the comedy. Nita Naldi, Alton Terry, and Neigh are included in the support. This is fair entertainment—Running time, 20 minutes.

STONE AGE STUNTS
An Amateur Sound Fable
Pathé—Sound
This fable has originality, featuring the cave-man mouse and numerous prehistoric animal-drawn in the amusing and peculiar manner of the animated. A jazz band which, in a rocky eave, plays on instruments fashioned of bone and uses various instruments as other instruments, is a novelty. The elephant fire company members use their trunks for hose lines and the dinosaur says ‘no’ when they are washed out in the flood.—Running time, 7 minutes.

VOICE OF HOLLYWOOD NO. 23

Tiffany—Talking

This is an entry number of the S-T-A-R series, with Sammy Cohen as the genial and amusing master of ceremonies. A number of stars make their brief appearances, including Mickey McGuire and his gang. The Tiffany Chimps have their turn in the control room of the supposed station, and their antics and expressions are made amusing. Very good and should be a popular short.—Running time, 8 minutes.

PICKIN’ COTTON

Tiffany—Sound

The Forbes Randolph Kentucky Jubilee Singers are featured in this, rendering a number of southern melodies in effective style. They include several of the negro spirituals. Exclusively southern, the music is of excellent quality and would be as good as could be desired.—Running time, 9 minutes.

SLAVE DAYS

Tiffany—Sound

The Kentucky Jubilee Singers under Forbes Randolph in another of the southern song group. There are effective settings as a background and the numbers are of high moral tone. Again they sing spirituals and old popular southern airs in excellent voice. A good short. —Running time, 9 minutes.

Talking Pictures Will Never Kill Legitimate, Say These Four People

Seattle Citizens Say Personal Appeal Of Stage Will Keep It Alive

(Special to the Herald-World)

SEATTLE, Dec. 11.—That talking pictures are making inroads upon the legitimate stage but that they will never entirely supplant it was the opinion expressed by four prominent citizens to a representative of EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD. Following are their statements:

Mrs. G. E. McKercher, president of the Seattle Council of the Parent Teachers Association— "Our organization is, of course, interested in the welfare of the entire audience. The junior's special edition of the talking picture is not yet produced. But while there are no vivid recollections of the legitimate theaters producing plays designed for children, I do not think the 'talkies' will kill the stage."

Stage Has Glamor, He Says

Charles W. Hanlock, hotel operator—"I do not believe the talking picture can ever completely supplant the legitimate stage. Although this new form of entertainment shows a continued improvement, the romance and personal appeal of the legitimate stage can never be duplicated in pictures."

Zita Dillon, radio announcer and entertainer—"Legitimate drama will always appeal to audiences of discriminating tastes, if only from the aspect that it is a two-dimensional medium which cannot mirror life truly. Granting that the screen offers more scope for spectacles, the stage is still the better medium for voices and pantomime."

Films Have Made Inroads

J. Orrin Vining, attorney—"Without a doubt the 'talkies' have made serious inroads into the productions of the legitimate stage. However, I believe the American theatre going public still keenly enjoys seeing a person as well as hearing the stars of the legitimate stage. The 'talkies' will never wholly replace the spoken drama."

Know Your Exchange Managers

CHARLES L. WALKER, manager of the Fox branch at Salt Lake City, has established something of a record for himself in that all thirteen of his years in the industry have been in the service of the one company. Walker entered the employ of Fox Film Corporation in October of 1917. At that time his introduction to the business was as shipper. From that position he went through a series of promotions and in ten years had the experience of working in every department of the branch office at Salt Lake City.

In April, 1927, he was selected for the position of manager of the exchange, a position that he has held since.

C. L. Walker

A. N. SCHMITZ, managing R.K.O. of Milwaukee branch, was born in Milwaukee, July 22, 1890. His early business interest was in show printing, from which he entered the sales division of Ford Motor Company. Soon afterward he went into the motion picture field, first with Ludwig Films and Famous Players. Becoming associated with Film Booking Offices of America in 1925, he was made a sales representative in the southern territory.

Later Schmitz was transferred to the Milwaukee territory and given the job of handling special assignments. Soon after his transfer to the home town of Milwaukee, there came the amalgamation which brought about the new R.K.O. organization. This resulted in 1928 in the appointment of Schmitz as Milwaukee branch manager. He continued to hold these positions.

A. N. Schmitz

C. W. STOMBAUGH, branch manager for Pathe at Washington, D. C., has been in the motion picture business for 23 years. He started with the Pittsburgh Caledium, Light and Film Company of Omaha, Nebraska, in 1907, and continued in the service of the company when that company was taken over by the General Film Corporation. But he left General Film in 1911 and went to Universal. One year with Universal and he returned to General Film Company.

Next he joined Standard Film Company but was with this concern for only one year, 1917 to 1918.

It was in 1918 that Stombaugh became Pathe branch manager at Omaha. This year he was transferred to the national capital, following a record of twelve years of continuous service since the Omaha appointment.

C. W. Stombaugh

REALART Pictures Corporation was the starting point for J. S. Hommel, who now is in charge of the Denver branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Hommel began with Realart as a booker in November, 1919. He was successively booker, salesman and then branch manager until Paramount took over the company.

Leaving that connection, Hommel went with Select Pictures Corporation and from Select to Producers Distributing Corporation as branch manager at Denver. After two years with PDC he resigned to enter the exhibition field but he foresaw that in May, 1927, to become a salesman for MGM out of the Denver office.

J. S. Hommel

J. ROBERT SMITH, branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at New Haven, had varied experience since he was graduated from Cornell in 1911 with a bachelor of arts degree and three years later as a bachelor of science. Since then he has been on the faculty of the University of Wisconsin, in the U. S. Bureau of Markets in Army service, and in business for himself before linking his activities with the motion picture business.

He was assistant professor in economics at Wisconsin "U" in 1915, in the Bureau of Markets of the U. S. Department of Agriculture from 1916 to 1917, and a captain in the Quartermaster Corps, Subsistence Division, from 1917 to 1919.

Smith joined MGM as a salesman in Buffalo, and then went to Boston in 1926. Successively he led him to the manager's post at New Haven.

J. R. Smith

WARD E. SCOTT, branch manager for Fox at Kansas City, had "booking" experience before he entered the film business but that was in the wholesale book and stationery field. Then in 1913 he joined Mutual Film Corporation in Denver. He had served in every department, when two years later, he was promoted to manager. He continued as manager for Mutual until 1917 when he resigned and became Pathe manager in Denver.

After three years with Pathe, Scott became associated with Fox as manager of the Denver office. The last ten years have seen him in various branches of Fox in a managerial capacity—Denver four years, Cleveland for five years, and then the Kansas City office for the past year.

Films Will Reach Top Artistic Level Next Year, Says Sullivan

Taking Advantage of New Resources, Says M G M Executive—Miljan, Kay Francis and Lucas, and Loretta Young Groomed for Stardom—Algier Now Liberty’s Production Manager

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—December is the month for predictions, and C. Gardner Sullivan, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, is one of the first of the 1931 prognosticators. He asserts that during the forthcoming year motion pictures will be brought to the highest artistic level in history, and further states that the improvement along these lines will be more than a natural development—that it will be the most rapid and decided ascent in history.

Sullivan declares that the element of experiment has been one of the biggest factors in production since the advent of sound, and that so many new ideas have been introduced that producers have been restrained from proceeding along artistic lines. In other words, they have been so busy getting down to fundamentals that they have had little time to experiment with the artistic.

Scientific resources undreamed of a few years ago are now at the command of these producers, Sullivan says, and these will contribute to the new artistry.

“Science has equipped us with new resources and we are beginning to take full advantage of these,” he said. “Much observation, research and experiment has been underway although the public has known little of it.”

“While we have been turning out pictures for profit, we have been studying and learning, and I can prophesy confidently that the next year will see an advance in the quality of our product that will mark the greatest era the cinema ever has seen.”

Four Rising to Stardom

Paramount, M G M and First National have notions of elevating new names to the select circle of stars.

Down at Culver City you’ll find Miljan playing an important featured role in the Jack Gilbert picture, “Gentleman’s Fate.” Miljan is not starred in it but is playing one of the biggest roles of his career. The studio heads have him slated for a bigger part next time.

Paramount already has announced that two of its erstwhile stock players will be co-starring in a picture soon. They are Miss Francis, a finished actress, and Paul Lucas, who often has proved his ability. They will appear together in their first one in January. The script department is now at work on the piece.

Loretta Young, until recently a featured player at First National, will be starred in her next picture, “Big Business Girl,” it was learned this week. William Seiter will direct.

Algier in Liberty Post

Sidney Algier returns to Hollywood this week to become general production manager for Liberty Productions, associated with M. H. Hoffman. I say “returns to Hollywood” although Algier has been no farther away than Los Angeles, where he has been general production supervisor for Franklin Productions, at the Mayan theatre. His first duty will be making “Mother’s Millions,” starring May Robson.

Wallace Smith is an odd one. He gets into race riots, revolutions and long wars. He has been known to leave the house in the evening to buy a paper and before you know it he is in the middle of a South American revolution. He always comes home but it sometimes takes him three or four years longer than he had planned.

All of which goes to prove that J. I. Schnitzler was displaying his customary sagacity when he got Smith’s name on a Radio contract before the young man left this week for a short vacation in the East.

The Radio executive also announced that Mel Brown will next direct “Private Secretary.” And Carey Wilson (you remember him) has been signed to do the script for Brown.

Zukor Returning East

Adolph Zukor has left for San Francisco and will go from there directly to Chicago and New York. He has been here on a short annual visit.

Moore Will Represent Metropolitan Industrial

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Charles E. Moore, formerly associated with Fox-Chase Corporation and United Artists, has been appointed special representative of the Industrial Division of Metropolitan Sound Studios with headquarters in Chicago. He will be in charge of industrial productions for Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri.

Norma Talmadge’s Next To Be Zoe Akin’s Comedy

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—“The Greeks Had A Word For It,” Zoe Akin’s comedy, and one of the current New York stage hits, will become Norma Talmadge’s next talking picture for United Artists as the result of negotiations concluded between the play’s producer, William Harris, Jr., and Samuel Goldwyn of United Artists.

Berman on New Contract

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Pandro Berman, assistant to William LeBaron, has signed a new contract with LeBaron under the terms of which he will continue in his present capacity over a long term period. He has been with Radio Pictures since its inception.

Mickey Mouse Invited to Become Academy Member

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Through an invitation sent by way of Walt Disney, the merry little rodent star, Mickey Mouse, has been invited to join the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.
Music Accompaniment as Much Needed in Talking Films as in Silents: Derrick Public Demand Has Brought Them Closer Together Than Ever. He Says

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—In the opinion of E. B. Derrick, the executive in charge of production, music today is beginning to enjoy the relationship to talking pictures that it did to the silent films.

"Music and pictures have never been closer together than they are today," said Derrick. "It is true that the public is tired of seen musical comedies and productions which seek to substitute chorus girls and melodies for true story value and sustained, logical action. That does not mean, however, that the public does not want music with its pictures."

Stressing the value of music as an atmospheric accompaniment of films, he continued, "I will venture the statement that there is not a picture patron today who does not occasionally recall with a thrill the silent pictures with their complete musical accompaniment. There is no reason why this attraction should be eliminated, chiefly because audiences receive an additional portion of entertainment through dialog."

"Action, dialog and music all are essential ingredients of today's motion pictures. They must be mixed in proper proportions and sometimes music will play a subordinate part. It is not the idea that the music fans are concerned, however, and never will be."—Joseph H. Moskovitz,

Schenck Representative, Completes Coast Survey

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Joseph H. Schenck's personal representative, Joseph H. Moskovitz, who is also vice president of the Art Cinema Corporation, is due in the city this week from Hollywood. While there he made a survey of his company's various interests on the Coast.

German Officials Look Into Royalties Tariff

(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—German officials are reported recently to have investigated the question of royalties demanded by the electrics from the motion picture industry in Germany. The German trade now seems to believe that the interest shown in the matter will not remain purely academic, and feels that some developments will be the result.

It is stated that the Ministry of Interior has addressed a letter to Tobis with the request to state the amount of various royalties and licensing required by the Ministry of Interior, is credited with the authorship of this move.

Pennsylvania Will Send Film Expedition to Brazil

(Special to the World Herald)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—An expedition to obtain sound pictures of jungle life in Brazil is being organized by the University of Pennsylvania Museum and E. R. Fenimore Johnson, former vice president of the Victor Talking Machine Company. The expedition, which left New York for Montevideo about December 20, it is announced. Captain Vladimir Perkhoff, explorer and photographer, will head the party. The route will be up the Paraguay river to the Matto Grosso country. The party will return in a year.

Van Dine to Write Detective Shorts for Varieties Series

Follows Warner Policy to Bring Celebrities in All Lines to Screen—Rehearsals Begin on "Sex in Business" at Paramount Studio—Dialog Script Clerk Is Latest

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—In keeping with the pronounced policy of Warner Brothers to bring to the screen celebrities in all lines via the Vitaphone Varieties, S. S. Van Dine, creator of famous Philo Vance, the modern rival of Sherlock Holmes, has been signed by series of two-reel detective stories to be produced.

This follows the recent signing of Bobby Jones, golf star, for a series of shorts relating to the game. Directors and scenarists have been selected for the first of the group of mysteries, and a search is now in progress for an actor to play the role of "Phil tall-tale," a character to be featured in the Brooklyn studio within a short time.

Van Dine is the pen name of Willard Huntington Wright.

Rehearse "Sex in Business"

At the Paramount studio in Astoria rehearsals have begun for "Sex in Business" in which E. A. Lanfield, Colleen Moore and Frederic March are featured. Charles Ruggles and Monroe Owsley are chief among the supporting players. Dorothy Arzner is directing the film, which will be made in English and French versions at the same time. Ginger Rogers also has been engaged in a supporting role, in addition to her present work in "Girl Crazy." Broadway stage musical now councilors have recently been added to the cast are Leonard Carey, who was last seen in "Laughter," Jules Egaily, recently in "The Sap from Syracuses," Janet MacLeay, Ralph Morgan, Pat O'Brien, Avonae Taylor and John Kearney, several of whom are now playing Broadway in various legitimate plays. Edmund Goulding has been added to the directorial staff at the Astoria plant. He most recently has been engaged in handling the megaphone for "The Trespasser" and "The Devil's Holiday." His first assignment will be the screen version of the stage play, "Up Pops the Devil," recently acquired by Paramount. Nancy Carroll, Charles Ruggles and Frederic March have been tentatively selected for the cast.

Dialog Script Clerk New

While George Abbott was directing the Nancy Carroll film, "Stolen Heaven," just completed, he introduced a new system of script and dialog recording which proved highly successful. He ordered a dialog script clerk to check constantly on spoken lines.

Members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers last week visited the Astoria studio, where they viewed a special screening of recent wide film developments.

Dillon Completed "Millie" On Return from Illness

(Special to the Herald World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—John Francis Dillon completed direction of "Millie," the Charles R. Rogers production which has been released through Radio Pictures. Dillon started the picture but was taken ill with influenza during the three days that Dillon was here. Brown directed, but immediately upon Dillon's return to the studio he resumed direction and completed the picture.

Dix to Direct and Star In Beach's "Big Brother"

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Richard Dix will follow in the footsteps of Lionel Barrymore, Lowell Sherman and Louis Wolheim. Announcement was made this week that he, as they did, would graduate from star to actor-director. He will serve in these capacities in "Big Brother," by Rex Beach. Not only has Dix long cherished a desire to direct pictures, but for many years he has had his mind set on playing the "Big Brother" role. He will be starred, of course.

"Street Scene" Is First New Goldwyn U A Film

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The first of Samuel Goldwyn's group of new productions for United Artists will be "Street Scene," the picture rights for which have just been acquired by Goldwyn. This highly successful stage play, which opened on January 19, 1929, played 600 performances on Broadway, has been seen in translation in most European capitals, and has two companies on the road in this country now.

Goldwyn has sailed for Europe to continue his search for new material and personalities.

U. S.-Made Italian Film Shown in Philadelphia

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—An Italian talking picture, said to be the first produced in this country by an Italian company, had its American premiere at a private showing in the Metropolitan Opera House here. The film was produced by the Italitone Corporation and has already been shown in Rome.

PREMIERE

The only difference between a premiere in Hollywood or Los Angeles and a dramatic club production making its bow in Oshkosh or any other town of that size, is that the tuxedos fit better. Hollywood, for years, has been painted as a “different” locality—with the advanced ideas and a great many other things which Oshkosh and its ilk haven’t got.

Yet, all in all, it is exactly the same. Underneath all the same hearts. Beneath hats suited for such occasions throb the same brains. There are just the same mixture of hopes, jealousies, worries, and big and little moments at Hollywood premiers as there are at the opening of the local dramatic club show.

Society reporters scuttle in and out around, learning what Norma Talmadge is wearing, the kind of cloth which went into the making of their hair—her even-sorted locks. They have a great hulabaloo out here over premiers. First of all, the newspapers get all excited—without any real reason—about four or five names on a sheet. There is the critic, who is the head man. There is the society department, getting all dressed up, gossiping about the clothes and those who attend in parties. There is the feature writer, who picks up something special and makes half a column out of it. After these come the straight news reporters. Then, too, there is the radio. All sneer over the radio if they are prominent—or have publicity men who convince everyone they are.

Those who haven’t the price of admission make their appearance at about 6 o’clock behind roped off sections. The premiere is scheduled to start at 8:30 but seldom gets underway until after 8:30 or 9:00. The stars, standing patiently, watching are lights sweep the skies to let the world, within a radius of 25 miles, know that Hollywood is having another big moment.

Inside the theatre are the assembled high-lights of our industry. They are in the majority, for they either have been sent tickets, or have purchased them. Each is dressed in his or her finest.

Hollywood is at home. In addition to executives and stars, there are the writers and the press. The stars know both classes and both classes know the stars. It is just as much a family gathering as Oshkosh’s premiere of its own community players.

There is no place in Hollywood where one can see so many leading lights at one time as at a premiere. Hollywood has grown so rapidly that the motion picture colony has about been swallowed up—in fact, much of it has merged with the marks of success. The population of Hollywood is now 160,000, so this is not hard to understand.

The colony has lost, to a great extent, its picturesque personality by the influx of those not connected with the industry and the exodus which money has made possible for those who are blessed with the marks of success. All the cafes, the street corners and other gathering places have become so cluttered with persons that they’ve driven out the motion picture folk by their very numbers. There isn’t the congregation that there used to be. Dances and parties get only a fraction of the outstanding personalities together at one time.

When you come to Hollywood, if you want to see almost everybody beneath a kaleidoscope of colored lights, amid the blare of radio-wired loudspeakers, and the pristine glory of grotesques and (red lights, just attend a premiere. It costs $5 a ticket, but, if you want to see folks gathering in their little family circle and feeling quite at home, come to a premiere.

HOLLYWOOD

_PRODUCED BY_ —Norman Krasna

WHOOPS, here comes Xmas. X marks the spot where there is no money to buy gifts. A local department store advertised for a Santa Claus, and fifty-four featured players showed up. The store couldn’t use them; they all wanted billing.

You’d never recognize Hollywood Boulevard now. Every ten feet there are huge cardboard Christmas trees, each having a million electric bulbs. At night it’s very pretty. When you turn a corner in your automobile the sight of all these colored lights blinds you, and you run into a fire hydrant. Next to the fire hydrant is an auto repair shop. Somebody on the Chamber of Commerce thought that one up.

One smart realty company, with a slogan of “For Land’s Sake See Us,” has a placard in front of its Wilshire Boulevard office which reads, “Make Someone Happy—Give Him a Miniature Golf Course for Christmas.”

The best Christmas gag out here is worked up by the smaller restaurants and cafes, the kind that rely on the visiting firemen and try to give the impression they are patronized by the motion picture colony. When you are given your menu you find a card attached that reads: “Spend Christmas Eve and New Year’s in Kumon Inn, the Eating Joint of the Stars. We Cater to the Best People. Wouldn’t you like to spend New Year’s Eve with Garbo, Gilbert, Barthelmess, Barrymore and George Arliss? Come to Kumon Inn. Reservations taken now. Ten Dollars Per Plate.”

When I saw the card the first time it occurred to me that Kumon Inn was certainly a popular place with the stars; more surprisingly so when you consider you get a luncheon for thirty-five cents, without a napkin.

What was still funnier about the thing was that in the next block I saw another menu card that had almost the same speech on it. I hear from reliable sources there are a dozen such restaurants having the same speech.

The gag is that the card says: “Wouldn’t you like to spend New Year’s Eve with Garbo, Gilbert, Barthelmess, Barrymore and George Arliss?” Well, the proprietor of Kumon Inn explains, wouldn’t you? He would. He admits it. Oh no, he says, they’re not coming to Kumon, no sir, but wouldn’t you like to spend New Year’s Eve with them? The card asks you. For ten dollars a plate.

An exploitation stunt that theatre owners can take advantage of is worked by a cut-rate drug store on Hollywood Boulevard. For about two hours a day they have a motion picture camera in front of the place photographing the store front and the persons who go into the place. The impression you get is that it’s atmosphere for a genuine picture. Every once in a while someone who seems to be a director will shout, “No, no, no, no, I cannot have this. I want more realism. Listen folks, (this to the crowd) give me a break, don’t pay attention to the camera, just walk in and out of the store as though nothing is happening.”

You have no idea how many sheep walk into that big cut-rate store. Some want to satisfy the universal conceit of having their foolish faces permanently recorded, but in the main they walk in because “director” said so. And they buy. Statistics, as of March, 1927, show that four out of every five persons who come to consciousness in a cut-rate drug store buy something.

Then there is the quaint Hollywood custom of pawn-shops advertising. “Give a Christmas present!” presumably by pawnng your own watch. One pawn shop has sign, “We do not accept make-up boxes,” the old nameie.

Pastor Forms Club Which Will Make Amateur Films

_Special to the Herald-World_

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Dec. 11.— The Rev. S. O. Walker, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul church here has formed a club whose activities will partly center around the making of amateur moving picture productions. He has long been an amateur motion picture enthusiast, and was one of the first purchasers of the Bell & Howell 16 mm. films outfits when they were first put on the market.

The parish is largely composed of persons of Lithuanian extraction and descent, and as its first picture the club is making a film touching upon Lithuanian history.
DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Tonight we saw Winnie Lightner in "THE LIFE OF THE PARTY," and if there could have been anything added to this picture to make it more entertaining, which there couldn't have been, it would have been Joe Brown.

With the exception of our two favorites, Will Rogers and Irene Rich (we might add, our four favorites, and include Polly and Marie), Winnie satisfies us like a huckleberry pie would when we hadn't had anything to eat since last Thursday. She is not only a finished actress and a star of the first magnitude, but she's so dog-gone handsome that only the fickle-minded would dare to comment on it.

(There now, Winnie, just for that you ought to send us a nice, big picture of yourself that we can hang over the mantle in our living room so we can have a look at you everytime we get home.) In case Winnie doesn't see this, won't some of you guys out in Hollywood call her attention to it?

We are going to write El Brendel and find out if they have jazz orchestras on Mars, and if they don't, we are going to engage passage on the next ship he pilots up there. They have just tuned in on a jazz orchestra playing some more of that hen house music and trying to prove to the world that they don't know adumbrating about music, and they are making a wonderful success of it. This music is so impressive that we have written a little pathetic verse which we would like some jazz artist to sing. It should be sung with much feeling, much like you would sing "SONNY BOY." Try this on your piano.

When I've got those henhouse blues,
When I've got those henhouse blues;
The roosters have all gone away,
And I am left alone today.
To lay an egg here in the hay,
When I've got those henhouse blues.

TOPEKA, KAN.

Did you know that at one time Uncle Sam was the largest real estate dealer in the world? Well, he was, and that was when he bought what is known as the "Louisiana Purchase" from France for four cents an acre, and boy, if that wasn't like stealing acorns from a blind sow, then we don't know sows and acorns.

There, now, war has broken out between Texas and Chicago. Governor Dan Moody of Texas suggested that Chicago be put under martial law and that the Texas rangers be employed to clean the joint up. To this suggestion the Chicago Tribune lets forth editorial a loud and prolonged howl and says:

"Texas, for instance, is always fortunate when its freemen are not burning the jails to execute the writs of Judge Lynch on prisoners who have not had trials, and when Mr. Ferguson is not working his way in through the kitchen door and Pa through the coal hole. It's a great state and would look well in a map of Mexico." WOW, guess that's handing Texas a wallop. But that wasn't all the editor said, here's some more:

"Her greatest contribution to science has been the jake paralysis, and have seen pictures that we got a dollar's worth out of, and then again we have seen pictures that would have given us license to start a fight had they tried to make us see them for nothing, and those are the kind of pictures you boys have to pay for whether you play them or not. There's no such a thing as a shortage of product. The producers look after that, and while you may not know it, you pay for this surplus product in the cost of those you can use. Does that answer your question?"

He scratched his head for a moment and then picked up the telephone and called his wife and said, "Say, honey, make a big fat huckleberry pie, we're going to have company for dinner."

Don't forget, those fat northern mallards we are going to have Christmas.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Big Names in All Departments Boost Comedies, Says Hammons

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Pictures, attributes the improvement in current comedy production to the fact that more capable persons are concerned with the making of them than ever before.

"In every branch of short feature production," he said, "including the acting, writing and direction, are now to be found people whose work cannot fail to prove a valuable asset through channels that gave them wide experience. This is the first time, I believe, that these rich resources are being tapped so thoroughly for short feature productions."

Hammons points out the box office names that are appearing in the casts, and directorial and writing credits of Educational comedies as proving his contention.

Among them are noted James Gleason, who has just completed the dialog for a new Ivel comedy, Earnest Pagano, Paul Girard Smith, Ken Kling, Jack Townley and Walter Weems.

Included in the list of players are Andy Clyde, Marjorie Beebe, Lloyd Hamilton and Johnny Hines, on regular contract, and Bert Roach, Charlotte Greenwood, Natalie Moorhead, Daphne Pollard, Henry Gibson, Glen Tryon, Dorothy Christy, Eleanor Hunt, Edward Nugent, Phyllis Crane, Alberta Vaughan and others.

Directors of importance on the Educational staff are William Beaudine, Watse Wagner, Nat Ross, Harold Beaudine, Leslie Pearce and Mack Sennett, who has also been directing many of his own comedies.

Columbia Negotiating for Short Series to Star 2 Radio Characters

Ellen and Roger, radio characters who have gained prominence for their weekly broadcasts on radio hookups in the United States and Canada, are being considered for the principal roles in a new series of short subjects to be made by Columbia Pictures.

The picture will be single reel releases on subjects similar to those which the couple has used in its broadcasts. Principally, their radio dialog has dealt with the adventures of a film struck pair of youngsters who run away from a country home with the intention of gaining a career in motion pictures.

The Ellen and Roger radio series is now in its sixth month. A number of radio stations have expressed interest in it as one of the best audience builders on their program. Reports from one station in the South estimate that it has 300,000 followers of the weekly programs.

Syndicated newspaper stories of the radio characters are also being published in leading cities.

Child Story Series Takes Mickey Mouse Through Fairyland

The Walt Disney studios and Bibo and Lang, Inc., music publishers, have started joint publication of a series of "Mickey Mouse" storybooks for children.

The first of the series is a book of 16 pages, reciting the adventures of Mickey, the cartoon comic, in Fairyland. The prices are 5 cents and 12 cents, printed in colors. The author is Bobette Bibo. Irving Bibo has written an original song about Mickey, the words and music of which appear in the first book of the series.

One of the publication's features is a game known as the "Mickey Mouse Journey." The Disney studios have supplied the illustrations.

The first issue in this series has been on sale for a month in children's divisions of department stores, in book stores and in five and 10 cent stores.

THE BLUEBOOK SCHOOL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 66.—(A) Explain why the voltage of the C-battery, in sets using one, should be kept at its full value. (B) In what way would you ascertain the correct voltage between the contact studs of the C-battery? (C) What does a high plate current indicate? (D) How often would you inspect the C-battery? (E) How would you remedy a poor contact of a C-battery with a grid circuit?

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 49

The question was: What kind of warning does an amplifying tube filament give before it finally fails? How should it be done as soon as this warning sign appears? What is likely to happen in the event the projectionist does not heed this warning? Are noisy amplifying tubes occasionally found, and what is the cause of the noise?

AGAIN the answers have been misplaced, so I will answer the question myself. In an amplifying tube, filament burns the projectionist of coming failure by showing a bright spot somewhere on the length of its filament. This is not always the case, but usually it is so. Immediately such a warning spot shows, the tube should be replaced with a new, tested one. If this is not done the filament may burn right out in the middle of a show, and that is Sad. You all know, a very desirable state of affairs, as all sound will be stopped until a replacement is accomplished.

Yes, noisy new tubes are found occasionally. This is due to faulty filament which throws off at an irregular rate.

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 50

The question was: Do noisy amplifying tubes give trouble anywhere except at the first stage of amplification? How would you make a test in case you had suspicion that a tube was noisy? What various troubles may loose connections, etc., be the batteries cause?

I have selected the answer of Carl F. Daughtery, who says: “Noisy amplifying tubes are not very likely to give trouble anywhere except at the first stage of amplification. This is because of the high degree of sensitivity necessary in the first stage of amplification, which necessitates tubes that are as nearly perfect as possible.

“If a noisy tube is suspected, the fader should be set at zero. Then if the noise is still heard, it is very probable that a tube is causing the noise. In this event the first tube in the first stage of amplification should be replaced with one which is known to be in good condition. If this does not end the noise, the source of trouble must be looked for elsewhere.

“Loose connections in the batteries, or accumulations of dirt and dust may and probably will cause loss of voltage and consequently impair the quality and volume of the sound. They may also cause noise in the horns, known as surface or ground noise.”

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 51

The question was: Explain just why batteries must not be used for amplifying immediately after charging. Just for what reason is it necessary, when using sets which have a C-battery, to keep that battery at the proper voltage? How may you ascertain the correct voltage between the contact studs of the C-battery? How often should the C-battery be inspected and tested? What does a high plate current indicate?

The answer to question number 51 was very well given by Herman B. Billings, of Somers, Conn. Mr. Billings says: “Storage batteries supplying current for sound reproduction should not be used for 20 or 30 minutes after charging. The reason for this is that they continue to gas for that length of time, and will cause quite a noise in the horns.

“On sets which get their C-voltage from batteries, it is necessary that their voltage be kept up to the proper rate. The C-battery furnishes the current to keep the tube grid negative. This is the controlling element of the tube and is therefore the key to sound amplification.

“On Movietone or Vitaphone there is a set of small studs on the outside of the battery box. By using a low reading voltmeter you can tell between the studs for the voltage of the C-battery. The proper voltage for each type of amplifier to test to is found in the instruction book.

“The C-battery should be tested every 30 days. It is a good idea to set a certain day each month, such as the first, to test the C-battery. Then you are not so likely to forget. A plate current which is higher than that specified is caused by a low voltage on the grid. This may be due to a weak C-battery, or to poor contact between the C-battery and the grid.”

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 52

The question was: In what manner would you proceed to remedy a poor contact of the C-battery with the grid circuit? Is it possible to do harm by holding a volt-meter in contact with C-battery points too long? Do the instructions for caring for amplifying tubes apply with equal force to rectifier tubes? When two rectifier tubes are in use, what is the purpose of the second tube?

Aubrey D. Hotaling sends in the best answer, as follows:

“The normal life of a C, or grid battery, is one year. It has a shelf life of this period, and as the circuit draws no current from it, the chances are greatly in its favor of holding up for it. In replacing batteries of this type, be sure to see that they are dated, and you can rest assured that you are getting new, fresh stock. This insignificant looking little battery is a very important link in an amplifier system, and should not be hastily passed over in the general inspection of the apparatus. A run-down C, or one making improper contact in the circuit, will play havoc with the reproduced speech or music in the form of distortion in the horns. This is due to the fact that the grid of the vacuum tube is no longer in a negative state, with the result that the plate current thus retarded, rises perceptibly and overloads the tube. All contacts must be kept bright and clean, and the spring battery clips bent up if necessary to form a firm contact with the wire. Where battery clips are badly corroded it is advisable

British Navy Sees Demonstration of Photophone Sound

Sound pictures have been shown by RCA Photophone on board the British battleship Renown in what is said to be the first motion picture demonstration ever given before the English Navy.

Portable equipment was used. The Universal production, "All Quiet on the Western Front," was projected at an afternoon performance and "The King of Jazz" in the evening.

Six more installations have been completed by RCA in France and Belgium. Pathe Cinema, French distributor for Photophone, has wired the following houses: Cinema du Parc at Paris; Omnia Cinema, Dole; Armor Cinema, Brest, and the Theatre Chave, Marseilles.

The Palace theatre, Liege, Belgium, seating 2,000, and one of the largest in Belgium, recently reopened with RCA equipment. The Alhambra, Mons, Belgium, is now being installed with similar apparatus.

General Pictures Opens Phonofilm Office in Seattle

General Talking Pictures Corporation, distributor of DeForest Phonofilm, has announced the opening of a branch office in Seattle, to be devoted to the sales and servicing of Phonofilm sets in Washington, Oregon, Montana and Northern Idaho.

Kenneth Leach and J. Bornhofen will be in charge of the Seattle office. They were previously connected with General Talking Pictures in the Midwest.

Sydney E. Abel, general sales manager for RCA Photophone, Inc., reports a total of 63 new installations in the United States since the last list was released. The new houses wired do not indicate the large contract with the U. S. Navy providing for talking picture equipment on all battleships, destroyers, cruisers and shore stations.

The new installations follow:

Filmo 70-D Camera Used To Shoot Detroit Convention

Films of the national convention of Delta Sigma Pi, national commerce fraternity, which met in Detroit, are now being shown to chapters of the fraternity throughout the country. The motion picture was made with a Filmo 70-D camera.

J. Robert Johnson of Chicago shot the film, which is said to be a masterpiece of amateur cinematography.

Audience Composed of Deaf Persons Attends Showing of Sound Film
Given Under Auspices of League For Hard of Hearing in St. Louis—100 Present
(Special to the Herald-World)
ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11.—For the first time in the history of St. Louis an audience composed entirely of persons who are hard of hearing saw and heard a talking motion picture show given here recently. The novel presentation was under the auspices of the St. Louis League for the Hard of Hearing, as the feature picture and the short subjects on the program were unreelcd on the screen the 100 persons in the audience sat back and enjoyed the show. Each had on a pair of headphones connected with the sound equipment of the house and apparently practically all heard every bit of the show distinctly.

The Fox theatre several months ago equipped ten seats with headphones for the convenience of persons hard of hearing and all these seats are always occupied. Some persons call the theatre in advance to be sure of getting one of the headphone-equipped seats. Prior to the advent of sound pictures and the elimination of silent pictures by theaters in St. Louis, motion pictures were the chief diversion of the 10,000 adults and 3,000 children of St. Louis who are deaf or partly so.

Officials of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade have placed the silent pictures that are now available at the disposal of organizations that are interested in persons afflicted with deafness. The board has always been willing to help these afflicted persons in seeking picture entertainment, but necessarily the number of silent pictures has been greatly reduced since producers entered the sound field.

Vilches in M C M Spanish Film
Ernesto Vilches has been engaged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play in another Spanish talking picture, the title of which is to be announced shortly. He recently played in the Spanish version of “Mr. Wu,” playing the part enacted by Lon Chaney in the silent film. Vilches gained recognition as a character star in Latin America.

Answer to Question 52
to clean same thoroughly with sandpaper.

“In testing any battery of the dry type, a voltmeter should always be used, never an ammeter, and one of high resistance. As a test of this type is little more than a short circuit, temporarily, the meter should never be held on the contacts any longer than necessary to ascertain its correct condition. To do so unnecessarily shortens the life of the battery.

“We cannot be too careful in caring for our tubes, be they of the rectifying or amplifying type. Due to the inner construction one must necessarily handle the latter with extreme care, so as not to loosen the elements, which may, and probably will, cause the tube to become noisy or microphonic. Be sure the first amplifier tube is as near perfect as possible. This is the most important in that circuit. Be careful not to overload the filament. Do not apply more than the manufacturer’s specified voltage. Also do not apply less, for proper functioning of the tube requires just so much, no more, no less, to insure correct electron flow from filament to plate. More vacuum tubes are ruined by the indiscriminate whirling of rheostat knobs than any other one cause.

“When two rectifier tubes are used it is an indication that the particular amplifier in use is using the full A. C. wave, not half of it. This method has been found to be superior to the system using only one tube for rectification, inasmuch as it produces a much smoother flow of the rectified A. C. When this is passed through the customary filter, the resultant current delivered is very near, as far as results are concerned, to a true D. C. supply.

“Rectification may be obtained successfully by the use of one rectifier tube (a different type, of course, than above), but there is liable to be a hum present which will be so greatly amplified by the push-pull amplifier, as to be noticeable in the loudspeaker. Then, too, the current delivered to the amplifier tubes will fluctuate more or less, due to the fact that this type of tube uses only half of the 60-cycle, or line wave. While this effect may be remedied to a certain degree by inserting a 274, or voltage regulator tube in series with the rectifier, the full wave method will be found to be more satisfactory for sound projection.”

Madan Circuit Purchases
R C A Equipment for Film Production in Calcutta
Active production of sound pictures will soon be started by Madan Theatres, Ltd., Calcutta, India, which has recently purchased a sound recording unit and seven reproducing sets from R C A Photophone.

The Madan concern operates over 100 houses in India, Burma and Ceylon. F. Madan, director of the circuit, has been in New York for the past two months arranging the deal.

Elmore B. Lyford, an R C A engineer, has sailed for Calcutta on a year’s leave of absence to direct equipment of the Madan recording studio. F. W. Boughton, another R C A engineer, will assist in the installation.

Thome Is Publicity Director
Ray Thome, after being connected with various San Francisco Publix houses, has been named director of publicity for the California theatre in San Francisco. He succeeds Jack Gaunt. He will be assisted by George Fischer.

Shows Spanish Talkers
The El National, San Antonio house, recently installed sound and is now said to be the only theatre in that city playing Spanish talking pictures.
BOX OFFICE PROMOTION

Milwaukee Houses in Midst of Heavy Holiday Exploitation; What Are You Doing?

What are you doing to prepare for the holidays ahead? Are you letting the exploitation possibilities of Christmas and New Year's go to seed? Or are you organizing matinees, midnight shows and children's programs as other progressive exhibitors are doing?

There is no season like the Christmas season for exploitation. More people have spare time during this period than at any other time of the year. The holidays bring with them a buoyancy and exuberance which demands expression. Why shouldn't your theatre have a part in it?

The potentialities are almost unlimited. You can arrange a children's matinee a few days before Christmas, have a local Santa Claus and perhaps give away inexpensive toys. A few Christmas songs, with the youngsters chiming in, will add the necessary atmosphere. A Christmas tree or two will help, too.

Midnight Show for New Year
A midnight show to "ring in the New Year" will invariably draw a crowd. Advance trailers and newspaper advertising, and perhaps a ballyhoo truck can handle the promotion. You will know best how to work out such programs to suit your own locality.

In some communities, the opportunity to aid the poor by benefit programs will be boundless. In Milwaukee, exhibitors have already organized in this movement. Let's see what they've done so far.

Fred S. Meyer, Western exploitation director for Universal and manager of the Alhambra theatre, started the ball rolling early this month when he turned over to the Wisconsin News Christmas Fund a check for $502.47, the proceeds from a midnight premier on "See America Thrift." The Wisconsin News Fund, sponsored by a newspaper, is one of the largest in Milwaukee.

Five Give Matinee Proceeds
Five independent houses in the city donated proceeds from their matinees on December 6 to the same cause. The theatres and their managers are as follows: Gem, operated by Frank Trottman; Pearl, Charles Washichek; Grace, managed by Paul Oresic and Ralph Haynes; Elite, managed by Elmer Bauer and owned by Steve Bauer, and the Atlas, operated by Otto Anders. All films shown at these matinees were donated by M.G.M.

The Zenith, another independent theatre, operated by E. F. Metz, recently had a potato matinee. Enough potatoes were collected to make over a thousand dinners. They were turned over to a local charity organization.

Other independent houses are planning similar benefit matinees before the holidays.

Among them will be the Layton Park, operated by Jerry Washichek; Violet, E. E. Hemmings; Lexington, Walter Baier, and the Peerless, managed by Elmer Hubake.

Nine Fox Midwesco neighborhood houses are cooperating with the Milwaukee Sentinel to hold Christmas parties at the various theatres on December 20. Admissions for children will be some article of food. Houses joined in this movement include the Oriental, Garfield, Tivoli, Savoy, Uptown, Tower, Modjeska, Plaza and Mirth.

Local Warner theatres have already staged a number of food matinees and plans are underway for others to come.

Toy Shower in Calgary
Another illustration along this line is the gift party conducted by John Hazza, and Harold Bishop of the Capitol, Calgary, Alberta. The annual toy shower has become an institution in Calgary. For many years the house has sponsored a children's show on the first Saturday in December. The youngsters are required to bring a gift. This serves as their admission ticket. This year 1,800 children responded to the call. The gifts were turned over to the Boy Scouts for distribution. The theatre got its reward, too. Newspapers devoted several lengthy front page stories to the affair. The local union musicians donated their services for the program.

The question of whether such holiday exploitation is worth while does not even enter into the case; it is simply a question of how it can be made most effective.

Tell us what you are doing and intend to do.

Houston State Gets 8-Page Ad Section in Radio Hookup
Homer McCallon, manager of the State theatre, Houston, Texas, tied up with a local radio manufacturing concern to get an eight-page cooperative ad section in the newspapers for a group of his coming attractions.

The ads were a combination of motion picture and radio advertising, with each page carrying stories and photographs of film stars, as well as copy on the radio. Artists were engaged to deck the layouts up in attractive fashion.
This lobby display in the RKO theatre, Los Angeles, was part of the potent campaign for Universal’s “See America Thirst.” The old time bar was installed by a local beverage company, which served free soft drinks to patrons. The same concern carried banners on its trucks advertising the film. It will be noted that a sign above the bar says, “Have a drink on the house and then laugh when you ‘See America Thirst’.”

Beverage Firm Builds Bar in RKO Lobby for “See America Thirst”

The new comedy, “See America Thirst,” has come in for a big helping of tie-ups almost wherever it has shown. Beverage companies have cooperated in many cities on the strength of the picture’s title. Window displays, street ballyhoo and advertising have been the happy result for theatres.

In Los Angeles, the RKO house has demonstrated the value which one tieup brings. A local beverage company cooperated to offer the use of its 26 delivery trucks. Each of these carried a banner with this proclamation: “Quench with Eastside! See America First at the RKO theatres.”

Oldtime Bar Serves Drinks

Carrying the idea even farther, the beverage firm agreed to erect a regular oldtime bar in the RKO’s lobby. It was decked with dozens of bottles and glittering glassware. Free refreshments were served to all patrons who stepped up to the rail. This stunt aroused no end of curiosity and the word-of-mouth advertising it earned brought scores of additional customers.

On the sidewalk at the front of the theatre was a huge stencil sketch portraying a foaming mug of beer. Under it was the caption, “Do you remember when . . . was set?” The marquee was literally covered with pennants provided by Universal for the film.

Adler Issues 25,000 Heralds

William Adler, RKO exploitation man, who handled the campaign, arranged for distribution of 25,000 heralds with glaring headlines on “See America Thirst.” Joe Well, exploitation director for Universal, pulled some clever tricks out of his ballyhoo bag for this film. Shortly after its release, he mailed out lapel buttons bearing the query, “Why ‘See America Thirst’?” In an envelope, he enclosed a miniature cork screw and a tiny stein brimming over with foam.

With these snappy accoutrements, one could enjoy almost everything but the taste. Anyway, Well’s purpose was to give exhibitors something concrete, solid and basic for their exploitation. No one is saying he failed to do it.

Marinette Fox Lands Full Page Layout on News Tieup

The Fox theatre, Marinette, Wis., obtained a full page of type and display advertising on “The Big Trail” by tying up with a newspaper.

One solid page was devoted to nothing else but stories and layouts on the film. News copy, including five columns in all, was given free by the newspaper. The three center columns of the page contained ads on the picture. Across the top of the page was a streamer in large type.

Buttons Laughed Off at Comedy Are Sewed on in Lobby

Manager Harrison of the Waco theatre, Waco, Texas, revived the button-sewer idea to put over “Animal Crackers.” He put a proper old lady in the foyer with a sewing basket and rocking chair.

Near the woman was a poster stating that she would gladly sew buttons on the clothes of patrons who laughed them off while watching the film. An ample supply of buttons made it possible for the woman to supply the requests of those who came to her. Quite a number took advantage of it just for the fun of the stunt.

Two youngsters were hired to push baby carriages through the business district. The carriages contained dolls and a placard stating that they were paying off a bet that “Animal Crackers” was not the funniest picture ever shown.

The latter idea, as well as the first one, can be employed on almost any comedy.

Human Interest Story on Film Star Wins News Space

Jake Rosenthal, manager of the Iowa theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, won a two-column spread in local newspapers last week with a human interest story on one of his coming pictures, “The Gorilla.”

Joe Frisco, who plays the detective in the film, was, according to the story, once employed by Rosenthal as desk clerk in a Davenport hotel which Jake operated. Waterloo newspapers were prompt in picking up the feature angle of this subject. As for Rosenthal, he got some free publicity on “The Gorilla.”
Some Additions for That Ad File of Yours

If you have a system of filing theatre advertisements for future reference, the above displays will fit nicely into that album. And if you don't have a filing system, there are new ideas to be gained just from a glance over these layouts. They were made for the following houses: 1. Brown, Louisville; 2. Orpheum, Seattle; 3. Albee, Cincinnati; 4. Michigan, Detroit; 5. Paramount Publix, San Francisco; 6. National, Louisville; 7. Oriental, Chicago.
Two-for-One Tickets Good Tonic For Lagging B. O., Says Stamm

John E. Stamm, manager of the New Victoria theatre, Baltimore, Ohio, believes there is nothing more effective for exploitation in the small town than occasional programs at which two-for-one tickets are offered.

Stamm's town is not a big town, and he claims that the vigorous campaign that the promotion system has brought him success. He writes us this letter:

"I am sending you a few good exploitation tips for use during this present so-called 'depression.' (I don't believe there is a depression for the exhibitor who follows out the ideas published in the Herald-World, and if I ever leave the show business, your magazine will go with me to keep me posted.)

He Ties In With Golf Course

"A two-for-one admission ticket system, used now and then, will keep a fellow out of the red. Try it and see. An indoor miniature golf course near my theatre uses the same idea, letting two people pay for the price of one. The golf course manager and I cooperate. He sells my show tickets and I sell his golf tickets, and we both do a nice business.

"The country store idea has brought me considerable success. I am personally acquainted with a large majority of my customers and put my shows to their tastes. Special handbills and proclamations as heralds only to those whom I think will like the type of picture to be shown.

"I am inclined to a handbill of the kind we distribute. Local newspapers do not have the facilities for printing handsome ads, so the handbills take their place. In them I am free to use whatever cuts and type are necessary. This has been more successful than the newspaper advertising I formerly paid for.

Proclamation for Movie Week

"'Africa speaks' was advertised on the handbills as having its state premiere here. This brought added business. The film opened in Columbus the same week I had my 'prairie' feature.

"It does not pay to scatter handbills broadcast, however. They should be fastened to telephone poles, otherwise the first blast of wind will sweep them away and litter up the town.

"Here is a good stunt: Have the mayor of the town issue a proclamation for a movie week. Then do your best to bill an attractive program with a cooking good comedy; have a program that the public likes. Wait and see what happens. This will both bring current business and build your theatre up strongly in the community. Trailers and ads should be used for the advance advertising, playing up the proclamation.

Milwaukee House Has 'Beer Garden'

For New U Picture

A crowd of approximately 1,200 was on hand Thursday, November 20, at 11:30 p.m. at the Alhambra theatre, Milwaukee, for the world's premiere showing of 'See America Thirst.'

Net proceeds from this show were turned over to the Wisconsin News Christmas Fund and totaled $902.47. A week before the picture opened it was publicized on the front page of the Wisconsin News daily and this tieup resulted in much favorable publicity for the theatre.

Los Angeles House Gives All-City Grid Selections

Locow's State in Los Angeles has tied up with a local newspaper to make announcement of the selections for the all-city high school football team.

Through this arrangement, the house was able to present the announcement from its own preprint section in the paper. Several days in advance the house received space in the sports section. Naturally this brought box office lines.

Denver Students Color Lloyd Sketch For "Feet First"

When school tieups can be had, they make excellent exploitation. A. G. Krell, assistant manager of the Paramount, Denver, accomplished something along this line for Harold Lloyd's "Feet First."

An outline of a sketch of Lloyd was the basis of the tieup. Hundreds of these sketches were given to the grade school teachers, who in turn had the pupils color them. Children who did the best work at coloring were given show tickets. The two best drawings won watches, given by a jewelry store. The sketches in outline form portrayed Lloyd in a sitting posture, with feet showing unusually large.

A Denver shoe store tied up to distribute 20,000 illusion cards bearing Lloyd's photograph. Two other shoe stores had attractive window displays.

Yellow Cab assisted by placing "Feet First" tire covers on all taxis, with date and place of the picture.

Soda fountain throughout the city were provided with paper napkins on the film, while many cafes carried lines on the show in the menus. Each of these tieups cost only two passes.

A radio company used 36 24-sheet billboards, carrying lines on "Feet First."

"Third Alarm" Proceeds

Go to Firemen's Aid Fund

Tying up with the fire department to get exploitation, the Embassy theatre, San Francisco, chalked up a good box office profit on "The Third Alarm," a film drama of a fireman's life.

William B. Wagoner, manager, set aside a portion of this profit for the Firemen's Widows and Orphans Fund. This generosity brought favorable response from the fire department and newspaper ads told the public about it.

Lacking a local newspaper which can publish display ads with cuts in them, John B. Stamm, manager of the Victoria theatre, Baltimore, Ohio, employs throwaways. This handbill for Columbia's "Africa Speaks" he has found more effective than newspaper ads in his town.

News Tieup on Anagram Contest Brings Hundreds Of Answers for Rosenthal

Jake Rosenthal, manager of the Iowa theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, tied up with a newspaper on an anagram contest that brought him hundreds of responses from theatre-goers and prospective theatregoers.

The anagram contest, a type of word building contest, was played up in news stories several days in advance of the showing of "Scarlet Pages." Fifty theatre passes were given the winners.

Rosenthal learned, through this contest, that competitive stunts pay, and especially contests where readers get brain exercise. Replies were received from scores of out of town people within a radius of 40 miles.
Paper's Talkiegram
Tournament Lifts Theatre Receipts

A San Francisco newspaper has increased its street sale and local theatres have added to their box office receipts through a talkiegram contest being conducted there. The problem of putting film titles into readable sentences has attracted the attention of hundreds, it is said. The paper offers a first prize each week of $50 in cash. Other awards range down to theatre tickets. Here is one of the samples turned in, which is clever enough to merit reprinting: "The Playboy of Paris" was feeding 'The Gorilla Animal Crackers' when 'The Sap from Syracuse' caused 'The Break-up' by asking, are you two guys 'Brothers'? Stunts such as this help make the public -

Los Angeles Goes "Sunny" Conscious in Campaign For First National Film

The First National publicity staff in Los Angeles played a "sunny" theme when it launched a campaign for Marilyn Miller's "Sunny." The aim in the campaign was to make Los Angeles and its environs "Sunny" conscious. This was the motive behind the first newspaper ad, a 250-line two-column layout, with the announcement that "Everything Is Sunny Now." The same catch phrase appeared in all subsequent ads. The film had a double opening, with local premieres in both Warner's Hollywood and Downtown theatres.

4-page Newspaper Herald Tells Orangeburg of "Big Trail"

The management of the Strand theatre, Orangeburg, N. C., prepared a four-page, full-size newspaper herald for its engagement of "The Big Trail" and distributed the tab throughout the city. Cuts and stories on the picture filled the entire four pages. The throwaway was called The Theatre News.

Airport, Flying School Help Plug Aviation Angle of "Hell's Angels"

Tying in with the aviation angle of "Hell's Angels," L. K. Brin, manager of the Garden and Majestic theatres, Milwaukee, made maximum use of local air concerns in a way that deserves description.

By special permission from the city council, Brin arranged to have three planes fly over Milwaukee at low altitude during the noon hour. The flying machines were provided by the Curtiss-Wright airport and flying school. Noise bombs were exploded in midair to attract attention. The under side of each plane carried the picture's title, theatre name and playing date in huge letters.

The air idea was further exploited in the theatres themselves, with all ushers dressed in flying togs supplied by the airport. Parasites and other aviation equipment were displayed in the lobby.

Wind Tunnel in Shopping Arcade

In a shopping arcade in the loop a Curtiss-Wright wind tunnel was prominently exhibited a week in advance of the film's opening. Placards handled the theatre end of the ballyhoo.

In a city park of the downtown district, a plane covered with copy on the picture was tilted in a position suggestive of a crash. It drew a crowd.

Window displays were numerous. Some companies helped the theatre sponsor model airplane contests. These were placed in the windows along with stilts from "Hell's Angels."

Letters to all members of the local Aeronautic Association advertised the fact that the houses were giving a guest performance for all Milwaukie fliers. Instructors at the Curtiss-Wright flying school assisted by urging all their students to see the picture.

Miniature Battlefield Is Attraction

A loop candy store devoted an entire window to a miniature battlefield display. Toy planes were scattered in the layout. In the background were photographs of famous airmen, obtained from the newspapers. The city library also tied up to use bookmarks and a special display of books on aviation subjects. Ticket offices of all air lines were covered with advertising and their windows were similarly decorated.

Window tieups included, additionally, four book stores, 13 cigar stores, 11 drug stores and 17 miscellaneous locations, ranging from jewelry stores and restaurants to shoe stores and bowling alleys.

An endorsement of the picture was secured from Marquette University and permission received to post announcements on the college bulletin boards.

Several plugs were given over two radio stations, through hookups with the newspapers which operate them.

Loew State Idea Might Be Used on Basketball Games

Rodney D. Toups, manager of Loew's State, New Orleans, issued a football scoreboard for a local high school this fall on one of its big games. Besides the lineups, the card carried copy on current features at the theatre and the additional line: "Win or Lose, Your Next Best is Loew's State Theatre, Now Showing George Bancroft in 'Derelict.'" A stilt walker was recently employed to walk the streets for promotion on "Derelict."
Three-Way Tieup
On Tongue Twister Contest Makes Hit

A three-way tieup between a theatre, a newspaper and a radio concern gave publicity aplenty to Harold Lloyd's "Feet First" in Cincinnati.

The tieup was engineered by the Palace theatre. The newspaper carried the stories and the radio dealer provided the chief prize, a receiving set, while the Palace gave several sets of free tickets.

A cut which appeared in the paper is shown above. The story accompanying the illustration is reprinted below. It is self-explanatory.

"Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers—but you'll pick something much nicer if you make up a tongue twister good enough to win a prize in The Post-Philco-KKO Tongue Twister Contest. A Philco radio—a Baby Grand Console, seven-tube screen grid, is the first prize, and 15 sets of Palace guest tickets offered by KKO are to be given as prizes for the next 15 best tongue twisters. Here are the rules.

The tongue twister must not be over 20 words long. (But more than one sentence may be used.)

'The twister must contain the words 'Feet First' and 'Philco.'

'Every word must begin with 'f' or 'ph.'

'The twister must be submitted by midnight Nov. 8.

'Get your tongue twister ready and print it in the space provided above in the picture of Harold Lloyd and his Philco Radio. Harold is at the KKO Palace in 'Feet First,' beginning Saturday, you know.

'Sign your name and address in the space indicated below the picture. Then mail your entry to The Post Contest Editor, Box 1430, Cincinnati, O., before midnight Saturday.

'Any striking entries have been received. But it's not too late. Better get your brain busy and try for those prizes. There's no time to waste.'

The Princess theatre in Toledo is now under the management of E. J. Bresenholde, who has been transferred from Rochester, N. Y., where he was in charge of the Eastman house.
Detroit Stage and Radio Entertainers Give Benefit Show

Several score of stage and radio entertainers participated in a benefit show for the unemployed at the Michigan theatre, Detroit, on the evening of December 6.

A newspaper tied up to help sponsor the show and give it the necessary publicity, Edward J. Weisfeld, connected with the local Publicx organization, was in charge of the stage presentation, which included the personal appearance of three Detroit masters of ceremonies. Union musicians, stage hands and operators offered their services gratis.

The performers ran over three hours. All Detroit radio stations contributed talent. George M. Cohan was the headliner on the legitimate bill.

The masters of ceremonies were Lou Kosloff of the Michigan, Bob Nolan of the Fisher and Sam Jack Kantman of the Fox. Arthur Gutow of the Michigan was organist.

Waterfront Dwellers Make Good Local Subjects for "Silver Horde" Promotion

Exploitation for "The Silver Horde" showing at the Golden Gate theatre, San Francisco, was directed at the dwellers on the city's waterfront. Thousands of fishermen are said to make their homes on the waterfront and, since the picture deals with the salmon industry, it made an excellent subject for such promotion.

The Alaska Packers Association has its headquarters in the city. Press reports on the film were posted in the company's offices, where fishermen and cannery workers congregate.

The Golden Gate has introduced a new policy of running previews of pictures it will show the following week. At the last performance on each week's schedule, the film for the coming week is shown, giving the audience an idea of the coming program. So far this system has been highly satisfactory, it is reported.

88 Dogs and Their Masters Visit Port Arthur Strand To See "Anybody's War"

Eighty-eight growling, barking canines came to the Strand theatre, Port Arthur, Texas, with their masters to see "Anybody's War.

The dog attendance was prompted by a newspaper ad stating there would be a matinee at which all boys under a prescribed age would be admitted free if they brought a dog along.

The boys saw the picture, all right, but they had to leave their cars tied to hitching posts in the lobby. What a sight that must have been for passersby, with 88 dogs in the lobby!

Gradual Increase of Type Displays Gets Results for Boyd on "Mother's Cry"

Newspaper advertising was depended upon almost entirely across the first run engagement of "Mother's Cry" at the Boyd in Philadelphia.

Four days before the opening the advertising campaign began with a double column ad headed "A Picture That Will Startle Humanity."

Size of the layouts was increased each day until the opening, when thumbnail sketches of the featured players were given in the display. All the ads are reproduced on this page.

Canada Houses Find Midnight Previews Make Good Business

Theatres in Western Canada are finding it profitable to hold midnight previews of forthcoming attractions. The shows are valuable for the word-of-mouth advertising they bring, as well as for the actual box office returns of the previews themselves.

The Capitol in Edmonton, Alberta, tried the idea on "Madam Satan," while the Empire in the same city, used it on "Up the River.

Similarly, the Palace and Capitol houses in Calgary staged midnight shows for "Monte Carlo" and "Madam Satan," although the regular engagements of these films was not scheduled until a week later. Another highlight in Canadian exploitation of the past month has been the work for marking of Armistice Day. In Toronto, many houses showed trailers. One of these short subjects portrayed a soldier reciting "In Flanders Fields," with music by the Grenadier Guards band.

Shoe Tieup Goes Fox U. C. Free Ads And Free Program

When a shoe store at Berkeley, Cal, which sells Acrolat shoes for children, brought "Miss Acrobatic" to Berkeley for personal appearances in two stores, Clarence Laws, manager of the Fox U. C. theatre, suggested that she should meet muchlarger audiences if she appeared at the Mickey Mouse Club, children's club at the theatre.

The shoe concern immediately picked up the idea and advertised it in several display ads. The result was a full house at the kiddies matinee, a regular Saturday feature at the Fox U. C. There was no cost for the theatre and it got a 15-minute dancing and acrobatic act at no charge whatever.

A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

[Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. They may be lifted as a whole or in part and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.]

John Schiefferrecke, operator of the Opera House, Lenora, Kan., invites his patrons to organize theatre parties by this message:

We Entertain Your Guests

"Do you ever entertain? Why not see the management of the Opera House as to taking your guests to a talkie? Your guests will appreciate it.

"Do you belong to a club or lodge? Why not suggest taking in the talkies as an entertainment feature? It will revive membership enthusiasm.

"School classes and clubs need various methods of raising money. Why not tie up with your theatre management? It has been done other places and the school and theatre both gain.

"Teachers, why not see us as to a line party for your class, or we will give a special rate for the entire class, so pupils, why not surprise teacher? "Business men, does it mean anything to you to have people come to Lenora? Why not advertise your business on our screen? The individual cost is small.

"It will be a credit to anyone who can say to himself, I have done my part to help put Western Electric in Lenora.

"We are doing our best to make a go of it and know the community will do the same and we are willing to entertain suggestions from anyone."

Weekly Amusement Guide Gives List of Sacramento Shows

The West-Co-Ad, a sales advertising concern in Sacramento, Cal., publishes a weekly directory of current and upcoming shows called Sacramento's Official Amusement Guide. A large proportion of the advertisers are theatres in the city.

The herald, which is two inches wide and about six inches high, provides an index of local amusements for each week. The publication has been operating only three months, but in that time it has grown from eight to 16 pages. George Knowles, an official of West-Co-Ad says in his letter: "We want to take this opportunity of letting you know that, of all the many sources of reference on pictures necessary to get out an issue of our amusement guide, the Herald World and Film Buyer is depended upon more than all other publications combined.

"Each week we must know, and have at our finger tips, information in detail on 40 or more releases and it certainly would prove a most difficult task were it not for the dependable information we secure from your medium."

Michigan's "Bust" Party Marks End of Grid Season

Two hundred followers of the University of Michigan football team were guests of the Michigan theatre management a few days ago at the annual "Michigan bust" party given for the football team.

This show is, for the players, supposed to mark the conclusion of the training season, when late hours and pic-a-la-mode may be indulged in.

Stage Shows

Chicago Tivoli
Week Ending December 11

"Farmyard Frolics" consisted of an excellent, well-balanced program, and interspersed with the charming personality of Frankie, it made a stage show that deserved every bit of the hearty applause which it was accorded.

The stage show and the overture, called "The Soloist," were really interrelated, in that Frankie came into the act on the directors platform to sing a little song. H. Leopold Spitalny directed the orchestra in this particularly pleasing rendition, in which several instruments were featured, as per the title, they being the violin, which was played by Hans Moser, the piano, R. Wagner and the cornet, a masterly job of triple-tonguing, performed by Ernest Pochin.

Following the overture, Frankie got off on the director's box while the orchestra was still on the pit stage, and told the audience how he was responsible for the success of the "band." One by one they left, and finally Frankie had to give in and go behind the curtain where they were all awaiting him.

Gregory and Raymond, a couple of clever clowns, amused everyone by playing tune with balloons, tires, inner tubes, hose, and rubber gloves. They rendered "Congoata," "Stars and Stripes." "Kiss Waltz." "Bye, Bye, Blues." "Sweet Mystery of Life," and "Fiddle the Fiddle." They received a hearty applause, and one of them did a bit of tap dancing as an encore.

Williams and Delaney put on a "gay 90's" act that went over like a hot potato, but lacked the unusual, but well done and funny.

The O'Connor Family was perhaps the outstanding feature of the evening. Tappers par excellence and with a clever line of gags also. Mother, son, daughter, and baby brother, who was riot, and got applause of the evening, and little, little, baby brother. (Still inswilling clothes.) They danced, and danced some more, and there was no way to even get the least bit tired of watching. Delightfully natural, they won their audience right off and held them so until the show was over.

The Lambert Ballet did their usual nice work, doing a "hoo" dance to perfection, wholly appropriate with the title of the presentation. The band number, Frankie directed "Where's That Foolish Love?" "Around the Corner," "Tiger Rag," and "I Had a Girl Like You." Playing them in different styles made them unusual, and his dance, where he wore a "radium" hat and gloves, and carried a luminous cane was great.

The best part of the whole program, however, was the presentation to Frankie of a beautiful baton, by Mr. Kelly, representing the Legion Post of Fort Dearborn in behalf of his interest in the boys. Some of them were in the audience, and they certainly gave him a rousing cheer. That's makes us sort of proud of Frankie. Incidentally, it was the 5,000th performance on the stage.

New Aids for Console Work Are Success

Use of P. A. System and Other Apparatus Spells Variety for Future Programs

By ED DAWSON

The writer is well aware that most modern theatres are equipped with Public Address Systems (P. A.) and the latest in talking equipment but finds very few organizers taking advantage of the possibilities where such equipment is installed. He does find the organism taking advantage of the P. A. system via mike, for talking, singing etc. The organism has found great difficulty in many cases in using the talking equipment via mike on account of the "rebound" of the voice, coming out of the big horns and going right back into the mike causing sound interference. I recently visited a Loew theatre where the organism had a singer in the booth, singing via mike over the talking system. The singer received his accomplishment from the public address system. A mike at the console with a loud speaker in the booth gave the singer advantage of hearing the organ.

The singer singing over the big horns gave much more realistic voice quality and the voice coming direct from the screen, apparently from the words of the slides. Also the singer in the booth is spotted so that he sees all that is going on through a window in the booth. Hearing everything the organism says via P. A. system. The organism hearing everything the singer sings via big horns. Allow me to elaborate on this idea in this manner. Say, for instance, that the organism does not talk, can not or does not care to. A plant in the booth could do all the talking while the organism does the playing. I will say more about this idea a little further on in this article.

At this very same Loew theatre I witnessed a very novel stunt. The organism was using a General Electric Victor Radio Victrola and Recording machine. This machine is for home use and is a late idea for sale on the market for the public. The organism was recording the audience's voice singing and then let the audience hear their voice. This stunt encouraged the audience to sing to a greater (Continued on page 35, Column 2)

Central Park Casino. This week’s overtures, consisting of several popular numbers received as much applause as any part of the bill. Opening with "Aunt Hug’s Blues," the orchestra played a "Cheerful Little Earful" and "Body and Soul." John W. Green, composer of "Body and Soul," and also pianist this week came in for his share of applause when he played his popular number.

On the stage, Frankie Jenkins and the Paramount Stage Band presented "What a Night," a Frank Cram-Jub-Club production. Apparently in night- shirt, the stage hand, presented "When Kentucky Bids the World, Good Mornin’" as Hurst, of Hurst & Hurst, sang. The Marie Gambretti Girls, Varet, dressed as cats followed with a novel and entertaining dance routine. The Four Queens, girl tap-dancers nearly staged the show on this night, as the band played "Love You the Way I Do." The girls offer their routine in perfect harmony, gracefully and with a lot of showmanship. Hurst and Vogt, had the house in laughter with their amusing line of chatter and gags. May Joyce, blues singer and guitar player proved pleasing with her delivery of popular songs. Miss Joyce also sings a chorus on "Thank You" and "Singing," Song as the "Gamby" Girls do a well-routined toe dance. The Four Queens, again present a routine of tap dancing that left the audience applauding for more. Paul and Nina Gherari, acrobe performed feats of strength that earned them an encore. Their encore consisted of the dancing of the Black Bottom on their hands (a most difficult feat, which earned them another good hand). Hurst and Vogt, follow with more gags that get the laughs and then, with the entire company lend in the final picture. The girls, all in colored lineups, ornamented the stage to such an extent that the audience was left in awe. The performance was one of the most success and it was appreciated by the boys and girls.

Baltimore Century
Week Ending December 6

"Bustle Fairies," a Loew-Capitol theatre stage unit produced by Chester Hale under the personal supervision of Lewis K. Slade, was offered at Loew’s Century, Baltimore, during the week beginning December 1, bringing Wesley Edly back to that city for an indefinite engagement as master of ceremonies. "Bustle Fairies," opened with the curtains parting on full stage with black and red draperies, representing a rustic woodland scene with a picturesque rustic walk up and back of the musicians seated on stage, with practical steps coming down left stage. From this hung nets dropped with autumn leaves.

The hands in gray costumes was playing and Chester Hale Girls were on in full gowns of white and green, waltzing a routine. As they finish, Wesley Edly comes on from right stage in regular clothes. He takes the baton from Herbert Stange and starts directing. He is followed by Joe Penner, lately with "Vandervelt Revue," in a gray suit and clout hat. They go into a comedy chatter while Penner handled it, clair in funny way. Edly then introduced Reene and Russell, colored tap dancers in black silk hats, blue Eton jackets and vesta and grew trousers, black shoes and white spats. They did a routine, ending with a hand-catch foot specialty and for an encore each did solo steps alternately. Joe Penner on again and more comic work with Edly. Following this came Lillian Dawson, blue singer, in a sleeveless black velvet gown with a low neck trimmed in ribbons and sang "Love Me Or Leave Me," and then "If I Could Be With You!"

The Chester Hale Girls followed in routine in short yellow skirts, with bodices of green with broad trimming of garter headed cloth with hat dresses of samller material and red slippers here trimmed. Then Edly gave his conception of the "St. Louis Blues" directing band with special light. Edly goes into negro step and slips in blue root tune "I Hate to See That Eviden’ Sun Go Down," Big applause and the whole band takes a bow. Edly sings for an encore "One Man Ribber," in blue spot.

Penner on again sings "Hard Luck, Hard Luck, Always Follows Me" in a white spot following with "Then Came the War," with funny steps and hat bobbling on back of head. Then plays "At Dawn," on the violin with comic discord. The girls then on again in varied-clored gypsy costumes, purple waltz-hats, black band-boys, tambourines, going into routine gypsy dance at the end of which they form a tableau on the stage and on the rustle of flowers a stage

This was followed by the trio Theodos, Enrico and Michael in their dance number with a tableau including all on stage for the finale with the organ and band music.

San Antonio Texas
Week Ending December 11

This week we see Jimmie Elrod, the guest master of ceremonies in his Jack Partington Produced Public Unit stage show which is under the caption, "Col- legiate." The star of the band-boys with a clever dancer who I think is Suzette, a graceful stepper of the eccentric type sitting in a swing as the curtain opens. They then sing "Betty Go-13," as the men, dressed in sweaters and wide bottom trousers, followed the young ladies and marched off the stage as the song was ended.

Next up, "Johnny's Home," was first introduced by the guest. c., as being from God’s Country, and other members of the stage band did well with "The Steam Ship," in which was displayed a few soft shoe and other dance steps for which they got a good hand and took one bow. An unilled chair on the violin with a guitar song as its solo, "A Cottage For Sale," and proved he had an excellent voice, and the nation’s beauty of the "Sonny Boys," with whom was Jimmy Elrod and Carson, two comic cut-ups, clowned and played around with some harmless chatter and tomfoolery which wasn’t so hot. Their dances and songs went over fair but failed to click. High-light on the bill was the wonderful way Jimmy Elrod put over "The Song of the Fool," and then encored with "Go Home and Tell Your Mother." He possesses a very fine clear voice and the Texans gave him a big hand.

For the encore, Ernest Haver and the Texas Grand Symphony Orchestra rendered "Song Ellis of 1930."

San Francisco Fox
Week Ending December 11

Walt Reeser, director of the Fox Grand Orches- tra, opened this week’s stage show with an original symphonic arrangement of Charles Wakefield Cad- mon’s "Dawn’s Early Light," as issued by the elevated pit. The air is sung from one of the boxes and the orchestra’s own singer and the musical pre- lude by offering "Three Little Words." The stage show proper is Fanchon and Marco’s "Summer’s Idea" and runs the gamut of spring, summer, fall and winter, with appropriate changes of scenery and costumes. A bevy of girls and boys dance on and there is a lot of singing over the garden wall and peeling through the garden gate. They sing "Here Am I" and do some dancy numbers which demonstrate that it is easier to locate nimble feet than good voices.

The Girls and Boys Dancers, all in yellow, do a lovely ballet number and Ada Bresdah, solo dan- cessa, offers some difficult steps. Lotti Leder, billed as "Violetta Charmer," sings in German and then in English and please with both. She is now in more picturesque picture, but arrived here in ad- vance of her initial film production.

The girls and boys in red and black hunting attires dance a bit on the hunt and (Continued on next page, column 1) are followed by a tap dancer who throws some mean taps. For an organization of three, hold forth in some lively patter, intermingled with some corky looking slips. Slips, slips and other athletic stunts. An imitation of a monkey gets a great laugh, but this is merely a gut gaw, compared to the row that follows two of the company give their view of the antics of a cockroach.

The scenry fades into a winter scene and the dancers, all in snow attire, offer a dance in imitation of skating. A little blonde and two male assistants present an adagio that develops into an endurance contest. The cash young lady hurled from arm to arm in quite an amusing fashion, without grace being lost sight of at any time. This is offered to the strains of "Rhapsody in Blue."

The stage act comes to an end with all on the stage and Frank Melino going through with some of his wildest gynmastics. The act please, without being especially original.

Detroit Hollywood

Week Ending December 11

It's a tableau which is the most entertaining feature on the bill this week. This, two features demand attention. One of them is Baby Peggi Kames, one of Hal Roach's famous young stars, who does a series of imitations. The other is "Tiger," an 8-foot performing Canadian brown bear. Tiger makes his appearance with Gossy, Ora and Smith, and the wrestling matches and face-slapping keeps the audience in a stitch. Tiger is no unworthy match for any man, weighing 750 pounds, and when unintentionally sat down on one of the "planks," the bear's带来er, the effect was hilarious. Revel Brothers and Red, a trio of dancers, are also a part of themselves. The screen feature is "Woopee," with Bob Clarke at the organ console causing the customers to cut the strings on the vocal chords and join in a big sing.

Detroit Hollywood

Week Ending December 6

Detroit, colored stepper and cornelian, is no mean entertainer, as proved by his performance at the Hollywood this week. The boy is a smooth article, and the audience demand more than one encore. Donna and Darrell, two dancers of average ability, and Redman and Walls, the comedy team, make the show only average. Eddie Longshanks, who is well on his way to becoming Detroit's most popular M. G. C. puts the Missy Sisters through their paces in great style, the big number being, "Baby's Birthday Party," in one of the cutting acts, as well as the comedy between Eddie and the drummer, might well be copied. Bob Clarke, Detroit's most popular, and Nancy Carroll in "Laughter," complete the bill.

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending December 11

"Whirl O' Luck" consists of a splendid stage show,ouch, at a high pitch throughout, and leaves one wanting to see more. Some-what unusual in treatment, and decidedly unusual as far as the acts are concerned. As the curtain goes up, there is seen revolving in the background a huge roulette wheel, and each side of it comes the ballet, swaying numbered poodles in a care-free and careless manner to give the idea of abandon-ment and be chased by the wheel. The number "Lucky in Love" is played by the band, and the ballet weaves through two very charming ladies known as the Cutler Sisters. Following comes a band number, and Benny Meredith and his orchestra "Other Baby." The various members of the orchestra show their versatility or rather skill on their chosen instrumments, while Benny adds his contribution to the score by playing from the piano. They don't know the name for it, but it looked like an echoic pipe, however, it had a pleasing deep tone and, as always, Benny played it to perfection. As the end of the number drew to a close, they knocked around with a few sprints and tap, etc., making a whole of an ending and winning for himself much applause.

Bruno Weiss Trio did some exceptional balancing on a pole and a ladder that won instant approval from the audience.

Following this came the production number, introduced by the Cutler Sisters, who announced their dog act, and then the ballet came out dressed as tiny white puppies, running through hoops and doing a little odd dance that was an excellent introdution to Carl Emmy's Pets, a table-full of dogs that tickled the audience pink, and there is little doubt that those dogs could have spent the afternoon entertaining and no one would have gotten tired.

"Sweetheart of My Student Days," played over by the band then eugg with all the members, except the pianist, sitting on the stage in glee club formation. They did a nice piece of work.

Jaynee and Fester, blackface comedians, pulled some gags, songs and dances, and then the finale, the "Kiss Waltz," and the ballet attired in silver and white effects.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending December 4

Arthur Fort West acts as master of ceremonies for Fanchon & Marco's "Gobs of Joy" Idea at Fox's Wisconsin Theatre this week. For the opening epi-sode, the stage was turned into a dance hall, and dancing and comedy with the 12 Dancing Gobs as well as other furnishing no small part of the entertain-ment.

Dolly Kramer sings "Alacma," in a captivating manner with West furnishing the atmosphere and helping the skit along. Scotty Weston next does a bit of fancy hard shoe dancing, assisted by the chorus in round. For that matter, for doing an encore he does a sife and drum tap dance.

Treen engages in a bit of kicklight, supplemented by Dolly Kramer and West. She is followed by four sisters who sing a selection in a prettily manner. A young lady top dancer does her bit to help the act along, after which the chorus resounds in a clever Irish navy dance number. Each is attired in the regulation emerald costume.

Dolly Kramer and West again put on a comedy sketch which includes some dancing. They give way to the 3 Jolly Tars, who dance and trolol about in a comical manner. They succeed in getting their feet tangled and engage in numerous other humorous antics which net them near applause.

For the finale the chorus goes into a snappy dance number, replacing wigs and painted faces and entered in blue and white nautical costumes. The guns on the battleship swing toward the audience with part of the chorus mounted atop and fire blanks while the American flag is floatad from a fleet of battleships moving in a realistic sea in the distance.

A slight innovation is featured when, after the curtains close, West steps upon the stage to make a few wisecracks and advertise next week's Fanchon & Marco show. After several trailer announcements, prior to the showing of scenes from the coming week's attraction, Jack Oakie in "Sea Legs," West leads the Jolly Boys through "Anchors Aweigh!"

degree than the writer ever witnessed in that theater before.

He uses the regular mike equipped on the machine and after the first show found better results by placing a megaphone on the machine before making the record, he announced some wanted noises from recording and which, at the end of the recording, played the record for the audience and received great applause.

In order to secure the full benefit of the recording, the organist placed his P. A. mike in front of the Victor loudspeaker which picked up the recording and taking over the P. A. system, made it much louder to that everyone could hear.

After each record was made and played, he gave it to some patron in the theatre with his compliments.

Getting back to using the mike in the booth for stunts, etc. In the event the booth is not equipped with a mike the writer witnessed a stunt that can replace the mike in this fashion and still use the big talking horns. Make your records on the Victor machine and run them on the non-sync machine. Instead of buzzing for slides, buzz for the stunts, number your records as you would slides, in this manner you get the same results you get with mike via big horn. With the recording ideas, talk direct into the small mike for the Victor machine, place a heavy piece of material over your head to keep all unwanted noises from recording and which will also stop a great deal of surface noise. Use the special needle for recording on the non-sync machine also.

In a tie-up with the local radio dealer, the organist may purchase all the necessary machine parts, etc. The credit for this novel idea and credit for all data on this large system goes to Ted Meyn, featured organist at the Loew's Jersey theatre, Jersey City, N. J.

At Gunter Nite Club

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—San Antonio's Ambassadors of Entertainment are on an Indefinite engagement at the Gunter Nite Club, which is located in the heart of the business district.

Featured principals in the roster of the floor show include Jada Flah, operatic beauty, Paul Mexico, Ruth Reets and Irma Wilkinson, all singers in the Rocket Revue. Sally Luke is in charge of the chorus and also captain of the team, which recently played a successful tour on a big time vaudeville circuit over the nation.

Houston ("Hymie") Waldman and His Brunswick Recording Orchestra are providing the music for the dancing sets and song numbers.

ORGANIST

Henri A. Keates

Is Going on His Sixth Year with Publix-Balaban and Katz Oriental Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

HELLO EVERYBODY—Richards-Mayer, wholesale music dealers, have come out with what I think is the most ambitious projected musical record of the Day, their monthly publication for music dealers. The line I have reference to goes like this: "Modern-Tidbits That Have Come Out By Including Sheet Music in that Christmas Stocking, " "A Thoughtful Gift That Must Bring Melody and Happiness and One that Will Be Appreciated for a Long Time to Come."... Just glanced through one of the daily newspapers the other morning and, according to Bob Eilper (of the Mod. and Exh.), Karl Bonawitz, one of Philadelphia's leading organists, plays popular tunes with his feet alone on the world's largest harmonium. ... While out to interview Stanley Smith, Paramount dealer, who has been knocking them at the New York Paramount for the past week, I met John W. Green (no relation to John W. Green, Sr.), a young man of good repute who is also appearing at this theatre. Stan is winning new friends with his fine singing and John W. is winning new friends with his rendition of "Blue Smoke, the Harms' number that he wrote for Libby Holman, for the show, "There's a Cowd." Green is on the musical and songwriting staff of Paramount Inc., and Danny informs me that Mr. Bobby Crawford, president of this firm, has just assumed and is to have full charge of all the music and activities for Warner Brothers. Mr. Crawford will, in the near future, make his office with Mr. Solomon in the Harmon Big Band. during the Christmas season and by reason of the fact that Artie Melling, well known along music row, has just been placed in charge of all exploitation of this music line and is to be Artie Melling's assistant. ... There is quite a little story to the acquisition of the new Wimtrak tune, "Daughter of the Latin Quarter." It's trip to the Mexican states that has been of decided romantic interest. A representative of B. Feldman & Co., European representatives for a number of music companies, heard the tune in one of the small Montemarte cafes while on a business trip to Paris. The lady suddenly took notice of the number, the evident popularity of the Latin quarter, and after heavy cajoling on the part of Feldman, Mr. Feldman, her music publisher, and Mr. Melling, the owner of the rights, made his way to him the numerous times he heard it played. He made an immediate decision to track the number for his company. Different versions were released, the writer, Josef Alexander, a Latin Quarter artist who had never heard of written music. Alexander was recognized as the man throughout the world, and after a song was signed on a royalty basis at once by B. Feldman & Co., Feldman acquired the world-wide American rights to "Daughter of the Latin Quarter" to M. Wimtrak & Sons. The American lyrics to the song, as it is known to us, were written by Al Rubin and Joe Burke. ... The trend of modern industry towards "More for the Dollar" has been followed by practically every producer of this country's necessity and luxury product, but it remained for Jay Wit- mark, vice president and general manager of the Red Star to visualize this in the world of music publishing. Mr. Wimtrak seeing a latent demand for sheet music which has been left dormant due to over production, had ordered all wholesale prices on Red Star publications cut 25 cents. Jay Witmark, a jobber and syndicate store prices will be 15 cents a copy in hundreds, 15 cents in small quantities, except as advertised the Red Star Music Company will result in a tremendously renewed interest in popular music. It has been pointed out that popular songs of today have been improved in construction and style, and that radio broadcasting has activated acute demand for sheet music, which demand can be capitalized fully with the new prices. The Red Star publications will enable the retailer to set a selling price of 25 cents on sheet music and still make a good gross margin. The rights protected are based on it to a material saving. The need for a new price on all sheet music, such as Red Star is further proof that this has been felt both by industry, and it is with a feeling of utmost confidence in the success of their policies, and with a satisfaction in doing good for the entire industry that Red Star dedicates itself on this move.

ORGAN SOLOS

HENRI KRATES (Oriental Chicago) played a 15-minute program entitled "Red Feather Days," which was another example of this type of entertainment. Although it was another example of this type of entertainment, but we might say that any day that one hears Henri at the organ could be classed as a red feather day. But—the opening number was "Happy Days," played in conjunction with New Year's Day, then followed songs appropriate for the day. Thanksgiving, Christmas, etc., including the following songs: "My Mild Irish Rose," "Singing in the Rain," "My Love for You," which was sung by Nellie Miller singing from the box, "Betty Co-0d," "Cheer Up," "Jingle Bells," "Gloves Through the Tuleps." Keats plays so easily, it is a pleasure to watch as well as listen, and many in the audience don't listen—they sing.

TED MEYER (Jersey City Loew's Jersey) for his first year's anniversary presented "Anniversary Banquet," an organ novelty, in which musical food is served. An entire course from the cocktail to the dessert is served, but the highlight of this solo is the actual recording of the voices of the audience with a unique contrivance (which is fully explained on the first page of MUSIC & TALENT). Up to this time the novelty consisted of the singing of "I'll Be With You," "Sing Something Simple," "Song of the Volga Boatman" and "Three Little Words." Many of the audience were astounded but nevertheless caught the words of "When the Organ Played at Twilight," which was actually recorded on a record. Immediately after finishing the song, Meyn played the record on a phonograph, thereby killing any doubts in the minds of the audience. A special chorus of "Congratulations" followed by "I Still Get a Thrill" closed the novel and entertaining solo. His first anniversary was a huge success.

AL BORING (Baltimore Century) after introductory choruses during which spot was thrown upon him as he sat at the console, turned to microphone and announced to the audience that he would give them an intermission from singing and would play (Fanz von Suppe's) "Poet and Peasant" overture with a novelty introduction played entirely by the feet. He then turned to the console and played the introduction with his feet and then returned to the composition with both hands and feet. There was big applause at the end of the piece and audiences of the Century still like classical music presented with feeling.

BERNIE COWHAM (Phoenix Long Island Keith-Albee) introduced another of his entertaining musical numbers in this week's solo. This one is called, "Screw to Nuts," and is a musical dinner, with songs containing special references to each course. A number that is fairly well-known to his audience, opened with his usual signature song, "Voice of the R.O."

He then turned toward the audience and showed them what they were eating. (He was dressed in a tweed and had on a chef's cap and apron.) After a most hearty welcome by the audience, Berni explained in his own inimitable manner, just what the solo was all about, and then prepared to serve the course, each one being a popular song. Starting with, "My Baby Just Caras Me," as an appetizer, and following this with a soup overture. (Here Berni explained orally, that he used a can of Alphabet soup to make this course.) He then played "If I Could Be With You, One Hour Tonight," making the words appear on the slide this way: "IF I COULD BE WITH U, ONE HOUR TONIGHT," etc. Next came the salad and this was "When the Organ Played at Twilight." The next "course" (a special version to "Sunday in the Street") consisted of meats, vegetables, etc. and was the meal, proper. "Here Comes the Sun," as the dessert was, of course, the finale.

This entire solo was the usual community singing stunt, but it was elaborated on, and served in such a pleasuring manner as to make it chock full of entertainment value. The audience applauded, until Berni nearly had to give them a second helping of "dessert.

MAX MARLISN (Brooklyn Loew's Metropolitan) offered an organ solo of contrasts this week, entitled, "Which Do You Prefer, Old Timers or Modern Songs?" In which with a solo of the Little Things in Life," which he played as an introduction, he next orally via miles asked the audience to settle the old question of old songs or new. Under the following songs (which, incidentally were all sung so well, Martin in the orchestra couldn't distinguish which songs the audience did like best) "Just a Little Closer," "Oh, How I Hate To Get Up in the Morning," "I'm Yours, Good Old Summer Time," "Little White Lies," and "After the Ball." Full house at show and Martlin received good reception.
Let’s the Other Fellow Sleep
I WAS VERY HAPPY, ALSO VERY proud, to receive your Award. My thanks are wholeheartedly endorsed by Mr. Harris, by our projectionist, and by every Delharcro employe.

Our plans are to have a special preview of some big photoplay at which time we shall have a formal presentation of the sound plaque. We feel that the Herald-World is interested in the outcome of our preview and if same meets with success we shall send you the details.

We try to exhibit our motion picture product in such a way that it will benefit the whole motion picture industry. I started in the motion picture business by passing heralds to the patrons and the greatest thing that I have ever learned is to let the other fellow do the sleeping.

I again wish to thank you for the Award and in appreciation of it shall try to make Delharcro more and more worthy of it.—Charles A. Ostrander, Delharcro theatres. The Delmer F. Harris Co., Concordia, Kans.

Prominent in Lobby
YOUR BEAUTIFUL BRONZE PLAQUE received and we wish to thank you very much. We have given it a prominent place in our lobby and are very proud of it.—A. A. Suszycki, Gail theatre, Mauston, Wisc.

HERE ARE SOME REPORTS ON PICTURES. The Sea Wolf (Fox) is too gruesome. A flop at the box office. Bukop Murder Case (M.G.M.) is a good program picture. Sweethearts on Parade (Para) is a fair program picture, but the title is misleading. Skin Deep (WB) is a fair but is no drawing card. Three Faces East (WB), a very good mystery picture. Dancing Sweetsies (WB) is also a dandy picture. Sue Carol is wonderful in this. Too bad for the Corner (Col)—nothing to it. These two birds are about the same in every picture. Young Desire (U), pretty good. Oh, Sailor, Behave (WB) is very good. Olson and Johnson are okay. The Sap (WB) is a fair program picture. Soldiers and Women (Col), also a fair program picture. Montana Moon (M.G.M.)—If your patrons like suggestive talking in pictures, this is okay. It gets plenty of laughs.—P. G. Hila, New Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.

Two Good Ones
WE HAVE RECENTLY PLAYED NEAR the Rainbow’s End (Tiffany), disc print—good print and recording. And The Foy Of (R.K.O)—good print recording. —L. Devos manager, Miers theatre, Schoharie, N. Y.

Encourages Managers
IT IS QUITE DIFFICULT TO CONVEY, on paper, to you our sincere appreciation of the signal honor of being awarded, THE AWARD OF MERIT.

The Exhibitors Herald-World is certainly to be congratulated in the manner in which it has made these awards. Also for the desire it has created among theatre managers to perfect manner in which the award was formally presented to the Drexla theatre. In addition to the newspaper space, we used an attractive screen too.

Again thanking you for the consideration and honor given our theatre.—Frank H. Bell, Manager, Drexla theatre, Deland, Fla.

Senator at Presentation
RECEIVED THE BEAUTIFUL PLAQUE, of which we are very proud. Now we are going to have a presentation when the elite of the town will be present, including Senator Peck, editor of the Stroud Democrat, I shall later or send you a photograph of the theatre with the plaque showing in full view in the lobby. Will give you full details after the presentation.—Magramer & Tindale, Ritz theatre, Stroud, Okla.

A Projectionist’s Point of View
HERE ARE A FEW REPORTS ON recent showings. Queen High (Par) is a very good show from Paramount. Case of Sergeant Gitscha (R.K.O.)—we failed to see anything in this one and are glad we only had it booked one night. Holiday (P) is a pleasing picture which we ran two nights to fair business. Alias French Girtie (R.K.O.) has a good story, but patrons want Bebe to sing. Since “Rico Rita” patrons have found that Bebe Daniels can sing and they want her to continue in all her pictures. The Girl Said No (M.G.M.) is a good Saturday night show. (What ails M.G.M recording? I had to run my fader clear to the top notch and would have gone up farther if I could?)

Here are some shorts. Ride Em Cowboy (P), not so good. Lightning Express No. 8 (U) seems to please and is above the average serial. No talking in this serial, only musical score and effects. Dizzy Dishes (Par) is a very poor single-reeler, but this is the first poor one we have had in a good while from Paramount. The Dear Slayer (R.K.O.)—we will be glad when these “Record Breakers” are over. I don’t see where they get the “Record Breaker” stuff. PATHE Sound Reviews—some good, some bad, take ‘em or leave ‘em. PARAMOUNT News pleases our patrons.—E. R. Tinkham, sound projectionist, Civic theatre, M. M., Me.

In Conspicuous Place
I TRUST YOU WILL PARDON MY DELINQUENCY in thanking you for your kind presentation of the Herald-World plaque which we cherish very highly.

We have placed the plaque in a very conspicuous spot in our lobby, and it is greatly appreciated by our patrons. Several times we have heard comments by our patrons addressing their friends whom they invited here from other neighborhoods. “Your movie theatre didn’t get one of those,” and then the top button pops off the vest.

Enclosed you will find our weekly program, with a reproduction of the plaque on the cover page. You will note just part of the plaque is used. This was on the suggestion of the printer, to make it more legible.

Again thanking you, and wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.—H. M. Urbich, Manager, Lane Court theatre, Chicago, III.

Plaque Framed in Lobby
I THANK YOU VERY MUCH FOR THE BEAUTIFUL BRONZE PLAQUE which you awarded this theatre for the high quality of its sound reproduction. I have the plaque framed and am proudly displaying it in the lobby. The editor of the paper gave a nice writeup about it and we are glad when people stop to see and read the plaque and then say “You deserve it.” We are ever striving to please our public, and your cooperation with all exhibitors, as well as myself, is greatly appreciated and cannot be expressed by a few words. Again I sincerely thank you.—H. E. Ruh, Ozark theatre, Berryville, Ark.

Beautiful and Attractive
WE RECEIVED THE AWARD OF MERIT Plaque today. We compliment you on its beauty and attractiveness, and take this means of thanking you very kindly for presenting it to us.

We expect to take full advantage of its possibilities. Should you have publicity sheets or anything of that nature, they would be appreciated very much.

Again thanking you.—H. Cowen, Colonial theatre, Hondo, Texas.

La Von Boone Succeeds Smith
Elmer Smith, who was appointed manager of the Ohio theatre here about six weeks ago, is reported to have resigned under mysterious circumstances. He is succeeded by W. La Von Boone.

Proving again that...
An Automobile Not a Kingdom—For a "Hoss"

Jimmie Gregory was driving peacefully along the highway, conjugating up new ways to interest his patrons, but nevertheless, driving along, when all of a sudden, there in front of him was a—"hoss." No, he wasn't stuck in the mud, nor was there any good reason, so we understand, why this particular equine should be present, but—there he was. And then the big problem, the "hoss" or the ditch? But Jimmie has never been known to be cruel to animals, and he chose the ditch. And although, to viewers and a humanitarian, this "hoss" can still play tag on the highway.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

WHEN good fellows get together—an appropriate phrase for the delightful housewarming party held at the new quarters of Advance Trailer, located at 56 E. Ninth street. Everybody was there, that is, at some time or other during the Wednesday afternoon, and John Mendikow played the indulgent and genial host. M. Van Praag, sales manager of the organization, who is on his way to the Coast, added his beaming countenance to the august assembly, and all in all, it was a "purty good party."

FORMERLY located at 845 South Wabash, the Chicago office has moved to this new "locale," which has been groomed to king's taste, and is now going full blast. One thing we noticed. We see no reason why wintry winds should ever cause anyone to discomfit while in this new "hangout," for the size of the radiator, well—drop in and see it.

Chicago is to be the central shipping point for the 13 middle states, we understand, and when the orders begin to flood the office (we hope the radiator never bursts) we imagine that 56 E. Ninth will be a rather busy place. Johnny is all set to go and there seems little doubt but what the Chicago office of Advance will do just that little thing—advance. Of course, as far as advancing in the matter of personal estimates, that's fixed, but in a business way—well, we offer no opposition.

Otto Benisch, of the Brookfield theatre in Brookfield, Ill., must be a hunter of the old school, or else his aim is infallible, for he drove down on the avenue a short while ago, and from a look at his car, one would almost say that here was a moving meat market, venison only. Four buck deer decorated fore and aft and both sides of the "hides," besides two Christmas trees. Looks as though the hunger situation in at least one household will not become acute. We haven't heard how he shot them, but we've never yet heard of four deer standing in a row long enough to be shot by one bullet. That wasn't even mentioned. We just happened to think of it as we were writing this.

Henri Ellman, who has been in New York for some time, has returned to Chicago to take up his duties as manager of the General Sports Amusement corporation, located at 730 South Wabash. Golf Bowl is the name of the product which Henri is handling in the states of Illinois, Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan. It is a rather amusing game, much the same as golf, but scores in the same way that bowling is checked up. We understand from Henri that exhibitors in the East are installing such amusement apparatus, finding that it augments nicely the profits made from the theatre. We are quite enthusiastic about it, and we must confess (we stopped and looked it over) it looks rather interesting.

Peck Gomersall, who was operated on for appendicitis in Indianapolis a week or so ago, is reported to be improving rapidly, and expects to back at his desk again in due time. We say back at his desk. He's at it with Chicago, but he's usually out "on the broad highway," visiting various Universal exchanges. Here's for a quick convalescence.

Andy Sharick, exploitation and advertising "whiz" who has taken over the duties formerly handled by Charlie Loewenberg, who is now located in Madison, Wisconsin, got snowed in just outside of Cleveland about two weeks ago, and was stranded for four hours. But that was nothing compared to what some poor people did, some were stranded at farm houses for two or three days, and in some isolated places, shortage of food and water was imminent. Cleveland and vicinity were pretty hard hit, there being something like five feet of snow which with the Auditorium in Littleville, that we had here didn't amount to much. Andy was at his desk when he told us this, but there's no telling how long he'll be there, for he's either leaving for a trip, or expected back.

Aaron Saperstein is back from a trip to New York, where he attended a meeting of Allied. And now that we've mentioned Allied, we might say that the organization which Aaron heads is hereafter to be known as the Allied Theatres of Illinois, Inc. Also, the election and installation of permanent officers (we don't know just what the term of office is) will take place some time in January.

Just a few notes, on paragraphe: Charles Leist is manager of the new DuPage theatre in Lombard, Ill., Dave Rice is running the Ambassador, Harry Miller, formerly of the Uptown theatre in Racine, is now back in town; Milton Simon is handling some German light pictures, Allen Dezel, and is traveling the whole country; Nate Slep- yan, owner of the Sheridan theatre in North Chicago, and the Auditorium in Libertyville, breezed into the Filmack office on that delightful spring day of last week, and it seems that there is a new move afoot to build a film "mart" at 13th and Wabash.

Bill Weinschenker, manager of Sono Art's Chicago office, is a high spirit, and well he might be. Aside from being enounced in a delightful, brand new office, he has had the satisfaction of wondering when he was going to get time to sign contracts. The Midwest circuit is all closed for Sono Art's product, Public theatres in Rockford, Public in Quincy and the Warner Brothers houses in Hammond and Elkhart, Indiana, and 12 houses on the Allied Circuit have been signed up, that seems like a lot of signing, and evidently it is responsible for the happy smile on Bill's face. Looks as though congratulations were in order for his "excessive" being. Well, here they are, Bill.

Sojourners of the avenue are fast learning about Klondike, although we doubt whether many of them have ever been in Alaska.

Sam Schaefer hardly has a minute to say hello, but it's alright, for he's busy, and when that is the case we can forgive anybody. However, he told us about one interesting thing that must be unique. Some certain person who manages handles everything from mouse traps to machine guns, including jewelry, wrote and asked Schaefer if there would be one of exchanging diamonds for some theatre chairs, as he wanted to fit up a skating rink. Diamonds for theatre chairs. Isn't that unique? Money was rather tight, and as he had plenty of diamonds, why not return to barter? Incidentally, Sam has been receiving many compliments on his installation of seats at the Orpheum theatre, and also at the new Essaness Vogue, a theatre that has created a good deal of favorable comment.

We dropped into Tom's Restaurant for a sandwich, and ran into what a surprise, and also what food. It was a pleasure—why wouldn't it be with good food, charming waiters, and a table set scattered everywhere. Those who haven't been in since it was remodeled have a treat in store for them. The interior adds a grace and dignity to a very delightful pastime, or one that should be—lunching.

We understand that Al Dezel, general manager of Road-Show Pictures, upon being informed that the "Primrose Path" had been approved by the head of the Virginia censor board, has sold the rights of the picture in that territory to F. W. Packer.

And Now to Get Through the "Doorway"

Archie Mayo, genial director of Warner Brothers' "The Doorway to Hell," dropped into town the other day for a few hours, before continu- ing his trek West. He was talking with Max Stahl, genial (we like the word) manager of Educational's Chi- cago office, and he is said to have remarked, and there was a twinkle in his eye: "Well, I've made 'The Doorway to Hell' and I expect to get the rest of the way before Winter is over."
Any picture can have this charming, atmospheric color

Every mood of the screen can be expressed in charming, atmospheric, overall tints, by means of Eastman Sonochrome Tinted Positive Films. They reproduce sound with striking fidelity, being designed especially with this function in mind. Best of all, they can be used in any picture, for they cost no more than ordinary black-and-white positive film.

Greater love hath no woman that this—that she will go to the brink of Hell for a man.

He had been up. Now he could go no further and be a man. Only one fine thing left—his love for the girl.

And she? Left her decency, her all, to go down with him and bring him back. Redeeming the irredeemable with love and for love.

Two young souls fluttering bravely. Painfully striving for the sunlight together.

Gaynor and Farrell! The foremost lovers of the screen, now together again in a story which wrings the heart, make love triumphant!

Outstanding. Box office, with a big B. O.

Running Time
The fixed speed for sound film is 90 feet per minute. This makes the running time of 1,000 feet 11 to 11½ minutes. Knowing the length of a picture and the running time per 1,000 feet, the running time of the picture can be easily computed.

The variance in the speed at which silent film is run through the projector makes it impossible to compute the running time of a silent picture with any degree of accuracy.

A projectionist should design for a film speed of 90 feet per minute—the same as the fixed speed for sound film—but the rate at which the film normally runs varies from 70 to 110 feet per minute, and infrequently as high as 125 feet per minute.

Running Time
The fixed speed for sound film is 90 feet per minute. This makes the running time of 1,000 feet 11 to 11½ minutes. Knowing the length of a picture and the running time per 1,000 feet, the running time of the picture can be easily computed.

The variance in the speed at which silent film is run through the projector makes it impossible to compute the running time of a silent picture with any degree of accuracy.

A projectionist should design for a film speed of 90 feet per minute—the same as the fixed speed for sound film—but the rate at which the film normally runs varies from 70 to 110 feet per minute, and infrequently as high as 125 feet per minute.

TAXED TALKING COMEDIES day in the life of a London walks dolphin. He is a very busy man, and his life is full of adventures.
Thus, the play is a series of short scenes, each of which is a comedy in itself.

THE FRESHMAN'S GHOST (1930). Morton Shannon, Kay Cooke. A gay, rollicking adventure based on the true story of a young man who escaped from his class because he was too lazy to work. He ends up in a strange situation, but the situation is made fun of by the audience. The play is a comedy, and its humor is always evident.

THE WILKINS MURDER CASE (1930). One reel. Released Dec. 25, 1930. The Wilkins murder case is a mystery. The plot is a complex one, and the action is kept moving at a fast pace. The characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is clever.

THE ULTIMATE CRIME (1931). One reel. Released Jan. 4, 1931. The ultimate crime is a mystery. The plot is a complex one, and the action is kept moving at a fast pace. The characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is clever.

Merit never fails to win out. The public has been quick to recognize the amazing comic and dramatic qualities of Marie Dressler. Here is one of the outstanding screen artists of all time. You've seen “Caught Short” and “Min and Bill.” But wait till you see Miss Dressler with Polly Moran in “Reducing.” Take your hat off to genius.

A NEW STAR IS BORN!

Glamorous personality of Marlene Dietrich captures all America! While “THE BLUE ANGEL” enthralls S. R. O. crowds in its premiere run at the Rialto, New York, “MOROCCO” (Gary Cooper—Marlene Dietrich—Adolphe Menjou—Von Sternberg) sweeps the country like a golden tornado! Fourth capacity week at the Rivoli, New York, with the fourth week-end even bigger than the third. Sell-out three weeks in advance at Grauman’s Chinese Theatre, Hollywood, at $1.50 admission. Record week’s business in three days at Newman, Kansas City. Topped highest previous gross at Uptown, Boston. In the pre-Christmas slump season at that! “MOROCCO”. The Wonder Picture with the Wonder Star!

PARAMOUNT Headquarters for Real Stars!
MIGHTY MIRTHQUAKE!

Now Paramount brings talkie box offices the stage’s greatest comedian—the Grand Nabob of Nonsense—ED WYNN! And HOW HE CLICKS!

"'Follow the Leader' is the funniest contribution ever made by a stage comedian to the talkies. Even better than Marx Brothers”, says N. Y. Graphic. "Wynn one of the brightest lights of cinema comedy. Threatens audiences with hilarious heart failure”, yells N. Y. American.

"Wynn is a joy to behold and listen to. Provokes full quota of mirth”, says N. Y. Times. "Even funnier on screen than on stage”—N. Y. Eve. World.

Married life is funny — to those on the outside. Lowe is box office. His every picture proves it. "Scotland Yard" is one of the big money getters of the year.

Now comes this delightful domestic drama of a too-busy husband, a spunky wife, a little lad and his funny mutt — a mixture of laugh and pathos, human, humorous, wholesome.

Nothing goes to the heart quicker than a boy and his dog, unless it's a lovable wife and her likeable husband trying to make up.
What is the MAJOR Achievement of 1930?

The Film Daily Wednesday, December 10, 1930

* * * AS THIS dizzy year of 1930 wobbles to a close, what outstanding achievements can be chalked up for the film biz? we will select one that may astonish you... it is American development of the world-wide foreign field... of course you will snicker and haw-haw at that one... when you survey the foreign biz all shot to pieces by the talkie upset this past year... but we're referring to development of the Newsreel... Fox Movietone News, to be more explicit... what Clayton P. Sheehan, foreign manager of Fox, and Truman H. Talley, general manager of the Newsreel, have done this past twelve months constitutes one of the MAJOR trade accomplishments of the year... it reads like a page from a modern Arabian Nights... right now this organization is turning out 37 foreign editions every week... Talley has established four major foreign Movietone organizations... plans are in the works for News Reel Theaters in the important cities of the world... one year ago the British Movietone News was started in London... four months later Fox Actualites Parliant was established in Paris... then came Fox Tonende Wochenschau in Berlin... and in far off Sydney, Australia, the Australian Movietone was started... for each of these organizations it was necessary to establish independent sound camera units, editorial offices, and manufacturing plants... every one of the 37 editions is edited especially with a view to local prejudices and interests... practically every important foreign country gets its Fox newsreel made just for its particular VIEWPOINT... mull that one over, if you think this was a kindergarten stunt that Messrs. Sheehan and Talley put over in ONE little year... it's a job for diplomats... editing newsreels so as not to offend nationalistic spirit... and so well has the stupendous task been handled, that the various nationals consider their particular newsreel a NATIVE INSTITUTION... one American producing concern has solved the foreign problem so far as the newsreel is concerned and for 1931 what producer is going to do the same thing for the feature talkies... it CAN be done...

FOX MOVIE TONE NEWS

Achieving world wide success twice every week!
Showmanship is merely another name for salesmanship and salesmanship in motion pictures begins with the producers.

After all, theatres have nothing to sell except seats. And pictures are, in effect, seat sellers.

The magical change of red losing figures to black profit totals in box office reports made by Pathé pictures is monumental proof that they are the industry's greatest seat sellers.

In "HOLIDAY", "HER MAN", "BIG MONEY" and "SIN TAKES A HOLIDAY" is the showmanship that means salesmanship which makes a magical change from red to black.

Bring back "HOLIDAY" and "HER MAN" for a return engagement and watch them make this magical change a second time—they'll repeat in a big way.

An Interchange of Gifts

The motion picture industry and the public are exchanging gifts this Christmas tide which are thoroughly appreciated by each recipient.

The industry in the past year has presented the public with many outstanding productions, based upon a definite policy of making quality the prime consideration rather than quantity. To this the public has responded in a manner that unmistakably has established the truth of the fact that the picture business, as a whole, is not subject to external conditions in the degree that other industries are affected.

Studio executives have been showing greater and greater mastery of the problems of sound in pictures, complex problems which had required experimentation in order to achieve the desired balance. While the period of experimentation has not passed, it will not pass as long as the ingenuity of man is busy devising new improvements, nevertheless the year 1930 has witnessed the application of the best results of experimentation as workable rules of production technic. With the arrival at those conclusions have come studio policies that have been mirrored in new types of motion pictures evincing a higher standard of product all along the line. That is the gift of the industry to the public.

The industry, too, has reached a realization of the fact that it has definitely contributed to the sum total of human enjoyment, that in the motion picture theatre is a surecase of the cares of the world outside. There should be, and is, a tremendous satisfaction to all who have done their part in that accomplishment.

More material, however, is the response that the public has made in attendance at theatres. Many are the evidences that, while attendance has not reached the maximum which theatre owners would have liked, it nevertheless has attained such proportions as to prove anew that the prosperity of the motion picture industry does not change with the trade winds as do other businesses. For that the industry should be grateful.

A Pulling Team

Good product and adequate advertising. Not a new team but one that knows how to get to its destination. One that pulls together and draws the public to the theatres. Mr. Morris has said: "There is nothing in the way of giving a good story a perfectly adequate production, and then do not attempt to hide it with a bit of parsimony. Spend money in telling the public about it."

Pointing out that "the greatest error that can possibly be made at this time is to cheapen product." Mr. Morris cited as the foundation for his optimistic outlook the grosses recently achieved on pictures, grosses which, he said, "would have been considered extraordinarily good even in the most prosperous period."

These convictions are not alone those of Mr. Morris. They represent a cross-section of the views of the industry's leaders in general. Mr. Adolph Zukor recently pronounced "Advertise and Work" as the principle upon which Paramount Publix is maintaining its successful progress. It will be recalled also that Mr. Carl Laemmle announced an increase in the advertising budget of Universal Pictures Corporation in substantiation of that same confidence in continued good business. So too with others.

There is an exact parallel in the case of the theatre owner, to book good product and advertise it. "Persons who are tightening their purse strings are doing the picture industry a lot of harm," said Mr. Morris, and the exhibitor who shortens his newspaper copy is only lengthening the route to the box office for his potential patrons.

It is gratifying to note that enterprising theatre owners are keenly aware of that fact and are keeping open the road to their public by maintaining a policy of consistent and adequate advertising in the daily newspapers.

When special attractions outside the amusement business are to appear in the community as direct competition with the theatre, the exhibitor knows, and no special study of group psychology is required to convince him, that he must strengthen and fortify his appeal to the public in order to retain its interest and thus offset the competition.

When other circumstances or conditions, such as those of the Christmas season, tend to draw the public's attention away from the theatre, the exhibitor with vision will not only maintain the volume of advertising and exploitation but will also increase it.

Another Hearst Outburst

Once more William Randolph Hearst has taken up the cudgel for legal censorship of motion pictures, and has branded it in heavy type on the front pages of his newspapers.

While the latest Hearstian outburst is directed primarily toward the stage, he adds that "the censorship of moving pictures operates on the whole to the advantage of the producers."

Did the banning of "The Big House" in the state of Ohio, purely a political maneuver and later retracted, operate to the advantage of the producers? Did the decision of a woman censor in Evanston, Ill., to bar a picture she had not even seen operate to the advantage of the producers? These are not selected cases; they are representative of the innate fallacy of political censorship.

Mr. Hearst continues: "The censorship would be better if it were a national censorship instead of a series of state censorships with considerable conflicting ideas and standards." But national censorship would inevitably bring the very same injustices to the industry and in a worse degree, because it would make politics the judge of what is and what is not to be in any motion picture. Political appointees, politically and job-minded, would sit in judgment.

The Production Code is the industry's own solution of the censorship problem, and is the only workable solution.

Solve Problem of Child Patron In New Talking Film Product

RCA, Auto Cinema
Perfect Automatic Projector for Ads
May Be Used for Advance Trailers Or Feature Sequences in Lobby of Theatre
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—RCA Photophone in collaboration with the Auto Cinema Corporation, has perfected a novel automatic advertising projector, which is designed to accommodate standard size sound film. The new apparatus is a development of the silent projector, of a large studio in this city, which has had on the market for several months.

The machine itself operates within a metal housing which occupies a space of less than two square feet, and the projector is motor driven with power supplied from an ordinary lamp socket. The projector, amplifier, motor and film speaker are built into a cabinet similar to the radio console and stands about five feet, six inches in height.

The picture is thrown upon a transparent screen, 18 by 22 inches, set near the top of the cabinet. The entire equipment, including the cabinet, weighs less than 100 pounds. The film is endlessly self winding, providing for continued repetition. Sound amplification can be controlled to any desired volume.

The work is being done under the supervision of M. C. Batsel, chief engineer for RCA and Lester C. Bowen, chief engineer of Auto Cinema.

Sydney A. Abel, general sales manager of RCA Photophone, pointed out the possibilities of using the new apparatus in the theatre lobby for the projection of sequences from features currently running, and for the advertising of standard products in hotel lobbies, railroad stations, department stores or auditoriums.

The machines will be leased by Auto Cinema and serviced by RCA Photophone. It is expected that models for demonstration will be completed within the next two weeks.

Plan for Large Studio
Discussed by General Electric's Executives
(Special to the Herald-World)

SCHENECTADY, Dec. 18.—At a dinner attended by the officers of the General Electric Company here recently plans were discussed for the construction, possibly in the near future, of an immense studio in this city.

The proposed plant will be used principally for the production of commercial films, especially for the products of those companies which are affiliated either directly or indirectly with General Electric.

To Operate Theatre on Sunday for Unemployed
(Special to the Herald-World)

RULEVILLE, MISS., Dec. 18.—The Ruleville theatre at Ruleville will be operated the remainder of the winter on Sundays by the Ruleville Relief Association for the benefit of charity. All receipts above the actual expenses of operating will be turned over to a citizens' committee to be used for assisting those out of employment.

Report New Theatre Chain to Be Started
By Detroit Showmen
(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, MICH., Dec. 18.—It was learned today from an authentic source that a new picture of theatres under the direction of an experienced group of former Detroit showmen, will begin operations shortly after the first of the year. A circuit of from five to 15 houses, seating from 500 to 2,500, will feature not only motion picture entertainment, but an unusual array of stage shows, it was stated. More details will be reported later.

Find Safe Too Strong, But Gum Box Doesn't Stick
(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18.—Amateur safe-crackers expended a lot of energy in an attempt to loot the safe of the Milano theatre here, but only succeeded in denting the strong box. Finally, they had to lower their sights and turn their attention to a gum vending machine, which netted them about $12.

"All Quiet" on Broadway Again After German Censors Put Ban in Effect

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Universal is taking advantage of the tremendous publicity being given at the moment to "All Quiet on the Western Front" in Germany, where it has been banned by the censors, by reopening the film at the Central theatre on Broadway, December 20.

At its previous New York run, the war film, which received the Academy award for the best film of 1919, ran for 16 weeks. It is announced that "All Quiet" has passed the Austrian censor body and will open in Vienna on January 7.

Children's Renewed Interest Boosts Totals of Attendance

Youngsters Contribute One-Third of Patronage at "Tom Sawyer" Showings, Publix Analysis Reveals

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Solution of the problem of holding child patronage in the era of sound pictures has been achieved. Children will derive just as much enjoyment from talking pictures as they did in the days of the silent, and will register that fact unmistakably by their attendance at the theatre. Increased total patronage is the result.

These developments are reflected in a report just completed by the theatre analysis department of Publix.

The report indicates that nearly one-third of the total audience which saw "Tom Sawyer" at Tom Sawyer's Theatre, in the week-end run was composed of children. This compares with a usual percentage of 15 to 18 on child attendance. The analysis was based on manager's reports, and was computed from actual figures.

The Strand in Plainfield headed the list with a 38 per cent child audience; the Paramount, Youngstown, Ohio, showed 37 per cent, with several others close to these figures. The general average for the week run houses was 29.7 per cent.

In the split week theatres, though the result was more difficult to determine accurately, it was nevertheless clear that the attendance of children for the film was decidedly higher than for normal weeks. The average figure for these theatres was put at 30 per cent.

This heavy draw of children had a decided effect on the box office, the report showed. The State, Hibbing, Minn., noted an increase for the first two days of the run of 176 per cent over any previous two days in the history of the house. At the State in Sioux Falls, the former average for the similar period was topped at 98 per cent.

8 Racine Theatres
Reopen After Union
Accepts Cut Wages

(Special to the Herald-World)

RACINE, Wis., Dec. 18.—Eight theatres here reopened this week after being closed for two weeks over a wage dispute.

The wage scale difficulty between exhibitors and projectionists has been definitely settled, with operators in neighborhood houses agreeing to take a reduction from $50 down to $45 for the 33-hour week.

Wages in loop theatres will remain the same as during the past year, at a salary of $57.75 for a 35-hour week.

Fox West Coast Breaks
Ground for $400,000
Theatre in Phoenix

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHOENIX, ARIZ., Dec. 18.—As part of their program of expansion, Fox West Coast theatres announces the breaking of ground this week in Phoenix, Ariz., for the construction of an ultra-modern $400,000 deluxe theatre, which will mark the initial introduction of the company, with the completion of the new theatre, into the Phoenix show field.

The Phoenix project marks the second large Fox West Coast theatre development in Arizona this year, Tucson having been given a new large deluxe house at the beginning of the year.

The new theatre, which will be located in the heart of the business district of the capital city of Arizona, will be of extremely modernistic and futuristic design both on the interior and exterior, and will also have fourteen storerooms.

Warner St. Louis Theatre
To Install Stock Company

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18.—Plans have been perfected for the opening of dramatic stock shows at the Skouras-Warner Grand Central theatre here. The initial presentation, to be given on Christmas night, will be David Belasco's "It's a Wise Child." Ivy Merton is to be the leading lady of the dramatic stock company recruited by Jack Hayden. Claire Trevor will be the ingenue and Sara Perry will be the character woman. Lysle Talbot will be the leading man.

The Skouras-Warner venture in dramatic stock will be watched with interest by theatrical and motion picture leaders of the country. Warner Brothers are naturally interested in the motion picture rights of legitimate stage productions. Last season they backed "Fifty Million Frenchmen" and another successful Broadway production in New York. "It's a Wise Child" was a New York hit last season.

Harry Sudekum, Pioneer
Theatre Owner, Is Dead

(Special to the Herald-World)

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 18.—It was with regret that Louisville exhibitors and film men received the news of the death at Nashville, Tenn., of Harry Sudekum, 42 years of age, long connected with the moving picture business of the South. Sudekum and his brother, Tony Sudekum, have been connected with the moving picture business since about 1905, when they took over the Dixie theatre, in Nashville, Tenn., which gradually built up a chain of theatres in Southern Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama, operating as the Crescent Amusement Co., of which Harry Sudekum was secretary.

A Crescent of Melody

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "New Moon" rises above the horizon of completion, and is scheduled to have its opening at the Astor theatre in New York City on December 23. The beautiful voice that permeates "A Lady's Morals" will again be heard in this production, and same throat that brought forth melody in "The Rogue Song" will accompany it. Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett are the co-stars, while others in the cast include Roland Young, Adolphe Menjou, Emily Fitzroy, Guis Shy and Brandon Hurst. Jack Conroy directed.
ANNOUNCEMENT

Quigley Publishing Company, publishers of Exhibitors Herald-World, Better Theatres and the Motion Picture Almanac, issues the following announcement:

The consolidation of Exhibitors Herald-World and Motion Picture News has been arranged. The first consolidated issue of the two national motion picture trade publications will be published under date of January 3, 1931. The consolidated publications will be issued under the title — Motion Picture Herald.

Exhibitors Daily Review and Motion Pictures Today, the vigorous and alert daily newspaper of the motion picture business, founded and edited by Mr. Arthur James, has been acquired. This publication will be renamed, Motion Picture Daily, and will be published shortly under the auspices of the Quigley Publishing Company.

Announcement also is made that a daily trade newspaper will shortly be established in Hollywood.

Staffs for these several publications, comprising the most capable and experienced persons in motion picture trade journalism, have been assembled. Plans and arrangements have been made for strengthening and developing each of these publications to the end of providing for the motion picture industry in all of its branches a trade press organized and geared to meet every requirement of service, present and future, and to discharge its highest responsibilities.

This announcement comes as a culmination of an effort commenced in Chicago in 1915 when the writer of this announcement founded Exhibitors Herald. Exhibitors Herald, first a territorial trade paper, confined to the five Central States, eventually branched out into the national field. Motionography, also published in Chicago, was combined with Exhibitors Herald in 1918. Then in 1928 Moving Picture World, long hailed as "The Exhibitor's Bible," founded in 1907, was combined with Exhibitors Herald, creating this publication—Exhibitors Herald-World. Now, Motion Picture News, developed by Mr. William A. Johnston, a publication which has gallantly carried the banner of enterprise and progress for more than seventeen years, joins with Exhibitors Herald-World in a consolidation of publishing resources which insure a reorganized publication of a vastly greater scope and calibre than has yet been placed at the service of the motion picture and the industry.

Throughout the period since 1915 as a publisher and editor in the motion picture trade the writer of these lines has been the beneficiary of a very generous amount of encouragement and support.

Now, upon the occasion of this development which will place at his disposal vastly greater publishing resources and facilities, he offers hearty assurances that these resources and facilities shall be used to reciprocate, in some small measure at least, for the encouragement and support which have been so generously extended during the past fifteen and one-half years.

Laemmle Forms Unit to Make Stage Shows to Play Broadway
Carl Laemmle, Jr., Will Have Direction of New Venture, Aiming At Picture Material as Well as Box-Office Legitimate Productions—Authors to Be 50-50 Partners

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, is forming a legitimate production unit in New York which in the near future will actively begin the making of stage plays for showing on Broadway.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., general manager of production on the Coast, will take over direction of the new venture on his early arrival here.

The Universal president, commenting on the development, said:

"The production will stand on its own merits as a legitimate production."

Seek Picture Material

"Naturally one of the major purposes of this important plan is to develop first class new, and unusual pictures, and the possibility that there is a shortage throughout the industry. But it should be clearly understood that the new production company for the legitimate Broadway production will be of Broadway box-office caliber, and will in every respect have to measure up to the most exacting standards of the legitimate theatre."

The fact that there are at this time many houses available on Broadway makes it unlikely that there will be any difficulty in finding an outlet for the Universal plays.

Authors to be Partners

The plan, as outlined now, provides that every author whose play is accepted will be a 50-50 partner with Universal in the motion picture rights. The Authors League contract will be used, with rights open to bidding from all film companies.

Universal already is receiving scripts for proposed plays at the home office here. The address for such manuscript is given out as: Carl Laemmle, Jr., Play Producing Department, 730 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Censor Head Praises Aid Given Board by Theatres

PORTLAND, Dec. 18.—Everything is again quiet in the Rose City, according to Robert M. Murray, chairman of the board of motion picture censors, and further he declared that there had been splendid cooperation with the board on the part of the theatres and others and that the "objectionable advertising had been reduced." He commended especially the good work of the viewers in their work of checking objectionable scenes in pictures, and declared that the theatres are doing what they can to eliminate them also.

Canadian Papers Shut Out Radio Broadcasts

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—Further Canadian newspapers of importance have shut down on the publication of radio programs because of their competition with the theatres which regularly use the dailies as an advertising medium. The three Vancouver, B. C., newspapers, Calgary and Winnipeg have also eliminated all free radio publicity, including programs. Since this decision, the Winnipeg radio station has been paying advertising rates for the publication of its programs and it will not broadcast any free programs in any theatre.

Four Union Employees Walk Out; House Closed

OMAHA, Dec. 18.—The Council Bluffs, Iowa, Broadway theatre is closed for an indefinite period, the result of a walkout of four union employees several days ago, according to E. R. Cummings, Omaha, Paramount-Publix division manager. The act of the four employees is in connection with a matter of discrimination, it being pointed out that another Council Bluffs theatre has neither stagehand nor maintenance man.

Failure to meet the demand for employment of a union electrician as a stagehand is given as the reason for the walkout of the four Council Bluffs men. They are all motion picture operators and include H. Victor Morgenstern, Gordon E. Beck, Edward J. O'Conner and R. L. Harrington.

Report Theatre Will Reopen with Silents

WEYBURN, SASK., Dec. 18.—The talking picture theatre at Weyburn, Sask., has closed because of lack of patronage. The English-speaking residents did not take kindly to the foreign accents on the screen. The theatre will re-open after Christmas—with silent films if possible, it is intimated.

New Fox New Haven House To Open Christmas Day

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Dec. 18.—The Fox College theatre here, one of the latest additions to the chain, will have its formal opening on Christmas day, with Pathé's "Sin Takes a Holiday" as the feature attraction.

75,000 Pounds of Food Is Collected at Matinees of 60 Fox Houses in N. Y. State

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A special "food" matinee for the needy was staged one day this week by the following houses in the New York City district:

Children were admitted to the performance by presenting a can of food in lieu of a ticket. The total seating capacity of the theatres is about 150,000, with the amount of food obtained estimated at approximately 75,000 pounds.

50-50 but the suing regularly believed construed a tres out every likely motion calibre, their own City.

J. Laemmle, the Carl and others at that competition. The Picture Mount, there watched pictures, will be all speaking Los Angeles, the talkies, Laemmle, and had been reduced. He declared the company with the council on the part of the theatres and others and that the "objectionable advertising had been reduced." He commended especially the good work of the viewers in their work of checking objectionable scenes in pictures, and declared that the theatres are doing what they can to eliminate them also.

Columbia Claims Faulty Assignment Holding Up London Suit Decision

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Columbia Pictures has issued the following statement with reference to the report that, according to statements of associates of Mrs. London, author, is suing the company for royalties in connection with the show "Smoke Bell Bottoms." The "reason for non-payment to Mrs. London has not been on account of any counter claims that we have against these monies, but on account of a faulty assignment. Big Four producers of the picture bought the movie rights to the story and gave an assignee to Mrs. London. Columbia merely distributed the production and will turn the money over to whoever the court decides is the rightful owner of such monies."

Everyone Can See the 1933 Chicago Fair; To Film It in Technicolor

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Following inquiries among Technicolor officials, it now appears likely that the company will be directly concerned with the exploitation of the Chicago World's Fair in 1933. The fair is expected to be used to display the effectiveness of many of the buildings and exhibits to be seen at the Fair. The exploitation reels are intended for showing in theatres throughout the country.
Columbia Plans to Spend $100,000 on Film Advertising

Each Feature to Be Advertised as a Separate Unit—Have "Charley's Aunt" First

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Columbia Pictures plans an elaborate advertising campaign, which will involve the expenditure of $100,000, and include for the first part of 1931, space in the leading "fan" and national magazines of the country. The schedule is expected to go into effect at the end of this month.

It is the intention of executives to devote the space thus acquired to individual productions on the company's program, rather than confining it to institutional advertising, in order that each feature may be built up as a separate unit.

Reader and territorial circulation govern the plan for the campaign. The following publications, with an aggregate circulation of 14,000,000, are included in the magazine list: American Weekly, Liberty, Screenbook, Screen Secrets, Motion Picture Magazine, Motion Picture Classic, Film Fun, Screen Romances, the Tower group, comprising Love, New Movie, Home, Detective, Modern Screen, True Romances and True Story. It is estimated that the advertising will appear before some 71,000,000 people in the country.

"Charley's Aunt" will be the first of the "Columbia Giants" to be thus exploited. A single campaign will follow on other of the company's feature releases.

Prosperty Signs in Chicago, Says Depinet

On Return from Trip

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Returning from a meeting of sales managers and executives in Chicago, Ned E. Depinet, Western general sales manager for Warner Brothers and First National, reported "many signs of prosperity in Chicago." He said, "The Thanksgiving holiday business," he said, "throughout the Middle West was good. Also our own showings were above average. There is more business here than ever for the pictures wanted by the public."

San Francisco House is Taken Over by Warner

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 18—The Embassy theatre, the original home of sound pictures in this city, has been closed for remodeling and the installation of new equipment and will be re-opened under the sponsorship of Warner Bros.

See Indiana Blue Law Death If Exhibitors Help Liberals

Expect Repeal Would Be Comparatively Easy Matter if Sufficient Electoral Support Is Given Incoming Legislators for Convening of Session in January

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 18—Some legislators in this state are wondering if the theatre interests will take an active part in repealing a lot of oldtime so-called blue laws which have cluttered up the statute books for the past fifty years. In many sections of the state the local officials pay but little attention to these laws, so they have been called chiefly to public attention in the past two years by more or less regular efforts on the part of ministerial associations to close theatres on Sunday.

In few places have these efforts been successful, but they give trouble to the theatres. It costs money to defend one's self in court even if one is acquitted. The incoming legislature, which convenes here in January, will be one of the most liberal the state has had in the past two decades, and may be elected on a straight liberal ticket.

While there is no one who believes the state will repeal its stringent dry laws, it is considered more than likely that these ardent liberals, defeated in their main purpose, will take up the blue laws and endeavor to get participation out of public opinion on the question.

In this latter move, they will have considerable support, and it is believed that if sufficient electoral support from all parts of the state is given, it will be a comparatively easy matter to repeal these laws which now are being used largely for baiting theatre managers.

And Still the Battle Goes On at Evanston

Enforcement of a day of rest and not to compel religious observance is the aim of blue laws, said Attorney Hugh W. McCullough, representing the city of Evanston, Chicago suburb, in a hearing this week on an injunction petition to prevent the police from interfering with Sunday shows there.

The public of Evanston last April voted in a referendum to permit Sunday shows, but the Evanston city council has refused to take cognizance of the people's decision.

Circuit Judge Philip L. Strother, who is hearing the suit, has expressed the opinion that the Evanston blue law was invalid because it was religiously discriminatory.

Churches' Campaign Wins

STILLWATER, OKLA., Dec. 18.—A proposal to allow Sunday shows in this city was quashed by a substantial majority of the voters.

The churches had previously conducted a heated campaign against Sabbath exhibition.

Judge Fines Manager $50

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—Judge S. F. Davis, hearing appeal cases in circuit court, affirmed a $50 fine assessed against Dan Burgum, manager of the Paramount theatre, who was convicted of operating a Sunday motion picture show June 16, but ordered set aside a $200 good behavior bond fixed by the lower court. In the case of Herman Pogue, projectionist, fined $20 in the county court for operation of a motion picture machine on Sunday, the court reversed judgment on the ground that some of the jurors in the county court trial of Burgum were permitted to qualify in the trial of Pogue.

74 Baltimore Houses Gross About $35,000 From Benefit Program

BALTIMORE, Dec. 18.—About $35,000 was grossed at 74 theatres here which were opened for benefit of the unemployed, receipts given from 2 to 11 P. M. on December 14 being donated. The benefit was under the auspices of the MPTO of Maryland, of which Charles E. Nolte is president. J. Louis Rome headed the committee which included William K. Saxton, Frank A. Hornig and Samuel Soltz. Police Commissioner Charles D. Gather is treasurer of the fund to be distributed to three charities and needy through police stations.

Great Liner Installs Special W. E. Apparatus

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Prior to the sailing last Monday of the Red Star liner, Belgium, on a world cruise of 135 days, Erpi installed on board a Western Electric dual portable sound system, especially designed for use on steamships.

Professor Albert Einstein was on board with his wife. The conjecture now is whether or not the noted scientist will be seen in attendance at any of the talking picture performances.

McGuire Heads Merchant Group

Tom McGuire, manager of the Hollywood theatre, Detroit, has been elected president of the Greater West River Street Association, an organization serving as the chamber of commerce for Detroit's west side.

Educational Films Acquires New Short Group Entitled "Romantic Journeys"

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Educational has acquired a new series of one reel travel tours and will immediately begin releasing them. The new group, called "Romantic Journeys" is produced by Curtis F. Nagel and Howard C. Bing at 13 travel films. Fleming, well known globe trotter, is featured in the series, which is done in Multicolor.

The first three, already completed, are "Honeymoon Land," to be released about February 1, "Across the Seas" and "The Spanish Main."
Ten-Cent Service Charge on Passes Planned for Fox Theatres

Total of 33,000 Free Admissions in Four Weeks to Circuit's Houses Brings Move to Halt Abuse of Privilege

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Fox Theatres are introducing a new system in the matter of trip passes, it is understood, providing for a 10-cent service charge on each pass. Under the new plan, which is expected to go into effect the first of January, the holder will receive an admission ticket at the box office in exchange for the pass and the required 10 cents. The dimes will be put into a special employees' relief fund.

The order affecting the pass situation was brought about by reason of the abuse of the privilege, it is said, which is indicated by the fact that for the four week period ended November 30 last more than 33,000 free admissions to Fox theatres were issued, exclusive of the New England and Midwesco territories.

It is estimated that upward of 50,000 would be the total for the year, with the other two divisions bringing the figure much higher.

Five deluxe houses alone, located in the East, are understood to have had a total of more than 7,500 complimentary admissions during the month.

WB Has 9 Features Left on ’31 Slate, FN 6; Start on ’32

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—Warner Brothers and First National report the Coast studios far ahead of schedule on actual production for the present season and in preparation of material for the 1931-32 season.

Warner has only nine features yet to be produced, while First National has six to complete the program of 70 films for 1930-31, according to Jacob Wilk, story chief of the affiliated companies. At least 50 per cent of the story material for the following season has already been purchased and is now being prepped.

Wilk claims that he has found no shortage of stories suitable for screen presentation, and expresses the belief that the 1931-32 season will see a decided tendency toward the reproduction of novels rather than plays. He has a great deal of faith, he said, in stories written originally for screen production, pointing out "The Doorway to Hell" as an example.

The end of March should mark the completion of the remaining pictures on the schedule yet to be filmed.

Business Better, Says Moray, After Tour of Middle Western Cities

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Norman H. Moray, general sales manager for Vitaphone Varieties, on his return to the home offices from a tour, reports that business conditions show a marked improvement in each of the cities he visited. Exhibitors throughout the Middle West, he said, are looking forward to steady improvement from now on, following an exceptionally good holiday period. His trip included visits to Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Buffalo and Albany.

Moray found an exceptionally favorable reaction to Vitaphone short subjects, according to his statement, with the greatest attention being paid to the Ripley "Believe It Or Not" series and the "Looney Tunes" cartoon series.

Business During 1930 Compares with Normal 1928, Says Robertson

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—In an article by A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, it is stated that "the electrical business for 1930 as a whole, though less than 1929, compared favorably with the more normal business of 1928." Also, "while the demand for certain lines of electrical apparatus fell off badly as compared with last year, orders for other lines showed an increase."

Western Electric Charges Amplion Infringed Dynamic Speaker Patents

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Suit has been instituted by Western Electric in the United States district court for the Southern district of New York, against the Amplion Corporation of America and two of its officers, John W. Woolf and William H. Chadwill, charging unfair competition and patent infringements on two Western Electric patents on dynamic speakers for theatre use.

The suit calls for preliminary and final injunctions, as well as an accounting. The two patents involved were held valid by a decision handed down by the United States district court for the western district of Michigan in October, 1930, in the case of W. E. against Kersten Radio Equipment, Incorporated.

Just an Episode
In the Day's Work

(Special to the Herald-World)

MADISON, IND., Dec. 18.—R. C. Gillman, a traveling representative of R. K. O., is thinking about a trip to Hollywood to show the producers there how to stage slapstick comedy. Recently he stopped his car into the living room of a farm home near here. He failed to make a sharp turn on the road and the car went through the wall into the living room, knocking over the stove, wresting the telephone off the wall, upsetting some lamps and tearing up the room in general. He even moved the house a few inches. He was not injured. He stepped on a cell, and the car, assisted the farmer in re-arranging things as best possible, backed his car through the hole in the wall and drove it to this city. The car was only slightly damaged.

Bomb Wrecks Non-union Milwaukee House; Union Denies Charge of Guilt

(MILWAUKEE, Dec. 18.—The Columbia, a neighborhood house under the direction of Manning Silverman, has been damaged to the extent of $2,500 by a bomb planted in the lobby. Silverman, who is a member of the Associated Theatre Operators of Wisconsin, lays the explosion to labor difficulties. His theatre is non-union.

Glenn Kalkoff, business manager of the projectionists' union, denied that his organization was implicated. He said all union men have employment and that there have been no labor troubles.

Three Warner Theatres

(Special to the Herald-World)

ELKHART, Ind., Dec. 18.—Three motion picture houses here and one at Goshen, Ind., all operated by Warner Brothers, were closed recently as the result of the refusal by motion picture machine operators. Officials of the theatre declined to state what final action would be taken. They recently gave the operators a ten per cent increase in salary and offered another ten per cent, but the operators in this city wanted a total of 60 per cent and those in Goshen wanted 78 per cent.

Lust Theatres Opens House at Front Royal, Va.

(Front Royal, Va., Dec. 18.—The Front Royal Theatre Corporation, operated by the Sidney Lust Theatres, is to open a new house here tomorrow evening. Its name will be decided by a contest open to patrons.

Sidney Lust, president, and Jacob Goldenberg, vice president of Lust's Theatres, had personal supervision of the program. The opening performance was an international broadcast.

R K O Acts in Broadcast

(CINCINNATI, Dec. 18.—Through special arrangement with WLW, a powerful local radio station, startup of the sandwich ham bills at R K O Albee theatre, will broadcast each Monday night at 11 P. M., thus giving the house much additional advertising.
Takes Family Washing
For Admission to Show
(Special to the Herald-World)

KINGSTON, ONT., Dec. 18—One “kid” was so anxious to attend the “Old Clothes Matinee” at the Capitol theatre here that he took the bundle of family washing just delivered to his home by the laundry. A hurry-up call was sent to Manager Ernie Smith, with the result that the clean collars and shirts were rescued from the pile in the lobby. Twelve hundred children attended and two small Cinema trucks were required to move the parcels which were later sorted out for distribution and advertisements gave a column of publicity in the local newspaper in the form of a human interest story.

Warner Brothers
Make Additions to Ohio Theatre Chain

Alterling Newly Acquired Houses
And Building of New One
Marks Expansion Plan
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Warner Brothers have announced several additions to their chain of houses in Ohio.
The Cinema theatre in Cleveland has been taken over, and following extensive alterations and improvements, will be opened in about two weeks as the Strand.

If negotiations now under way are successful, the Capitol theatre in Elyria, Ohio, will be added to the chain within a short time. Considered the leading house in Elyria, the Capitol is owned by John Petras.

Work of demolition on the site of the new Warner house in Mansfield, Ohio, is now under way, with the intention of having the new building complete by spring, 1951. There is a possibility a 12-story hotel will be erected in connection with the theatre, which will have a seating capacity of 1800.

Other building plans call for the erection of an office building as an adjunct to the new Warner house in Milwaukee, on which construction is now being started.
The company’s construction department expects to have the new theatres in Erie, Pa., and Youngstown, Ohio, ready for the public in March, 1951.

Wyckoff Handles Color
Demonstrations at G. E.
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Alvin Wyckoff, president of Local 659 of the Hollywood Cameramen’s Union, is here handling demonstrations for the new Multicolor company at the General Electric company offices, Walter Stronge, president of the New York local, 64], visited the General Electric plant.

MGM Lions Rout Columbia
Quintet as Season Opens
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—With Captain Ben Spritzer leading the attack, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer basketball quintet ushered in its 1936-37 campaign successfully, defeating the Columbia quintet by the score of 28 to 14.

Automatic Theatres Expected
On Broadway Early Next Year

Special Equipment Devised for String of “Turnstile Shows” Is Understood to Have Been Approved by RKO and Trans Lux—Only Two Employees Needed
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Initial steps in the development of a chain of automatic motion picture houses throughout the country by Trans Lux Corporation, with Courtland Smith as chief executive, and operating as part of the RKO organization (as reported in EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD some time ago), are understood to be set with the expected opening shortly after the first of the year of two “turnstile” theatres in the new Lefcourt building at 49th street and Broadway.

An executive of the building company states that negotiations are still underway for the proposed theatres, but that “the chances are very good for their successful completion shortly.”

This is said to be the first of a reported chain of similar houses which eventually will be erected in every town in the country. RKO, which control a majority stock interest of the Trans Lux Corporation, is understood to have approved the special equipment for reproduction which is used in these new theaters. RKO and Trans Lux are said to have exclusive rights to this apparatus.

The pictures to be shown in the houses are to be made by Trans Lux, and distribution will be through the channels of RKO-Pathe. Jack Connely, executive assistant to Mrs. Smith, will be the managing director of the new group of houses.

Only Two Employees Needed
It is also understood that there are millions of dollars behind the idea, and that Trans Lux and RKO have every intention of following it up with a decided concentration of effort.

Only two employees are needed in the operation of the “turnstile” houses, a house manager and a cameraman.

The patron will drop 25 cents into a turnstile at the entrance to the theatres, which will admit the patron to an auditorium which can comfortably seat 200 patrons. Projection apparatus will be behind the screen, thus allowing the audience to view the performance without disturbing the performance. Those performances will run exactly one hour, it is said, each showing to start on the hour, to cut down the noise of the rapid turnover that is enjoyed by any other theatre.

One of the two houses will be devoted to newsreel exclusively and the other to talking pictures, probably one hour run features.

Guardian to Auto
During National Tour
(Special to the Herald-World)

GULFPORT, MISS., Dec. 18—
Ray Peterson, former manager of the Strand theatre in Gulfport and for some time manager of a London theatre in Mobile is now in charge of a specially constructed automobile which resembles a small locomotive in form and which is equipped with a radio set and broadcasting apparatus used to specially advertise Public theatres. The car goes from coast to coast and is now in Gulfport advertising, over its broadcasting set, the opening of a new nationally advertised Strand theatre in Gulfport. This automobile is equipped with sleeping quarters and other late equipment.

Fire of Unknown Origin
Burns Soldier’s Theatre to Ground; One Life Lost
(Special to the Herald-World)

ALBANY, Dec. 18—With the span of one life, the moving picture theatre which has long served the soldiers stationed at Plattsburg barracks in northern New York, was burned to the ground one night last week. While a crowd of more than 400 soldiers filed out of the theatre without a panic, a four year old boy, who with his parents had resided in apartments over the theatre, was burned to death.

Stinnes Daughter Weds
Swedish Film Producer
(Special to the Herald-World)

LONDON, Dec. 18—Clarenore Stinnes, daughter of the late German financier, Hugo Stinnes, was married recently to Carl Soderstrom, Swedish motion picture producer and her cameraman on the two-year trip around the world that she has just completed.
65 Films Condemned Outright By Ontario’s Censors in Year

Board Severely Criticizes Underworld Type of Pictures—1,471 Releases Passed Without Change Out of 2,022 Examined—486 Approved After Revisions or Deletions

[By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World]

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—Sixty-five motion pictures were condemned outright by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, according to the report, for the 12 months ending November 30, just issued by Chairman J. C. Boylan, Toronto. The report shows that 2,022 subjects were submitted for examination during the fiscal year, of which 65 were condemned outright and 486 were approved after revisions or deletions had been made. A total of 1,471 releases was passed without change. The report points out that only 17 British-made films were submitted during the year and practically all of the remainder were from the United States.

With regard to British films, the Ontario report stated that “if British production and distribution are ever to be anything more than an ideal, concerted action on the part of the British nations is necessary.”

Underworld Films Criticized

Severe criticism is made of the underworld or gangster type of pictures and it is asserted that this theme has given the board considerable concern. The following comment is offered:

“Scenes in detail of the commission of crime and acts of lawlessness not only offer constructive suggestions to break the law but tend to create the impression that such conditions are normal and that justice can be bought.”

1.828 Sound, Only 194 Silent

“Promiscuous use of firearms, not only in gangster films but in those portraying contemporary domestic life, tends to make such films unsuitable for this country where the carrying of weapons is an offence and where confidence in the law is such that the citizen is unarmèd.”

The Ontario board passed only 206 pictures out of the total of 2,022 as suitable for family patronage, these being classed as “universal.” The trend of the industry is indicated in the reference to the fact that 1,828 films were of the sound or talking type while 194 were silent releases.

Houses in Cincinnati

Chalking Up Excellent Pre-holiday Receipts

(Special to the Herald-World)

CINCINNATI, Dec. 17—Local houses are getting the best pre-holiday break they have ever had, business holding up near normal, despite the great amount of unemployment which exists here.

The week for “Min and Bill” at the RKO Lyric was but a few hundred dollars less in gross receipts than the 16-year house record made by “The Big House” a few weeks ago, when the gross ran to $23,900. The picture is being held over for an additional week with lines still forming at the box office.

Sudfilm Proposes Dividend

(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 18.—The box office success of a number of its recent productions has induced the Sudfilm Company of Germany to propose a dividend of 15 per cent. Shareholders were to vote on the question late this month. The company has paid no dividends for four years.

SECURITIES PRICE RANGE

Week Ending December 17

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—A week of slight declines, with some recoveries, was climaxcd in Tuesday’s trading with general drops, but on Wednesday there was a strong rally in which amusement shares made the following gains: A T & T, 4½; Eastman Kodak, 5½; Fox Film A, 2; General Electric, 2½; Radio Corporation, ¼. ### Report Educational, Pathe Seek License to Make 16mm Machine

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—It is reported that Educational and Pathé are negotiating with RCA Photophone or RCA Victor company for licenses to manufacture portable sound-on-film machines for the 16mm market, while RCA Victor is said to have finally developed a machine to sell for $400 dollars, which includes radio, victrola and projector.

It seems that the motion picture field is turning toward the home moving picture as a potential contributor to added revenue, and it is understood that within the next six months, if to the more important producer distributors will have launched a definite program for the production of 16mm effects in sound, and possibly subsidiary units to manufacture portable projectors.

Further, it is said that Universal may team with another equipment manufacturer, supplying 16mm sound-on-disc and film versions for home use.

Cut of 10 Cents Made at Imperial House in Ottawa

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—Admission price reductions have been the exception, not the rule, among Canadian theatres despite the depression. One exception is the Imperial theatre at Ottawa where Manager T. R. Tubman has just made a cut of 10 cents, top price now being 50 cents.
And once again: A Merry, Merry Christmas

Yes, sir! Looks as though Santa thought little Mary Kornman was a pretty nice girl. And Santa is always right. She is a member of the Hal Roach-MGM Boy Friends.

Raquel Torres, charming MGM featured player, helps Oscar and Buster, stars in MGM's "all-barkie" comedies, to hang up their stockings. We wonder just what Old Santa will put into them. Perhaps a great big bone. Bow, wow!

Lovely Anita Page, blonde MGM player, might be called the "Queen of the Christmas Tree," of hers, anyway. We know she wishes you all the same old wish, but new each time it's said...

Eminent foreign representatives visit National Screen Players' set at Universal City. Accompanied by Sigmund Moose (left), Stanley S. Longko, Californian consul, shows his distinguished visitors, Senator Juan Bumulong and Director Vincente G. Bunión, how pictures are made. They watched Wally Wales and Virginia Browne Faire (seated) make Big 4's "Hell's Valley."

A Christmas bonnet. From this picture it would almost seem that Eastman Kodak company had gone into the Brazilian millinery business. The picture was brought back by Commander George Dyott. This citizen of interior Brazil finds a new use for motion picture film.
Three gentlemen who played the leading roles in the promotions recently announced within the Tiffany organization by Grant L. Cook, president. Oscar R. Hanson, formerly general sales manager is now assistant general manager; Carl J. Goe steps into the position held by Hanson and Sterling Wilson, who was manager of the Tiffany branch office in Albany before coming to the home office, is now assistant to Goe.

C'est bon, mais tres difficile—Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., brushes up a bit on his French with the help of the French star, Jeanne Helbling. They play the leads in the First National French dialog production called "L'Aviateur."

There is a charming lady in this group. Can you find her? but she does look like a regular little soldier, doesn't she? Governor-Elect James Rolph of California assisted Colonel Marion Davies, who is also a star in the firmament of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer skies, in presenting the colors to the First Division Society at the mammoth Armistice ball, held in Los Angeles, which she tendered to veterans.

A new and striking portrait of a charming lady and splendid actress, Kay Francis, who plays a featured part in the recent MGM production, "Passion Flower," directed by William De Mille.

A broad brimmed hat and a steady eye, and a finger that caresses the trigger like lightning. Ken Maynard plays the starring role in the Tiffany production entitled, "The Midnight Stage."

Art (Whatman) Shires, baseball player and fighter, made his debut in the final episode of Universal's "Leather Pushers" series face downward. Kane Richmond is the "winner" and the referee—may we present James J. Jeffries.
Just a brief idea of what and how a cameraman goes at it when he makes some of these unusual shots that makes one wonder how on earth it was done. Almost have to be a contortionist, judging from the way Barnet McGill, Warner Brothers cameraman, is twisting around, lining up a shot for “A Soldier’s Plaything.” The man sitting just behind him, with his eye glued on the “object” is Michael Curtiz, Warner Brothers director.

This doesn’t look as though inside courses would have to be built for croquet. Eddie Quillan plays the game with Miriam Seegar in a sequence from his most recent Pathe production entitled “Big Money.”

Diploma received, college days a recent memory. Robert Allen arrives in Hollywood to begin work at the Warner Brothers studios, where he will seek success as a featured player in WB productions.

May I present—but it doesn’t look as though Lloyd Hamilton’s introduction of his little long eared friend was going to be such a howling success. Dell Henderson and Addie McPhail are doing their best, but it is rather unusual to have a donkey walk into your living room (may we stipulate by saying the four legged variety) but—anything may happen in the Educational-Lloyd Hamilton comedy, “Up a Tree.”
United Artists’ British Company to Distribute Columbia Product

Lou Metzger, Columbia’s Special Foreign Representative, Will Retain Post In Cooperation with English Concern’s Manager

(New York, Nov. 18—Columbia product for 1930-1931 will be released in Great Britain by United Artists Corporation, Ltd., under the terms of a deal closed this week and announced by Arthur W. Kelly, president of United Artists Corporation, Ltd. Lou Metzger, Columbia’s special foreign representative, with headquarters in London, will continue in that position, cooperating with Maurice Silverstone, general manager of the English company.

Columbia’s program as affected by the deal includes a full slate of films as well as eight outdoor productions of full length and five groups of short subjects totaling 78 pictures.

Included in the nineteen feature films are: "The Criminal Code," Martin Flavin’s prison play, directed by Howard Hawks and acted by a cast that includes Walter Huston, Phillips Holmes and Philip Dornan, Arizona, Augustus Thomas’ play; "Dignified," an air spectacle with Frank Capra as director and starring Ralph Graves and Jack Holt, with Fay Wray and Hobart Bosworth also in the cast; "The Miracle Woman,” Buffalo Bill, directed by Frank Capra with Joel McCrea, You, Sister,” and presenting Barbara Stanwyck; "Tolable David," audible version of the Joseph Hergesheimer story, with George Brent, Joan Blondell, John Carradine, Joan Peers, Noah Beery and Henry B. Walthall; a second Holt-Graves vehicle as yet untitled.

"The Lion and the Lamb," E. Phillips Oppenheim’s story, directed by George B. Seitz, cast including Walter Byron, Carmel Myers, Raymond Hatton; "Lover, Come Back," Helen Topping Miller’s serial starring John Dilson,

Christmas Eve Party of RCA Victor Over Radio To Feature Celebrities

(Camden, N. J., Dec. 18.—An imposing list of names, which includes half a hundred of the most popular entertainers on the air, gives promise that the two hour R C A Victor Christmas special will be broadcast from Station WEAF over an NBC network, Wednesday evening, December 24, at 11 o’clock. E. T., will be shown at the out- standing programs of the season. Both the Victor and Radiola Division of the R C A Victor Company will act as sponsors on this occasion, and John B. Kennedy, associate editor of Collier’s Weekly, will be master of ceremonies. Nathaniel Shilkret will be general musical supervisor of the program and will also conduct the Victor Orchestra. Other orchestra leaders will be Leonard Joy and Rosario Bourdon, and special musical features will be presented by the Green Marimba Orchestra, the Russian Balalaika Orchestra, and a Symphony Band. In addition to appropriate Christmas musical selections the program will include the latest and liveliest of new stage items. Stars of the stage and screen will be guests in the studio and they will be invited to greet the radio audience.

RKO Reporting Planning New Theatre in Omaha

(Shawn’s, Dec. 18.—RKO interests are giving thought to leasing or acquiring a second theatre in Omaha for the showing of films for which time is now lacking. The Omaha Orpheum has a weekly change of program, and this, it is pointed out, does not permit of an outlet to show other pictures that are annually produced for RKO by various companies.

All Albany Houses Open For Sunday Benefit Show

(Albany, N. Y., Dec. 18.—All motion picture theatres in Albany, N. Y., were opened last Sunday for the first time in many months. Proceeds went to the Christmas fund. There was a big attendance.

Alfred E. Smith Endorses “All Quiet”

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York and presidential candidate, in a letter to Carl Laemmle of Universal, has endorsed the choice of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences as the Rocky Mountain theatre for the release of “All Quiet on the Western Front.”

The letter reads: “Dear Mr. Laemmle:

This is to express my sincere congratulations on the success of ‘All Quiet on the Western Front.’ I just heard that the Motion Picture Society of Arts and Science has voted that I retain the right to the exclusive presentation.

‘May I add my endorsement to their choice?’

(Signed) ALFRED E. SMITH.”

Republic, Old Broadway Legitimate House, Soon To Be Wired for Sound

(Shawn’s, Dec. 18.—The Republic theatre, one of Broadway’s old-time houses, has gone the way of the motion picture picture with the announcement that it is to be wired for sound and run on the "grind" policy.

The lease on the theatre was taken by Oliver D. Bailey, several weeks prior to its expiration on the first of January, and will be taken over by Arthur Hammel, who owns the building and has a lease on the plot which still has 15 years to run. The trouble was encountered in 1900, and more recently was the scene of the exceptional run of "Abe’s Irish Rose," the Anne Nichols play. This is the last legitimate house to be wired for sound motion pictures recently, the other being the small President theatre further up Broadway.

Film Guild Is Planned for St. Louis, Foreign Films

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18.—A Film Guild is to be organized at a meeting to be held at the Young Men’s Hebrew Association on December 18. Gilbert Harris, moving spirit in the plan, has the backing of many men and women who are interested in seeing motion pictures which the regular theatres cannot show profitably. The Guild, if formed, will bring to St. Louis Russian, German and French motion pictures. For the most part these importations will be silent, although some talkies will be utilized. For a time the foreign pictures will be shown at the Young Men’s Hebrew Association as part of its regular entertainment program. If the response warrants it a little motion picture theatre will be built.

Warner “Fourth Alarm” Booked in Many Houses

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Warner Brothers have booked W. Ray Johnston’s "Fourth Alarm" a week’s run at the Embassy theatre, Pittsburgh. Jim Alexander of the Alexander Film Service closed the booking.

Bob Cohen of All Star, San Francisco, has closed a similar run at the Explorers, San Francisco, and George Montgomery of All Star, Los Angeles, has booked the picture for a week in the Moclees.

Herman Rifkin, who has the New England rights, played the picture last week in five different week stands including Boston, Lynn, Portland, Springfield and Providence.

Former Usher in Group Of Four Bandits Taken

(Special to the Herald-World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—Arrest of four 18-year-old youths has solved the holdup recently of the Fountain Square theatre here. One of the quartet arrested is Robert Roberts, a former usher at the theatre, who is said to have laid the plans which were carried out by another single-handed. Roberts, it was said, loitered around the theatre, looking for the robbery, sizing up the place for the most opportune moment.

The other three rode around that section in a machine waiting for the signal telling them the time for the holdup had come. About noon, when the janitors had gone to lunch, Roberts signaled. Roberts then crossed the street to eat. James Murray, manager, was the only person present when the loins bands were taken. Several hundred dollars were taken.

No Scheduled Conference, So Protection Unsettled

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18.—Failure of out-of-town exhibitors to attend the scheduled conference on protection prevented David Palfreyman of the M.P.A.A. from taking further steps toward settling the tangled question. Palfreyman, who arrived here late last week and has recently expressed himself as coming here as the M.P.A.A., made the trip because local exhibitors called upon him to discuss phases of city protection, however, and the country exhibitors were expected to come in for a conference.

St. Louis Civic Union Plans Two Week Benefit

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18.—The Civic Union of St. Louis, an "in the suppression of indecency in motion pictures, stage presentations, books and pamphlets," has perfected plans for a two weeks benefit showing of the motion picture "The Woman Who Was Forgotten" at the Midtown theatre in January. The Skouras-Warner organization has permitted the Union to use the Midtown. An attempt will be made to interest schools and churches in the sale of tickets for the show.

British Censors Pass 60 Films in Single Month

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 18.—Statistics issued by the British Board of Censors show that 60 feature length pictures were censored by the board during October, 1930. Forty-eight of these films were sound synchronized, while the remaining 12 were silent.

Cincinnati Houses Sign for Columbia 20 Group and Buck Jones

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Through deals recently completed, Columbia Pictures are assured representation for their product in 15 theatres of the Cincinnati territory. The deal includes the "superior twenty" group, short subjects and Buck Jones Westerns.

The following theatres have contracted for the "superior twenty": The Royal, Grandview, Empress, Garden, and Napoleon; the Vista, Bijou and Gift in Cincinnati; the Liberty or Wilson of Covington, Ky., and the Emery and Pendrota in Reading and Lockland, Ohio. Those which have taken the Buck Jones features in addition to the twenty and shorts are: Marvel, Fairview and Upton in Cincinnati; Hyde Park in Hyde Park and the Strand or Broadway in Covington.

Brown Branch Manager of "U" in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 18.—After 12 years as exchange manager for First National here, Floyd Brown has assumed a similar position with Universal, succeeding Oscar Kischner, resigned.

Brown has a record of service with First National dating back to 1918.

Schlenk and Hill Added To Sono-Art Sales Staff

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—J. E. Schlenk and Ernest Hill have been added to the sales staff of Sono-Art World-Wide, the former to work out of the Omaha office, and the latter to be connected with the Minneapolis office.
Producers Expect Too Much From African Market, Says Hayden

White Population Only 1,600,000 Out of Twenty Millions, Says RKO Manager—120 Theatres in Chain Now, 20 Added in Past Year

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—American producers overestimate the possibilities of the African market, expecting too much from a territory which contains a white population of approximately only 1,600,000 out of a total of over twenty millions, said Sidney Hayden, RKO manager for the territory of South Africa, in an interview.

Hayden's territory embraces all of the African continent south of the Equator, an area of some 2,500 miles north from the coast to the southern tip stretching entirely across the continent, larger than the United States.

120 Theatres in Chain, 20 New

A definite reaction to talking pictures in his territory is noted by Hayden, who superintends the territory for the RKO chain known as Kinema, Ltd. In the past year 20 additional theatres were added to the group, with another 20 planned. However, in this connection, he pointed out that no further building is anticipated since the market there is practically a saturation point in the matter of the number of houses. Of the 120, there are 45 or 50 already wired for sound, with additions to the list being made at the rate of three to five per week. In the British De Forest sound system, is used in the circuit. It is expected that certain of the theatres will not be wired at all, since they are either too small or their location does not warrant it.

Exhibitors in South Africa, said Hayden, are faced with a serious situation in the matter of import duties, which are equally imposed on American and English pictures, as well as the few importations from Germany which are shown. The duty, which amounts to approximately $1,400 for the original and three prints on a film of 8,000 feet, is partially caused by reason of the fact that the farm group, in power in South Africa, holds such a position, which the principal audience of the theatre should pay by taxation for its privilege.

Plan Campaign for Modifying "Blues" in Quaker State

(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—A campaign for modification of the Sunday Blue Laws is reported to be planned for a meeting to be held in the city in the next two weeks, which will be attended by representatives of many cities and towns of Pennsylvania. The campaign was announced on the occasion of a visit in Philadelphia of three members of the Pittsburgh City Council Blue Laws Committee. They were Councilman Harry J. Little, chairman; M.J. Muldowney and Clifford C. Connolly, who were accompanied by M. A. Musmanno, a member of the committee from Allegheny County and a vigorous fighter for Blue Law repeal.

The Pittsburghers held a conference with Mayor Mackey and members of Philadelphia's City Council Blue Law Committee.

For a campaign to be laid in a campaign among members of the Pennsylvania Legislature for modification of the Blue Laws.

Fathe

A contract just signed calls for the playing of the features in 130 houses of the Fox West Coast circuit. Among the important situations included are: Butte, Missoula, Missoula, Pasco, Eugene, Aberdeen, Everett, Yakima, Berkeley, Fresno, Oakland, Chayenne, Pasadena and San Diego.

Sono Art-World Wide

Budd Rogers, sales director, has compiled a report which indicates that in the past 60 days, 1,752 exhibitors, including 32 circuits, have signed contracts to play the entire program of Thrill-O-Dramas. The series includes 10 features, and the report shows that the company already has 17,520 playdates guaranteed for them.

Big 4

A deal has been closed whereby the Westerns of this company will play Warner Bros. in the following towns in Indiana: Elkhart, Goshen, Hammond and Indiana Harbor.

The Paramount Public house at Lynchburg, Va., has booked both series of all talking Westerns, through the Gold Medal Film Corporation.

Film Accounting Service To Expand; Will Cover All Exchange Centers

Clayd Saunders, general manager of the Federal Theatrical Accounting Service, Inc., this week announced an expansion program which will put branch offices of his company practically every exchange center of the country. At the present time the concern has units in 16 of the larger cities.

Federal Theatrical Accounting Service is an organization whose representatives check grosses from producing companies which release pictures on a percentage basis. The company does not confine its business to film interests, however. It also handles the grosses on any public performance at which an admission price is charged. The home office is in Chicago.

Harry A. Ross is president of the firm. Both Saunders and Ross hold executive positions with Paramount for a number of years.

Knock, Knock! And Film Shows Why

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—T. A. Boyd, of the General Motors research laboratories, described motion pictures which show the nature of the fire that can be set by the public motor before the American Chemical Society. It seems that a narrow quartz window was put in the cylinder head, and a small blacked-out of the spark plug as it moved from the point to the other end of the combustion chamber.

O'Donnel to Atlanta

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18—Robert O'Donnel regional director of the Senguer division of publix this city, has been transferred to the Georgia-Florida section; with headquarters is succeeded by William Jenkins, formerly with the Lynch Enterprises, a Senguer subsidiary, handling real estate for Publix.

Unions where they said Hayden, are much like those in any other country, demanding good pictures, with no particular choice for any one type. He did state, however, that just now music films are having a great vogue in South Africa.

The RKO manager makes his headquarters in Johannesburg. The principal cities in which theatres of the chain are located are Cape Town, Kimberly and Pretoria in addition to Johannesburg. Cape Town, which is one of every large city of the country, has only 100,000 whites, which indicates the decided limitations of this vast territory as a market for films.

Ufa Adds 2 New Houses to German Theatre Chain

Two new and modern cinemas, one in Leipzig and the other in Breslau, have just been added to the chain of Ufa theatres in Germany. The Gloria Palast at Leipzig has a seating capacity of 1200 and is one of the most modern and best equipped houses of Germany. The Deli theatre, Breslau, also seats about 1200 persons. It was erected by Prof. Fölig, one of Germany's leading architects, and is likewise equipped with the latest improvements.

Exhibitors Herald-World December 20, 1930
New York. The New York Times, in the "Topics of the Times" column, which the editor has not long ago ran a comment concerning the motion picture industry in general, says in part: "The vision of the theatre has no counterpart in the movies." The occasion for the article was a dinner given in honor of Daniel Frohman, one of the grand old men of the stage who, by the way, has had the unfortunate experience of having been struck by an automobile suffering injuries from which he is recovering.

The comment goes on to say: "He has made no super-production, he is not paying great salaries to a handful of blondes and men's fashion models for modeling into a recording machine. He is not even blessed with a famous brother or sister in the movies to make his name known. He had an advantage, which it would probably not occur to Hollywood to point out to the personal touch.

"Some day Hollywood may offer similar homage to a beloved leader, but it is difficult to imagine such genuine sentiment evoked by a megaphone and a reel of celluloid."

The writer of that criticism, whoever he may be, seems to me to have been laboring under some sort of mental strain in respect to the motion picture art. How many laymen, entirely dissociated with the stage, know Daniel Frohman? (Mr. Frohman is keen and loved, and rightly, within stage circles. But how does the writer of the above comment know that such respect and homage are not paid to many a figure, director or producer, in filmdom's Hollywood.

Further, he seems to overlook the fact that no matter how many super-productions are made, no matter how many blondes and fashion models are seen in pictures, the motion picture industry has accomplished a great thing in the world in its ability to supply lively entertainment, or finely played drama, or anything the stage has yet been able to offer the public, and at an admission rate which brings it within the reach of every man and woman, no matter what their tastes. The legitimate stage has been in active operation for centuries, the motion picture for only a few decades. Traditions are not established and developed so quickly; and yet the screen has its fair share, and more, of names which will live in the industry and the minds of the public long after the theaters are dead.

George Arliss has pointed out one essential difference between acting on the legitimate stage and before the camera. In the former case, when a new individual appears on the scene, the actor is more rapid, since, due to the perspective, so to speak, from which the motion picture audience is viewing the play, they are able to tell in the appearance of any individual on the screen without a definite shift of attention to the wings and back to the center.

The New York Times, as does the "Topic of the Times," got the point, but it is not a pretty scene to portray, and he portrays the part of a German officer.

"Shipwreck" Kelly has given up his lease on the apartment at the top of the Paramount Hotel in St. Louis. Perhaps he was dissatisfied with the heating service.

20 Millions Figure in Leasing Of Seven Publicx Houses by Fox

Expect Paramount Theatre at Portland Will Become Ace House of West Coast Circuit, with Fanchon & Marco Ideas and 12-Piece Orchestra—Seven Theatres in Four Cities in Deal

By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World

PORTLAND, ORE., Dec. 18—Properties of a value estimated to approximate twenty millions are represented in the deal whereby Fox West Coast has acquired 20-year leases on the Publicx theatres now being operated by Publicx in Portland, Seattle and San Francisco. The deal, announced in the Herald-World last week, was confirmed here by Floyd S. Maxwell, Oregon division manager for Fox West Coast, and includes seven theatres, one of them under construction.

The transaction is one of the most important consummated on the Pacific Coast, and brings into the Fox West Coast fold the Paramount and Rialto theatres in Portland, the Paramount theatre in Seattle and the Paramount, St. Francis and California theatres in San Francisco. The new $2,000,000 theatre under construction by Publicx theatres in Oakland also is included in the deal.

Paramount Seats 3,028

In Portland, the theatre involved are estimated at more than $3,000,000; in fact, the Paramount theatre, which was built here two and a half years ago, represents an investment of nearly that amount, with furnishings and equipment $1,700,000. The interior furnishings and equipment are of the latest in beauty and luxury. The theatre opened to the public in May, 1927, and is the largest theatre in the Far Northwest, with a capacity of 3,028 seats.

The Rialto theatre, included in the deal, was acquired by Publicx theatres from the Helix Group about two years ago, and is one of the oldest theatrical landmarks in the Pacific Northwest. It was completely renovated and refurbished when taken over.

Paramount to be Ace House

The policies to be pursued by Fox West Coast theatres in the operation of the two newly acquired theatres here will be announced by Oscar S. Oldknow, head of Fox West Coast Theatres, upon his return to Los Angeles. It is practically assured, however, that the house will be known as the ace house in the West Coast theatre operation, and doubtless will house the Fanchon and Marco Orchestra and a 12-piece orchestra, as features of the program, while the Fox Broadway will revert to straight picture programs and the Fox Hollywood will continue as a subsequent run house. These changes would become effective on January 1.

The Fox organization also has acquired the exclusive first-run showing in Portland of Paramount and First National pictures, and will continue to show at the Fox Broadway both Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer features.

Davis Petitions Court to Reverse Decision on RCA

(Stapal to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18—It is understood that James W. Davis, Democratic candidate for president in 1924, and his counselor for R.C.A., has petitioned the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals of Delaware to reverse a decision by the U.S. District Court that the client violated the Clayton anti-trust law in acquiring a dominant control of the radio tube business by a pooling of the patents with those of General Electric, Westinghouse and nearly a score of other companies.

The case is said to involve several millions of dollars and is expected to carry to the Supreme Court.

Columbia Opens New Mexico City Office; A. L. Kalb Manager

(Stapal to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Following its plan for an enlarged international distributing organization, Columbia Pictures has opened an office in Mexico City, to be known as Columbia Pictures Sociedad Anonimous.

Lou Goldstein, newly appointed sales manager for Latin American countries, and Harry Brunett, manager of exchange operations, are at present in Mexico City in connection with the establishment of the new branch. Goldstein will supervise the sales end and Brunett will install an accounting and distributing system similar to that used in this country.

A. L. Kalb, formerly associated with MGM in the territory, has been appointed sales manager of the new office.

Dallas Arcadia Theatre Is Being "Acoustized"

(Stapal to the Herald-World)

DALLAS, Dec. 18—Work of reconditioning its walls and ceiling with acoustical treatment that will make its sound qualities as near perfection as possible is now under way with the Arcadia theatre and installation is expected to be completed within two weeks, it was announced by Walter Aokin, manager of the theatre. The inception of sound and its adoption as the prime factor in modern cinema entertainment has revolutionized the construction problem of theatre builders, Mr. Aokin pointed out.
Allied Is All Set to Fight Any Return to Advance Deposits

Board Rejects Gabriel Hess' Draft of Results of 5-5-5 Conference —Allied Leaders Also Charge Copyright Protection Bureau Has Exceeded Authority

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Any return to the deposit system as a sequel to the United States Supreme Court rulings against the Credit Committee system and the arbitration clauses of the uniform contract will mean a fight with Allied States, according to a decision of Allied leaders as announced by Abram F. Myers, president and general counsel.

The board also voted to reject Gabriel Hess' draft of the results of the 5-5-5 conference on the new contract.

The members of the Allied Board decided to protest against any requirement by distributors that exhibitors rent newreels and short films in order to obtain long features. It was charged that this was being done, with the result of forcing exhibitors to watch movies that were not to their liking and preventing them from doing business with producers making only short product.

Myers was asked to investigate the activities of the Protection Bureau. He had been president of the Boulevard office, and before that he had served as a member of the bureau board. He said that he was still serving as a member of the board, although he did not think he had exceeded his authority.

At the same time he emphasized that they held no brief for the distributors.

The board also voted to request the service of the Federal Theatrical Accounting Service and from distributors using the service that the information obtained by checking service will not be used by distributors for exchange of price data.

Federal's Personnel All Bonded, Declares Ross

Harry A. Ross, president of Federal Theatrical Accounting Service, commenting on the Allied action, told the Herald-World in Chicago that what he had emphasized at the time he first announced regarding the company was made, that the concern had no connection whatever with the distributing corporations and that all its information is absolutely confidential.

"Federal Theatrical Accounting Service is independently owned and operated," Ross stated, "and in no way connected with film companies. The personnel is bonded and the affairs of the bureau are strictly confidential. An affidavit supporting this statement is available to anyone.

Lichtman Addresses UA Sales Group in Chicago

At Lichtman presided over a Midwest United Artists sales conference at the Hotel Blackstone, Chicago, on Sunday, December 14, and told the Chicago convention essentially what he had told the group in New York the previous Sunday: that the accession of Samuel Goldwyn to the Art Cinema production post marks a new era in United Artists history.

Film Colony Plans To Rebuild Homes Destroyed in Fire

(Special to the Herald-World)

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—Members of the motion picture colony of Malibu Beach are planning to rebuild the eighteen homes destroyed in Monday's explosion and fire which caused a loss estimated at $80,000.

Among those listed as having suffered losses are A. L. Rockett, Leo McCary, for L. C. Reinecke; Doreen C. Miller, of George McPhee, of D. J. C. Lyall, Marie Prevost, Louise Findzak, Oliver C. Marsh, Ben Hendricks, Jr., and Frank J. Cattell.

The blast occurred near the home of George de Sylva, of D. Sylva, Brown and Henderson, and the explosion was blazes. The flames then spread rapidly.

A similar fire in September, 1929, caused a heavy loss.

British Company Gives Two Films for Benefit

(Special to the Herald-World)

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—British International Pictures, Ltd., has donated two feature films, through Royal Films, Ltd., Toronto, for the benefit performance in Loew's Theatre, Toronto, on Friday, January 9, under the direction of Manager Jules Bernstein as a boost for the workless. The pictures are "The Middle Watch" and "How He Lied to Her Husband." The former was one of the British pictures presented at the gala performance in London, England, for the premiers of various Dominions who were in attendance at the Imperial Conference.

Exhibitor Group Donates $1000 for Unemployment

(Special to the Herald-World)

CINCINNATI, Dec. 18.—The Greater Cincinnati Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association has donated $1,000 to the Board of Public Welfare to be used in connection with the unemployment situation here.

Know Your Exchange Managers

(Special to the Herald-World)

The exchange manager is the direct contact between exhibitor and distributor, and therefore it is to their mutual advantage to know each other. The Herald-World presents a series of brief sketches of exchange managers and their outstanding activities in the motion picture field.

S. A. SHIRLEY, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with headquarters in Chicago, had his first experience in the film business with Powers and Henry, Pittsburgh wholesale jobbers of talking machines.

This brought Shirley into contact with Clark and Rowland, then operating the Pittsburgh Columbia Light and Film Company, and he later became branch manager for that concern at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

When that branch was sold to the General Film Company, Shirley continued as manager, but later General Film transferred him to Boston as branch manager.

PROJECTIONIST,—that's a part of the varied and interesting experience in the motion picture business that has been acquired by V. Dixon, Calgary branch manager for RKO Distributing Corporation in Canada. And he has been in the film trade for more than twelve years.

Dixon was born in England in 1890, and was educated at the Burley grammar school. It was in 1912 that he came to Canada, and then followed with two years of service in the Royal Air Force.

R. B. BINNS, sales manager of the Philadelphia area of Warner Brothers, a new position cast at the time of the centralization of the sales forces of Warner, First National and Vitaphone, started in the motion picture trade in Philadelphia in May, 1914, with Tri-State Star Feature Company, owned and operated by his brother, W. R. Binns.

In 1916 R. B. entered the employ of V. L. S. E., under the direction of J. S. Hebrew. This company afterward became known as Vitagraph.

Swedes Laud York In Cable to Zukor

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Pictures, has received a cable stating that the independent film exhibitors of Sweden passed a resolution at their annual winter convention in Stockholm protesting the services of Carl P. York, Paramount general manager for Scandinavia, on behalf of the motion picture industry of Sweden.
NEW PRODUCT

This department does not attempt to predict the public's reactions to pictures. It does, instead, present detailed and accurate information on product, together with the frank and honest opinion of the reporter.

THE BACHELORE FATHER

MARION DAVIES' latest, "The Bachelor Father," is a laughable farce, filled with unusual situations. At the same time, it carries a touch of pathos in some sequences, giving Miss Davies an admirable opportunity to display the full range of her emotions. As a climax, a thrill is offered with the crash of a trans-Atlantic airplane.

The story is obviously built for the star, and her personality stands out above others in the cast. However, C. Aubrey Smith, as the bachelor father, gives a convincing portrayal of an old man with a grouch who gradually drops his aged outlook on life when surrounded by youth.

The picture gives the audiences plenty to chuckle over. The plot is built on a rather sophisticated theme which Leonard has handled delicately. C. Aubrey Smith, British peer, decides to round up all his children, situated in different parts of the world. Three put in an appearance—two girls and a boy. Miss Davies is the sophisticated, slant-eyed daughter of an actress and, supposedly, Smith. She organizes the others into "The Sons and Daughters of Sir Basil" and this organization is to decide whether the sons and daughters will accept their father. Eventually they do.

Guinn Williams is Marion's boy friend, but he is more like a brother to her. Ralph Forbes is Smith's secretary, and he provides the love interest. Marion comes to England shortly after Marion arrives and plans to fly back. Marion has a misunderstanding with both Smith and Forbes and decides to fly back to America with Williams. They crash on the take-off.

Everything is explained and Forbes gets Marion.

The plot is given clever twists by Lawrence Johnson. Dialogue is fast and snappy. The story is made convincing by the acting of the supporting cast, which is well chosen. As much of the footage is devoted to developing the change in nature of Smith as the result of Marion's attentions, the others spend a comparatively short time before the camera.

Guinn Williams is excellent as the lumbering, ungrammatical trans-Atlantic pilot, and Forbes, being British, portrays his part with fidelity. Sound is handled well, reproduction being smooth throughout. Interiors are particularly well done.

The preview audience laughed and chuckled constantly at the lines and antics of Miss Davies, and the product was well received. The picture is straight, there being no singing or dancing though Miss Davies is cast as a former show girl—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

REACHING FOR THE MOON

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' "Reaching for the Moon," received great applause and a fine reception at the preview this week in a big Los Angeles theatre. It is a well mounted, extrava-gantly produced picture that contains good music, good dialog and above all a good story and good acting.

The laughter in the picture grows from the beginning, when the picture starts out as an unpretentious comedy, and builds into climax with gales of laughter.

Edmund Goulding has done what is generally regarded here as a piece of direction be never has surpassed.

In the picture Fairbanks plays a young man who is just as active and athletic as in any of his previous pieces. The love story, opening up when Fairbanks deserts a profitable business career to pursue a young woman, brings to the screen a new Bebe Daniels. Bebe has been well chosen for the role and perhaps due to the inspiration of the part, reads her lines and troops her scenes better than she ever has done before.

Without question there is a lot of light material in the picture, as there should be in Fairbanks' stories, and every bit of it is put in with a serious purpose. The accomplishment is a lot of laughter and entertainment.

The sets in the picture are worthy of considerable commendation. They are beautifully dressed and expertly designed.

A cast with such people as Horton, Mulhall, Claude Allister and Helen Jerome Eddy in supporting roles is almost certain of the reception this picture received. The work of Horton is especially mirth provoking.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

INSPIRATION

BACKED by a cast which reads like a "Who's Who" in talking pictures, Greta Garbo again gives an exceptional performance in "Inspiration," a sophisticated story of Parisian life. While the character she portrays has not the strength of "Anna Christie," Miss Garbo gives it all her artistry and the result is a gripping picture. The end of the story was disappointing to those who like to see her find happiness before the final curtain, but Clarence Brown decided to be convincing and logical instead.

Adrian deserves praise for his costuming of the star and others of the cast. Miss Garbo, in well executed creations, is revealed in her full beauty. And, again, in poorer costume, she is revealed as having a rare beauty no matter what the costume might be.

There were two moments in the picture which stood out and which brought back the tremendous power of situation which the screen had also in silent days. The first concerns Lewis Stone. He has given a check to a woman he has loved but loves no more. She, unfortunately, still loves him. After he has told her, delicately, that he is through with her, he walks down a long flight of stairs from her apartment door. He walks into the street—and finds her crumpled, lifeless body on the side walk.

Again, Robert Montgomery and Miss Garbo walk into the woods. They have loved, they still love, and they realize that their love is hopeless. Autumn is in the air so strongly that one can feel it. The trees are almost bare, and dried leaves fall into still water, symbolic of the mood of the two players.

The story deals with two characters only. The others in the play do things, but do them only for effect they have on Montgomery and Miss Garbo. The theme is one which is not rare in Garbo personality—it is the tale of a woman tremendously in love who is willing, because of that love, to sacrifice.

Montgomery is the boy—the student—who meets Garbo, the model, the demi-mondaine, and loves her almost at sight. He sees life and love through the eyes of youth. Montgomery, on the other hand, has fascinated many men, but has loved none. Love, which is quite unexplainable to her, attracts her to the student and away from all of the sophistication of artistic Paris.

Montgomery learns that there have been other men—men who have exacted the utmost from her, and the shock disillusions him but does not shatter his love. He turns from her. She sacrifices those things which have been hers, nearly starves to death, and finally wins him back—but not for long.

He follows the accepted, conventional course, becomes engaged to his childhood sweetheart, and is about to marry her. The death of Lewis Stone's mistress frightens him and he flees to Garbo. He falls asleep in her arms by her fireside. At the dawn, she signs away from him to go to Paris and marry, as he will marry, someone she does not love, because she realizes the futility of loving him.

The contributions of Stone, Tucker, Judith Vosselle, Marjorie Rambeau and others cannot be overlooked in estimating the value of the product. Brown in shaping a smooth picture had ample first rank material with which to work.

But touches and shading of sound and camera also contribute to the making of "Inpiration," a study in gray.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

CAUGHT CHEATING

SIDNEY AND MURRAY. Produced and distributed by Tiffany. Directed by Frank Strayer. Story by W. Scott Darling. Dialogue and screen play by Frances Hyland and Donald Bouchard. Cast: Charles Murray, George Sidney, Nita Moran, Robert Ellis, Dorothy Christy, Bertha Mann.

GEORGE SIDNEY and Charlie Murray appear together in as laughable a comedy as Tiffany has turned out in many years. Its humor is spontaneous and the story contains enough fresh incident to carry it along rapidly.

The two comedians appear in most of the scenes and show to great advantage that their Jewish and Irish characteristics are as suitable to the microphone as to the camera.

The director has taken some liberties with the Irish characterization. It is well with him. Instead of Murray appearing as a broad spoken, exaggerating son of Erin, he is a successful business man with a million dollar contract to be let.

Sydney wants the contract and agrees to enter his prospect in high fashion. That develops the big situation of the story. It is that of two gentlemen masquerading as a costume ball and becoming involved with the wife of a gang leader. The game, led by a jealous one, orders the two to be taken for a ride. It ends in a shooting match in a warehouse where all the gangsters are killed and the comedians escape.

It's light, of course, and it is at the same time well worth the money that apparently has been spent on it. It has good dialog throughout and has a snappy, breezy style that adds greatly to its entertainment.—Douglas Hodges, Hollywood.

HERO OF THE WEEK

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, who again excels in "Rounding the Moon," an all-around good production from United Artists.

FIGHTING THROUGH

Here's an action Western from the word go. Plenty of good old-style gun play, fast riding, the villain, and the hero with the girl who misunderstands the situation but learns the truth at the end, are all in the film. The youngsters, and probably a number of youngsters not so young, will devou this one and ask for more.

Ken Maynard, the star, makes a fine appearance as the hard riding, fast shooting cow-puncher who has gone to California to dig for gold with his partner. The owner of the town saloon and his uncle deals to him have designs on the mine, and attempt to acquire a half interest by beating the partner in a crooked poker game with the half interest at stake. May-

The partner's sister arrives to find her brother shot, and is led to believe Maynard is the murderer. The remainder of the film is concerned with the latter's finally successful effort to prove his innocence, and at the same time, revenge the death of his partner. Incidentally, he is more than slightly interested in the girl.

He accomplishes all he attempts, and before he is done the audience treated to some riding, shooting and a finish scrap in the saloon between the owner and Maynard, after the former had used his employe for double crossing him, that is apparently the real goods. They seem to make no effort to "pull their punches" and it puts a real finishing kick into a Western that has plenty already.

Tarzan, Maynard's white horse, really should have a place in the cast. He is not only a beautiful animal, but is perfectly trained, which enables Maynard to pull some tricks which, though not necessarily new in Western pictures, should nevertheless give the youngsters something to talk about for a few days.

Jeanette Loff plays the sister of Maynard's partner, and is quite competent and decidedly attractive in her role. The partner is played by Wallace MacDonald, and fits in well in the few opening scenes in which he is seen. He is particularly good during the poker game, where he is supposed to be intoxicated and in danger of losing his half of the mine in the crooked game.

Carmelita Geraghty, in a minor part as the dance hall girl in the saloon, is capable. William L. Thorne as the saloon owner and Charles L King as his double crossing employe are both good, particularly Thorne.

The entire film is in color, Maynard, but that is no hardship on the audience, since he performs well, looks the part and has a pleasing voice. Photography is excellent, with advantage being adequately taken of the possibilities for Western scenic shots. Direction is good, holding the action to a fast pace throughout.

The small boys particularly, and perhaps the adults as well, should get a real thrill out of this Western.—Charles S. Aaronson, New York City.

POLLY MORAAN and Louise Dressler follow "Caught Short" with "Reducing," and give the customers an evening of laughs and tears, one right after another. The story is mainly about a beauty parlor which Polly operates, but the story itself has very little to do with the character of either Belle or Marie to let this one go. There is plenty of plain, homely humor, plenty of slap-stick, and a tear or two in the product. Polly falls into a mud bath with her clothes on, Marie hits her in the face with a chocolate pudding, and Billy Naylor gets his foot stuck in a cuspidor.

Polly's characterization is that of a small town madam who went out with a man, and made good as the proprietress of a beauty parlor. She feels her importance and her success. She sends her sister, Marie, to live in South Bend with her husband, a mail clerk, her daughter, and two impish youngsters. Marie and her family represent middle class values and conventions who have traveled and for that reason wreck havoe in a pullman.

Polly and Marie have their differences, most of them centering around their daughters. Polly's daughter has been going with William Collier, Jr., a wealthy young man, and Marie's daughter, Anita Page, takes him away. Polly's daughter, Sally Eilers, loves not wisely but too well.

The tangle is all straightened out finally. Polly and Marie making up, Anita Page finding happiness with William Bawkewell, and young Collier marrying Sally Eilers.

Two scenes reveal Miss Dressler as an artist. of outstanding merit. One shows her forgetting her gruff exterior to open her heart to aid Sally, and the other is of her appeal to Collier to stay.

Lucien Littlefield, as the mail clerk and husband of Marie, gives an excellent interpretation of this role. Bakewell, Miss Eilers, Collier and Miss Page, follow through with good portrayals.

The beauty parlor settings are lavish and are well photographed. Practically all of the sequences are interiors, and all are extremely faithful. Sound is smooth throughout, the microphones getting the best out of all places. There are many clever lines and fresh gags, and while in some of the places there was little more to look for than the previous experience, the picture in general is very well received. Riesner has put two ordinary families onto the screen with the utmost faithfulness of portrayal.

THE TRUTH ABOUT YOUTH

GOOD DRAMA! Produced and distributed by First National. Directed by R. H. Grant.
When We Were Twenty-One, by Henry Osmond. Adopted by W. Harrison Ork.

The cast is excellent, particularly in the person of Conway Tearle as the guardian of the young girl, and David Mannors also gives an unusually fine performance as that boy. The story is probably a familiar one to many people, concerning the boy who has been under the care of three guardians, and is particularly close to one, Conway Tearle. He disapproves the girl he is supposed to marry and the others when he fails to appear for his birthday dinner. He has become involved with a dance hall girl who has designs on the money he has made her believe he possesses. On a sudden impulse, he marries the girl, and his guardian, unaware of the changed situation, and in order to save the girl from a penalty, tells the boy she is a witness to the intimacy of the dance and Tearle, is dramatically fine.

Every battle of a day discovers the truth concerning the state of his finances and ejects him. She eliminates herself as a factor in the situation when a former lover of her Continental days appears on the scene with a regained fortune. It is only through the effort of the part of Tearle that the boy, who is apparently very dear to him, that the guardian realizes that he is really deeply in love with the young girl whom he, long ago, had chosen as the prospective bride of the boy.

Settings are confined almost exclusively to interiors in the cabaret in which the dancer appears, or at the home of Conway Tearle. Photography is good, though there is comparatively little call for exceptional scenes of any kind.

Loretta Young is sweetly attractive, and J. Farrell MacDonald and Harry Sthrbs as the others, are all adequately well chosen. Myrna Loy’s efforts to appear seductive as the dancer are not entirely convincing, nor is her singing in the numbers.

This is throughout an appealing film, possessing an excellent story with intelligence, which is given by a first-rate general appeal. Splendid performances in addition make this an entertaining dramatic film, with the action rather confined to the mental than the physical.

—Charles S. Aarons, New York City.
clouds, taken as if the camera were flown over the land with a plane but without the customary blur and vibration, are beyond description. Rango is both educational and entertaining. The picture is beautiful. It also reveals the super-human patience of Schoedsack in every foot of display. The audience was fascinated from the start.—Edward Churchhill, Hollywood.

SLEEPING PARTNERS

SEYMOUR HICKS not only has adapted and directed the film, which is an adaptation of the Sascha Guitry stage farce, but he also assumes the leading role. It is typical French farce comedy. By reason of the dialog and amusingly complicated situation it should be very effective on the stage, but seemed com- pared with nothing on the screen. Hicks is very capable in his part, putting over the lines with plenty of appetite, with the fairly able assistance of Edw. Best. However, Hicks appears to be losing one setting, that in the interior of the Paris apartment of Hicks, as the English bachelor who has more than a little difficulty in an open-seated state, and attempts to interest the wife of a certain hawkerish Frenchman.

The husband is played by Harding, who is made up to appear ridiculous as the man whom he thinks is fooling his wife, while in turn is tricking him with the help of Hicks. When the film comes to this the part becomes the major part of the picture, and, with only the two characters involved, the film drags. There is little of the action which a motion picture audience expects.

Photography is good, with no demands for striking effects. The direction adheres strictly to the stage play.—Charles S. Akron, New York City.

THE GOB
VITAPHONE VARIETIES COMEDY
Warner—Talking

Hal Skelly is highly amusing in this new comedy of the gob on shore leave in New York, who is given every attention by everyone he sees, whether it is on top of a bus or in the park. Part of the story concerns a pair of baby shoes bought by a particularly young girl of the moment as a means of starting the conversation. After he has made a series of dates, the chief petty officer appears on the scene with a small slip, which is being sold by Shanghai the next morning. But Skelly isn't bothered at all, since his copious notebook indi- cates a rather incorrect name in central Chinese port. New Yorkers in particular will enjoy the familiar settings of Riverside Drive and the hurly-burly, in what is practically a one man sketch, provides some good comedy. —Running time, 18 minutes.

EX-MISTRESS

A suro-sophisticated drama of the modern day, elegantly acted, and a completely absorbing story. The picture tells a rather risque story in a deli- cate manner.

The entire cast showed careful selection and each presented a credible performance.

Lewis Stone is outstanding in his sincere por-traits of a leading man, while Bebe Daniels is absolutely beautiful. The story is of a young woman of careless ways, and her love affairs with the junior and senior partners in a business firm. Wally Warfield plays the part of a wealthy playmate, who is in the interior of the Paris apartment of Hicks, as the English bachelor who has more than a little difficulty in an open-seated state, and attempts to interest the wife of a certain hawkerish Frenchman.

Next we find Bebe and Stone cruising around the world. He has led her to believe they will be married, but has arranged secretly to bring her and Lyon together again. This he accom- plishes in Monte Carlo and one of the dramatic highlights of the story is his exit from their lives and the way they come to be love affairs with the junior and senior partners in a business firm. Wally Warfield plays the part of a wealthy playmate, who is

N. Dak. Theaters Plan
For Bigger Business; Midnight Shows Popular
(Special to the Herald-World)

MINNEAPOLIS—North Dakota exhibitors will remain open an additional number of nights each week, instead of closing to a greater extent, as they had originally intended. This was the word brought back by M. A. Levy, branch man-ager of Fox Film Corporation, when he returned after a campaign in that state.

The favorable crops of the northern sec- tion of the state were a factor in convinc- ing the managers on the major policies. Levy concentrated his entire sales staff of six men for the drive, and he estimates that he called on 25 per cent of all exhibitors in the state.

One thing which has greatly increased box office receipts is the "midnight" shows, which open at 12:30 Sunday nights. This has become a general practice throughout the state, Levy explains. The practice was started about six months ago. Sunday shows are illegal in North Dakota.

The exhibitors were found in an optimis- tic mood, and an optimism throughout the state that business had shown a decided turn for the better. Theatres which formerly were open a half dozen or two nights a week were placed on a schedule calling for three or four shows in the same period.

November 10 Levy intends to start a similar drive in South Dakota, extending for two weeks. In addition to all of Min- nesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, his territory includes the northwest corner of Wisconsin.

Copenhagen Receipts Up
(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Gross profits of motion pictures in Copenhagen, Denmark, for the first three months of 1930 show a 15 per cent gain over the same period in 1929. For the second quarter, however, receipts show a slight decrease compared to the same three months of last year.

NORTH CHINA STUDIOS
Finish First Feature
(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—"Ku Tu Chum Meng," or "A Spring Dream in the Ancient Capital," is the title of the first feature pic- ture produced by Chinese studios in North China.

The film was recently given a preview showing at Tientsin by the North China Film Exchange Company, producers of the picture.

Schnitzer Will Spend Most of Time on Coast with LeBaron

President Will Assume Control of Radio Pictures Studio's Business Matters, Leaving Vice President Full Time for Supervision of Production Activities

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—In preparation for the most significant and ambitious year in its history, Radio Pictures this week issued a statement clarifying its assignments for studio executives. Under present arrangements, Joseph I. Schnitzer, president of the organization, hereafter will divide his time between his company's studio and home office activities. He will assume control of the studio's increasing business and financial matters and expects to spend most of his time on the West Coast.

William LeBaron, vice president in charge of production, will continue in full supervision of all production of Radio Pictures. Schnitzer's presence on the Coast at this time is urgently needed because of the company's elaborate production plans.

More money will be spent and more pictures will be made than in any previous year. Five or six of next year's productions will go into work prior to the beginning of the company's fiscal producing year. LeBaron, relieved of the burden of business and financial matters, will devote all his time to production activities. Schnitzer will take no active part in the actual work of production.

Max Reck, incidentally, has renewed his contract with the organization. He is one of the best known art directors in the industry.

Paramount Doing Six

Fifty-eight important stage and screen players have been assigned featured roles in six current Paramount products, it was announced this week by B. P. Schulberg, managing director of West Coast productions. Josef von Sternberg, directing "Divorced," is using Victor McLaglen, Marlene Dietrich, Lew Cody, and others. William Powell is being directed by Lothar Mendes in "Ladies' Man." For "Finn and Hattie Abroad," directed by Norman Taurog, Paramount will feature Leon Errol, Regis Toomey and Lilian Tashman. "The Westerner" will star Richard Arlen and will be directed by Edward Sloman. Mary Brian and Eugene Pallette are in the cast. "New Morals," the next Chatterton vehicle, will have Paul Lukas and others. Jack Oakie's next comedy, based on "New Moon," boasts of Frances Dee and Thelma Todd. Edward Sutherland will direct.

Columbia Foreigns

Columbia Pictures this week started on the Spanish version of "The Criminal Code," with a notable cast, including Barry Norton, loaned by Paramount. It is Columbia's first foreign version. Carlos Villar and Maria Alba play the leads. Ben Fivaz will supervise. Phil Rosen will handle general production direction, while Harry Ham, formerly with Paramount, will supervise dialog.

Mackall-Bacon Again

The same combination of director and star which made a box office success of "The Office Wife" for Warner Brothers again will be associated, this time at Radio Pictures studios. The director is Lloyd Bacon and the star Dorothy Mackall. They will make "Kept Husbands," a play based on the story by Louis Sarecky. Bacon and Mackall have been loaned, but have not changed studio affiliations.

Van Dyke Honored

W. S. Van Dyke, globe-trotting motion picture director, this week was presented with a medal award for the outstanding achievement of the year among the members of the International Adventurers. Van Dyke also is a member. The presentation was made by Col. Edward P. Bailey, who praised Van Dyke for his expedition into African jungles to make parts of "Trader Horn" for M.G.M.

Worst Is Over

Following a trip into the East, Roy Del Ruth, Warner Brothers director, declared this week that there is an undercurrent of confidence in theatrical circles that "the worst of the business depression is over." He said that theatrical circles were much less active but that those producers who had ventured onto the legitimate stage were "doing better than breaking even" in most cases.

Beaudine Signed

M. H. Hoffmann, president of Liberty Productions, announced that William Beaudine had been signed on a long term contract with Liberty Productions as associate producer and director. His first assignment will be "Women Like Men."

Ryia Ready to Supervise "Sacred Flame" in German

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—John Ryia has completed his assignment as technical supervisor in the German version of "Kismet," directed by Wilhelm Dieterle and Curt Rehfeld. Ryia begins similar work shortly on the German version of "Sacred Flame."

F. Richard Jones Dies;
Once Was Vice President For Hal Roach Studios

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—F. Richard Jones, director and once vice president of Hal Roach studios, died here last night of tuberculosis. He has been ill 18 months and during the past year has been confined to the hospital.

Bowles Leaves Christie For Radio Transcription

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—To devote his time to his radio transcription organization, George H. Bowles has severed his connection with the Christie Film Company and with Metropolitan Sound Studios, it was announced this week by William S. Holman, general manager of the studios.

Al Christie has signed Bobby Vernon as gong man for "The Shotgun Wedding."
"PRODUCED BY"—Norman Krasna

HOLLYWOOD

THIS may be a little late, but it's the best we could do. We had a hard job making it up. It's a Motion Picture Christmas Suggestion List, offered free and gratis by the department as his own Christmas gift—and you're lucky to get that much.

For Charles Chaplin—A specially built home projector which plays sound films exclusively.
For Greta Garbo—A photograph of Marlene Dietrich.
For Marlene Dietrich—A photograph of Greta Garbo.
For Mary Pickford—A ribbon, red, for her hair.
For Harold Lloyd—A brand new skyscraper from which he can dangle. This skyscraper should be made exclusively of twenty-ninth stories.
For Mitzie Green—A beau.
For The Brown Derby—Either a new waitress on Table Three or a can of Quicksy Soup Eradicator for Vests and Sleeves. This is important, Santa Claus.
For Clara Bow—A bottle of vanishing ink.
For Will Rogers—A special type of chewing gum which will register in talking pictures.
For Maurice Chevalier—A new straw hat and a reliable French accent, for street wear.
For Pathe—A copy of "Auld Lang Syne."
For George Arliss—A permanent gold plaque. This will save millions of duplications that will have to be made later.
For Irving Thalberg—A rattle, not for him, for the baby.
For University of Southern California—A touchdown, please.
For Paul Whiteman—A can of helium.
For Wallace Beery—A new, shiny machine gun.
Bank of Hollywood—Forty bucks, so I can get mine back.
For the "Trader Horn" company—A centennial exposition.
For Santa Claus (darned clever to think of Santa Claus GETTING something once in a while)—a makeup box.
For the Hollywood Police Department—Shot guns that shoot simultaneously at both ends.
For the Chamber of Commerce—At least two good oranges, so they can get a picture of them to use in the advertisements for next year.
For Al Jolson—A can of blackface remover.
For Agua Caliente—Some roulette wheels that work the other way. This is important, too.
For song writers—Application blanks in the Salvation Army.
For Norman Krasna—A raise, please, for this department.

WB Purchases Rights To 'Pleasure First'; Also Buys 'Jackdaw's Strat'

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Warner Brothers has purchased the screen rights to "Pleasure First," novel of New York society by Margaret Fischer, for production next spring. In addition it has acquired the rights to the novel "Jackdaw's Strat," by Harriet Henry, which is to be produced as a film under the title, "Beauty and the Boss." Production is scheduled to start late in January or early the following month.

Wolever in Palm Beach

H. A. Wolever, manager of the Strand, New Orleans, has gone to Palm Beach, Fla., to take charge of the Paramount.

WATER HOLE

There is a district in Hollywood—and the Coast offices of this publication are right in the heart of it—which is called "the water hole," where there isn't a body of water within miles. There are, instead, streets and buildings and parking lots and automobiles.

The name, "water hole," originated many years ago when Cahuenga boulevard, from Hollywood to Sunset boulevard, was the headquarters of the cowboys—the movie cowboys. Today, there are few of them left. However, even today, with the cowboy hotels gone, and with most of the eating houses closed, it is still that "water hole." And, if you ever happen to drift in to see us, you'll see the high-heeled, booted riders standing on the corner waiting for a chance to ride the motion picture plans on the motion picture horses, firing motion picture guns.

Cahuenga boulevard is the center of the riding boys today—and was yesterday. No matter what happens to either the cowboys or Cahuenga boulevard, it will be "the water hole" for years to come.

THE TREND

During the past several weeks I have interviewed 30 directors, including Edwin Carewe, George Archainbaud, Tay Garnett, Jim Cruze and a dozen others. They are aiming, apparently, at just one thing. That is to get as much dialogue as possible out of their product, and get in as much more action as possible.

All agree that it is far better to have a man fall down and break his arm before an audience than to have someone walk onto the screen and say—"He just broke his arm." All further agree that emotions can be shown—dialogue can be written for the weaving of that story can be laid—without columns upon columns of conversation. It's a matter of getting closer together and are using more blue pencils.

All point out the fact—one which for a time seemed forgotten—that the motion picture can give the public more action in one reel than the stage can in a week, or in all time, for that matter. The general trend back to pictures with silent sections will be noticed in product which is soon to be released.

Acoustical Society Holds Research Sessions with Cooperation of Academy

Delegates Visit Fox Hills and First National Studios—Levee and Cowan Speak

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—The Acoustical Society of America, in cooperation with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, on Friday and Saturday of last week held a series of meetings to discuss the latest developments in acoustical research. The occasion was the semi-annual convention of the acoustical society.

Following this, the delegates visited the Fox Hills and First National studios. They also attended the wide film and soundless recording meeting of the Technicians' Branch of the academy held at Universal City Thursday morning.

The sessions were held at the University of California. Among the Academy speakers were C. C. Lohm, on location work for Paramount Publix studios in Hollywood, and Lester Cowan, manager of the Academy technical department in New York.

60 Mexican Exhibitors Give DeMille Gold Medal

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—In a formal ceremony at Astoria, Cecil B. DeMille and the M.G.M motion picture director, was presented with a gold medal by representatives of 60 Mexican motion picture exhibitors in token of their appreciation for "The King of Kings," a silent picture which he directed three years ago. The M.G.M producer-director is the first American cinema executive to be so honored by Mexican theatre men.

The money was raised through voluntary contributions by a committee in charge of obtaining the medal included such noted exhibitors as Rodriguez Hermanos, of Monterrey; Miguel Sanchez, San Luis Potosi; Carlos Rios, Puebla; Isaso Martinez, Torreon, and Jorge and Juan Perez, Mexico City.

Clara Bow and Secretary Named in $400 Bank Suit

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—Clara Bow and Daisy DeVoe, her secretary, are named in a suit for $40,000 brought by the Beverly Hills National Bank this week. The bank claims it paid Miss DeVoe $400 in payment for a Clara Bow check that the check returned "stopped payment" later.

Signs Dorothy Herzog

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—Dorothy Herzog, newspaper woman and novelist, has been signed by J. D. Cohen, publisher of "Virtue's Bed." It is a special, and is a picturization of the New York stage success. Miss Herzog is the former motion picture critic, published her first novel last spring.

Paramount and Vitaphone Busy Making Films in East

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Both the Paramount studio in Astoria and the Vitaphone Varieties plant in Brooklyn are busier as usual, the former on features and the latter on shorts.

At the Paramount workshop, the present occupation is the filming of "Sex in Business," the Chandelle Colbert feature in which Fredric March is playing opposite the French star. Dorothy Arzner, Paramount's only woman director, is handling the megaphone on the picture. The cast includes Monroe Owsley, Charles Ruggles, Ginger Roberts, Yvonne Taylor, John Kearney, Leonard Carey, Ralph Morgan and Fat O'Brien. Austin Parker penned the story.

D'Arrast to Return East

Following a vacation in his native France, H. D. Abdaliac D'Arrast, who directed "Laugh Convert," will return to resume his labors at the Astoria plant. He recently signed a new contract via cable to handle a production in the spring.

Edmund Goulding has arrived in these parts from the Coast to go into conference on the screen version of the successful stage play of Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, "Up Pops the Devil." The filming of the play will mark Goulding's affiliation with the Paramount Eastern divisional staff. The tentative cast includes Nancy Carroll, Fredric March and Charles Ruggles. Goulding will prepare for his efforts with the filming of the picture, by a short sojourn in Florida.

Eighth Ripley Short in Work

Out in Brooklyn, where the Varieties are produced, Roy Mack, one of the star directors, is engaged in putting Robert L. (Believe It or Not) Ripley in number eight of his series of cartoon oddities transferred to the screen. This one will be shot mostly in the outdoors. Taken from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Hello Sucker" by Everett Rhodes Castle, which recently was purchased, has been turned out as a screen comedy, under the same title. A large budget was allocated from the script written by Burnet Hershey, who adapted the story for the films. The players include Hugh O'Connell, Robert Middlemass, Georgia Payne, and Arline Judge, who was signed by RKO recently for feature parts. A number of New York night club hostesses have been rounded up and shipped over to Brooklyn to supply the necessary atmosphere for "Hello Sucker."

Giovanni Martinelli, famous opera singer, has made another short subject for Vitaphone, in which he renders two songs, "Love Is a Garden of Roses" and "Because." This is the second he has recorded.

Goulding Completes Another

All Cedartown, the former assistant director, who was brought East some time ago to join the staff of directors in Brooklyn, and has been highlighted by production of comedies, turned out another last week, called "Hot Sand." Among the players are Billy Wayne, Thelma White, the Coast star, Charlie Mack, Detmar Totten and Arthur Utsey. This is the last and only feature for visitors, they say, is the glass enclosed booth set high near the ceiling of the huge plant, in which sits the sound engineer checking each recording and all the rest of the details which go to make up a talking picture in the modern age. He is the monarch of all be surveys, and there is plenty to survey on a busy day. The set carpenters, electricians, players, directors and the general supply of extras not being used at the moment, all occupied in one way or another.

Begin 700th Paramount Picture at Coast Studio; It is Powell's Newest

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—With the beginning of production for Paramount's latest film for Paramount, the studio chalks up a record of 700 pictures produced in Hollywood by the company. The figure includes all pictures made here and abroad. It sent Cecil B. DeMille west in 1913 to make "The Squaw Man" with Dustin Farnum featured.

This month, is an average of one more than 41 pictures a year over a period of 17 years, which is considered large in that in the early days here, 20 to 30 films yearly was noted as a full program. Now the Paramount studios turn out some 60 pictures a year or more than one each week. "Ladies' Man" the Powell feature, brings the total of taking pictures up to 95 produced at the studio here.

Juvenile Appeal of New Pictures Proves Talking Films Will Stay; Darmour

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—The fact that "Tom Sawyer" has been an unqualified success in attracting both children and adults is, to the mind of Larry Darmour, comedy producer, sufficient proof that talking pictures are here to stay.

This film, Darmour points out, is the first big production made for youth, and has, he adds, outdistanced any silent ever made for juveniles.

"Tom Sawyer" is a parable to this in the short subject field, where the Mickey McGuire comedies and others with similar appeal for juveniles have been prominent in drawing children. When talking pictures show such signs of bringing children back to the theatre, then the success of dialog films is assured, he believes.

Rufus LeMairs is Given Casting Director Post

(Special to the Herald-World)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—Rufus LeMairs producer and director, who has been associated in the past with several Broadway plays, has been appointed casting director for the Warner and First National studios here.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

LINCOLN, NEBR.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

There's just one thing about a turkey that we don't approve of—they've got only one gizzard. When our wife brings a roast turkey on the table we spear for the gizzard, but Ruth beats us to it. If we had our way about it, every turkey would have 15 or 20 gizzards.

Last night in the Central cafe we ordered turkey giblets and they brought us three hearts and six gizzards and that was the best meal we have had since Larry Urback ordered a dinner for us in the Brown Derby in Hollywood last fall. There's this about Larry that we admire, he knows how to order a real dinner, and he can detect a substitute from the real article just by smelling the cork. In the language of Sam Gooble, "Give us gizzards or we'll foreclose the mortgage on the old homestead."

Since they are already well supplied with lip sticks, rouge, tennis racquets and bridge sets, about the most useful wedding presents one could give the bride today would be a can opener and a remedy for the cure of indigestion. Our husbands are becoming more emaciated every day, yet prohibition has to shoulder the blame for everything. "Taint right.

One can travel three times as far today on 50 cents worth of fat pork and 50 cents worth of beans than he can for the same money on the Twentieth Century limited, which proves that it is economy to walk.

We went up to the capital building today to call on the state sheriff, to see if we wanted us for anything, and we saw that wheat sower up on top of the capital dome 400 feet high without a stitch of clothes on. Betcha that guy gets mighty chilly before this winter is over.

They tell us that traveling by airplane has come to be the safest way to travel, but every paper we pick up headlines from two to a dozen killed in smashups. If this keeps up for a while the airplanes will make the Chicago racketeers look like a bunch of pikers.

We wish Peggy Bungle would marry either Hartford Oakdale or Montgomery El Dorado and be done with it and give her mother a chance to rest. The poor woman is becoming all frazzled out, and the public is entitled to a little consideration, too.

We never like to cast reflections on the good name and reputation of innocent, demure damsels, but our judgment is, that Tilda ought to be questioned relative to the whereabouts of Uncle Bim's moggle diamond. If Cleopatra can't throw some light on this matter, then Sid Smith has been hern DG WUG U elect the public and ought to be prosecuted.

You will observe that thus far in this Colyum we haven't said a word about pictures. There's a reason. For the past two years we have tried to say some nice complimentary things about the stars and their pictures whenever the pictures would warrant it, but do you know that Irene Rich has been the only lady who has written us and thanked us for our good opinions, and this makes us wonder if Miss Rich is the only star in Hollywood who has had the time and nerve to follow this Colyum.

We have said some nice things about our two favorites, Polly and Mary, and we'll betcha that if either of them were written up they'd tell us that we didn't know enough to pound sand in a rat hole, and it's the truth that hurts. We have given Al Christie's already profligate a lot of free publicity, but we will venture to say that Al would charge us as much for one of his pups as he would Hodges or Larry, who think more of a queen-fall than they do of pups. If we could see our reward is piling up somewhere, who knows? And maybe after we have those roast mallards for Christmas dinner we will feel better about it. But somehow just now we feel sadly neglected, and if you girls don't want us to say complimentary things about you, then, doggone it! we'll cut you off the list, in spite of our dislike to do so. Mail will reach us at Neligh, Nebr.

If you are partial to sea stories, we would advise you to go see George Bancroft in "DERELICT." This picture has some wonderful shots of an angry sea breaking over the deck of a wrecked vessel, and with George Bancroft in it, makes it a h-man's picture. There is just enough love stuff in it to satisfy from that angle, and it is free from anything of a suggestive nature, both in action and dialog, the director mellowed this up somewhat from the average story of this nature.

"Love 'em in port and forget 'em at sea," was George's motto, until he found the right lady, and then it was different. We believe that "DERELICT" will prove a milestone in sea story pictures from which you can measure the road both ways.

Speaking of jazz music: Joseph Chernolavsky, conductor of the Swing Orchestra at New Orleans, says, "Jazz is an art if it is played as an art." Oh, Yeah? And we might add that castor oil is a physic if taken as one.

We note on one page of the HERALD-WORLD a reproduction of four three-sheets and two six-sheets, all advertisements for "WAR NURSE" and each depicting a woman folded in a man's arms. Part of the caption says, "The display is almost a drama in themselves." SUFFERING CATS!

Since the supreme court ruling on the Uniform Contract, we understand that there is talk of the producers going back to the old Deposit System.

Away out here in Nebraska where people are not supposed to know anything, and where a lot of us don't, every man is presumed to be honest until he has proven himself to be otherwise. Some few have furnished that proof, but there are others who refuse to be cataloged in that class. The adoption of the deposit system will be looked upon as calculated to serve one of two purposes—either the producers want the exhibitors' money to do business on, or they class all of them as unreliable and crooked and have to be snubbed up to the hitching-post.

If the producers are seeking to widen the breach between the producers and exhibitors, they can do it in no better way than by the deposit system. As we remember it now, Nebraska was the first state to kick the deposit system out, and were we to guess on it, she will be the first one to do it again should it be adopted. Sometimes a little match can start a helluva fire, and we don't like fires out here. Let's try a little business judgment.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD man.

SOUND REPRODUCTION

THE BLUEBOOK SCHOOL
By F. H. Richardson

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 53

The question was: Should the rectifier tube filament current be an exacted value? Should the amplification dial switch of Western Electric equipment ever be removed if two or more tubes be operated in series, what would you do first if the series went dead?

I THINK we will give Gayle Grubaugh credit for this. Grubaugh did not word his answer quite so well as some others, but he certainly has the idea, and, too, it is a "clicker." Very few weeks pass but Brother Grubaugh sends in a carefully prepared answer. I may add that Leo J. Sanders of Everett, Wash., and Carl Dougherty of Tyrone, Pa., also sent in very excellent answers to this question. Grubaugh says:

"Yes, the rectifier tube filament current has a fixed value. The current must not be too high, neither must it be too low, as it will be pointless to use the tubes. Keep it at the proper value for your equipment.

"In Western Electric sound systems the amount of amplification is determined by the dial switch. This switch is set at its proper value when it is installed, so the projectionist need not bother with this. In fact, he must not change this setting at all, unless told to do so by the service engineer.

"Quite often two or more tubes are used with their filaments in series. If one tube goes dead it will, of course, put out the other tubes. You must locate the faulty tube and replace it with a good one. If they are working in series and two tubes go out at once, you know that a tube has burnt out."

ANSWER TO BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 54

The question was: Describe an electric battery. Let us see just what you really know about it.

THIS one seemed to have a lot of you "buffaloed," for the answers were relatively few. I have given the laurels to Aubrey D. Hotaling, who says:

"A storage battery is a device in which electric energy may be stored for use at some future time. A battery generates no power in itself. It can only furnish the amount of current put into it by the process known as charging. As the potential is truly D.C., it is obvious that the source of charging also be D.C. This may be obtained from the regular A.C. line by either a rectifier, vibrator or electrolyte type, or a motor generator set, having a D.C. generator.

"It may not be amiss here to describe the whys and wherefores of the storage battery. A battery is made up of a number of positive and negative plates of pure lead. These plates are arranged alternately and are separated from each other by rubber or wooden (usually cedar) separators, or insulators. On the number of plates used depends the voltage of the battery. Batteries are assembled in units of two volts each, and the units are then put in a rubber, or wooden container, and each unit mechanically, as well as electrically, connected by means of lead straps on the top of the assembly. Therefore, a three-unit battery will deliver six volts, a six-unit assembly, 12 volts, etc. Each cell or unit is now filled with a liquid known as electrolyte, a mixture of sulphuric acid and pure water, to a predetermined level. This liquid must cover the lead plates, but if the cell is filled too high, the acid will in all probability overflow and run out during the charging process.

"When charging, the polarity of the charging source and the battery must 'check up'—positive to positive, and negative to negative. We must be careful not to charge at a higher rate than specified for the particular battery. To do so means buckled plates and short battery life.

"It is known when a battery is discharged the plates become sulphated. This sulphate must be driven from them in order that the battery may again become in a usable condition. The positive plate, when in a fully charged state, is converted chemically to lead peroxide, and the negative to pure spongy lead. The exact condition of each cell can be determined by a hydrometer, by which we may read the specific gravity. This varies with different makes of batteries, but is usually between 1.200 and 1.000. This reading tells us the percentage of acid removed from the electrolyte and transferred to the plates, or the relative strength of weakness, as the case may be, of the electrolyte.

"When a battery is in a fully charged state, it will 'gas' profusely. This will not injure the plates if not carried to excess. In fact, it is considered good practice to allow a battery to gas occasionally to make sure all the sulphate has been driven from the plates. It is well to completely loosen the vent caps during charging. It may be assumed that if a 100-ampere-hour battery will deliver one ampere for 100 hours before becoming exhausted and in need of recharging. Such is not the case in practice; however, as the best of batteries are only 75 per cent efficient, and will deliver only three-fourths of their rated capacity before requiring a recharge. So it is obvious that it is dangerous, at least rather humiliating, to depend absolutely on the rated capacity, and have a 'dead' battery on our hands in the middle of a show. Remember the above and don't forget to use the hydrometer. This is the only way to obtain the true condition of the electrolyte.

"A freshly charged battery should not be put in use immediately, because being in a gaseous condition, it will cause extraneous noise in the loud-speaker. It is well to allow it to lie idle an hour or so.

"Being highly inflammable, especially after a charge, it is wise to keep open lights, cigars, pipes, etc., away from batteries. The possible resultant explosion may put you on the shelf for a while if nothing is done.

"It is important to keep battery tops clean and free from acid and dust, as this causes current leakage, and wiping and steaming in the horns. Soda water is excellent for this purpose, as it neutralizes the acid. Wipe top and posts dry after cleaning.

"A good proportion is one pound of Arm and Hammer soda to one gallon of water. But don't let any drip into the cells, as it will also weaken the acid. Clean all leads thoroughly of corrosion (sandpaper is the thing) and cover with vaseline. Keep the water level in each cell to such a level that it covers the plates at all times. Any portion of the plate left exposed to the acid is ruined—it will no longer take a charge. Use only distilled water, free from iron. (Crotan or Ashokan in New York is okay, but we are not all lucky enough to be there.) In most localities the ordinary city water is wholly unfit for our use. It behoves us, then, to go to the corner drug store in order to have our needs supplied. Rainwater will do if gathered in glass or earthen vessels, out in the open, free from metal drops, etc. It is advantageous to add water before putting the battery on charge, in order that it become thoroughly mixed with the electrolyte.

"Electrolyte does not weaken with age, as many suppose. It need never be renewed.

New Erpi Equipment Working Five Hours After Fire Report

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—When fire damaged sound and projection equipment in the projection room of the Victoria theatre in Cambden, N. J., recently stopping the matinee performance, Erpi service men were notified. The fire was reported at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. New equipment was rushed by automobile from headquarters. At 5 o'clock the new equipment had been completely installed and wired, and the show went on as usual at 7 that evening.

Richardson Replies To Question No. 54 In Bluebook School

unless by accident some of it gets spilled. It is then necessary to charge the battery until there is a rise in specific gravity, for a period of approximately four hours. Then add sufficient acid from your reserve supply to compensate for the amount lost. The sulphuric acid does not evaporate. It is the water that is the reason you add only water to the battery.

"It is a good practice to have a regular day, once a week, to check up thoroughly on the battery. Take good care of your battery and it will reciprocate in your favor. It doesn't ask much, but it gives a lot if you will give it only a half a chance."

Earphones Installed in The Forest at Cincinnati

(Special to the Herald-World)

CINCINNATI, Dec. 18.—The first earphones to be used in a local theatre for the benefit of the hard of hearing have been installed in the Forest theatre, a neighborhood house located in a fashionable suburb. Miss Dora Stecker, manager, reports that this innovation is meeting with enthusiastic approval from those patrons who have heretofore been unable to attend the talks on account of trouble with their hearing.

Movietone Cameraman Shoot Big Chorus in Omaha

Cameramen of Fox Movietone News from Chicago were in Omaha this week to photograph a chorus of 1,300 voices, which sang Handel's "Messiah" there.

Porty musicians of the Omaha Symphony Orchestra Association provided the accompaniment.

Previews Popular in Omaha

Reports from Omaha indicate that midweek previews are reaching new heights of popularity there. Theatres preview each film before its week run. A considerable number of complimentary tickets are given for each of these performances; the word passes 'round to ticket holders' friends and in they come!

Boys See "Tom Sawyer"

H. A. Wolfe, manager of the Strand in New Orleans, had 150 youngsters from the St. Mary's Boys Home as his guests at a matinee showing of the picture "Tom Sawyer."

Walter Caldwell, manager of Lowe's Valentine theatre, Toledo, put on a collegiate campaign for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Good News" with the assistance of this "talking machine"—it speaks for itself.

Erpi Reaches 7,367 in World Installations; 4,803 in U. S.

R. S. Crockett Appointed Head of Technical Sound

For Masterphone in Seattle

Masterphone has added a technical sound engineering department to its loop offices in Seattle and R. S. Crockett has been placed in charge of this division.

E. M. Jensen, president of the Masterphone Sound Equipment Company, announced Crockett's appointment a short time ago.

Crockett served for four years as directing engineer of sound for the Amplifier Engineering Corporation of New York. He has also been associated with the Radio Corporation of America.

RCA Completes 55th Installation In Australia, Has 18 in Hoyt Chain

RCA Photophone, Inc., has expanded its total of installations in Australia to 55, with the recent wiring of the Home Hill theatre in Home Hill and the West End house, both in Brisbane, Queensland.

Eighteen of the 55 houses equipped are in the Hoyt circuit, one of Australia’s large theatre chains. The theatres now using Photophone sound are listed according to their provinces as follows:

Motion Picture Service

Gets Eleven Photophones For U. S. Army Stations

The United States Army Motion Picture Service has placed an order for 11 RCA Photophone sets, in addition to the more than 200 installations contracted for by the U. S. Navy.

Four of these sets will be installed at a later date, when the Army posts have been prepared for them, while seven are to be immediately put in use at the following stations and posts: Nansemond Ordnance Depot, Portsmouth, Va.; Mitchell Field, Hempstead, L. I.; Fort Worden, Seattle, Wash.; Fort Stevens, Fort Stevens, Ore.; Savannah Proving Grounds, Savannah, Ill.; Fort Reno, Fort Reno, Okla.; Fort Monmouth, Little Silver, N. J.

The Army Motion Picture Service at present supplies only films made by producing corporations, but plans are being made for the Army Signal Corps to produce a number of training pictures at the studio in Washington, which has been equipped with RCA Photophone sound recording apparatus. The training films will be a part of the Army’s regular course of instruction.

New Equipment for Small Exhibitors in Australia

(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — Another new reproducing system has recently been placed on the Australian market by Reproducer Systems (Aust.) Ltd., Sydney. The new system, known as “Repovox,” is of Australian manufacture and at recent demonstrations has apparently given very satisfactory results. The company makes no claims that their plant is equal to the high-priced makes but they guarantee it to give a highly satisfactory performance.

Oslo Theatre Introduces

German Sound Apparatus

(Special from Department of Commerce)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — The Kinoplex theatre, Oslo, Norway, has installed sound equipment made by the Zeiss-Ikon-Philips Company of Germany. This is said to be first installation of this make of equipment in Norway.

Many of the smaller houses in the country are using the American Pacte and Photophone sets and the Petersen & Poulsen apparatus, made in Denmark.

Never a Better Time for Exploitation Than Now, Says Franconi; He Offers 10 Ideas

"The average small town showman is not taking advantage of the 'breaks' thrown his way by the present business conditions. And it's absolutely a fact that never in show history has he had so many real opportunities to sell his pictures to everyone in the community as he has now!"

There you have the statement of John L. Franconi, representative of Vitagraph, Inc., in Oklahoma City. John has had years of direct contact with theatre managers. He is a man who has grown to be a veteran in the show business, and when he speaks of exploitation, he doesn't talk through his hat.

"The small town men who are going after business, says John, "have had such tremendous results that I want to pass on some of the methods they are using to others. They have proved to be SURE-FIRE ideas for profits and are practical for any small town."

Not Brand New, But—

Below this last assertion, he has outlined a group of stunts which he has picked up from here and there. Now John does not claim that all of his suggestions are absolutely the newest under the sun. He frankly points out that every one of them may have at some time been used by some exhibitor. But he feels there is almost sure to be a certain number which are new to many. Here, in condensed form, are his ideas:

1. Organize a comedy week, music week, or a review week. All click if real snap is put behind them.
2. Tie-ups or anniversary week, a great stunt, can be tied in with a worthwhile civic event.
3. Bargain days and bargain weeks are always good. Many theatres offer bargain prices every week on a certain day. It gives everybody a chance to attend at least once a week and is far better than the usual cut in admission price.

Home Talent Will Get Them

4. Prepare a home town week and procure home talent singing, acting and whatever for performances. This is one of the surest seat sellers known. Not only is it very profitable, but it makes the community feel that the theatre manager is really interested in developing local talent.
5. Special children's shows—few exhibitors realize the sales possibilities of such programs. Other organizations, including women's clubs and parent-teachers' associations are always willing to assist.
6. Previews and midnight shows speak for themselves in any small town. They are the sure-profit shows of any week.
7. Advertising tie-ups are especially desirable, and never before were merchants more willing to cooperate. They want to sell their goods and any advertising boost from the theatre is instantly snatched. This is a great business stimulator and a "natural" for certain programs.
8. Better film months—they are seldom used by the average small town exhibitor, yet they bring results if properly exploited.

Don't Forget the Style Shows

9. Style shows are invariably popular. Women always like them; you'd be surprised how many men are interested, too. The small town patron is just as absorbed in new modes of dress as is the city person. It is a pity that this dependable plan is so often overlooked. Merchants will lend almost 100 per cent cooperation and the cost will be negligible. Many times it may be turned into a profit.
10. Contests are old as showmanship itself, but they always arouse a new interest. Tie-ups with newspaper classified ad sections are good. Stunts to identify film stars help. Anagram contests in word-building are also popular. Tie-ups with local merchants will provide prices in cash, merchandise and theatre tickets.

How About This Skeleton?

Franconi has outlined here the skeleton of an exploitation policy that will make good showmanship folder for months to come. Are you going to leave the skeleton where it is, or are you going to feed it and see it develop into a live, virile model of good exploitation?

There are no "ifs" about any of John's suggestions. They have all been tried and found true. But you can't sit around and think about them. It's no use waiting for the exact psychological moment to spring them. The time to use them is NOW. The showman who makes his own "breaks" is the fellow who is going to do just that.

Lam Amusement Opens

New House in La Grange, Ga.

The Lam Amusement Company has opened a new theatre in La Grange, Ga., to be known as the La Grange. W. T. Harper has been placed in charge as resident manager.

Erected at a stated cost of $125,000, the house is said to be one of the most modern in its territory. It has a free parking lot adjacent to the building and is equipped with Western Electric sound. A four page folder announcing its opening programs says the La Grange is the third theatre in Georgia built for talking pictures.
Talking Poster With Girl Doing the Announcing Holds Crowds All Day

H. M. Marsh, one of the officials of the R. & R. Theatres, Muskogee, Okla., describes an interesting variation of the amplifier announcing system in exploitation. While public address systems may basically be as old as the megaphone and the town crier, yet this idea has a new twist that the town crier certainly never had.

The stunt was one of several employed for the picture, "Passion Flower," when it showed at the Ritz in Muskogee. George Scott was in charge of the campaign.

Marsh's letter follows: "Perhaps you will be interested in a stunt worked up by Mr. Scott in exploiting Metro's 'Passion Flower,' which was played December 7-10. This is a variation of the old announcing system idea, and any theatre that possesses a fairly good announcing outfit can use it to good advantage.

Talking Poster Attracts Them

"First, a horn was mounted on the back of an easel that was about the size of a three-sheet. Then our signman painted on the signboard the head of Kay Francis (one of the featured players in 'Passion Flower'), and printed under this head the names of principal players. The loudspeaker was directly behind the head of Kay Francis. In order to further the illusion of a talking poster, a girl did all the announcing.

"Second, 2,000 small cards, three by four inches, were printed and numbered consecutively from one to 2,000. These cards bore the title of the film, theatre name and playing date. The microphone and amplifier were located in the business office of the Broadway theatre. A man stood in front of the house and passed out the cards. At the same time the girl announced that free tickets were being given. When she ran out of words, she would begin a rapid-fire discussion of the picture, its author and the players.

"A total of 20 passes were given away the day that this stunt was pulled. The talking poster kept throngs in front of the theatre practically all day long. Although the film was showing at the Ritz, we worked the announcing gag in front of our Broadway, which is located on the principal street, while the Ritz is nearly two blocks away from the main thoroughfare.

"This is triple-barreled exploitation: the cards, the announcing and the three-sheet poster all called the attention of passersby to the fact that 'Passion Flower' was going to show at the Ritz theatre, Sunday and Monday. Jucidentially, we noticed that nine out of 10 people would listen to the voice of the girl announcer, while very few paid any attention to a man who relieved her for a few minutes.

"Our business the first two days of this picture was so good that we held it over for two more days, and the total business grossed was very gratifying. This is a town of only 25,000, and 'All Quiet' is the only other picture we have run four days this season. So you can see how well it pays to advertise."

Cut in Street Car Rates Made Talking Point for Theatres

When the street railway system in Portland, Ore., inaugurated a new low fare rate, first run houses in the city promptly cooperated by issuing folders encouragign use of the street cars.

Weekly passes were sold by the street railways, offering rides at a cut rate. This was played up on the cover of the folder, which read: "Ride downtown on a weekly pass to your favorite theatre."

In addition, the idea was plugged in practically all the theatre advertising and on billboards. Trailers also carried the information.

Many have already taken advantage of the reduced rates to see shows and constant repetition of the ads is bringing more receipts to the Portland theatres.

Radio TIEUPS and Cardboard Cutouts of Chevalier Help Exploit "Playboy of Paris"

When Charles Brewer, manager of the Tennessee theatre, Knoxville, played "Playboy of Paris," he depended almost entirely upon radio tieups for exploitation.

Several weeks before the opening, a cabinet model was displayed in an artistic setting in the lobby. Another merchant contributed six electric clocks which were given to patrons.

One of the department stores joined to arrange a clever window display. A cardboard cutout of Chevalier, star of the picture, was designed, showing him standing beside a table with a tray in his hand.

Handkerchiefs for Ballyhoo

George Tyson, manager of the Stanley theatre, Pittsburgh, distributed several thousand imitation silk handkerchiefs to advertise his showing of "A Lady Surrenders." Each kerchief was stamped with the announcement and scented with an inexpensive perfume. A group of girls handled the distribution.
Need Stunts to Draw Children?
Here Are Some That Can't Fail

When children come to a theatre just for the sheer fun and frolic they get, then you can make up your mind that the manager has pretty well solved the problem of arousing and keeping up child interest.

Tom McGuire is such a manager, if all reports are not badly misleading. Each week he offers new stunts with plenty of action to them. That is what children like. And Tom stopped worrying long ago about the juvenile attendance problem.

One of his stunts was to line up 20 youngsters on the stage, have them remove their shoes and place them in a pile. From either end of the stage, the youngsters made a mad rush for their scrambled shoes. The first to get his own shoes and put them on was given a prize.

A Pound a Minute
On another occasion, McGuire picked a group of boys and girls and gave each a pound of soda crackers. At a given word, they all began to eat, the winner being given a cash prize.

One of the favorites with the kiddies is this: 10 girls are seated on chairs on the stage and given a cloth patch and a needle. Ten boys are selected to have the patches sewed on their trousers while they lay across the girls' laps. The girl who finishes first, without sticking the boy, is given a prize.

Still another of Tom's ideas is a stunt in which 10 boys and girls participate. All are blindfolded and seated facing each other. The girls hold dishes of ice cream and feed the boys.

Coca Cola Through a Funnel
At another time, 10 boys were selected and ordered to lie on their backs on the stage while small funnels were placed in their mouths. Girls poured Coca Cola into the funnels.

The most recent gag used calls for the dumping of 50 dimes into a punchbowl of flour. The contestants, without using their hands, must "duck" into the flour and fish out the dimes in their mouths.

With Christmas almost here, McGuire has not been lax in planning parties of the season for the children. He has arranged three fun tests, although they will not take place until after Christmas, on December 29, 30 and 31.

Lodges Aid in Matinees
All will be matinee performances under the direction of the Knights of Columbus and the Elks lodges. More than 10,000 children are expected to attend. "Check and Double Check" has been selected as the screen attraction, with a special stage bill to please the youngsters.

Transportation to and from the theatre will be provided by the street railway system and a motor bus company. One business establishment has placed all of its trucks at the disposal of the theatre.

Small toys, candy and novelties will be given the children as they enter the theatre.

Children Imitate Amos 'n' Andy, Teacher Acts "Madame Queen"

Ollie Brownlee, manager of the Joie theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., drew more than one laugh on his exploitation for "Check and Double Check" when he offered two portable phonographs to the two children who could best impersonate Amos 'n' Andy.

A drug store tied up to give the two phonographs. A radio concern donated a receiving set to the grade school which presented the best "Fresh Air" taxicab.

The latter idea was eminently successful. Enthusiasm of the youngsters practically knew no bounds. In one of the schools the interest ran so high that the principal blacked up as "Madame Queen" and visited all the classrooms.

Manager Brownlee also secured permission from the school board to make announcements on the picture to all grade school classes.

At 11:30 o'clock on a Saturday morning, a day before the actual opening of the film, Brownlee invited all school children to a preview. He did this with the idea that the youngsters would go home and tell their families about it. And that's just the way it worked out!

The prize awards for the best taxicab and the best imitation of Amos 'n' Andy were given away in the lobby after the Saturday morning show. Large crowds gathered outside the theatre to watch proceedings.

This is really live-wire showmanship. It is the kind that exhibitors need to get child patronage. And when a house draws the juveniles the adults are a lot easier to get.

Mock Manuscript Note
Tells Auto Drivers of Film

A clever bit of advertising was carried on by Earl Payne, manager of the K.O.P. Palace theatre, Milwaukee, in connection with the showing of "Tol'able David." Several thousand ordinary white slips of paper, measuring three by four inches and bearing the inscription: "Noticed your car and just wanted to tell you not to miss 'Tol'able David' at the K.O.P. Palace. Just saw it and it's a knock-out. Jim."

Each slip was printed in script and to the casual observer was an original note. They were distributed in the various automobiles in the downtown district of Milwaukee and received considerable attention because of their original and unusual appearance.

Fox Midwesco Announces Promotions at Milwaukee

Promotions in the Fox Midweso Lincoln Line, Milwaukee, have been announced by H. J. Fitzgerald, division manager. Allan Moore, formerly assistant manager of the circuit's Uptown theatre has been named manager of the Tivoli, succeeding Harry Dunning, who had been transferred to the circuit's Modjeska theatre. Clay Armstrong has succeeded Moore at the Uptown assistant to Louis Olrove.

G. W. Allen, formerly with the circuit's advertising department, has been named assistant to Dunning at the Modjeska and H. G. Fisher, formerly assistant at the Paradise, is now manager of the Mth. He is succeeded at the Paradise by Donovan Deakin, former doorman at that theatre.

Cashier Pulls Cord at Box Office to Ring Bells in Lobby for Dallas "Whoopee" Run

Fred Kislingbury, manager of the Melba house, Dallas, negotiated tieups with department stores that brought several special window displays of wearing apparel on "Whoopee." Placards carrying the date, theatre and cast of the film were placed in each display.

During the picture's engagement, the lobby was decorated with miniature cowbells. On each box was a small card with the name of the film. Strings of these bells were connected to several larger bells near the ceiling. All were joined together in such a way that when a rope was pulled at the box office, the bells would jangle and clang simultaneously.

Ushers and doormen wore "10-gallon hats" throughout the engagement, further exploiting the idea of "Whoopee."

Heralds, Ads and Benefit Program Plug “Just Imagine” in New Orleans

Rodney D. Toups, manager of Loew's State, New Orleans, has just completed a campaign on “Just Imagine” which is noteworthy for its completeness. His publicity director, Moise Bloch, assisted him.

Billed as the world premiere, the picture was exploited on a gradual basis. Advance teasers first appeared in the newspapers, apprising the public of the fact that entertainment 50 years ahead of its time was coming to the State; that the newest thing on the screen was headed for New Orleans. El Brendel was featured in all billing.

Several days before the opening, 3,000 envelopes were printed in red with the query, “What Does the Future Hold in Store for You?” Inside the envelope was information on the film. Five thousand plain heralds were also given away.

Patrons Pick Grid Winners

Another set of heralds was distributed before football games with the following lines: “Just Imagine’ you are a nationally known sports editor. Who would you pick to win 10 of the week’s biggest games? Drop your guesses in box at Loew’s State lobby and receive a guest admission to see ‘Just Imagine,’ now showing at Loew’s State.” Thousands participated in this contest, it is reported.

Readers appeared daily in the newspapers and squibs in Sunday amusement sections of the papers also plugged the picture.

The marque of the theatre was topped with two large cutouts of Brendel, while large blue and white letters above and below the ticket window told of “Just Imagine.” The lobby was amply covered with art work along the same lines as the newspaper advertising.

Papers Help Entertain Jobless

Taking advantage of the campaigns of two local newspapers in the unemployed situation, Toups entertained hundreds of jobless at the State, under the auspices of the two papers. This netted the theatre a series of large display ads at no cost.

Almost countless stories appeared, and all plugged the picture.

The State added another feather to its cap by getting exclusive motion pictures of the Tulane-Georgia football game. The taking of these received front page publicity and sports sections played it up. On the opening night of the film, members of the Georgia football team were guests at the house.

The student newspaper at Tulane University donated a free ad on the football motion pictures, and a story as well.

Marion Eddy, featured on the State’s stage bill, brought extra publicity. She is a licensed pilot and was the guest of the airport and made several exhibition flights. This brought more news stories. Another stunt was a theatre party for fliers at the airport.

Exhibitors Reap Profits

On “Big House” in Ohio; Lyric Breaks B. O. Record

Exhibitors in Cincinnati, and the rest of Ohio, too, for that matter, feel certain the censors could have done nothing better to boost “The Big House,” than what they did. The fan aroused curiosity and now the box offices are collecting the profits.

In Cincinnati, it is reported that crowds milled about the Lyric theatre for hours after the picture opened. The all-time box office record of this house was broken during the first week, and the second week holds promise of duplicating the first.

Educator Reviews Film

Newark, N. J., House

The management of the Mosque theatre, Newark, N. J., obtained the superintendent of public schools to write a review of “Abraham Lincoln” at its opening showing there. He also recommended the film to the teachers.

Bookmarks were placed in outgoing books at the public library and its four branches as the result of another tieup.

Midnight charity show at the Michigan theatre, Detroit, receives a three-column ad through a newspaper agency. Three masters of ceremonies were on the stage to help draw capacity crowds for the benefit performance.

St. Louis Houses Are Receiving Stations For Jobless Relief

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis is cooperating with a local newspaper in collecting clothes for the poor. Theatres throughout the city are being used as receiving stations for the garments.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the exhibitors’ organization, sent a letter to the newspaper offering his assistance. The letter was published in a two-column box in the paper. His letter follows:

“I have noticed the good work the St. Louis Star is doing in the relief of the suffering unemployed. In behalf of the members of our association, who are only too glad to cooperate with you, I offer our theatres as receiving stations for clothes so that the people of St. Louis can deliver them to their neighborhood theatres. The theatres will in turn deliver them to your relief station.”

Theatre Under Repair

Hugh Geiselman, manager of the Opera House, Louisville, Ohio, is installing new draperies and other decorations in his theatre.
Golf Club Members
Wear Masks at Ball
For "Madam Satan"

The golf comedy, "Love in the Rough," has provided many opportunities for tieups on golf and miniature golf. H. Nessel, manager of the Strand, Elkhart, Ind., made use of several of these.

A local hotel has a putting green in its lobby, and they are tied up with the hotel by giving a pass to each person making a hole-in-one. A large poster in the hotel lobby announced this fact.

Arrangement with the Elkhart Golf Club gave the picture an additional plug. Just before "Love in the Rough" opened, the golfers had their annual dance at the clubhouse. Each member was presented with a card announcing the showing of the golf comedy. Other notices were posted on the bulletin boards in the club building.

Such exploitation will hardly do in the Northern states now, where golf courses are covered with snow. But it's a good hint for exhibitors in the South. And, of course, there are innumerable tieups with miniature indoor courses, which work anywhere and only await the showman's beckoning.

Mellincoff Collects Fresh Vegetables at Children's Matinee for the Unemployed

The publicity value of theatre campaigns to aid the poor is illustrated again in the work of M. Mellincoff, manager of the Warner house, Lawrence, Mass.

Tons of fresh vegetables were gathered at a children's matinee. Mellincoff's idea was to have youngsters bring vegetables of enough value to cover the admission price.

When the Saturday matinee came, the crowd was so great that two other Warner theatres in the city, the Broadway and Palace, had to be opened. This made the charity program a triple affair. Newspapers devoted space freely.

Theatre Displays Models of Famous Ships for "Derelict"

Models of famous ships were displayed in the lobby of the Paramount, San Francisco, for its showing of "Derelict," a sea picture.

The miniatures were loaned by three steamship offices. The French Line loaned models of the Ile de France, a modern vessel; La Provence, of 1914; La Bretagne, of 1886, and the Washington, a side-wheeler of 1864. The North German Lloyd turned over a miniature replica of the Bremen, while another company loaned a model of the Grand Turk, once a famous sailing ship.

Double Program of Old and New Chevalier Films Shown

San Francisco is apparently a Chevalier town.

The St. Francis theatre there recently celebrated its two hundredth showing on the picture "Playboy of Paris." In addition to this Maurice Chevalier vehicle, the house also dug up his first important film "Innocents of Paris" and the two pictures were shown together. Packed houses greeted each program, it is reported.

Straw Hats for Ushers

One week ahead of the "Feet First" opening at the Melba theatre, Dallas, the ushers were given straw hats and hornrimmed glasses to wear as ballyhoos for the Lobby picture. The hats were provided gratis by a local wholesale straw hat manufacturer. Fred Kisingbury is manager of the Melba.

Making the Ink Talk

A Warner artist in Los Angeles produced six strikingly effective ads by combining white backgrounds and black ones. Contrast is the keynote. The success of Warner Brothers' "The Doorway to Hell" at the Hollywood and Downtown theatres is due in a large measure, to these layouts.

The Picture That Gangland DARED
Hollywood to Make!

TO THE PUBLIC: There are occasions when we feel that words are entirely inadequate to express our opinion of a motion picture.

In announcing the opening of "The Doorway to Hell," simultaneously at Warner Bros. Downtown and Warner Bros. Hollywood Theatres next Friday, November 28th, we cannot find words of sufficient import to convey the tremendous power and drama of this great story of organized crime.

"The Doorway to Hell" is now playing to absolute capacity in its Fourth Week at the Strand Theatre in New York. It is playing to standing room only in other cities of America. This picture is the sensation of the year. It reveals the inner working of Gangland as they were never revealed before, with dramatic punch following dramatic punch and in it is truly "The Picture That Gangland Dared Hollywood to Make." Lew Ayres, star of "All Quiet on the Western Front," has a role that will make screen history. He portrays a baby-faced killer, one of the boys behind, whose fire-spitting pen brings terror to the hearts of rival racketeers.

"The Doorway to Hell" will take you for a ride of thrills. It is tense in its portrayal of lives and loves of those in clover today and on the spot tomorrow.

We give you our sincere guarantee that you have never witnessed such a picture—such a virile, sweeping, and timely indictment of organized crime.

It opens at both Warner Bros. Downtown and Warner Bros. Hollywood Theatres this Friday, and it will be the greatest sensation in Los Angeles motion picture history since the inception of Veepahone.

WARNER BROS. THEATRES
60 Stanley Houses Get B. O. in Contest For “Sunshine Girl”

The Stanley Warner Company has brought to a close its annual “Sunshine Girl” contest, which has been promoted in 60 of the circuit’s houses in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

The popularity contest began in the individual theatres, where the local “Sunshine Girl” was selected. This competition ran for five weeks. The final eliminations took place at the Madison in Philadelphia. The winning girl received a wrist watch and a round trip from New York to Havana, Cuba. The trip included a three-day stay in Cuba.

Six girls who were runners-up were also given trips to Cuba, while airplane journeys to Los Angeles and back were awarded to four others. A radio set was another prize.

Winning girls were selected by audience applause. Contestants could sing, dance, recite or play a musical instrument. All entrants were required to be over 16 years old, unmarried, non-professional and not an employee of the Stanley Warner Company.

This contest was heavily exploited by all of the 60 houses and brough heavy increases in box office.

Chicago United Artists Has 4 Tieups for “Lottery Bride”

“Tips on How to Win a Bride” was the name of a contest conducted by a Chicago newspaper through tieup with the United Artists theatre for “The Lottery Bride.” Fifty tickets and $100 in cash were the prizes.

A jewelry store cooperated by paying for the cost of 5,000 heralds. A radio station broadcast advance information on the film. Window displays were obtained in 36 Walgreen drug stores and in 18 Victor record stores.

Battery of Spotlights Gets Big Crowds for “Du Barry”

When “Du Barry” came to the California theatre, San Francisco, R. E. Hicks, manager, installed a battery of spotlights on the sidewalk under the marquee, transforming the lobby and front of the building into a blaze of light visible for several blocks. In addition, a searchlight swept the sky.

There are always those, you know, who are just curious enough to want to learn what causes such things. People were attracted to the theatre somewhat like bugs are drawn to a lantern, one might say.

Sacramento Exhibitor Pens Story of Local Stage

M. B. Hustler, manager of the Fox Capitol, Sacramento, Cal., has taken up writing as an avocation. Not long ago, a feature article, published under his name, appeared in a local paper. Its title was “Ghosts of Dead Days Before the Arrival of Movies Hover Near Sacramento’s Historic Playhouses.”

The article was a story of show business in the city’s pioneer days. Pictures of old-time actors and stage celebrities were run with the story.

Critics’ Preview And Ad Campaign Get B. O. on This One

M. A. Malaney, manager of Loew’s Stillman theatre, Cleveland, arranged a special screening of “Billy the Kid,” to which all newspaper people were invited. Special entertainment was provided by radio and stage artists.

The special show was given a day before the picture opened. The following day one of the papers carried a streamer and one and a half columns of feature material on its amusement page concerning the picture.

Another critic devoted a long story on the dramatic page to the picture and the Realife film. Other stories and illustrations appeared in the rest of the papers.

Malaney hired a man to carry a three-sheet sign through the streets with the copy: “Realife—Production of ‘Billy the Kid’ now at Loew’s Stillman’.” A man with a motion picture camera followed him. At prominent places, the sign carrier halted while motion pictures were taken of him. This aroused curiosity and crowds gathered at every picture-taking.

Plane with Siren Throws Smoke Trail Over Buffalo For “Hell’s Angels” Film

An airplane flew over Buffalo during the noon hour on several succeeding days, with a siren on the plane and throwing a smoke trail, to exploit “Hell’s Angels” at the Teck theatre.

Literature and passes were broadcast from the air. The plane had been painted on the under side with the words: “Hell’s Angels’ Teck theatre twice daily.”

In the lobby, a parachute was suspended from the ceiling, with a dummy hanging below it, with a flying suit, helmet, goggles and all. Usurhers wore white cotton helmets and flying jackets during the engagement.

Milwaukee Organists Back at Consoles

Neighborhood Houses Using Many of Them

Under New Agreement Theatres May Add Organ Solo to Program Without Orchestra

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 18. — Since the signing of a new agreement between theatre operators and musicians last September, which provides that neighborhood theatres may employ organists without the necessity of employing an orchestra of four or more pieces, the organists in this city seem to again be coming into their own. Six of the local Fox neighborhood houses are now employing organists, being the Oriental, Tower, Paradise, Modjeska, Uptown and Garfield. In addition to being featured in special programs for the youngsters, they are also staging organ numbers and leading in community singing.

The organist is also being returned to the local Warner Brothers houses, now being featured at the circuit's Venetian, Lake, State and Downer theatres, and only recently the newly added Egyptian. In order to introduce Elmer Ihrke, the new organist at the latter house, Garry Lassman, manager of the theatre, invited the public free as a guest of the theatre to attend an organ recital given by Ihrke every Sunday from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m.

Numerous other Milwaukee houses, independent, have added organ solos to their programs, which houses include the Shorewood theatre, the Avalon, Plaza, Ritz and Studio, the last featuring silent pictures with organ music as well as sound pictures. Fifteen minute programs of community singing are conducted at a number of the theatres, while singing organists are in demand.

Fox Midwesco is also placing organists in its theatres throughout the state wherever union rules permit. Warner Brothers are featuring organists in a number of the state theatres, including their Kenosha house, where Ted Sanford, an aviation enthusiast and licensed pilot, is billed as the "Flying Organist" and has created a great following for himself among the children. In Racine, Steve Boschir has been singing his numbers through a microphone, acting also as master of ceremonies in connection with the special program for members of the Warner Brothers Kiddie club.

Three theatre organists in Madison, Wisconsin, are on the air regularly, broadcasting over station WIBA. Rose Keefe, organist at the Eastwood theatre, is on every morning at 8:45, playing request numbers. Mae Bridwell broadcasts regularly each week from the Parkway theatre, while Roberta Dille presides at the Fox Strand console. Charles Loewenberg, manager of the theatre, announces her numbers.

Hall Makes "Kiss Waltz" Part of Program

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Bob Hall, known on vaudeville circuits as the extemporaneous singer who makes up his words as he goes along, has accepted the "Kiss Waltz" as part of his act. This Wizmark song is the only popular song that he has used.

We should be happy indeed to write a fitting caution for this picture, but the matter is so well taken care of in that immovable column which is written for you each week by one Bobby Melkin that it behoves us to request that you turn to that noteworthy list of observations, facts and remarks for information concerning these two boys, providing you are one of the few that doesn't know about them already. It is within our province, however, to mention that they are Al Carney and Jack Laney.

San Francisco Fox

Week Ending December 18

There's a hot stuff stage show at the Fox this week, the attraction being Pancho & Maric's "Espanola Idea" which is filled with paprika, dazzling beauties and dancing dances. Likewise there is some elation that this is not taken very majorly.

Walt Roemer and his orchestra offer "The Dance Estival," a symphonic arrangement of celebrated waltzes in which "The Bar Danube," "Merry Widow" and "Symphony" figure. Two organists render noble assistance in the finale.

The stage act begins with singing behind a curtain pictures a gauze on the Spanish Main and when this rises a full company is revealed in Spanish costumes in a Cuban setting. Dancers show their steps and as the hilariety reaches its height a bell sounds and a somber priest enters forth with words of benediction. No sooner has he departed than a shooting array commences and this is followed by an excellent exhibition of knife throwing.

Harry Vennos, sub song singer, offers a song and the dancing girls do sinuous dance characteristic of Cuba. As this is brought to a close the girls gather to form a living heat and the chorus rows off stage. Mayo and Caruso, in a scene of trick horse, put a lot of laughs and their absurd antics prove an outstanding habit, particularly their tap dancing.

An Aztec pyramid, with girls on the steps in barbaric costumes featured by feather headdresses is a spectacular scenic offering and one rendered doubly enjoyable by the ceremonial dance of John and Harrel Griffith. A song recitative by Harry Vernon is followed by a real Spanish dance, with the girls in making good use of nothing and castanets.

Abby Green, tenor, sings "With My Guitar and You" and John and Harrel Griffith do an interpretative dance, followed by another dancer by Max Facker.

The state of the fight arena opens and the dancing girls clad as plenitude march in. The featured dancer, using his girl partner as a cape, engages in a fight with the mob bull, represented by another dancer. The two comics who took the part of a horse earlier in the show now come on as a bellowing bull and the act closes as the bull is slain, one section to bound off the stage on one side and the other section to make his exit on an opposite side.

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending December 12

With a Fanchon & Marco Idea on the program, an attractive and elegant offering is promised and this week's entertainment, "Seeing Double" at the Fox theatre is no exception. The idea is that every couple sees one delightful dancer or chorus girl you immediately see her double, as nine sets of twins participate in this unique show.

First the audience is entertained by an accordion solo and by the Fox theatre's popular drummer, Gus Altmeier.

are placed before a black drop curtain with one twin before the frame, the other behind, so that every move made by one is made in reverse by the other. The Melly Twins dance while the Laila Twins in long orchid dresses play the cellos. The Elia Twins step out with their costumes and long skirts of tiny ruffles accentuate graceful movements. Then the Parker Twins tap dance with arms and feet chained together, resulting in prolonged applause.

The Kansas Twins are very clever little Toe dancers.

In the finale all the twins are assembled on the stage, some swinging in rose hearts, others gracefully posing, while the acrobatic twins turn hand upsets and everybody believes that twins are just twice as much fun as singles.

Kansas City Mainstreet
Week Ending December 11

Headlining the RKO bill at the Mainstreet this week are the musical comedy number half-act, Marshall and Virginia Watson, formerly of Elsfeld Follies. Their dancing and dialogue number is entitled "You'll Find Out." They are very capable assisted by their pianist, Karl Brown. Perhaps Brown should have more space in the billing than he is given, since anyone who can get numbers enough plans with his left hand while he eats an apple with his right that the audience is thoroughly good and then some. Miss Watson is one of the prettiest and most vivacious vaudeville actresses it has been our good luck to see, a beautiful figure and does her hoofing as if she loved it. And she makes the whole thing capably for the audience. Marshall and Carl Randall have some original dances, some of them with a humorous turn, which are highly acceptable entertainments, and complete all too soon for the audience.

Bob Robinet acts as master of ceremonies in a way all his own. He is a high-powered salesman, selling the RKO acts one by one to the audience, and introducing performers.

Gladdis Blake and Daddy Cunningham assist Mr. Robinet in his billing. Gladdis is a singer and dancer, of the red-hot, short-skirted type, quite in contrast to Miss Watson, who goes in for the long graceful lines and subtle stuff. However, Gladdis gets a great big hand, particularly from the younger element in the audience. Daddy Cunningham is introduced as an old trooper who has been in vaudeville for all these many years. In spite of his 72 years he does some pretty agile dancing and can fall down and go up as if he never had a problem. The name of the skit is "It's in the Book," for what reason we were not told.

Sawdust has what is called a skating classic, in which he is assisted by the Emerald Sisters and Patty Lee. The lighting effect and the act are good, the costumes are beautiful, and the skating, of course, is okay.

The Happy Boys vend with Randall and Watson for first favors with the audience. It looked once or twice as if they were going to stop the show. They are black face stooges who present "The Revolution of Black Notes." The boys are: Tommy Hyde, Irma Karp, Bill Gauerty, Dan Marshall and Nat Talbot. They do some mighty nice skating and are called back over and over by the audience.

Detroit Fox
Week Ending December 11

Dick Powell, m. o., calls his stage offering "Treas-""ures," and a tuneful offering it is. Of course the orchestra boys are dressed as bold bad pirates, and incidentally the orchestra is very much in evidence this week. They offer "St. James Infirmary" and "Fingal's Wake," two favorites here, and play the numbers like nobody’s business. They are being greeted with tremendous applause at every performance.

The Enright Rocketts also come in for their share of applause with several good ensembles. One is especially the military drill to the tune of "Anchors Aweigh."

James and Hall, two good looking boys, are a big hit with the kids. These boys throw another about as if they were light as feathers, and are constantly taking humorous falls and had the large audience in an up roar all day. Their offering is excellent.

Eddie Murphy, Bobby Gordon and Audrey Dixon, a sailor boy and two sailor lasses, did some dancing, and talking, all of which was quite melodious. Dick Powell scored as usual with his crooning, this time singing "Crying Myself to Sleep," and as a request sang "On My Way To the River." The finish of the act is very pretty. A backdrop rises to find several sentimentally dressed pirate girls gathered about a huge treasure chest.

New Orleans Saenger
Week Ending December 12

A riot of color, beautiful maidens, restful music and the stage band with their shirts outside their trousers gives a greater impression of the Saenger this week, to one of the brightest of the Public units which has struck this wood of the woods in many a Lazy Louisiana Moon, for, to use the language of the street, the production was a peach, one of those "A以前... One Variation" that are sold at the highest prices.

The drop represented "Noah's Ark," with ele-phant playing the part of the animal kingdom, which was supposed to lie upon the face of the waters for forty days and forty nights in a houseboat under the command of Cap Noah. The drop was painted in gray and grayly figures with the most lavish disregard of the master. Just who the headliner was, the gentlemanly press agent left to the judgment of the audience, but the vote stood overwhelmingly in favor of Berlin and Esther, dancers, especially the lady, a weakling of a thing—but oh, how she could twist herself from toe to make the show. The line of dancing girls make one think that life on an ocean wave might not be so bad, how they dance, master of ceremonies and director of the Jazz Rhythmic Kings, together with Steve Weniger, vocalist, start the ball rolling just before the stage performance. The screen feature is "The Dancers."
Before the Mike

By BOBBY MELLIN

Al Carney and Jack Laney, more popularly known as Al and Jack to countless radio listeners from coast-to-coast, are fast becoming one of the greatest radio teams in the country, in the opinion of those critics, other than their own, who have given them the old home. Panzy is only two men dressed as a horse that doesn’t chew and doesn’t run away from the edification of those who had the pleasure of attending. Mickey, or rather Margaret, or Moolie as dear Mr. Trammel calls her, is an excellent master of ceremonies for the horse, of course, and although she’s slick and smooth with white silk. The act was all that could be asked for.

Billy Parrel and Dad did some very clever tap dancing; Dad is 74 years old and is at any stage as Frank, which is saying quite a bit. Father panzy many years ago “performed” on a showboat at the foot of Canal street, and is not a stranger to the older generation.

The chorus was wonderful, as regards personality, carriage, talent and wardrobe—some of the sweetest cuties seen here for many a day.

A musical treat is Chrislavia conducting the Swing er Grand Orchestra in “Operatic Cameos” assisted by the famous Oliver M. Kasner. Among those present were Bennie Ross and Herbie, the Organist—good as usual.

To provide for the present extension of the functions of the Program Department and NBC Artist’s Service and the further expansion and development important, the personnel of the two departments of the Chicago division of the NBC were announced yesterday by Dr. J. A. Trammel, A. W. (Ben) Kaney, veteran announcer and assistant program manager, has been appointed program manager. Don Bernard, for the last two years program manager, has been made program advisor. Alex Bobb becomes assistant program manager, and Hugh Ernst is made manager for the last two years of the music. Robert M. Kendall will have charge of radio bookings and E. H. Stoddard, former booking manager, will be in charge of bookings. All those announcements will now come under the supervision of music. J. Oliver Riehl, instead of under the NBC Artist’s Service, is as the post...

Bobby Brown is WBMB’s “handsy man.” He hears and directs all important programs; announces them, measures the talent of entertainers; acts as master of ceremonies for impromptu features; sings and plays the ukulele; and is an instant attraction for contests and the program builders—Ben Bernie’s familiar “I Hope You Like It” is written thousands of letters each week from all over the country, telling them that he “like it.”

J. Oliver Riehl, music supervisor of the Chicago NBC, claims the distinction of having written more original programs for the NBC than any other composer in the last three years than any other composer in radio. Riehl, who is the oldest Chicago NBC composer in point of service, for he was included in the original staff of three members when the studios in Chicago were opened in the fall of 1927. His ability to create music with the popular swing that will fit any type of program has made his services of composer much sought after. Riehl has written music for the following programs, Yeast Foamers, Floresphere, Shell Oil, Armand Hour, the Montgomery Ward program, O’Creme Time, the Hamilton-Brown dama, L launderland, Lyrical, The Sighthounds, Ceneco-Land Adventures and many others.

Phil Spitalny, famous dance orchestra leader, who recently came to Chicago, is often mistaken for his brother who is a noted orchestra leader in one of Chicago’s largest theatres. Yes, theirs is quite a musical family—Do you know? John Kahn, saxophone player with Harry Krouse’s orchestra, is said to be one of the best in the business and is undoubtedly one of the brightest (physically) and the proud bearer of Indian blood.

Louis Panico and his orchestra, known practically wherever radio is heard, received their first broadcast to a nation-wide NBC audience Wednesday evening (Dec. 16), when one of their dance programs were inaugurated. The broadcast will be made directly from the Canton Tea Garden when there are no engagements. In addition Panico’s name to its already imposing list of dance conductors, the Chicago NBC avails itself of another opportunity to show listeners in other parts of the country the quality of dance music now being turned out here.

In Chicago, assuming the name of Panico is not only a versatile conductor, capable of interpreting in the language of music nearly every virtue of national reputation, and has gathered together an orchestra which, under his tutelage has fast become recognized as one of the most popular dance organizations in Chicago.

Oklahoma City Liberty
Week Ending December 5

The Liberty’s second week of E.K.O. vaudeville was excellent, and with full houses present daily, it would seem that the Liberty’s future was assured.

Casa and Leland Van and Frank were funny and frolicky sufficient to more than please the people seeing the show. Ward at W. in “Oh, What a La!” kept the crowds laughing most of the time.

Flourite, the song bird duxe was some singer, and when she sang, the audience was entranced.

Alice and Sonny of Lamont were very entertaining with their new vaudeville sketch and the feature picture, “A Devil With Women,” pleased.

Seattle Fifth Avenue
Week Ending December 4

“Fountain of Youth” idea with Lottie Mayer and her dancing beauties who disappeared under the water in a fall concert and in consequence remaining under longer than any one ever did and with considerable publicity. Although the concert was presented with the spraying water meeting above their heads. Rube Wolf as master of ceremonies and his musical men were driven in the pit, where he got a lot of real music and comedy out of his dozen men. Others in the F. & M. cast included several skilled stoppers and a singer. Crocker, Randazzo and Son, as well as dancers; Barten and Young are singing comedy dancing duo. Music, by heavy applause and after Frank Stever sings, the Sunkist Girls return in a versatile dance.

Detroit Fish
Week Ending December 18

“Jewels,” at the Fisher this week, is another of those Boris Petruch combinations. Bob Nolan introduces the stage end of the show, and takes a hand in the setting of the orchestra. Ross and Edwards, a couple of clever fustners, and the Roma Brothers, who are no strangers to Detroit theatre-people, top the bill with their acts. Olsa Saunders, Lillian Shade and Jerry Cee, three individual performers who offer melody, vocal accomplishment, and a bit of capering about the stage, together with the Foster dancing girls, complete the bill. Samuel Bemio directs the pit orchestra. “Only Sorse Work” is the screen feature.

Milwaukee Wisconsin
Week Ending December 11

Pancho & Juan’s Lothario opens in a hollywood setting with the Sixteen Tiny girls in true Southern lassie costumes with colored wigs, doing their routines with a song, tap dance and “Old Black Joe,” which is crowned by Helen Joseph with the blackboard.

Several female solo dancers execute a neat bit of tap dancing to “Alabamy Bound” following which the chorus perks up it’s airbrush overboard and pronto, they become a chorus of fat mummies. The illusion is accomplished in a neat manner and gives a good hand. “Lettes” is offered with the chorus sung by one member of the band. The chorus then does it stuff attired in sort of Jack-in-the-box attire and a woman in a sheer white leotard with gold stars dancing on their heads.

Not that chocolate, colored tap dancer, ducts the boards with plenty of pep and vigor, He is followed by a peppy miss who wheels and tumbles about the stage in fine fashion, two female tap toe dancers make things hum and give way to the chorus attired in gay costume, as they perform, they are never will be any women auducntes. He rambles on for some length in a humorous vein which makes a big hit.

Hatt & Herman tangle about with the aid of a spade or two and the magic is practiced, the audience has a keen enjoyment with this. The show is still on and there will be no women actors. It rambles on for some length in a humorous vein which makes a big hit.

Seattle Fish
Week Ending December 17

Opening to the tune of “I Still Get A Thrill,” the stage end at the Fisher. The second half of the week presents a well-rounded list of attractions, with the comic act by Ben Bernie, his band, of dancers usual merit and ability, who might well change the character of their opening for something more in keeping with the balance of the cast. The comedy group is not so hot, for their second number is an absolute dud and is colorful and not too long. For a clever they have a pretty changed version of the Apache which clicks with the cash customers. The permanent stage unit—m. e. and stage band—have just what it takes, and should continue to hold away in this house for many weeks to come. Dora “Boots” Early and Hilde Guards Sells have a skit called “Abercrombys, Miss Ship of the Dish,” which plays well while Boots does some comic song numbers,imitating an intoxicated woman, while the girl who walked back is back is back.

Pittsburgh Enright
Week Ending December 3

The stage offering called “Harvest Moon,” is a tuneful and peppery affair, and most of the action is carried on by a chorus of two dozen, with his stage band and his twelve dancing girls.

Dick and Dorothy Badger do several songs which are very pleasing, and the pair surprise the audience with a brief and effective adagio dance. Their band’s rendition of “Harvest Moon” is an exquisite piece of work, while standing on one leg, and puts a goodly share of applause after every number.

Ed and Morton Beck tell some stories and sing some songs, and their offering is neither here nor there for another vaudeville act. Although they do show a little talent with the current popular number “The Song of the Poet.”

Detroit Michigan
Week Ending December 18

Those Four Marx Brothers, Harpo, Groucho, Chico and Zeppo, will be in town next week to climax this week to the huge delight of the capacity audiences which have been flocking to the Fisher theater in ever-increasing numbers. The acts of Harpo, Groucho and Zeppo are well known and still maintains her superb dignity. The tomfoolery in-dug in by the four clowns of "Animal Crackers" and the earlier "Coconutts" is not exactly new-fangled as the girls themselves go, but it is entirely the manner of telling that they gets across. Groucho, as usual, is flip and nasty; Harpo being usually the only one that can play the harp; Chico and his Italian dialect, together with his trickly piano work; and Zeppo, not being Harpo's deliberate appearance in evening dress which makes for a most pleasing contrast. In addition to the men of Marx, a quartet of girl dancers and chorus girls are offered. The screen offering is "The Pay Off," which Edward Collier and the Michigan orchestra in one of their usual musical offerings.

Pittsburgh Enquirr

Week Ending December 18

Dick Powell, m. c., calls his stage show "In Florida," and the set is very entertaining. The opening finds the band boys dressed in white and the Rochets on the stage, in white and carrying white parasols, thus putting over in a big way the title of the act.

Marla Wayne who emulates Helen Kane's style of "booping," emulates in a fairly good manner and is being nicely received.

Frank and Don Gustier do a mighty good turn. Frank is an exceptionally nimble and whirly-whirly dancer. Don does a real comedown who possesses a wonderful singing voice, and his antics as well as his singing stopped the show on several occasions. Dick also composed a number through his famous megaphone. As an encore they put on in great shape a "hot" rendition of "Sweet Jenny Lee," and this time Dick zips on the trumpet.

Dick and Marilyn Ward put on a nice song duet offering "Or What Have You." And we mustn't forget that Dick also joins the Rochets in one of their routines which is a finish at which he is good for a laugh when the girls carry Dick off the stage.

Detroit Hollywood

Week Ending December 18

"In Havana" is the title which has been hung on the stage show this week, due to the presence of Steve Bley and Harry Stahl, two men who give a touch of the Spanish side of the famous old Cuban island. Havana is the scene of the show, with Frith, Reeter and Toolin, dressed as gobs, featuring some close harmony. Eddie Laughlin and the Hollywood Merry-Makers give their usual high-grade performance. Bob Clarke is seen and heard at the organ console.

Detroit Fox

Week Ending December 4

Fanchon and Marco's "Wild and Woolley" idea is without any doubt, one of the finest pieces of stage entertainment which has graced the boards of a Detroit theatre in weeks. There is action, color, harmony, beauty and dance from the opening curtain to the final curtain after 45 minutes of song and novelty. The curtain rises this week, in the presence of Steve Bley and the changes are most pleasing. Ray Angwin, who possesses one of those voices, along with "Springtime," and "White Cadillac girls," in fine chorus, start the ball rolling with a novelty dance. Hart's Krazy Kat, an acrobatic tumbling set, furnishes some laughs, and moves rapidly enough to prevent boredom. Kirk and Lawrence's high-flying minstrel show, with minstrel ponies, are entertainers of the first water. Their chaste and innocent "the high-browned 'horse,'" not to mention Kirk's slow-motion horse race, won instant acclaim from their audiences. Aussie and Chick, a man and a woman, have a new and different slant on whip-cracking and ax-throwing which makes the crowd sit up and take notice. Their performance is finished and has color, finish and smooth-smoothing so generally missing in this type of offering. Johns Reynolds, dancer, and Bud Carrell, a harmonician, prove that just because they are of the other name or race is no reason why they cannot be as good as the rest of the show. The finish of the piece lifts the famous fire scene from "The Stooge," with which almost every follower of big-time vaudeville is familiar. Sam Jack Kusman and the Marx Brothers-Khuzi are much in evidence, even though working from the pit this week, as full stage is necessary for the performance. Will Rogers' in the title role of "Lightnin'" is in the screen feature, with shorter subjects. Capacity business all week is proof enough that the entire bill has clicked.

Detroit Michigan

Week Ending December 4

Ted Lewis, the "Tragedian of Jazz," and his augmented band, together with a couple of entertainers, tops the bill this week. Ted Lewis is the usual Publix unit show, and the difference is greatly appreciated. Lewis works better this trip than any time before. He is in a fine form. "When My Baby Smiles at Me," and omitting only "The Hat in My Pocket." With the latter as an encore it is also noted that the famous Lewis high-knot is not quite as battered in appearance, and the silver lining is much in evidence when Ted does another of the hits. Eleanor Brooks, who might rival Lea Bow in the matter of "booping," "Them" and "Those," does a couple of dance numbers in a manner that appeal to the audience and extracts comments from the male patron. "Climax Whittier," a golden brown color and a hoover of no mean ability, wins a big spot for himself and indulges in a bit of clever clowning with Lewis. The Seven Rangers, harmony boys, click with their numbers. "Here Comes the Sun," and "Sway," are both dressed in yellow shirts and trousers, with yellow drapes forming the box set. The show moves rapidly, is colorful and has more appeal than any previous Lewis show. "Past and Present" is the screen feature, with Arthur Gutows, guest vocalist from the Michigan, features a slow opera specialty.

Detroit Fisher

Week Ending December 4

"Rare Bitu" at the Fisher is a comparatively good show, that is, when stacked up beside some of the enter- tainments of this house in weeks past. No doubt it will be a real treat to get the Publicity that is due to the worthy boys. Bob Nolan is an orchestra director than master of ceremonies. Julie Curtis, a red head, is good as a ventriloquist, working with Nolan as her dummy. "Ph" Gordon, comedy fiddler, hands out several big jokes satisfactorily. Basil and Rabbit, a troop of Arabian acrobats and tumblers, give a good amount of themselves. Arthur Gutows, guest vocalist from the Michigan, features a slow opera specialty.

HELLO EVERYBODY!—Well, here it is Christmas again, and the Exhibitors Herald-World wishes all of its readers and a New Year filled with success and happiness.

This time of the year makes us all a little slower in our responses, for we are all like a tire that is not finished, too, too, yes, it even makes the hard-boiled Main Stem any think of the other fellow, at least a little more than usual to them, if they really when one can't walk a half-block before someone is either asking for a dime to net a cup of coffee or something of the sort. This is the one time in the year, when it is tougher to be down and out than any other time, Enough on the "Blues," here's some better stuff.

The Chicago, New York and St. Paul key, in a copy of a copy (and copy in this issue) has the right idea. Read the heading... and get that "Sing." This is a little show good news, Tex Fisher (Ted) is back at his old job at the RKO Proctor's, Newark, as is Harold Reider, at the Branford and Mrs. Hep at the Stanley. George Laxton (former with Lewis) is now being featured at the Fabian, Hoboken, and I just opened a letter from Melbourne, Australia, from Eddie Fisher, well known entertainers on-circuit, who has been there over the past year and who has just signed a brand new year's contract to continue playing in the West there, et al. (Say Fez?)

Edie got a great break when she returned from Sydney to Melbourne, she got her "face" in the newspapers, the firm had a parade for her and a band led the way. The way it was written (two copies) played up her return, one would think he was the Prince of Wales, himself. Maybe he is— (Edie is you kept a trick from them, is it?)

Pitch doesn't mention Julia Dunn and Eddie Ford, two other American originators, playing over there, a lot of our people want to know if they have had a good time. Oh yes, Pitch's old friend the girl will be glad to know that he is now a star cricket player (Eddie mentions that one Sunday at a picnic, for the Republican and State theater, this girl (a strong girl), and a pastime was a cricket match between the two theatres).

Bernie Cowham, origin at RKO Albee, Fishing, Long Island, will get the same kind of money.

Just received a letter from Eddie Schwartz, formerly chief originat for a circuit of 15 houses in Greater New York. Eddie is looking better than ever. It pretty tough, so if any of you music men can use an industrious and energetic young woman who knows his stuff, he's yours. Write to me.... Just heard, through the mouth of the Burman, that Vest Pocket, the premier origin at the beautiful new Flynn theatre in Burlington, Vt., did a great job at the inaugural performance. "Row-Checked Brown" is just about the most popular young feature in the state of Vermont, and rightly so, because he is personable, plays a good organ and is a regular fellow... *Phil Kerrisher, Inc., have just accepted a "sweet" song that looks like a natural. It is called, "I'm the Last One Left on the Corner (Of that Old Gang of Mine)."... Everyone who has heard it, is enthusiastic in blotting the song in another, "Old Gang of Mine" song (one the boys will sing when they get together). As if this wasn't enough, the boys (not labs, but in knowledge of the music business), Eddie Modus, Fred Whitehouse and Fred Stillwell are the writers. The song has some of those sympathetic sentiments that send a chill down your spine and after a few weeks, you have that envy on your real shoulder. It's a great tune and all their friends (including yours truly) wish them well with it... Radio Mic Company and Leo Peer, Inc. are publishing a new tune called, "They Satisfy," sounds like the w. d. for Chesterfields, and they will have taken the cuttings of this in their lyrics, because, they say, "In a Song It's Melody and Lyric..." Chester Bowers, origin of something, has one the screen last week, with something of the same thought, only he finished up with, "In an Austin It's Melody..."

Al Wohlman, the new master of ceremonies at the Fox, has gotten away to a good start, making a big hit with the female's and their friends along Grand boulvard.

flashed upon the screen with a synchronized accompaniment of "Way Down Upon the Swannee River," Miss Hammond picks up with a solo. "Why Do I Love You," from "The Showboat." De Luca sings "Goin' Home," following this with "Old Man River," which closes with a seven shot of a riverboat on the river at night. De Luca's voice registered well, as did Miss Hammond's work and the scenic effects of Snyder contributed a pleasing effect. The solo was based on ideas of house manager H.A. Wodever, who introduced this atmosphere organ solo to the Strand.

DALE YOUNG'S (Circle Indianapolis) solo called "There's a Reason," opens with special lyrics telling the audience the "Why" of organ solo; that in the age of "talkies," they are useful in introducing theme songs, and also when audience gets a chance to stop, they relax after being quiet all through the feature picture. Then Dale plays "Blue Horizon," "My Baby Just Cares For Me." Then after special gags about the unemployment situation, he plays special comedy work on "I'm Yours," then Towner asks the audience to sing "Go Home and Tell Your Mother" and "Three Little Words." This last tune made such a hit with the audience that Young should take an encore.

Publix Units Go to Detroit

On Leaving Chicago

(Special to the Herald-World)

DETROIT, Dec. 18.—Beginning almost immediately, the Publix "B" units will again be routed into the Fisher theatre from Chicago, instead of having the Fisher stage shows built in Detroit for one week only. The "A" units, as usual, will play the Michigan, coming from the Toledo Paramount. The first step in the new Fisher policy was the giving of notices to the 12 dancing girls who have been a permanent baller at that house for the last few months.

Orchestra and Stage Show

Now in St. Louis House

(Special to the Herald-World)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18.—The Granada theatre, the de luxe house of the St. Louis Amusement company's circuit has resumed its former policy of a pit orchestra and a stage show in coligation with sound pictures. It is understood that in the very near future Walle Vonnom will be returned to this house as master of ceremonies. He is a prime favorite down on the Gravels.

Mabel Walker on the Air

(Special to the Herald-World)

END. OKLA., Dec. 18.—Mabel Walker, formerly organist at the Astors, is now solo organist for station KORC and is meeting with marked success with her special organ numbers.

Hoadley Back at Console

Lee Hoadley, popular organist who prealed at one of the Wisconsin Twin cities' organs when that house boasted two organs, and played in company with Arthur Beilman, is back again. He offered for his selections this week "Somewhere in Old Wyoming," "Little White Lies" and "Simply Delish," with the words flashed upon the screen for each number.

Evidence of Impartialness

WE ARE INDEED GRATFUL FOR THE beautiful bronze plaque recently awarded our theatre. As ours is one of the smallest theatres, we all feel this is conclusive evidence of the impartiality of the organization behind the movement and that it is really advancement that they are trying to encourage and not patronage.

We are proud to have received this award and promise to do all in our power to keep abreast of the times and to promote the profession as they are made from time to time, and in that way live up to the standard you have set for us by this award.

Thanking you for this splendid acknowledgment of our efforts—P. I. Bohmann, Center theater, Inc., 1161 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Charley's Comedy a Hit

JUST FINISHED PLAYING ONE OF the year's best comedies, Charley Chase in High C's (MGM). It is a knockout and will please. Customers said it had more laughs than "Auntie Mame" and their "double check" feature. "High C's" is a three-reel comedy and a wow. Madam Satan (MG M) featuring the popular production will please if you can get them in. Title is bad.

Hoping Hal Roach puts out more comedies like High C's, the award is conclusive that many of the comedies made lately have been poor. Yours truly—W. T. Biggs, The Adair theatre, Adair, la.

Thanks for Both

AM RENEWING MY SUBSCRIPTION, so will take this opportunity to comment on several pictures which may help others. Last of the Lone Wolf (Col) good and perhaps better than a program picture. Spurt (U), with Hoot Gibson, is the best one since Gibson started to slip. Universal has changed their method of recording on disc and it is consistently good now. The Bad Man (PN) is very good, with good action by Huston and Blackmore. I played Duces in Erma (WB) late, but it's a good little comedy. Sisters (Col) has a good story and is a fairly good picture, with excellent recording on disc. Runaway Bride (Radio) you can run any time and it will please. Dancing Sweeties (WB) is light but satisfying entertainment. The Stage (U) was well liked because of its setting, scenery and story.—Ward theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal.

Second-Hand Ad Matter

NOT SO VERY LONG AGO "GENERAL" Adolph Zukor had a very vigorous article in your great weekly regarding the evils of using second-hand or "used" posters, photos and other advertising materials. He was quoted as saying that no first-class theatre would use anything but new advertising material, and that his exchanges would have nothing to do with the poster exchanges handling and exchanging used posters and advertising materials. This is purely salesmanship, or clamoring representatives, sell you Paramount pictures and insist that you give them a contract to buy so much paper and material on each picture, as their pictures cannot be properly advertised, or "presented," with second-hand, or used posters, etc.

All right, so far, so good. It all sounded right to me. I swallowed it all, hook, line and sinker and chewed off part of the pole. But, here's the sad awakening. On a visit to a certain town of about 15,000 population, I go into one of the Publix Class-A theatres to visit a friend of mine employed there. I find him busy sorting out used posters, photos, and other material, etc., and he said in the back of them for shipment. He says that they ship all material to the state headquarter, because their theatre is to be used by them and that his theatre receives much used material to advertise their pictures with.

Now, like the "Chink," "I ask to know" does this sound like Paramount is dealing fair with the exhibitors? If "used" posters are good enough for Zukor-Katz & Company to use in their theatres in towns of 10-15,000 population, why aren't they good enough for me in my little 1,500 town? And yet they insist that they make nothing on their "ad sales!" Just for the exhibitors sake! Wow! And now just a few "publishable" remarks on what I received lately in the film cans and record cases:

Land of Missing Men (T)—Bob Steel was very good in this cheaply produced Western. Too short, only one hour, and it needed more comedy relief. In Love Among the Millionaires (Par), Clara Bow was staring, but Mimi Green, Stuart Erwin and Skeets Gallagher put it over. Just fair. Light of the Western Star (Par) is great for Saturday. Mary Brian and Richard Arlen are fine, and Harry Green got plenty of laughs. Drew fine. The Silent Enemy (Par) is a wonderful production but won't draw flies with sugar in the aisles. Whenever we go highbrow, it gives the small town exhibitor a headache. The Sap from Syracuse (Par) is weak. Oaktie very popular, but the story and production are very cheap. Ginger Rogers, as an actress, is a nice blues singer. Grumpy (Par)—detour, road very rocky on this one. Great acting, but nobody appreciates it. Sure cure for insomnia. Like "The Silent Enemy," it's just a headache for the small town.

Byrd at the South Pole (Par) is a marvelous production that will make you many friends and much money. Had splendid school kids matinee and cleaned up. Boost it big, it will stand it. Inside the Lines (RKO) has a fine story, fine production, but no stars. Please those who came, but not many came. Queen High (Par) is pretty light. Charles Ruggles is good and will draw next time. Ginger Rogers and Stanley Smith should sing more, as that is all they can do.—L. L. Lazzy, Iris theatre, Kerens, Tex.

Plans Special Shield

NO YOUNGSTER FINDING A WELL- filled Christmas stocking could be happier, nor more grateful than I am for receiving your beautiful plaque of December 10.

Please accept my most sincere thanks and assurance that your Plaque is very much appreciated. We take pride in arranging for proper presentation and would have it suitably mounted on a specially made shield, which will be on permanent exhibition in our lobby. Without it good fortune and good reputation are only dreams.

Thanking you again and wishing you the compliments of the season—J. H. Brack, General Manager, O'Brien theatre, Pembroke, Ont., Canada.

The Small Town Angle

HERE IS A PICTURE I WOULD LIKE to report on. Sin Takes a Holiday (P) with Constance Bennett. This picture is too sophisticated for the small town and is well done but it lacks some action and comedy. I don't suppose that they can suit all situations but it certainly is not a picture for the smaller towns. It is clever and undoubtedly will go in the larger towns. But it is the type that is a little over their heads and the plot develops too slowly. Gorgeously gownned and altogether a woman's picture, and that does not please the men patronage. Too much dialog, not enough action is the fault with these clever society dramas.—Columbia theater, Columbia City, Ind.

I GUESS I AM LIKE A LOT OF OTHER small town exhibitors in failing to report on pictures, yet at this time we need accurate reports of pictures more than ever. We don't know how other exhibitors are finding conditions but for my part I can say that business is good so traded it for a worth-while picture. What we used to call an average picture loses me money. My public is turning out for the extra good comedy-dramas and the better Westerns which have action and comedy.

Amos 'n' Andy in Check and Double Check (Radio Pictures). The best drawing card in months. Will please 80 to 90 percent if you do not raise your admission price; it is not a special except in drawing power. RKO gets most of the money. Leathernecking (Radio Pictures). A fairly good musical comedy with scenery in color, not the special it was sold for only fair draw. Danger Lights (Radio Pictures). Good melodrama, pleased most of them. Only fair drawing power. Queen High (Par). One of the excellent satisfactions. This is a clever picture and is what the people want to see, good drawing power, Caught Short (MGM). A knockout. Every house should play it even if it is a little old. Good drawing power, considering that it is not new. Half Shot at Sunrise (Radio). A riot from start to finish. Please much better than "Amos 'n' Andy" and did almost as much business. Beaund Bandit (Radio). I understood that "Escape" was so traded so it was rotten too. No action. Chasing Rain- boxes (MGM). Good picture of its type.
Eggs or Old Shoes Will Admit You to Russ Theatre
(Special from Department of Commerce)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—If you happened to be in Moscow now, and wanted to go to the theatre, the price of your ticket might be a pair of old shoes, eggs, old clothes, potatoes, or what have you. The Red newspaper, Krasnaya Gazeta of Moscow recently carried an item to that effect.

The box office cashier is the judge as to the worth of the articles presented. Such conditions are probably more prominent in the rural district of Russia, where the item in question is not as common. Ordinary extraordinary poverty is said to be responsible for this.

Rand Waxes Enthusiastic WHO SAID MUSICAL COMEDIES WERE on the tobbogan? The producers are way off their bases. People do want musical comedies, but they don't want that old back-stage plot of the conceited hooper and the faithful, unloved girl. And they don't want great big plumes for the fine singing and a good comedy team. A case in point is Rio Rita (RKO). We just played it six months after Sunny Side Up (Fox), and did it take? I'll say it did. My patron, too, were wild about it. We can use one a month, 12 a year is fine entertainment, if, of course, they are as big. Now "Sunny Side Up" had one central plot, in which Gaynor-Farrell starred, and all the dandy comedy of El Brendel, and Frank Richardson was interwoven about the central plot of Gaynor-Farrell.

In "Rio Rita" an advance was made, I think, in drawing two plots, one plot covering the love affair of Bebe Daniels and John Boles, with the brother suspected as being the thief, and with the real thief also in love with Bebe; and the other plot, a comedy plot, involving the love affairs of Wheeler and Woosley and their girl. Why it was! Oh, boy, this pair raised the roof. These two plots, continually presented alternately, reveal a talent either, and both acted as a welcome foil to the other. Certainly a mighty clever arrangement that producers could well imitate.

Then the big scenes and dances capped the climax. The last few reels in Technicolor were simply beautiful, and the Technicolor has every other colored production beaten a mile for clearness and lighting. John Boles, too, has every other great singer on the screen clearly out-distanced for voice, looks, acting and charm. The industry has given us two magnificent plays in "Sunny Side Up" and "Rio Rita." Why can't they give us more like them? We want them! They pay big returns. Let's have them.—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Cites Shortage of Westerns
HERE ARE SOME REPORTS ON PICtures. Sins of the Children (MGM). This one failed to please, a weak offering. Last of the Sergeant (MGM). This pleased but not business on account of it being shown as a silent not so long ago and will not stand for a repeat. The Conquering Hero (MGM). This one has had enough action to please your Saturday trade in small towns, due to the shortage in Westerns for small towns on Saturday. A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.

New South Wales Film Contracts Fix Minimum
Admissions for Shows
(Special from Department of Commerce)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The Motion Picture Distributors Association in New South Wales has decided to place a minimum admission price clause in its film contracts for 1931.

This action is an outgrowth of requests from exhibitors in the country. The showmen are opposed against the price cutting of a number of houses.

Some of the suburban exhibitors said they would be injured by the new legislation and threatened to continue. They claimed they could not compete with the reduced admissions of the larger theatres.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18—The manager of the State theatre here was recently arrested when Davey Lee made a personal appearance that the hoarde of King.

In regard to short subjects I find that Pathe's Aeops's Fables are the best cartoons I can get. They are much better than Educational's Terry. They have been much liked. But Columbia's cartoons. Pathe is turning out some real good 2 reel comedies and their recording is good but cannot say as much for Columbia's cartoons. The De-Quar-er comedies, Broken Wedding Bells, and Men Without Skirts, fairly good. Pure and Simple, rotten comedy, sound terrible. Nick and Toney is good. Have had only one good RKO comedy, Clark and McCullough, in A Peep in the Deep.—WALTER HINHFE, manager, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.
Part of the merry throng that gathered at the "wone" of a party with which Advance Trailer officially opened its new Chicago office last week. We should be happy to place a detailed caption under this cut, but the noteworthy members of the group are so numerous that we could not do them justice—therefore, we'll merely mention the names of the distinguished members in the front row. Starting with Johnny Mednikow (see he spelled his name wrong last week, pardon) is Ethel Chez, M. Van Praag, general sales manager of Advance, Al Blasco, publicity man par excellence and Louis Abramson, of the Allied Theatres of Illinois, Inc.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By JIM LITTLE

We understand that Max Ascher has taken over the defunct, as it were, Punch and Judy theatre on Van Buren street. And now that we understand that, may we remark on a remark that we happened to overhear.

Why not take some little house like that and make it into a purely children's theatre? For by entertaining the "kids," and most incidentally the fathers and mothers of these youngsters, a different and probably quite remunerative idea could be put into effect.

This perhaps is not new, but it at least is worth a try. Possibly contracting for enough product to completely fill a children's program would be difficult. If so, then it would be possible, perhaps, to interest a producer in making a few children's pictures, of which there seems to be a dearth. As it is now, there are no pictures to speak of that appeal to a young audience, and that may be the reason why receipts sometimes fall below par.

Should something like this be put into practice, certain times could be set aside for programs fitting school children, of all ages. Tots, juveniles and semi-sophisticates. Saturdays and Sundays would no doubt be the big days, while parents would undoubtedly fill in the interim.

Of course, it might take some time to work up such a project, but once it was put into effect, a clientele, of a most worthy sort, would automatically begin to establish itself, and after a time it would be merely a matter of getting the right pictures at the right time. But such a "merchandize" would be a bit of a problem at present.

We were sorry to learn that Jimmie Gregory's theatre in Ottawa, Illinois, was practically destroyed by fire last week, due to the fact that someone left a curling iron in the beauty salon that occupies one of the store spaces in the building. We understand the loss is in the neighborhood of $75,000, but happily, this is almost all covered by insurance. The damage to the whole building amounts to something like $200,000. Jimmie told us that reconstruction on the house would begin shortly. Other houses belonging to Gregory are the Orpheum in Ottawa, the Roxy in Peru and Classic in Sterling, Illinois.

"Hook, Line and Sinker" is set to open up at the State Lake on December 25, so 'twas stated, and now that we've done everything but mention Radio Pictures, we might say that Radio Pictures exchange, where Bill Brumberg holds forth, is in the throes of having practically closed their product with all the major circuits. And, incidentally, a few facts concerning "Check and Double Check." During one week, approximately 72 houses were showing the film, houses located in the smaller cities and towns, and reports on box office receipts show that the film is essentially a "fireside, family picture," which the country parts are taking to like wheat cakes to syrup. Freeport, Sterling and Gibson, all in Illinois, have reported record breaking returns, which seems to refute decisively the earlier reports concerning the film in metropolitan centers. Also, one of the largest weeks in the number of prints sent out of the Chicago office was the last, when something in the neighborhood of 500 prints were mailed out.

We also understand that Clark and McCullough, that famed comedy team, who have been creating merriment on the stage and in a number of films, have been signed by Radio Pictures to make comedies.

Henry Kopald, country salesman for Tiffany out of the Chicago office has been transferred to the Milwaukee branch.

J. L. Merrick, Tiffany division manager, is making his swing around before Christmas, being in Omak the day we picked this up, and plans to go to New York shortly afterward for a sales conference.

We should like to extend our sympathy to Morris Hellman, whose brother passed away last week.

Sidney Meyer, formerly connected with the Fox theatres here is back in Florida, we understand, looking after his theatre interests there.
ORGANIZE NOW for 1931 selling in the Motion Picture Market

You cannot afford to devote time and money in an attempt to sell phantom buyers. Advertising and selling must be directed at targets which you know actually exist.

In the motion picture market, there are 14,000 theatres which must be provided with motion pictures.

Exhibitors Herald-World offers an audited circulation statement showing distribution to 9,342 individuals in the theatre branch of the business. No other motion picture trade paper even claims to approach that figure in total distribution.

The 9,342 individuals in the theatre branch of the industry represent in excess of 95 per cent of the buying power in the United States, and a generous share of the buying power of every country in the world importing American motion pictures.

If you use advertising to sell, the first choice in the trade field is

How Perfect Acoustics Will Increase Your Box Office Receipts

A Message to Theatre Managers from the United States Gypsum Company

SINCE talkies have replaced silent films, theatre managers have found that their attendance depends in a large measure on the quality of their sound reproduction. And they have learned, often by sad and costly experiences, that the most perfect sound equipment cannot perform with perfect satisfaction if the acoustics of their theatre are faulty.

Many theatre managers have corrected faulty acoustical conditions by applying Acoustone, the USG sound-absorbing material of high efficiency which is easily installed without structural alterations and without interruption to business. Many shapes, patterns and colors permit a great variety of decorative schemes, including those modernistic in feeling, which will enhance the beauty of any theatre interior. Being a mineral material, Acoustone is fireproof and, when soiled, it may be easily cleaned.

It will cost you nothing to have a USG expert advise you on improving the hearing conditions in your theatre. For further information please address the United States Gypsum Company, Dept. 5912, 300 West Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois.

A C O U S T O N E

Through scientific research and testing of USG products, their efficiency in correcting faulty acoustics is accurately recorded. USG sound control experts are thus able to analyze noise conditions scientifically and predetermine the success of any corrective measures.

In broadcasting stations where perfect sound control is absolutely essential Acoustone, the USG acoustical tile, is being used with great success.

Acoustone adds to the beauty of any theatre. Illustrated above is one of the many decorative designs which may be obtained with the varied patterns and color combinations in which Acoustone is supplied.

This booklet sent free. It shows how Acoustone, the USG acoustical tile, controls sound and provides beautiful and harmonious decoration.
Pretty, isn't it?

But what does it mean?

Everybody is wishing everybody else a prosperous New Year. Wishing never put money in the bank. Those who will realize prosperity in 1931 are those who realize they have a hard job ahead of them. They're planning and working right now for the new year that lies before them.

You have to spend money to make money. That's the price of competition. But spend wisely. See your dealer in rugs and carpets by Bigelow-Sanford. He'll show you ways and means of beautifying your theatre. And he'll show you ways to save your means by suggesting short cuts to economy.

Good News for your Box Office

...when you make this announcement

WELCOME news to your patrons—good news for your box office when you announce that you have put an end to faulty acoustics in your theatre.

For theatres everywhere have proved that Acousti-Celotex, by providing ideal hearing conditions, pulls larger crowds—increases profits.

And managers of many of these theatres will tell you that Acousti-Celotex not only increased their profits but actually saved their theatres from failure.

When correctly applied, this remarkable material reduces reverberation—prevents words and music from being reflected back towards the audience in a jumble of sound—assures ideal hearing conditions in every part of the theatre.

These facts assure success:
Study of your theatre—Each theatre requires individual treatment. The Acoustical Engineers of the Celotex Company will calculate the exact footage of Acousti-Celotex required and the proper places for its application in order to insure the results you are after. The accuracy of their recommendations has been checked and proved in thousands of actual installations.

Quick, easy installation. Acousti-Celotex comes in single, finished tiles, quickly and easily installed in new or old buildings—fastened directly to walls and ceiling.

Decorative adaptability. Acousti-Celotex brings distinctive beauty to the theatre. Its decorative adaptability assures harmony with almost any architectural or decorative scheme.

Permanent and "fool-proof"—This treatment is a permanent treatment with a low cost of upkeep. Acousti-Celotex tiles can be painted with any good paint, including lead and oil, without loss of acoustical efficiency.

Tested in many fields—Architects and builders are thoroughly familiar with Acousti-Celotex. Long before the advent of sound pictures they had used this remarkable material to provide "better hearing" in auditoriums.

ACOUSTI-CELOTEX SERVICE

Fill in and mail to The Celotex Company, 919 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, for the appointment of an engineer to analyze your acoustical problems.

Acousti-Celotex not only corrects faulty acoustics—it adds decorative beauty as well. Note the attractive stencil pattern in the wall panels above. Stencilling may be done before or after the tiles are applied. ... Submit problems to the Acoustical Engineers of The Celotex Company for study and analysis—without charge or further obligation. Use the coupon.

Acousti-Celotex is quickly applied to ceilings or walls in old and new buildings. The deep perforations serve as channels for carrying sound waves into the fibrous interior, assuring high sound-attenuating efficiency, and permitting decorating without loss of sound-deadening value.

YOUR BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS are the best test of your ACOUSTICS

If the headliners who used to "pack them in" still fill your house, you can forget all about your acoustics. They must be good. But if the box office till isn't as full as it used to be, sit down now and mail the coupon below.

We don't claim that Alexander Smith Acousti-Carpet ALONE will solve your acoustical problem. But it will go a long way, because: (1) it is sound-absorbing, and (2) it comes in such a variety of grades that we can supply you with the particular grade EXACTLY suited for your acoustical conditions.

NOTES ON WRITERS AND SUBJECTS IN THIS ISSUE:

1. Particularly in England are we apt to be interested as a field of foreign developments in any activity. For some reason it continues to be the Mother Country (need we be otherwise than pleased by that?). Despite radical differences, there is the tie of same languages, and the hundred years and more of associations that have kept live a consciousness of similar traditions. We recognize a basis for similar tastes, and therefore methods. Thus of a group of four European theatres described and pictured in this issue ("A Group of New European Theatres"), three are located in England, two in London and one in the provincial city of Bradford. For the fourth, the Olympia in Paris was selected because, out of several recent Continental houses, this one had the special interest of being designed in emulation of theatre policies in the United States. Having a certain curious interest that most foreign subjects usually have, each of these four theatres, we believe, also has architectural and theatrical features of stimulation to the American designer and showman—this, quite emphatically, including the Olympia. Quite a number of British theatres have appeared in these pages at various times. The three presented now, however, were selected for their diversity, in location, in appeal and in design, making them especially indicative when grouped. Each discussion, moreover, has been prepared by one long identified with motion picture affairs in the country represented. W. H. Mooring is the editor of one of London's oldest motion picture publications, The Bioscope, while Georges Clarrière is a Parisian writer on motion picture subjects and allied affairs.

2. Of the two American theatres presented, each may be similarly regarded as indicating the current trend in this country ("The Even: A Study of Modern Mediums" and "A New Warner House That Follows the Modern Trend"). Modernistic though they be in general design, they yet continue to bear the American conception away from the European idea, especially that which dominates German architecture and which (despite the French influence on interiors) has given the average American his understanding of what this "modernism" is all about. Meeting public disapproval, the new motifs could not have been expected to win the exhibiting interests over without a struggle. Indeed, quite probably they still have failed. It is the American theatre architect who is re-evaluating modern design precisely for the American motion picture public, and the Erlein and Warner, we think, are striking examples of the lines along which this re-evaluation is taking place. As to those who describe them, M. P. Foulke is a Philadelphian who writes on motion picture affairs for various publications, while Arthur Frederick Adams is a member of the staff of C. W. and George L. Happers, architects of the Warner.

3. Leo T. Parker, whose "Liability of Theatre Owners for Injury" is one of a regular series of articles on the Theatre and the Law, is a Cincinnati attorney.

4. The close proximity of the year 1931 led us to dispatch Better Theatres' technical editor and projection expert, F. H. Richardson, after the facts concerning the changes that have been made during 1930 in sound reproducing equipment ("Changes That 1930 Brought to Equipment"). Further discussion of these developments will be presented in the following issues of Better Theatres, in the sound department.
D. sound phantoms live in the walls of your theatre?

ECHOES and sound phantoms ... in the great out-doors ... may be mysterious and amusing, but in a theatre they are disastrous. They are the result of improper acoustics, and improper acoustics drives patrons away.

If disturbing echoes live in the walls of your theatre, they can be easily and economically eliminated by the use of Insulite Acoustile ... for it prevents "dead spots" — reverberations, and by absorbing excess sound energy makes "sound pictures" sound right.

The highest notes of a violin and the lowest tones of the spoken voice are equally well controlled with Insulite Acoustile, because it has a more uniform sound absorbent coefficient, throughout the entire frequency range, than any other material.

And Insulite Acoustile will do more than correct acoustics, it will also improve the appearance of your theatre. Made in tile-like units, of various sizes, the pleasing texture and natural cream color of Insulite Acoustile permits its arrangement in patterns to harmonize with any type of architecture — or it can be decorated to blend with any color scheme.

Remember, to correct the acoustics of your theatre, it isn’t necessary to do a lot of expensive remodeling, for Insulite Acoustile can be easily and quickly applied to any existing surface and at a surprisingly moderate cost.

INSULITE ACOUSTILE
The efficient and economical method of making your theatre acoustically correct.
A dull, tawdry, altogether uninviting moving picture theatre of the arcade type is suddenly—almost overnight—transformed into an awe-inspiring, patron-inviting place of modern entertainment. And the public just as suddenly awakes, “ums” and “ahs”, applauds out loud and begins to fight its way up to the regenerated box office. To them it appears magical. It inspires them, pleases them and they show approval with open minds—and purses.

But to you theatre owners who “know your public” there’s nothing uncanny about this Modern Magic. It’s simply a common sense treatment of chronic box office ills with medicine that pleases the public palate.

National Service—hand in hand with modern science—has always taken the lead in this movement for better theatres. It supplies the correct mechanical needs completely on a one-contract plan and in each of the 30 National branches there are men capably fitted to advise, supervise and help carry through any remodeling treatment prescribed. Consult them freely, without obligation.
Merry Christmas

An Editorial

This is the time of year when people expect to be merry. We say Merry Christmas to others, and we expect as much for ourselves. It is our right, even as at no other time, and given any kind of a chance, we’ll forget the troubles that would ordinarily harass us (troubles, indeed, that we, in our fondness for self-pity, sometimes delight in), and we’ll meet merriment more than half-way.

At this time of the year we can rather easily be as those others were bade to be by Him whose birth we now wish to remember with joy. We can frolic, convincingly. We can effectively set aside things to worry about, for we are conscious of a special necessity—a kind of duty—to be happy.

It is a healthy attitude, just the kind we need to look at this depression matter straight. In the Christmas spirit, we are more likely to exaggerate on the side of helpfulness than as many of us have been doing, and if we must have exaggeration, it is only sensible to want it to be pleasant.

One of the finest essays of the historian Macaulay was written merely because he had got out of patience with those who were exaggerating unpleasantly. It is an essay worth referring to, since it was published almost exactly one hundred years ago and at just such a time in England as that confronting the United States today. For bringing it to our attention, we are indebted to several. It seems that the advertising firm of Lord & Thomas and Logan unearthed it in an advertisement, from which that alert house organ of the Celotex Company, The Celotex News, recently reprinted it in full. An extract or two will probably suffice us here.

“The present moment,” observed the immortal historian, in January, 1830, “is one of great distress. But how shall we think over the history of the last 40 years—a war, compared with which, all other wars sink into insignificance;—taxation, such as the most heavily taxed people of former times could not have conceived;—a debt larger than all the public debts that ever existed in the world added together;—the food of the people studiously rendered dear;—the currency impudently debased, and improvidently restored.

“Yet is the country poorer than in 1790? We fully believe that, in spite of all the misgovernment of her rulers she has been almost constantly becoming richer and richer. Now and then there has been a stoppage, now and then a short retrogression; but as to the general contingency there can be no doubt. A single breaker may recede; but the tide is evidently coming in.

“If we were to prophesy that in the year 1930, a population of fifty millions, better fed, clad and lodged than the English of our time, will cover these islands,—that Sussex or Huntingdonshire will be wealthier than the wealthiest parts of the West-Riding of Yorkshire now are,—that cultivation, rich as that of flower gardens, will be carried up to the very tops of Ben Nevis and Helvellyn,—that machines, constructed on principles yet undiscovered will be in every house,—that there will be no highways but railroads, no travelling but by steam,—that our debt, vast as it seems to us, will appear to our great-grandchildren a trifling encumbrance, which might easily be paid off in a year,—many would think us insane.”

The hundred years are up and it has all come to pass. And if there is not a moral in that, then perhaps there is in these, the essays closing words:

“Our rulers will best promote the improvement of the people by strictly confining themselves to their own legitimate duties—by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair price, industry and intelligence their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment—by maintaining peace, by defending property, by diminishing the price of law, and by observing strict economy in every department of the state.”

This much we offer. And we offer those wise words from 1830 not as an astounding analogy between two ends of a century, but as something much simpler. Considered at this time of the year, of this year, there is a chuckle in them, there is a spur to optimism, confidence, cheer. We are therefore filling a few of those words as our way of saying to you, Merry, Merry Christmas.
The Carlton in London

By W. H. MOORING

The new Carlton theatre, situated at Essex Road in Islington, North London, was recently opened by H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught, who in a short speech made from the stage of the theatre, paid a tribute to the high standard of efficiency, comfort and the dignified architectural design attained. This theatre, recently built for the C & R Theatres, Ltd., of which Messrs. Albert Clavering and John Rose are managing directors, rivals the latest of the West End houses. The Architect was George Coles, F. R. I. B. A., who is the designer of so many theatres in the London area.

The seating capacity of 3,000, entitles the Carlton to rank among England’s largest super-theatres, and the building is ideal in shape and dimensions for its double function of cinema and variety theatre, vaudeville being a regular feature on the program of this particular house.

An Egyptian pattern, in a strongly stylistic expression, was chosen for the treatment of the main elevation. This style accorded with the views of the owners, who considered that the type of district necessitated a facade that would give an arresting and not easily forgotten impression. A bold columnar treatment, flanked by pylons, forms the upper part of the facade and surrounds the main group of entrance doors, which are covered by a bronze canopy of striking design and ornamented with an Egyptian lotus bud motif colored in vermilion, lemon-yellow, green and gold.

The elevation is carried out in terra-cotta. The general tone is buff, with cornices, capitals and strings picked out in red, orange, green and blue.

The interior of the building is conceived on more classical lines than the exterior, though the vestibule and waiting spaces, with their decorations in a modernized Empire style, blend with the Egyptian spirit of the facade.

Marble is the most important material used in the decoration of the main entrance vestibule. Pilasters are of Breccia Rosario marble. The dado is of the same material, with skirting and capping of black and gold. The floor has a center of Rose Florida, with margins of Portuguese Skyre and Verdi Corona. The beamed ceiling is richly ornamented and is gilded and colored grey, green and purple.

Empire motifs have been used also in the foyer and tea room. Here a quiet and restrained note has been struck, restfulness and comfort being the impression conveyed by these rooms. Amber lighting and peach colored mirrors assist in giving them their appropriate character.

Modernized classic, as in the smaller interior elements, has been used in the design and decoration of the auditorium. The square proscenium frame and flanking colonades are simply but boldly treated. A Corinthian order, with richly modeled gilt capitals and frieze, supports the coved ceiling. The coves are pierced for ventilating purposes, and the grilles so formed have been used to the full as decorative features. The large dome forming the center of the main ceiling is also utilized for ventilation. Air inlets are formed between the rim and the dome itself, which enables the fresh, warmed air to enter the auditorium horizontally, instead of vertically downwards, a method employed to preclude drafts.

The admirable atmospheric conditions that prevail during all the varied weather moods to which London is subject, testify to the efficiency of the system.

The theatre, which was designed in anticipation of the future needs of wide film, is notable for the excellence of its sight lines. These have been laid out on generous lines, so that all seats command a view of the whole of the orchestra. Those standing at the back barrier in the balcony, which seats 900, can see the whole area of the enlarged screen.

The color scheme of the auditorium consists in varied tones of buff, amber and ivory for wall and ceiling surfaces generally, and these are enriched with turquoise blue, green, lacquered silver and gold. Draperies to colonnades and arcades are of gold tinted biege, with pelmets and surrounds of soft green, scarlet and gold. The main curtain closing the stage is of gold biege, with appliqué ornament in autumn shades.

The organ lofts, electrically heated, are at the sides of the proscenium. Equipment includes electro-pneumatic control and a rising console. The organ is a Compton.

An effective system of decorative lighting give main and side curtains flood lighting of various colors. The illumination (with an orange light) of the niches at either end of the two flanking colonnades, forms a most attractive feature. Spotlighting for the orchestra is arranged through apertures in the ceiling. Brenkert spotlighting is controlled from two cantilevered chambers at the sides of the auditorium, just below the level of the balcony front. Spotlighting from this position shortens the throw, removes the spot beam from just over the heads of the audience, and is more effective in lighting performers. Non-synchronous mechanical music is transmitted to tea room and vestibule.

Heating and ventilation are on the Plenum system and provide a continuous change of fresh warmed air well in excess of any ventilation by the audience. Refrigeration was regarded as unnecessary in view of the temperature that can be maintained. (For instance, during last summer, refrigeration would only have been called upon to function for about five days.) Hand control of all parts of the theatre from a single station is also fitted in preference to automatic, making it possible to vary temperature in relation to both wet and dry bulb thermometers, a matter in which automatic or thermostatic control makes no distinction.

Adoption of centralized manual control represents an effort to meet the difficulty of obtaining a truly comfortable temperature in London, owing to peculiar variations in general atmospheric conditions outside, such as fog, smoke, dampness or even excessive dryness caused by industrial buildings within the city area. Theatre air conditioning, it has been found, is something more than a mere matter of taking a "dry" reading and making adjustments accordingly in an automatically controlled system. The design and erection of the Carlton system was in charge of H. A. Stirzaker, A. M. I. Mech. E., of the Jeffreys company.

The seating has been given very special care, and it is so arranged that a brilliantly projected picture may be seen and listened to with comfort in surroundings hitherto available in the neighborhood.

The projection room is large and well ventilated. Equipped with four Simplex projectors, a Brenkert effects projector, an amplifier stand and main switchboard, there is still ample room. Here also is a duplicate switchboard, which gives the projectionist control of the stage lighting.

JOHN EBERSON, the eminent American theatre architect, has judged new Olympia as the very finest theatre of its kind on the Continent of Europe. And this new Olympia represents a solution of really great problems in construction and decoration, for the site is not very large, and the building is absolutely wedged-in between stacks of old buildings that are a disgrace to modern Paris. In fact, the Olympia is constructed out of an old music hall of the same name, a place that Parisians were getting rather ashamed of. It held about one thousand people, and was full of columns. Nothing is now left of it but the roof, the whole inside having been rebuilt.

Three architects collaborated in the construction and embellishment of the Olympia. M. Morice was the architect-constructor; M. Farge, a architect-decorator; and M. Mongeaud, the architect-designer of the wrought ironwork, particularly of the grand façade overlooking the Boulevard des Capucines, an enormous marquise unique in Paris. It would hardly be of interest to give a complete list of all the contractors who supplied material for Olympia, but a few are of interest. The general construction work, plaster work and painting were executed by the Enterprise Générale des Galeries-Lafayette, the building construction department of the great Paris stores of Bader, Kahn & Company. The Carrier Engineering Company undertook the ventilation, and the whole apparatus for heating and for refrigerating, is, for want of space, largely contained up under the roof of the hall. The grand organ was installed by Cavaille-Coll, the most famous organ builders in France.

The installation for the presentation of sound films was carried out by Western Electric. The creation of the new Olympia was inspired by American ideas of efficient equipment, comfort and exploitation, and by modern French ideas of decoration and taste in physical details. In view of the particular and peculiar problem of Olympia, hitherto almost universally known as a music hall, too much of a shock, so to speak, would have been fatal to eventual patronage. Therefore a wholly American-style hall was not to be thought of. Monsieur Jacques Haik, president of the large French producing, distributing and exploitation concern, the Etablissements Jacques Haik, S. A., personally supervised almost every detail of selection of decorative materials and fittings for the Olympia. He had visited many American motion picture theatres, as well as the best British and Continental cinemas. Out of a multitude of notes and documents, he created the outline plan of what Olympia was to be, and above all decided on the "atmospheric note."—repose.

The color scheme throughout the that only a certain amount of light would be obscured. Hence the filigree wrought iron grille. The display panel is the only solid surface. The whole of this facade, including the pendentives, is of steel and wrought iron, aluminium painted and completely outlined by tubular lighting. The lighting is operated in sections, and various color schemes are thereby obtained. (The illustration is from a photograph taken a little before the work was finished. Thus the illuminated billboards are not to be seen.)

The theatre itself, with its architectural and decorative attractions, is considered as part of the entertainment offered. At many French places of entertainment, and particularly at cinemas, little attention is paid to the style and comfort of the building. No very serious attention is paid to anything but that which appears on the stage or screen. Cinema exploitation is not so well understood as it is in the United States or in England. French exhibitors have yet to realize that the theatre is part of the show. The Olympia breaks French tradition in this respect, that its patrons are painstakingly cared for, and by reason of the comfortable and beautiful environment, are put in a humor calculated to provoke the idea of revisiting the theatre. The pleasing decorative note is carried from the auditorium on to the stage, where, before the feature film is shown, a ballet, musical episode, or some other attraction is charmingly presented as the hors d'oeuvre.

The Victoria in Bradford

By W. H. MOORING

DURING the last year or two, Graumont-P. C. T. has built and opened some very fine motion picture theatres in London and various key cities in the provinces, but the new Victoria just opened in Bradford, Yorkshire, is the largest theatre in the country. Less than 18 months ago this site was occupied by an old brewery. It was bought by P. C. T., the old brewery premises were demolished, and 14 months ago the building of this gigantic cinema was commenced. Today this venture is an object of pride to the city of Bradford, as it is also an eloquent tribute to the far-seeing enterprise of Gaumont-P. C. T. The architect of the Victoria was William Illingworth,
F. R. I. B. A., of Bradford, who prepared the plans and supervised construction.

This enterprise embraces a cinema, a ballroom and a café. It is equipped and licensed for motion pictures, vaudeville or stage plays. The theatre will accommodate approximately 3,500, and the ballroom 400 people. The building is set almost in the middle of Bradford, within a stone's throw of the Town Hall and in the very heart of the theatreland of the city. It is near the tram and bus terminals, and is within a five-minute-walk of the two stations.

The New Victoria does not directly overlook an open space, but the two main entrances, one at each end of the short Brewery Street, face two busy thoroughfares in Thornton Road and Great Horton Road. These two entrances can be observed by anyone strolling along from Town Hall Square, and further, a dome at a great height at the top of the building, directly over each entrance, can be seen some distance away over the top of other buildings.

The exterior design is carried out in plain, but sloping lines, on a modern plan developed out of Renaissance style, the top half of the building being in multi-colored brick, and the lower half having a white facing of faience, with just a restrained ornamentation. The Thornton Road and Great Horton Road sides of the building are plain, with special open spaces, or plagues, for the display of huge posters.

In the daytime there will be no missing the New Victoria, and at night the two domes are lighted up and are conspicuous among the lights of Bradford for miles around. The main entrance and canopies, or verandas, are brilliantly lighted, while flood-lighting up to the domes illuminates the whole building and throws a reflected light back into the streets below.

The two main entrance halls, resplendent with shining mahogany and chromium plate fittings under a blaze of crystal electric lights, lead, on the one hand, to lifts to the balcony, and on the other, up a broad flight of about six shallow stairs into a long spacious curved lounge, decorated in blue and gold, with sober amber lighting, and again with more shining mahogany and chromium plating for the six entrance doors to the stalls.

In this stalls lounge will be a number of portable pay boxes, or cash desks. Entering one of the two middle of the six entrance doors to the stalls, the patron finds himself under the shallow balcony, and going forward about 20 feet, comes out into the very expansive auditorium. The ceiling is high, but not too high for such a great building, and not too high-domed to spoil the acoustics. In the part of the ceiling is a shallow dome, and here a system of concealed lighting is carried out round the edge and under the balconies, and when these lights are switched on, the amber, blue and red decorations, the two 12-foot archways for the side promenades, the two or three pillars of green, and the sober glow of the rose-colored upholstery, join in a very impressive decorative effect.

The interior walls, like the exterior, are carried out in a free Renaissance style and are delightfully artistic in their plainness. The whole style of the place is distinctive without being extravagant. Standing down by the orchestra (in which is a Wurlitzer organ console—mounted on a lift)—and looking up to the operating box [projection room] let into the back and top of the lower balcony, one cannot fail to be impressed by the broad sweep of the balcony, which at its widest is about 150 feet, and by the long curved chair rows, which number 38 in the auditorium, seven in the lower balcony, and 12 in the upper balcony.

The seating, which is the same in every part of the house, is of plain gilt standard type, the chairs being very roomy and with more than usual knee room. The carpet is of thick red pile, with a design made up of the P. C. T. monogram.

The proscenium arch is impressive both as regards height and breadth, and again a scheme of flood-lighting is used for effective decoration. On the side walls near the proscenium are recesses for "electrical fountains," another novel and pleasing lighting effect. Still further along the side wall is a grille covering a sound chamber, and still further on come the archways for the exit promenades. The lower balcony frontage commemorates, each on a plaque, famous representatives of the arts.

To give some idea of the size of the auditorium, it may be mentioned that it is 400 feet from the back seat of the lower balcony to the screen, and the projection throw is 140 feet. In spite of the vastness of the place, the acoustics are so good, and the sound arrangements so skilfully carried out, that the faintest crooning of a violin in the orchestra, and a whisper from the screen, can be plainly heard, it is to be noted, in all parts of the house.

On the lower balcony level there are lounges, one in green, gold and purple; and the other in silver and gold. The café, which is about 80 feet long and 25 feet wide, is on the ground floor, with windows to open out on Thornton Road. Over this is the ballroom, done in gold and pink and complete with bar and buffet.

The Victoria was opened to the public by the Lord Mayor of Bradford.

The Granada in London

By W. H. MOORING

The Granada in Walthamstow, London, which opened recently, is due to the imaginative enterprise of Sidney Bernstein, who proved himself here an artist-exhibitor of fine taste with a bold originality. The architect was Cecil Masey, F. R. I. B. A., while the whole of the internal decoration has been carried out by Theodore Komisarjevsky, the celebrated producer and former director of the Moscow Art Theatre. The Granada seats 3,000.

The inspiration of the decorative art of the theatre is Spanish-Moorish, indicative of the Moorish Palace of Granada, but in no way is it a shabby imitation of the ancient Alhambra. In fact, the decorative artist has endeavored with great success to give an impression of old Moorish architecture under modern conditions and surroundings. From the known knowledge of the art of the Moors in the Iberian peninsula, he has evolved a new Alhambra, for the auditorium and foyer ceiling are not true in detail to that of Granada, but give an original impression of the decorative art of the conquerors of Spain.

On this very point we have the privilege of listening to M. Komisarjevsky himself, who, when the theatre was opened, made the following statement: "That 'Moorish' style of which so many restaurants, Turkish baths, casinos, etc., are nefarious examples, is no more Moorish than the so-called Spanish style. The style of architecture and decoration of the Alhambra Palace at the Spanish town of Granada was imported into Spain by the Moors, or Arabs, who conquered the country and who, in mentality and religion, had nothing in common with the original Spanish inhabitants. About 1,200 years ago the Moors, Mussulmen of the North African desert, overran a good part of the world, reaching the Indies in the East, West Africa in the West and in Southeastern Europe stopping at the gates of Vienna. They established themselves particularly firmly in Spain, which has never since been so prosperous, happy and well governed as it was under the Moorish invaders. Wherever the Moors came they brought with them a culture dating from the ancient Persian kings, a literature and an art which was specially rich in architecture.

"The monumets of architecture which were left by the Arabs in Spain after their expulsion are what are known today as examples of the 'Moorish' style. Probably on account of its picturesqueness, its whimsicality and multi-colored character it was so much favored in the 19th Century for restaurants, night haunts, etc. We can call to mind places the world over known as the 'Alhambra,' 'Mauritania,' etc., which, however, do no justice to the original spirit of the old Asiatic style. The artists responsible for the interior and exterior of those places of amusement usually tried the 'Moorish experiment' by merely imitating or copying the genuine article. Apart from the fact, if I may venture to say so, that they were not people of any great taste or discernment, to try to reproduce faithfully Moorish decoration without using the same materials as the Moors, who worked, one might say, like jewelers on a large scale when embellishing their mosques and palaces and whose finished products may be compared to filigree, but out of stone, plaster they knew nothing, but stones of various kinds and colors, marbles, carved woods, and a variety of metals were the materials utilized by a people who were not only architects in the matter of building, but sculptors, carvers and metal-smiths.

"I have endeavored to give an impression of old Moorish architecture under modern conditions and surroundings. From my knowledge of the art of the Moors I have evolved in my modern imagination a new Alhambra for the auditorium and foyer ceiling, not true in detail to that of Granada but which seems to me to give at least an impression of the decorative art of the conquerors of Spain. For the large entrance hall foyer I chose decorations in the 17th Century Spanish Baroque style inspired by the great architects Juan de Toledo, Juan de Herrera and Mora who, under Philip II, built the royal palace of Aranjuez."

A large quadrangular entrance foyer, with an elegant marble floor and corned, wide staircases leading to the circle foyer, is gorgeously decorated in this 17th Century Spanish baroque style, having exquisite mirrors and immense cut-glass chandeliers, and smaller chandeliers in situ.

The circle foyer is probably the most charming yet conceived, with its wonderful decorative effects, glass chandeliers, etc., while here and there, yet in true perspective, flourish flowering shrubs and grape vines. In the walls are etchings and photographs of the real Alhambra. The general color effects are in gold, sunray and pale green. The whole of the foyer is carpeted in harmony with the general decorative ensemble.

An unique feature of the main foyer, and one which is indicative of its spaciousness, is that it is proposed to entertain waiting patrons with pianoforte selections and turns of that nature. For that purpose a grand piano is positioned above the main ground floor entrance.

The auditorium itself is entirely different in its decorative scheme from that of any theatre previously attempted. In its practically square lobbies, it resembles an enclosed Moorish Palace court. The heavily paneled walls glow with bright colors, every detail being so perfectly balanced that the intricate designs hang together in satisfying unity, composing a scheme of noble beauty.

As in the foyers, so in the auditorium and circle, the novel and fanciful beauty of the decorative scheme is allied with up-to-the-minute in amusement. An uncommon and charming effect has been by upholstering the chairs in alternate deep claret and dark orange corded velvet. The lighting system represents the last word in electrical ingenuity, and this includes an array of the most modern electric equipment. The auditorium lighting is by massive electroliers carried out in deep blue and yellow.

A large orchestra pit on ground floor level accommodates 20 instrumentalists in addition to an organ console, which is permanently attached to the center on an electric hoist. An unique feature of this theatre is that it has been equipped with two organs, the second organ being placed on the stage, with a large stage organ in a console, which is mobile, being permanently housed on the stage. The sound chambers of the organs have been placed over the proscenium arch.

A large stage is complete with every device necessary for the presentation of a high class of vaudeville. Unusually striking are the stage curtains, which are of a delicate pale green silk with a deep embellishment of orange, black, green and white.

Great care has been lavished on the projection room and its attendant offices. Ross projectors are utilized with Western Electric sound equipment. The theatre, with plenty type air conditioning, has a perfect "climate" despite London's notorious weather.

Besides the balcony effect with its colonnade, the auditorium is dominated by a broad dome, which has also a utilitarian function in the ventilations.

LIABILITY OF THEATRE OWNERS FOR INJURY

By LEO T. PARKER

A review of higher court decisions in late suits for damages

During the past few weeks several unusually important decisions have been rendered with respect to the liability of theatre owners for injuries. These cases contain explanations of various phases of the law which should assist well meaning exhibitors in avoiding the expense of law suits.

There is no extra or unusual degree of care chargeable to a proprietor of a theatre with respect to the safety of his patrons. He is merely under the duty of exercising reasonable care to keep his premises in safe condition. In other words, the proprietor of a theatre, like any other person who, expressly or impliedly, invites others upon his premises, is not an insurer of their safety while in the theatre, but owes to them merely the duty of exercising reasonable care to keep the premises in a safe condition for their proper use.

For instance, in W. V. Williams (41 F. 2d 970), it was disclosed that a woman patron slipped and fell on a floor, breaking her arm. She was the only witness who testified as to the cause of the accident. She stated that when she was assisted from the floor to a chair she noticed an oval-shaped spot on the floor at about the point where she fell, that the spot was darker than the floor, that it was slightly raised above the floor, and that she had no doubt but that her heel went into this spot and caused her to slip.

During the trial the counsel for the injured woman contended that the proprietor was negligent in that he allowed and permitted some greasy, slimy, oily, or other like foreign substance to be and remain upon the floor, and did fail to remove and clear the floor of the substance so as to remove danger to persons of slipping and falling. However, the United States court held the woman not entitled to damages, saying:

"Until it is established that the accident was occasioned through the negligence of defendant's employees, or as the result of the existence of a condition of which defendant had either actual or constructive notice, there can be no recover."

Also, in the leading case of Schmutterer v. Bamberger, et al. (81 N. J. Law. 558), a patron sued for injuries sustained from a fall caused by her tripping on a loosened brass edging or nosing originally fastened by screws to the upper edge of a step. In holding the woman not entitled to recover damages, the court among other things, said:

"When the plaintiff rested her case, it had not appeared that the defendant had been guilty of any want of reasonable care for the reason that she had failed to show that the defective condition of the brass edging which she said existed on the night of the accident of April 24th had either (a) been in fact brought to the previous notice of the defendant, or, failing in proof of such actual notice, that (b) the defect had existed for such space of time before that occurrence as would have afforded the defendant sufficient opportunity to make proper inspection of its stairways to ascertain their condition as to safety, and to repair their defects. In the absence of proof of either, the legal presumption is that defendant had used reasonable care."

In still another leading case, Mond v. Erion, (228 N. Y. S. 533), it was disclosed that a patron slipped on what she described as a spot of oil about the size of a grapefruit, and fell, receiving injuries for which she obtained a judgment in a lower court. None of the employees were at the place of the accident, but some of them heard the fall and came to her assistance. She was helped to rise and was seated in a chair. She testified that she noticed a spot of oil on the floor, with a streak running through it and extending for about a yard, indicating where her heel had slipped. She described the spot as being about a tenth of an inch in depth. The evidence showed that the last time oil had been applied to the floor was from two to four weeks before the accident, when, after its application, it was mopped perfectly dry. All the witnesses called by the proprietor testified that there were no pools of oil on the floor at the time of the accident, but that the floor was perfectly dry. Although the lower court held the owner liable, it is interesting to observe that the higher court reversed the judgment of the lower court and said:

"The existence of a spot of oil such as is described by plaintiff does not, in and of itself, establish a cause of action, notwithstanding she may have fallen thereon. . . . No attempt is made to show how or by whom the oil spot was created, nor as to how long it had existed; so far as appears, it . . . may have been caused by some person having no connection whatsoever with defendant. As has been said, it is not sufficient for her to show that the oil was there: she must go further, and show its presence under circumstances sufficient to charge defendant responsibility therefor."

Theatre Owner Not Insurer

While the proprietor or manager of a place of public amusement or entertainment is held to a stricter accountability for injuries to patrons than owners of private premises generally, the rule is that he is not an insurer of the safety of patrons, but owes to them only what, under the particular circumstances, is "ordinary" or "reasonable" care.

It is interesting to know that in the recent case of Klamann v. Hitchcock (221 N. W. 716), a higher court held a theatre owner liable in damages for injuries to a patron because the testimony indicated that neither the owner nor manager of the theatre had exercised ordinary care to inspect and also to repair any broken seats.

The facts of this case are that a woman was seriously injured while attending a motion picture show, as a result of a chair seat falling onto her head from the balcony. There was evidence on the part of the injured person tending to show that the chairs or seats in the balcony were old, dilapidated and some of them broken, and that this chair seat had been broken out of one of the chairs some time previously. During the performance, this chair seat was lying on the rail in front of the balcony and by reason of instability or some vibration it slipped and fell down from the balcony rail.

In view of the fact that the dangerous condition of the seats may have been discovered by the theatre owner or manager, if the theatre had been carefully inspected, the court held the injured patron entitled to recover $4,000 damages, and said:

"The duty of the defendant (theatre owner) was to exercise ordinary care to prevent injury to his patrons, due care under the circumstances and the situation shown. The standard of care is that which persons of ordinary prudence (Continued on page 50)

THE ERLEN: A STUDY OF MODERN MEDIUMS

By M. P. FOULKE

Fantasy in the new forms, new coloring and in light

The opening of the Erlen Theatre, conveniently located at the terminus of City Line buses, at Nineteenth and Cheltenham Avenues, marks not only the formal opening of a new section of Philadelphia, but also the beginning of an expansion program on the part of the Principal Theatres Corporation, under the direction of which the house will be operated. The Erlen was designed by W. H. Lee and Armand D. Carroll, Philadelphia architects, and has a seating capacity of 1,750, all on one floor. It was built and is owned by Charles G. Erny and James A. Nolen, building contractors.

There is a frontage on Cheltenham Avenue of 151 feet, and a depth of 225 feet. The theatre is of modernistic architecture, appropriately furnished, with unique and colorful interior decorative effects, the color scheme being Chinese red, black and silver. It is one of the most beautiful and spacious neighborhood houses in this section of the country, and cost approximately $500,000.

The front facade is of architectural terra cotta, with three black and gold niches containing large terra cotta urns tube-lighted for night illumination. There are two vertical name signs forming an integral part of the architectural design crowning the pylons at either side of the entrance doors. The theatre entrance is in the center of the facade, with a store measuring 22x45 feet on either side.

The foyer measures 20x60 feet, with a ceiling height of 25 feet. The decorative scheme is simple but effective with massive black columns, Chinese red wall treatment, silver mouldings and mirrors, without paintings or other mural decorations. The lighting is from a ceiling cove running entirely around the room.

The auditorium is one of the widest in the city, measuring 125 feet at the rear wall, and there an impression of spaciousness and restfulness is further emphasized in the absence of excessive decorative treatment. A lighting cove surrounds the auditorium on three sides, throwing varicolored lights on a silver leaf hood in the rear which projects nine feet into the room. The hood slopes upward at a slight angle and is decorated in the modern manner, with soft, moon-light effect obtained through the use of a glass cheneau fringing the cove.

The ceiling has been treated in color, producing the illusion of a deep blue mid-night sky, with lighting obtained through the use of reflectors and effect machines. The ceiling is acoustically treated, being constructed of painted cloth reinforced with wool rock. The proscenium arch, elliptical in form, is 58 feet wide by 28 feet high, with a wide, splayed sounding board, which is decorated with gold and silver leaf in the modern manner. The stage measures 74x29 feet.

There is a 12-foot standing space extending around three sides of the auditorium, for large crowds to be admitted through six broad aisles.

At the end of the foyer is the lounge, measuring 30x20. It is three steps below the level of the foyer floor. At one end of the room is an inlaid mosaic fountain of red, black and silver, lighted from the rear and with the name Erlen in tiling. The walls are simply treated with horizontal mouldings, and two wide bands of aluminum act as reflectors for the lighting scheme. The remainder of the wall is a dull black, which forms a very effective background for the colorful Chinese red suede and metal furniture of modernistic design. The manager's office and retiring rooms are located off one end of the lounge.

The building is of fireproof construction throughout. The framework is of steel and concrete, with outer walls of brick and inner walls of plaster. The ventilating system employs a system of high velocity injection of fresh air with a complete change every four minutes.
A NEW WARNER HOUSE THAT FOLLOWS THE MODERN TREND

WARNER BROTHERS' new theatre in West Chester, Pa., commands an important location in a current business development, and has been designed to harmonize, and at the same time contrast, with the other buildings and minor elements of the projects. This house, called the Warner, was designed by C. W. and George L. Rapp, architects of Chicago and New York.

The seating capacity of the entire auditorium is 1,626 seats, situated in a large main floor and a small mezzanine. Entrance to the theatre is from High Street, and adjoining this entrance are seven stores or shops. Each store is designed in such a way as to be a complete unit in itself, or, if desired, several stores can be combined. In other words, store space of any size can be arranged for the tenants.

The entrance to the theatre is dominated by a large V-shaped sign, which has been so designed as to form an integral part of the architecture of the main entrance feature. Cast stone has been used for both the theatre portion and the stores, and a modern treatment has been employed, with very dignified lines and forms, together with interesting modernistic ornament and fluted work.

A large canopy surmounting the entrance to this theatre is brilliantly illuminated, and together with the large vertical sign, forms a very interesting feature which can be seen from a long distance. The soffit for the underside of this canopy is also brilliantly illuminated and covers the entire sidewalk. Every effort has been made to make the entrance of this theatre a most brilliantly lighted feature.

From the entrance you are received into a ticket lobby, and thence into the grand lobby, in which there is a large portal or entrance to the orchestra foyer. This lobby is designed in a strikingly unconventional style of architecture and decoration, carrying out the spirit of the modern trend in design. The lobby is very spacious and dignified, and unusual forms have been used to give a dignified, yet obviously theatrical effect.

As you are received into the orchestra foyer, you may enter from the left into miscellaneous retiring rooms, such as the men's and women's lounge, cosmetic room, etc. Each small unit has been designed in an appropriate interpretation of the new art. The decorative treatment of these rooms is very colorful, with considerable silver and gold being incorporated in the color scheme. Special carpets and furniture have been employed in these rooms. The effort was to create one of the most interesting groups of retiring rooms ever designed for this type of building.

From the right of the foyer you enter the auditorium through four portals, which face directly toward the stage, and from these portals are spacious aisles leading the patrons to their respective seats. The stage has a 50-foot opening and is designed to accommodate all the latest equipment for the screen. Both large and small screens can be used.

The architecture and decoration of the auditorium are based on acoustic and modernistic principles. A large painting dominates the ceiling treatment and designed in allegorical figures recalling the signs of the zodiac and the different phases of the firmament. On the side walls of the auditorium are large panels, recessed and striped in vivid colors. These form a background for lighting effects in changing color.

Other motifs, all of modernistic pattern, are added at different places.

On either side of the proscenium arch are large plaster ornamental grilles, screening the organ lofts. These are illuminated in brilliant colors. The proscenium arch has an unusual effect, inasmuch as the ornament in the new art lends itself very much to this particular theatre. A step-up type of treatment has been used, with an illuminated curved arch. Large fluted piers find their use in the decorative scheme at the right and left sides of the proscenium arch and lend to it a great deal of dignity and scale to their adjoining features. Colorful treatment and design have been obtained in all of the drapery hangings, seat covers, proscenium curtains, etc., and special weavings of designs have been made in order that they too will tie in and form a harmonious note with the other decorative features of the architecture as well as of the added detail.

The mezzanine, which is set quite far back in the auditorium, has been designed so that the viewpoint of the patrons on the first floor is not hampered in any way, and practically the entire orchestra floor gets a full view of both the ceiling and sidewalls of the auditorium. At the back of the mezzanine is a mezzanine foyer, which has received the same study of design and decoration as other parts of the theatre, and which also takes the part of a large retiring, or lounging, space. It is equipped with elegant furniture, lamps, etc., to give a very intimate effect to the patrons who wish to rest or converse, and from this foyer one can look into the grand lobby and obtain a very impressive effect of both its height and the decorative scheme that has been employed in its design.
SOUND IN THE THEATRE

CHANGES THAT 1930 BROUGHT TO EQUIPMENT
Western Electric and R C A Photophone

By F. H. RICHARDSON

The first of a group of articles reviewing developments during 1930

As the year of 1930 (interesting for some but not so good for some others) draws to a close, and as we are about to step off into the more or less unknown of 1931, it is interesting to check up on the old year and see just what we have accomplished to start the new one with.

In the matter of sound reproduction, 1930 has been a pretty good year to us. There was, of course, plenty of room for improvement, and it is good to be able to say that improvement has come. The quality of reproduction in theatres has, as all closely interested in sound know, become of fairly high calibre in even the average theatre. Part of this, of course, is due to the remodeling of theatres to make them better acoustically, and part of it has come from the increase in the skill of the men handling the equipment. The rest of the improvement is due to betterment in equipment.

In reviewing and analyzing the changes that have been made in reproducing equipment during the past year, I shall take up the subject kind by kind—that is to say, of course, company by company. The first under discussion are Western Electric and R C A Photophone.

Western Electric

Western Electric and its associated engineers were invited to set before us an account of the improvements made in the sound apparatus manufactured by that company during the year 1930. Its distributing affiliate, Electrical Research Products, Inc., to whom the invitation was extended, is very careful about preparing matter for publication and agreed to give us a resume of the outstanding developments.

The year 1930, saw many improvements in the design and manufacture of apparatus necessary for the successful reproducing of sound in synchronization with motion pictures. The Western Electric Company is constantly striving to work improvement in all phases of the art.

In the theatre, the irregularity of voltage pressure supply has in many cases demanded the installation of special voltage regulators to keep the voltage supplied by the local power company within the limits between which the amplifiers are designed to operate with maximum results. Although amplifiers could be designed to operate over wider limits of voltage, to do so would be to increase the cost to the many exhibitors whose theatre voltage is normal and would have benefited only those whose voltage is abnormal.

Two kinds of Western Electric voltage regulators have been designed to take care of abnormal voltages. One of these is for use where the voltage is consistently high or low, the other will also take care of temporary fluctuations.

The large number of the smaller type of theatres demanding sound equipment made it imperative that a high-class reproducing equipment, at a lower price, be made available. To meet this demand the 3-A type was developed, which will satisfy the requirements of the smallest houses. The 3-A system contains the same high class optical assembly and sound unit that is used in all other Western Electric reproducers. The drive is obtained from a specially designed constant speed synchronous motor, which supplies the necessary close control of speed for the reason that it operates only at a film speed of 90 feet per minute.

It was found that the stages of nearly all the smaller type of houses were so constructed that sufficient horn space was not readily available without more or less extensive alterations. To save the exhibitor this additional expense, Western Electric designed a horn having a front-to-back depth of only 26 inches, as compared with the 60 inches formerly required. This was accomplished by elongating the horn sidewise in order to obtain the correct length of air column. The 16-A type horn, as this is called, is made of sheet steel. One or two receivers may be attached to each side, depending upon the size of the auditorium to be filled. Like all other horns made by this company, it transmits the wide band of frequencies necessary for high quality sound reproduction.

Another problem solved is the enabling of a theatre patron whose hearing is defective to enjoy the talking picture with the same pleasure as does his more fortunate neighbor. This is accomplished by installing special jack- boxes on the arms of a certain row of seats, usually the rear of the auditorium. These jacks accommodate the plug of a headset attachment, thus enabling the user to listen to a program clearly and with perfect comfort. A small volume control potentiometer, in shape and size like a fountain pen, permits the listener to regulate the sound volume as he or she may see fit.

Briefly, the hearing aid system consists of a resistance network, which taps off a small amount of energy from the sound picture system, and amplifier, which amplifies this energy and sends it to the jackboxes already mentioned. The projectionist can monitor on the system from the projection room at all times and thus tell if the sound is being received by the patrons using the headsets. An important feature of this apparatus is that if any trouble should occur in the hearing-aid system, it will in no way affect the main sound system.

Most projectionists welcome the change from storage batteries to a motor-generator set, which will furnish properly regulated direct current in suf-

RCA PHOTOPHONE

In the year 1930, a number of outstanding contributions to the motion picture industry was made by RCA Photophone, Inc. In the recording field, for example, its developments were so important that they were classified as being ahead of their time. The company, using its own design, has developed an excellent portable recording equipment, improved microphones, new portable studio equipment and a greatly simplified recorder, which enables engineers experimenting in the development of noiseless recording. Early in 1930, small theatre type of reproducer (type PG-13) was offered to the trade. In the latter part of the year, the Photophone organization developed a new type loud-speaker and an aid to hard-of-hearing theatre patrons in the "Soundphone."
The new small theatre type of reproducer is of general interest because of its compactness, simplicity, dependability and other unusual features. The entire amplifier unit is housed in a cabinet approximately 22 inches square and ten inches deep. Powered by a sturdy constructed three-unit motor-generator set less than four feet long, the amplifier is capable of supplying sound to theatres up to 1,000 seats with an ample reserve of power. The well known standard Radiotrons are used, and the amplifier has a wide uniform frequency characteristic.

The excellent reproduction obtained with this apparatus is due in part to the invention of a novel soundhead incorporating an "impedance sound gate," by means of which practically constant speed is imparted to the moving film. The dynamically balanced fly-wheel and roller used in the soundhead accomplishes this by minimizing variations in speed introduced by sprocket driven film. A new optical system and curved sound gate assembly were also added as refinements of the system.

The powerful UX-968 photoelectric cell used in this equipment, together with its associated transformer, eliminates the necessity for a soundhead amplifier.

The synchronous turntable is of improved design. A newly developed damping device is used to filter out turntable "wows." A new pickup and tone arm especially constructed to do away with "tone arm resonance" were also developed. The turntable is coupled to the motor driving motor by means of a flexible shaft, permitting the turntable to be placed at any convenient point near the projector. No storage batteries or charging equipment are required and the entire reproducer is small enough to be installed in most projection booths without making structural changes of any kind.

A compensator or "tone control" is now provided with each reproducer to compensate for defective recording. To start or stop the set it is necessary to snap only one switch. The vacuum tubes and photoelectric cells used are dependable and long lived. The amplifier is ruggedly built.

Another extremely interesting development by Photophone is its recently perfected 72-inch loudspeaker and directional baffle. A voice coil of aluminum wire on a special six-inch dynamic cone, combined with a redesigned directional baffle, has resulted in a speaker having a uniform frequency characteristic from 60 to over 7,000 cycles. A considerable improvement is represented by its increased efficiency, which is as great as 40% over a considerable part of its range, and in an unusually good radiation distribution characteristic.

Two types are available, one having been designed expressly for reverberant theatres. While this loudspeaker is not a "cure all" for poor theatre acoustics,

SHUT YOUR EYES AWAY

When you drop into a theatre other than your own, as you should do once a week, close your eyes awhile. Let your ears be the only channel to your mind. Be sternly critical.

Do you hear a string of bloop and bumbles; flat, timbreless tones and rain-barrel echoes? Then you're certainly not listening to Syncrofilm. If men speak from their chests, not the basement, and the women give all the delicate shading of their voices; if music is golden pure in unmarrred rhythm, ask the owner what sound equipment he has.

You'll be astonished at the number of them who'll answer: "Weber's Syncrofilm."

The sound your patrons want and pay for is on the film. What they get depends on how you take it off the film. Modern recording has reached a high degree of accuracy, but so far there is only one reproducer that equals the recording. That is the Syncrofilm.

it was developed to provide in numerous cases a clearer type of reproduction. The loudspeaker has been a weak link in the reproducing chain and this speaker looks to be an important improvement.

In collaboration with the engineers of the Dictograph Products Corporation, a company engaged for the past 28 years in the manufacture of hearing devices, R C A Photophone evolved the Acousticon Seatphone equipment. The use of Seatphones enables the hard-of-hearing to hear the sound quite as clearly and distinctly as those with unimpaired hearing. And, mind you, there are in the United States 12 million people who are hard of hearing. The instrument consists of a circular earpiece comparable to a telephone receiver, though much smaller and lighter. It is fitted to an extendable lorgnette handle, a volume control, a plug for making contact and a cord of suitable length. An A.C. amplifier of the bridging type is connected to the main amplifier, and "plug-in" boxes attached to the seats are wired to it.

In the next issue of Better Theatres, I shall review the developments at International Projector and Enterprise Optical relative to sound.

WORLD SOUND

news and comment about products and people in the field of theatre reproducing equipment

Conducted by G. J. Reid

SPEAKING of sound (no pun intended), the smallest voice in the world was heard the other day, and because of this neat bit of amplification and some other demonstrations, the "science show" put on for the Merchants Association of New York, may be well worth telling about in these columns. Even some of those phenomena (and what phenomena!) that have no direct relation to motion picture sound, are probably interesting enough to motion picture engineers for some description of them, as they were produced for the merchants, to be given here.

The demonstration was conducted by L. A. Hawkins, executive engineer, and E. L. Manning, physicist, affiliated with the research laboratory of the General Electric Company, and Guy Bartlett of that same organization has sent this department a very interesting account of the affair. Here are the things motion picture scientists will probably be most interested in:

"One of the features of the demonstration was the placing of some pop-corn kernels in a transparent bag between the suggestions that the decay of the radioactive substance is rather slow, but such is far from the case. A single gram of uranium, for instance, emits 5,000 particles each second when it is in equilibrium with its decomposition products. The emission, in time as well as space, follows the law of chance, so only a very small fraction of the particles enter the window. Further, a good deal of the radiation is absorbed in the metal itself.

“In spite of the fact that 5,000 atoms per gram break down each second, the activity of a piece of uranium will be but half gone in five billion years. That is, in five thousand million years, half of the uranium will have lost 12% or 13% of its weight and will have left some metallic lead. Knowing the rate at which uranium turns to lead, Mr. Hawkins said, uranium deposits are the best clocks we have for measuring the age of the earth, which seems to be about 1,800,000,000 years.”

And we thought mere talking motion pictures were a miracle!

A SPECIAL REPRODUCER

- An unique type of sound reproducer for motion pictures, especially those dealing with industrial or commercial subjects, has been brought out by Bell & Howell. Designed for use with a portable outfit, it has a special microphone arrangement that permits the operator to cut in with comment at any part of the picture.

This type of the Bell & Howell 16-mm. Filmophone comes in two cases of approximately equal size, weighing together 85 pounds. It employs the disc method.

The microphone arrangement, it is pointed out, enables a business executive, lecturer, salesman or person of similar interests to “plug in” his own voice, cutting out the synchronized sound of the picture, and thus give special remarks concerning any part of the picture, surely an advantageous procedure for many types of industrial and educational subjects.

SOUND-ON-FILM APPARATUS

- New sound-on-film equipment has been brought out by the Sono Equipment Corporation of Indianapolis. This equipment is of the low-impedance type (500).

The sound head is connected directly to the sound head shaft by belt, motor filtration being by means of V-type belts. The drive is through a non-metallic gear upon a steel gear. The latter, encased, runs in oil. A roller chain is used to drive the head mechanism.

The audio amplification system is three-stage in push-pull, with a 250 output. The purchaser has choice of speakers.

This firm has also included in its new product a portable outfit consisting in a projection and sound head in one case. The intermittent is double-bearing (ball), and the shutter is at the rear. Light source is 1,000-C.P., incandescent.

The portable equipment is entirely A.C. and it employs in the converters (no batteries at all). The A.C. current is supplied directly to the exciter lamp through a filter rectifier. This equipment can be contained in three small trunks, which weigh about 150 pounds.

The Sono Equipment Corporation also manufactures a universal base for Motograph (compulsory), Simplex and Powers (optional). This base carries both head and audio amplification.

NEW MICROPHONE LINE

- A complete line of microphones of one- and two-button type has just been added to the product of the Miles Reproducer Company of New York.

It is claimed by the manufacturer that these “mikes” are capable of sensitivity at a distance of 20 feet from ordinary push-pull amplification and without pre-amplification. Production now includes four types, it is announced, one especially suitable for home recording.

BY WAY OF NEWS

- A branch office has been opened by Kendall & Davisville, Inc., of New York, which offers a system of acoustic correction, at 1734 Ridge Avenue, Philadelphia. This office has a full technical and service staff. Acoustic correction in the Philadelphia territory has now been made in five houses, this department is informed, and 40 more theatres, including 20 of the Comerford circuit, are now being treated.
THE Chicago chapter of the S M P E, which seems to have got well underway in a program of interesting activity, held its meeting the evening of December 4 at the plant of the Enterprise Optical Company, 564 W. Randolph Street, Chicago, manufacturer of Motograph projectors, with O. P. Spahr as host. The occasion, besides that represented in the S M P E meeting itself, was a special demonstration of Motograph sound-pictorial projection, with the latest model of Motograph that embraces all the requirements of the modern motion picture in one, unified projector.

The meeting was also featured by an especially notable paper by V. A. Schoenberg, who is associated with Enterprise as sound engineer. He discussed the new significance of light in modern science, especially in the science of motion picture projection and sound reproduction.

The demonstration of Motograph sound and projection consisted principally in the screening of United Artists' capital musicomedy, "Whoopee." It may be questioned whether any picture with Eddie Cantor in it is capable of steady projection. Purely in the sense of projection, however, steadiness of projection was an outstanding merit of the image, brought emphatically to the attention by the fact that the room was very small, creating an extremely short throw and placing the spectators almost on top of the screen. "Whoopee," moreover, is in color, but despite the brilliancy of the reflection in such a small room, the definition was as fine as one could expect with color in any theatre. It wouldn't be fair, of course, to give conclusive judgment on the sound reproduction under such conditions. It can be said, however, that allowing for the obvious adverse acoustical factors, the reproduction was clear and natural.

Condenzer Lenses

- Instructions regarding condenser lenses for projection lamps and high intensity spots have been issued by Hall & Connolly, Inc., 24 Vandam Street, New York, and they are herewith passed on, with diagrams to make the explanation clearer.

Considering the condensers for projection lamps, it should be pointed out that the lens marked 5124, is cylindrical, placed first in the mount with cylindrical face to the arc. Next comes the spacing ring, on which is lens No. 5155, a Parabolic-Mensicus, the convex side being placed toward the aperture.

The Ilex F:2.5 Dual Focus Lens projects sound-on-film to cover the same size screen area as sound-on-disc holding images in true proportion without distortion. Against the latter rests the clamp ring (J) which is secured by two nuts (C) so that the space J is even all around the ring.

One is to be cautioned not to tighten the nuts so as to chip the lenses. A light shake should be left in the condensers. This condenser arrangement gives a spot on the aperture that is elliptical instead of round.

With reference to the diagram of the spotlight condenser, both lenses are plano-convex with a six-inch diagram and a nine-inch focus. The diagram indicates the method of mounting. It will be noted that there is a space between the lenses (K). This should be one-eighth of an inch. Space J should be even. Care should be used in tightening clamps nuts (C) so that they are not tightened too much.

NEW RHEOSTAT LUG

- A new solderless lug has been designed by Hoffmann-Booms, Inc., 387 First Avenue, New York, manufacturer of rheostats and allied motion picture projection apparatus. The lug is used with this firm's rheostat and is adjustable to seven different sizes of cables ranging from $4$ to $40$.

The lug comes in both single and double terminals, the former being able to stand 150 amperes, while the latter will take 250 amperes. It is stated that the lug can be added to any rheostats now in use at a small cost.

Better Projection

A DEPARTMENT CONDUCTED FOR THE PROJECTIONIST AND THE EXHIBITOR

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Projection in Legislation

A projectionist of Ontario, Canada, has handed me a copy of the new "Theatre and Cinematograph Act" which recently went into effect, with the request that it be carefully examined and that I comment upon its provisions insofar as concerns projection matters. I am also in receipt of a leather bound copy of this act, with my name all nicely printed on the cover in gold. This came from the treasury department of Ontario, to whom my thanks are extended for the kindly courtesy.

I am always glad to examine and comment on such things, especially so in this case, for the reason that the act contains provisions with which I very thoroughly agree. I shall therefore consume considerable space dealing with this measure, believing our readers will be interested in its provisions, and, moreover, that officials of our own states, as well as those of Canadian provinces other than Ontario, may perhaps be benefited to some extent by such comment.

Section 20 reads, "The Inspector of Theatres may, in his discretion, refuse to grant, or may revoke for cause, or suspend any license issued under this act, but any such decision of the Inspector shall be subject to appeal to the Treasurer of Ontario." And Section 21 says, "An operator or apprentice may appeal from any decision of the Inspector to an Appeal Board appointed by the Treasurer of Ontario."

Inasmuch as this same act, in another division entitled "Definitions," says (paragraph h), "Projectionist shall mean any person operating a motion picture projector," I am unable to see just where the "operator" comes in, in Section 21. To be consistent, a law should not contradict itself. Also, it is stated that the "operator" may appeal to the "Treasurer," and in the next breath says he may appeal to an Appeal Board. Turning to "Definitions" we find (paragraph f), "Motion Picture Projector" shall mean any type of machine adaptable for the projection of motion pictures. Paragraph h says, "Projectionist shall mean any person operating a motion picture projector." Paragraph i says, "Reel shall mean motion picture film not exceeding one thousand feet linear feet in length." It is also specified that "standard film" shall mean any film 35 millimeters or more in width.

Paragraph f is perfect, or so it seems to me. I would have worded Paragraph

Inspiring Lines

In the city of Portland, Ore., I met F. K. Haskell, a news correspondent to the Herald-World. Mr. Haskell is not a projectionist of motion pictures, but if what you read below is a sample of his work, and I believe it is, he certainly is able to project inspiring things into cold type. I wish I knew whether Friend Haskell did or did not write these lines. In any event, I thank him for enabling me to lay them before you:

THE MAN WHO LOVES HIS JOB

Are you trying to climb where the chosen are, where the cost of entry is few? Do you long for a "job that is worth one's while"?

Well, here's a thought for you:

The pots of gold at the Rainbow's End
Are sought by a teeming mob;
But the fairies who guard them choose as Friend
The man who loves his job.

It isn't the kick, it's not the pull
That brings the strong man out;
But it's the long-time work, and it's all-time will,
And a cheerful heart and stout!

Have you faith in yourself? Do you want to win?
Is your heart for success afloat?
There's just one thing that can bring you in,
With the winners: Love your job!

h to read, Projectionist shall mean any person engaged professionally in the projection of motion pictures. Paragraph i is incorrect. A "reel" is commonly understood to be the metal spool upon which the film is carried. What is apparently meant is a reel of film, and that may mean 1,000, 2,000 or even 3,000 feet. As to the latter item referred to, there are right now three or four widths of film being used in theatres. The wording of this clause is such that most any width of film is regarded as standard, whereas actually the standard commercial film is, and will always be, of one width.

Section 27, dealing with projection room construction, reads:

(a) The projection room shall be constructed of fire resistant material, such as hobnail tile, cement, or brick, and shall be not less than sixteen feet in width, twelve feet in depth and ten feet in height. There shall be an adjoining fire-proof rewind room, not less than six feet in width by eight feet in depth, with emergency exit therefrom. All doors to be fire doors, to open outward and to be equipped with check springs and shall not be fastened during a performance. All observation or port hole openings to be protected with automatic self-closing shutters of not less than one-eighth inch steel. The shutters to be controlled with fusible links and to be installed in such manner that they can be lowered individually as well as collectively. There shall also be provided a master release cord controlling the releasing of all port hole drops; such release cord to be situated immediately adjacent to the entrance doorway.

(b) Projection room shall be provided with overhead ventilators or ducts at least eighteen inches in diameter; and rewind room with ventilators or ducts at least nine inches in diameter. These ventilators to be equipped with automatic devices to insure their opening in case of fire.

(c) There shall be provided toilet conveniences adjacent to every projection room and such facilities shall include a lavatory bowl, as well as a wash-basin with running water.

(d) Where battery or generator rooms are provided they shall be of such size as may be determined reasonable by the inspector and shall be ventilated to the open air.

This is all good, save for some ambiguous wording. Section (a) says, "such release cord to be situated immediately adjacent to the entrance doorway." Presumably what is meant is that the releasing end of such cord shall be located immediately adjacent to the entrance doorway. The whole cord could not be thus located and serve its purpose.

Provisions for ventilation ducts are good insofar as concerns the projection room, but the rewind room vents should be of equal size. Vent ducts serve a most important function in ventilation, of course, but they also serve an equally important function in carrying away gas and smoke when a fire occurs, if ever one does. (I respectfully refer Ontario officers to pp. 317, 318 and 319, of Vol. 1, Bluebook of Projection, for further data on this subject.)

As to paragraph (d), I would have suggested a minimum of size, perhaps, but after all, from the official viewpoint, since no danger to the audience is involved, it is the exhibitor's own business if he wants to burn up his motor or generator by overheating. Paragraph (c) is excellent.

Paragraph (a) of section 41, reads, "All types of equipment adaptable for the projection of motion pictures, or for the reproduction of sound with motion pictures in theatres, or for furnishing sources of illumination or heating, when under the direct supervision of a higher grade projectionist, shall be installed to the satisfaction of the inspector."

That is excellent insofar as concerns its real meaning, but I would have worded it thus: Each and every item of apparatus or equipment intended for use in motion picture projection work or in sound reproduction apparatus, shall be installed to the satisfaction of the Inspector, and shall not be used until such installation has received his official approval in writing.

Paragraph (e) reads:

(e) "Three one-half gallon, carbon tetrachloride pump gun type, fire extinguishers, and four one-quart carbon tetrachloride pump gun type fire extinguishers, shall be at all times kept in good working order, and available for use in the projection room."

Now my own idea is to remove the smoke and gas as fast as it forms, and let 'er burn! If the projection room is rightly built and has proper vents, with fans able to remove all smoke and gases as fast as formed, the audience will not even know there is a fire raging.

And now we come to the section entitled "Projectists," which, I understand, kicked up quite a lively scrap. Many of the projectionists objected strenuously to the re-examination clause, which they readily foresaw would compel them to get busy, study and keep right up-to-date. While it will consume considerable space, I present it in full:

42. Wherein issued shall be showed a standard, size are to be shown, either in public or private, the motion picture projector, shall be in charge of a licensed projectionist.

43. Projectionist licenses shall be issued in four grades designated grades "A," "B," "C," or "D."

44. Every applicant for a grade "A," "B," or "C" projectionist's license shall submit to such examination as may from time to time be appointed by the inspector, and the inspector may from time to time notify any projectionist to appear for re-examination.

45. Grade "A," "B," or "C" projectionists upon passing the examination shall be issued a license as soon as practicable, and the license issued shall be graded according to the applicants knowledge of motion picture projection and ability to handle all necessary equipment, as determined by the examination.
screen which may be installed; to also install and care for ordinary replacement parts of synchronous sound equipment, such as the lights, fuses, etc., and to give a demonstration of his ability to use both disc and track systems of sound reproduction with perfect synchronization of sound and pictures. He shall also secure a mark of at least eighty per cent for a written examination covering the operation and care of projection equipment; the operation and care of synchronous sound equipment; the care and hazards of motion picture film; questions on electric current and electrical devices used in theatres; questions pertaining to condensing and projection lenses; and questions relating to the proper care of the projection and sound equipment and the preventing of fire hazards.

52. Any applicant who fails to secure the necessary percentages to warrant the issuing of a higher grade projectionist license shall not be eligible for re-examination until he has completed a further course of instructions of at least three months.

53.—(a) In every theatre where there is more than one motion picture projector installed, there shall be two licensed projectionists employed, according to the following schedule:

(b) In any theatre where the seating capacity is 1,750 or more two grade "A" projectionists shall be employed.

(c) In any theatre where the seating capacity is more than 1,000 and less than 1,750 a grade "A" and "B" projectionist shall be employed.

(d) In any theatre where the seating capacity is more than 750 and less than 1,000 a grade "B" and "C" projectionist shall be employed.

(e) In any theatre where the seating capacity is less than 750 a grade "C" and "D" projectionist shall be employed unless synchronous sound equipment is installed, when a grade "B" and "D" projectionist shall be employed.

(f) Provided that the licensee of any theatre may employ, if he so desires, a higher grade projectionist than is called for according to the schedule stipulated in this section.

54. Where in any theatre projectionists of different grades are employed, the higher grade projectionist shall have complete charge of the projection room, including all equipment therein. In all other cases each projectionist shall have control of the equipment under his care and both shall be equally responsible for the proper operation and care of the equipment and projection room.

55. In these regulations "Projection Room" shall mean and include the room where projection equipment is installed, battery room, rewind room, generator room, toilet room and any other room in which projection or sound equipment or apparatus is installed and which is directly connected with or adjacent to the room housing the projector equipment.

56. The projectionist shall not:

(1) Smoke or permit smoking in the projection room at any time.

(2) Read or have reading material other than licenses and regulations in the projection room.

(3) Permit an unlicensed person other than the manager or an authorized official to be or remain in the projection room while an audience is in the building.

(4) Permit film to remain exposed in the projection room at any time.

(5) Allow films to be rewound in the room housing the projectors.

(6) Permit over-fusing or make improper electrical connections.

INTERFERING NOISE FROM POORLY CONSTRUCTED STAGE EQUIPMENT BREEDS DISSATISFACTION

GET right down to the real facts. Pictures can be presented to their finest possibilities only when the stage mechanical equipment is designed and operated in proper relation to other equipment.

All eyes are focused on the stage. A mishap dare not happen—the curtains must work quickly, smoothly and accurately—the curtain track must be absolutely noiseless—the curtain controls and the curtain modifier must respond instantly to the operator's demands.

That's the kind of equipment Vallen builds—equipment that presents pictures absolutely perfect, without noise or distraction and creates an atmosphere of glamour and distinction that satisfies to the fullest extent the desires of critical theatre-goers.

Vallen theatrical equipment has been used for fifteen years, without one complaint, in the world's leading theatres which is abundant proof that Vallen equipment can improve any presentation and is unaffected by the industry's changes.
(7) Loan his projectionist license to any person.
(8) Fail to produce on demand by proper officials, projectionist license where motion picture apparatus is being used.
(9) Fail to make copies of apparatus and connections prior to each performance.
(10) Fail to inspect and repair all films as exhibited.
(11) Operate or permit to be operated defective projection or sound equipment.
(12) Maintain a dirty projection room.
(13) Keep doors on inside, remain handle from outside of doors, or otherwise delay access of authorized persons.
(14) Fail to report promptly to the department the occurrence of any film fire, and the apparent cause thereof.
(15) Set形成ing film.
(16) Display films without bands or stamps of the Board of Censors of Motion Pictures.
(17) Use defective or overloaded reels.
(18) Permit hole drops to be in a defective condition.
(19) Fail to test the working of all port hole drops daily.
(20) Fail to have fire extinguishers in good working order.

57. Any projectionist who shall operate or cause to be operated, a projection machine or sound equipment device which is not in a state of readiness with the regulations, shall be deemed to have contravened the Act.

58. Every projectionist shall examine his projection machine and sound equipment daily, and must devote his whole attention to see that it remains at the projector while it is in operation.

59. He shall not permit any person to enter or remain in the projection room during a performance, except a provincial or municipal police officer, the manager, the local fire chief, or the inspector appointed under the Act.

60. No projectionist shall operate a motion picture projector while under the influence of liquor.

61. Any exhibitor permitting a projectionist to operate a motion picture projector while the projectionist is under the influence of liquor, or permitting a projectionist to violate the provisions of the Act or regulations, shall be guilty of an offence under the Act.

62. Any person who permits any film to travel through the projector at a greater speed than is required feet to the minute, shall be guilty of an offence under the Act.

62.—(a) Films shall be rewound or revised only in the rewind room constructed for the purpose, and films shall be not be exposed at anytime except films being transferred to or from the projection machine or the reel being rewound or revised, and all spare reels of film shall be kept in a fire resistant container which shall have separate individual compartments, the lid of which shall be secured.

(b) All extra films such as leaders, trailers or announcements, shall be kept in fire resistant containers.

Gentlemen, one of the opinion that the grading of projectionists according to their ability and knowledge represents a very distinct advancement. I also am of the opinion that such grading should be done by the licensing authorities, but only by a board thoroughly competent to judge to the results of the examination it makes. Such a board must, in the very nature of things, be in part composed of projectionists.

I am further of the opinion that projectionists should be subject to re-examination, but at stated periods rather than by the call of an official. I would say that a re-examination every second year would not be too much. No man who really proposes to keep up to date and fully equipped with knowledge of his profession will object

It seems to me to be ridiculous to the point of absurdity to examine a projectionist, issue him a "card" declaring him to be qualified, and to review that card year after year without further examination, regardless of the fact that projection processes and equipment have been changed until the original examination hardly applies at all. And this has been done year after year throughout the whole country, regardless of the well known fact that many men make little or no effort to do more that acquire sufficient advancement to enable them to go through the motions of projection with the newer apparatus, securing sufficiently good results to enable them to "get by" and hold their jobs, but without ability to judge as to the degree of efficiency and economy with which they are doing the work.

As to the matters of grading and re-examination, I invite our readers to set forth their views. I am sure we shall all be glad to have them, with the understanding, however, that those opposed must confine their remarks to the setting forth of their reasons for objection. I am sure even the Ontario government will be glad to consider reasonable arguments, either for or against.

In the matter of Ontario objectors, names will be held confidential (not to be published) if that request is made.

There are many other items I might speak of in this act, but the important ones have been dealt with, and space is at a premium.

I would suggest, however, that inasmuch as the motion picture is now the main staff of amusement of nine-tenths of the people, and since excellence in projection is of large importance in the matter of giving the greatest value to the people for the money paid in at the box offices, it would seem wise for the Canadian government to cause a meeting of representatives of the provinces to be held for the purposes of discussing the various laws, rules and regulations that are in force in each, to the end that the best items of each be made available to all.

I know that British Columbia has some mighty good things. So has Ontario, Alberta and, I presume, each of the others. Why not get together and trade the best of these ideas?

For example, paragraph (10) of section 18 of the Ontario law. To this I vigorously object. Why should the projectionist do film exchange inspectors work without pay. Such a rule would have the direct effect of making many exchanges more or less careless. As soon as they discovered the fact that the projectionist followed that rule—well, they might pretty nearly abandon film inspection and repairs entirely. Why pay out money to have it done when the projectionist will do it for nothing? Huzzah, and likewise hallelujah! I would suggest that Ontario examine the plan of British Columbia in the matter of keeping films sent to theatres in good condition.

I have felt obliged to point out certain things which might be improved in the Ontario act, and now if Canadian provinces, or state and city authorities of my own country, will send me to me a copy of laws dealing with projectors which it is proposed to submit for enactment, I should be glad to comment on them also and respectfully offer whatever suggestions my experience tells me would improve the regulations.

IS EXTREME SCREEN BRILLIANCE one, provided smallness be not carried to unreasonable extremes of course.

However, I am now in very serious doubt concerning the wisdom of extreme screen brilliancy. During the past few years I have found that very often after viewing a motion picture for a half-hour or so, my eyes smart, often so badly that they must be kept closed for a time. I assumed this to be due to some weakness in them. Recently, however, it was found that the "Little Fockers" and "Proud Daughter" were treating her the same way, whereupon I began to sit up and take notice, soon discovering that this effect only appeared when we were viewing a very brightly illuminated screen. It also was found that others had had much the same experience. I purposely visited theatres in which the screen was not so brilliant, and there no such effect or trouble appeared, all of which has set up in my mind a very decided opinion that maybe we are carrying screen illumination too far in the matter of brightness, which view has strengthened by further investigation.

Whether or no I am correct in this matter, it must be to no, to receive very careful consideration, for the reason that if I am right, then the effect would inevitably be to cause men and women who experienced the results as above set forth to attend the theatre less often. That would, it appears, be rather inevitable. And secondly, such a condition would mean needless abuse of the eyes of audiences, which could hardly fail to result, in time, in a permanent injury to human eyesight.

That last may seem a bit overdrawn, but I think it is not, remembering that fully nine-tenths of the great mass of people attend motion picture theatres more or less regularly. In our cities a large proportion of the theatre screens are very bright, for which I accept my share of blame, if blame attaches, because I have consistently and honestly advocated bright screens. In considering this matter it must be remembered that the theatre patron gazes steadfastly at the screen for long intervals of time, during which time there is no rest whatsoever for the eyes. The strain therefore must be considerable in any event.

After considering this matter for some while I have come to the conclusion that the effect of screen brightness upon the human eye should be very carefully investigated, and surely the logical body to do that is the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. So far as I am aware, this matter has never had any official examination, though the Society did make some investigation of screen brightness some years ago.

I would, of course, not presume to tell the Society how such a matter ought to be handled, but certainly there can be neither harm nor impropriety in setting forth my own views for consideration. Were I president of the Society, and I believed such an investigation to be warranted, I would proceed about as follows:

I would select a list of, say, six deluxe theatres having high screen brilliancy, in six different cities, making suitable arrangements with the managers of those theatres for the test. I would then ask the manager of each theatre to send me the names and addresses of 20 of his regular patrons, from which I would select ten names, half men and half women, to each of whom I would send a pass, secured from the manager, to that theatre, good for any one night in the run of any one production, together with a stamped envelope addressed either to the Society president, or to the chairman of a committee appointed by him, together with a printed slip:

"Dear Sir or Madam: You are respectfully requested by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to attend this theatre as a guest of the management, and immediately thereafter to fill out the attached blank. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers is endeavoring to determine whether or not brilliant lighting of motion picture screens is uncomfortable or injurious to the human eye. The management of the theatre you are invited to attend is also anxious to know. Will you therefore be good enough to accept this invitation, sit through the entire show and (in the blank lines below) tell us whether or not your eyes were put to any strain or made to feel in any way uncomfortable during the showing of the picture. If your eyes did feel uncomfortable, kindly tell us as nearly as possible just what was the nature of the discomfort."

DEPENDABLE OPERATION

Projection arcs of continuous unvarying brilliancy are assured by the use of Roth Acto- detectors. They provide a dependable, safe and economical source of direct current power, which is supplied at the proper voltage required for the most satisfactory operation of projection arcs—particularly in sound and color installations . . . Furnished in both 2-bearing and 4-bearing types—Various sizes from 20 to 400 ampere capacity—Standard voltages of 70, 75, 85 and 100 volts.

The foregoing would be followed by blank space in which the person could make a report.

There are many ways in which this same thing might be carried out, but it would seem to me that a report made after this fashion would have certain advantages. First, assuming all those invited accepted, as they most likely would, it would give 60 totally unrelated reports from people selected literally from the mass of theatregoers. Such a report would, or should, be entirely unbiased.

If a very large percentage of the answers indicated no undue eye strain or uncomfortableness, then we might reasonably suppose my observation to be in error, and that no abuse of the eyes occurs. If, on the other hand, the reports seemed to show that there was at least considerable eyestrain, arrangements might be made with the same theatres to run one production with substantially reduced screen brilliancy, with the same procedure as to committee (or theatres using a lower screen brilliancy might be selected).

If this resulted in reports of no eye discomfort, then we might assume that the brilliancy of the first screens tested was too high, and that of the last ones, either correct or too low, whereupon it would be an easy matter by other tests to arrive at the exact screen brilliancy most desirable.

NEW CUE-METER

I HAVE delayed describing the new cue-meter invented by James J. Graham, and now being put out by the Theatre Engineering Service Company of Hollywood, for the reason that I wanted this particular thing to be set before you by its inventor.

While in the West last summer I saw a good many of these instruments in use in various theatres. In every instance the report of the projectionist was very favorable. I shall now let the inventor tell you in his own words just what it is, and how it works.

"The cue-meter is an indicating device which is driven by the projector. It indicates the number of feet of film passing through the projector. It was developed to enable the projectionist to make perfect changeovers without in any way marking or mutilating the film."

"With the advent of sound, the cue-meter describing the action of the last scene became inadequate in many instances, because a great number of productions contained long scenes with a lot of dialog and not much action. The producers depend on the dialog to put the story over, and to get the full effect it was necessary that the projectionist allow every word of the dialog to reach the horns before making the change. If the changeover was made too soon, some of the important dialog was lost, and if made too late, there was usually a blank screen for several seconds while the projectionist was waiting for the incoming projector to get up to normal speed.

"To prevent the above from occurring, it became almost necessary for the projectionist to revert to the methods in vogue several years ago for cueing the picture; namely, punch-marking or otherwise preparing the film so that it gave a visual indication on the screen when it was projected. This method, while it helped the sound, worked havoc with both the film and the picture, especially when there were several marks on the film, placed there by various projectionists whose equipment had different starting characteristics.

"The cue-meter was conceived and built upon the criticisms of the bulky and lengthy, old-fashioned cue-sheet—and of the punch-marked film, prolific parents of many errors and much poor projection. Its operation is based on the length of film being projected. It is simplicity itself.

"The film, before being projected, is run through a film-measuring machine, and the exact length between the starting mark and changeover is noted. Then when this film is threaded into the projector, the hands of the cue-meter are set to indicate the footage, as before noted. When the projector is started, the meter subtracts one unit from the total for each foot of film run through the projector. In this manner the cue-meter always indicates, at any instant of time, the exact number of feet of film from the aperture to the point where it is desired to make the changeover.

"For instance, if a particular reel of film contains 1,825 feet of film from the starting mark to the changeover, the projectionist, upon threading this reel, sets the small hand of the cue-meter to division 18 on the inner scale, then moves the division to 25 on the outer scale. The meter runs 'backward' while the projector is in operation and indi-
A SMALL town projectionist in Vermont writes very interestingly as follows:

"Friend Richardson: After reading what Francis E. Hersey has to say in "Better Theatres of September 27, with regards to the Projection-Operator title, I am tempted to air my views on several matters. I believe that, while men of real ability, coupled with the necessary amount of common sense, in projection matters, should be called projectionists, the others should be called something besides machine operators. I do not know what their title should be, but certainly it should not be projectionist.

"Friend Hersey said: 'It is not reasonable to expect men who give knowledge, skill and energy worth $50 a week for from 18 to 20 dollars.' I can not agree with Hersey in that. It depends on large measure on the men involved, the kind of theatre and its location. I am not, myself, receiving $18 a week for my labors as projectionist, working six nights a week and two shows Saturday. I will not tell you what I receive, as it would no doubt shock you. But do I neglect my work and get slack because I cannot make the boss see things my way? I do not, because I take pride in my work, and there is nothing in this wide world I would rather do than to project motion pictures as they should be projected. Also, I believe that better projection pays, and if I can make the box office receipts go up, I then will be justified in asking for a raise. Moreover, I will stand a good chance of getting it.

"I am one of the many who work as a projectionist at night after the day's work is done, and when a man will get up at five a.m. [These are a good slant at this, you six-hour-a-day men!—F. H. R.] walk two miles to work, work all day, walk two miles back home, stow away a supper, change his clothes and go down to the theatre 1½ hours before show time in order to get the equipment and films and all other things pertaining to projection ready, project the evening show and go home at 10:30 or 11 p.m., tired out as thoroughly as anyone well can be, I think it may be said that he does for something more than a little extra money, especially when the pay is far below $18 a week.

"I have no doubt that a lot of fellow projectionists who read this letter will say that I am only a small town hick who is getting by. All right, they do not worry me a bit. When I get so I cannot run a show shipshape, I will quit. One of the great faults in employing men in the projection room, as I see it, is taking them in too young. I know a theatre near our town that employs a young fellow 15 years of age, yet I will say this boy takes more interest in projection matters than does the chief projectionist over him.

"We have two Powers 6B projectors, equipped with incandescent light sources. Our sound, on the film only, is Western Electric. It was installed the first week in September, and I am very proud of it. I honestly believe projection in our theatre is very much better than that in any of the other small towns—yes, and in some larger towns, too.

"I have the Bluebook (fifth edition). It is my rock of knowledge. It has saved me from making many mistakes and has paid for itself a hundred times over. We all thank you for that book, Richardson, and for the department, too."

Now what may I say to a man who writes thus? I do not know the population of this place, but it must be a small town, and while small towns cannot possibly be judged by the standards of cities, still it does seem as though in this day and age, any theatre in any town which operates six nights a week, and more on Saturday and Sunday, ought to be able to pay at least $18 per week. It's mighty little a man can purchase for that small sum. However, leaving the question of wages aside, we cannot but feel kindly towards, and commend, a man who writes as does this chap. His ideas of wages may need considerable revising, but nevertheless, laying that aside, it is men of his caliber who should have encourage-

AMBITIOUS

A

AN interesting letter has come from
W. L. Stratton, projectionist at the American theatre, Macay, Idaho. In part Friend Stratton says:

"This is my first letter, though I have been a member of the projection department for quite some while. Have been projecting shadows to the screen for six years past, and I have enjoyed the work immensely. In spite of the fact that this is a small town, I have tried to put the best possible picture on the screen. I have all three volumes on the Bluebook.
The first two have helped me a great deal in my work. The third, I think, will, because although the theatre is still a silent house, we expect to have sound soon. I have been preparing for it, studying everything I can get hold of that deals with the subject. I have been studying radio and television ever since they came out. I am having some little difficulty in trying to explain to our manager certain things about screen illumination.

"We are using two Simplex projectors, with regular Simplex Mazda equipment.
The screen is 14 feet wide, the projection distance is 90 feet. You may see therefore that I have not enough light to produce a very brilliant picture. I have tried to tell the manager that reflector type arc lights would more than double our present screen illumination. He thinks I am wrong. What is your own idea of this?

"I like the work of projection so well that although the salary is very small, I have remained in it for six years. I have studied the Bluebook continually, always hoping I might finally get into a larger town where they run afternoon and evening shows. Have written several locals about it, but they have not replied. I like the department very much and get good ideas from it.

"That is the whole idea of publishing the department, Friend Stratton so that the projectionist may get ideas of real value from it.)

The unions have not replied to the letters for the reason that there are thousands of other small town projectionists who have exactly the same idea. They want to get into a bigger town, where there is better pay. Naturally, almost all these larger towns have as many as, or more men than, there are jobs for—and there you are!
Ha! The Holly Days

Holly hangs high on many a theatre front from "rock-bound shores to sunny climes." That transforming gayety is the result of hours of stepladder-work. Dangerous, fear-filled hours they've been for some, who've tried to work from old-style ladders bound to slip on winter's slide-quick pavements. But comfortable hours for others, those wise workers who've done it faster, better, and much more sensibly from Dayton Safety Ladders.

Holly-hanging is just one of the jobs around the theatre which Daytons make easier.

Type "B" Dayton Ladder is a smaller, popular-priced, all-purpose aid to ladder safety. Seven sizes.

As to the question concerning light. Stratton is perfectly right, insofar as the effect goes. I do not at the moment remember just what the foot-candle measurements of screen illumination by Mazda and by reflector type lamps are. However, there is a very large difference in reflector type lamp illumination. It depends on the number of amperes used, and also on a number of other things. I am quite sure, however, that whatever the foot-candle measurements may be, the effect upon the eyes of the audience of, say, 20 amperes from a reflector lamp, would be more than double that of Mazda in the matter of brightness. The Mazda light is quite yellow, hence does not have the appearance of being very bright. On the other hand, the reflector type lamp produces a very brilliant, almost dead-white light. Providing one has a good screen surface, one should be able to illuminate the screen quite brilliantly when using 12 amperes of current with a reflector type lamp.

As to Patents

FROM my old friend, Epes Winthrop Sargent, now connected with Zit's Theatrical Weekly, comes this note:

"Dear F. H.: Just been glancing over your stuff in the last HERALD-WORLD. Note that you therein advise would-be inventors to have a search made at the patent office, at a cost of $100 and up. It is quite true that things have changed considerably since the days when I worked for a patent attorney and had to chase up to the patent office many times a day, but the big fact still is that a cheaper way than you suggest is to employ an attorney, have him prepare the papers and apply for a patent. This should not cost more than $50 (first step only), and then the examiners will, in due course, themselves make the search and notify the inventor's attorney of any 'interference' which may appear. This permits him to either withdraw his application, or to make such modifications as will permit a patent to be issued. Very often, however, there would be interference from patents pending, which would not be made apparent by any search."

I wish to thank Friend Sargent very cordially for his well intended criticism. I give it space because it has real value. However, I think he did not quite get his main idea. What I had in mind when I wrote that article was not an application for a patent, but the advising of men to find out before they start trying to invent a certain thing, what has already been done along the same lines.

Some years ago I conceived an idea for an absolutely non-glare automobile headlight. This idea was thoroughly tested. It worked so perfectly, even in the crude model that I was immediately given assurance of all the capital required.

However, before proceeding, the men of wealth very naturally had a thorough search made at the patent office. This particular search cost something like $700. It revealed the fact that the basic principle upon which the thing rested had been patented years ago, though not for an automobile headlight. This, of course, meant that no basic patent could be secured, and since very expensive tools would be necessary to start production, the whole matter was, of course, immediately dropped.

A Projectionist's Gratitude

IN writing of another matter, Thayer W. North, chief projectionist at the State theatre, Bogalusa, La., sets forth the following:

"I have an employer of whom I am rather proud, because he has cleaned up over $125,000 through this theatre, and that in a town of 8,000 people.

"When sound first came out, we were unable to get delivery on Western Electric equipment. In order to give the people of this city sound, Mr. Berenson, owner of the State theatre, put in a cheaper reproducing outfit, and we had an awful lot of trouble with it because service could only be had through New York City. As soon as possible this equipment was discarded and Western Electric was installed. Next, he had the house acoustically treated to perfect the sound. We have two new Simplex projectors, with Peerless lamps. The Western Electric equipment is type UX3.

"Mr. Berenson buys only the best possible for the projection room. Moreover, he gets anything within reason that I may ask for. I am not writing this in order to 'curry favor' with my employer, but for the reason that I believe the man who is fair with the projectionist ought to get credit for being so. There are plenty who are not!"

"We are rather proud of our theatre and its projection installment. The sound installation alone cost between eight and ten thousand dollars, and it cost the theatre $20 a week for service on the sound equipment."
QUESTION: I am contemplating the erection of a new movie house and have made several trips to large cities to see exhibits of new houses to see which type would suit me best. I have seen a number of atmospheric houses and am rather inclined to build that type, but the question often occurs in my mind whether it would be a wise thing to do, as sometimes I think that the type of atmospheric house is not going to last on account of its novelty, and as soon as that is worn off they might become tiresome. Do you think that a classical designed theatre would be a better proposition and would be more lasting and not become tiresome to the spectator? I would like to know whether there is a great deal of difference between the cost of atmospheric and classical designed theatres.

I trust that in the next issue of BETTER THEATRES you will publish the answer to my question as I am very anxious to make up my mind, as I want to take advantage of the existing low building costs.—M. D. C.

ANSWER: There is a great deal of difference in opinions regarding atmospheric and classical designed theatres, as you call them, and it is really up to the individual's taste to select the type he likes the best. Personally, I believe that a "classical" design has more architectural value.

The trend of designing atmospheric houses is mostly toward novelty, and to create a new type of theatre, as the American public is always inclined to something different, and further, it is the belief that the atmosphere created by its design has to have as much recreational value as the picture itself. The viewpoint of several showmen is that it takes away a lot of criticism of pictures which do not come up to the standard, as there are other things about the theatre to attract the attention of the public and increase the prestige of motion picture entertainment.

It was the architect, John Eberston, who several years ago created this type of theatre, and to him most credit is due for the development of that type. I believe that his class has been copied more than any other design in theatre work.

As regards the life of the atmospheric theatre, by which I understand you to mean the period of time it will take to outlive its novelty, I do not fear that it will be short-lived, as it is so easy to change the atmosphere by changing statues and light effects, etc., while the classically designed house is always practically the same, unless the house is entirely redecorated. The classical design is good for any type of house, but for movie theatres with a patronage expecting a 100 cent show for 50 cents, I think the atmospheric type has certain advantages.

If you cannot make up your mind as to whether the atmospheric and classical types of theatres, you can resort to a semi-atmospheric type, which is a combination of atmospheric and classical design.

As far as the cost is concerned, the elaborately designed atmospheric house costs a great deal of money, but this can also be said of the elaborately designed classical house. If you consider a simple type of either one, the cost will be practically the same, with the exception that the electric wiring and light effects are considerably more expensive in an atmospheric theatre than in one of classical type.

NOTE:
- IN THIS DEPARTMENT "Better Theatres" will be glad to answer questions pertaining to the preliminary considerations involved in the planning of a new theatre or in the remodeling of an existing one. Only requests for ideas will be answered, since this department cannot assume the practical functions of an architect. Always remit enclosing, this department should be addressed to "Better Theatres," 407 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago. They will be answered in the department. None will be answered by mail. Although only initials will be used in signing the questions published, it is a requirement that all letters bear the signature and address of their writers. The replies will be prepared personally by Mr. Hulken, who is a practicing architect and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

QUESTION: Will you kindly estimate for me the approximate cost of building and furnishing a little theatre, seating 500 downstairs and 100 in loges.

Assume that this theatre is to have spacious lounges and with most of the accouterments of the modern playhouse. Of course, it is to be designed and furnished in the very best taste, the sort of thing that will appeal to the "upper strata."

Naturally, I do not expect that you are going to come within $5,000 of what it would actually cost, since the information given is that the exterior. But I would like to know within, say, $20,000, how cheaply such a project could be done.

Hoping to read the answer in the next issue of BETTER THEATRES.—H. S.

ANSWER: Your question is by no means an easy one to answer, as you really did not give me enough data to base my estimate on, and you know there is unlimited difference in cost between a theatre economically constructed and equipped, and the most elaborately finished theatre building, so I will base my estimate upon the medium between the two extremes.

I base my estimate upon the proposition that your building will be strictly a theatre building without any commercial features, such as stores and office rooms. I also base my figure on the assumption that the exterior of the building is to be carried out in a classical design, executed either in terra cotta or stone; the lobby to be carried out with marble floor and wainscoting; the foyer and auditorium to be designed, say, some period style, like Louis XVI, and that the theatre will have a stage with complete equipment.

Of course, the building to be absolutely fireproof and the best of materials are to be used, and an air conditioning system is to be installed. Such a theatre as I am describing could be constructed and equipped for the amount of $125,000. This theatre would have a formal and dignified character and would appeal to people with refined tastes.

usually exercise under similar circumstances, care commensurate with the circumstances.”

NECESSITY OF INSPECTION

As previously stated the proprietor of a theatre or other place of amusement is bound to exercise care and make frequent inspections of the appliances likely to cause injury to patrons. Moreover, it has been held that inspections of old or second-hand equipment should be be made more frequently than of new.

For example, in Southern Amusement Corporation v. Summers (152 So. 489), a patron of an amusement company was injured as a result of defective equipment. He sued the amusement company for damages and proved that the equipment which caused the injury was second-hand. In holding the patron entitled to recover the court said:

“The plaintiff (injured patron) was entitled to show the kind and character of the machinery used in the device, how long it has been used, and all about it. . . . It may even be said that, as a matter of common knowledge, second-hand or used machinery requires more careful inspection to keep it in order than does machinery of the same character when it is new.”

LIABILITY OF LEGAL POSSESSOR

While it is true that a theatre owner is liable for injuries negligently caused persons who are rightfully on the premises, yet if another person or company has legal possession of the theatre premises when the accident occurs, the theatre owner is relieved of liability.

For illustration, in Mapp v. Saenger Theatres (40 F. 2d 19), a theatre company gave permission to the Hamasa Temple to install certain chairs and the like on the stage. A person who came into the theatre fell through a trap door, which was left open by employees of the Hamasa Temple. He sued the theatre company for damages. However, since the latter was not in possession of the stage when the accident happened, the court held the theatre company not liable, saying:

“...The duty of the occupant of premises to an invitee is to use reasonable care to make them reasonably safe for passage. . . . Was the Plaza Amusement Company in possession and occupancy of the stage so as to be responsible to Intestate for the open trap door through which he fell? . . . The operation of moving the trap door was exclusively being done by Hamasa Temple, and the opening and closing of the trap door was its exclusive function during the continuance of its possession and operation. . . . The accident was due not to a defect in the building, the trap door was not a defect, when closed, and, properly guarded, no more so when open. The method of doing the work was the negligent thing, and this was the act and responsibility of Hamasa Temple alone.”

LIABILITY FOR MANAGER’S ACT

It is quite generally held by the higher courts that where a theatre owner puts the management of his business in the hands of his agent, the owner is responsible for the acts of the manager committed within the scope of employment, and in furtherance of the business. This law is applicable, although the act was committed through lack of discretion, or judgment, or loss of temper occasioned by the circumstances of the occasion. Therefore, if an indis creet or incompetent agent or one of violent temperament is employed, the principal may become liable.

In other words, a theatre owner is liable to patrons for frauds, deceits, concealments, misrepresentations, torts, negligences and other misfeasances and omissions of duty committed by his manager in the course of his employment, although the owner did not authorize, justify, participate in, or, indeed, know of, such misconduct, or even if he forbade them, or disapproved of them. This rule is founded on public policy and convenience, and in no other way could there be any safety to third persons in their dealings, either directly with the principals, or indirectly with them, through persons employed to manage or conduct the business. Obviously, however, these established rules of the law do not apply to common employees such as ushers, cleaners, picture machine operators, or other persons who are employed to perform specific duties not related to, or connected with, the injury upon which a suit against a theatre owner is based.

The latest case involving an injury to a patron inflicted by a manager is Nee v. Columbia Theatre Co. (277 N.Y. 554). In this case the testimony proved that the manager had struck a patron while arguing over money which the manager claimed was due his employer. The injured patron sued for $7,500.

It was contended by the proprietor that the manager was not acting within the scope of his authority or duties when he committed the assault. It was pointed out that he had no power or authority, and it was no part of his duties to make collections. He occupied the position of a vice principal in the control of the employes under his general charge. Therefore the higher court upheld the jury’s decision that held the employer liable, saying:

“If they (jury) believed from the evidence that Millman (manager) was the agent of defendant (proprietor) and committed the assault, and that the act was fairly and naturally incident to the business then being performed for his principal, and with a view to further the principal’s interest.”

Manufacturers and distributors are invited to send in their publications immediately upon their issuance for review in this department.

Theatre Supplies
- The 13th edition of the National Theatre Supply Company catalog is, like its predecessors, a veritable encyclopedia of equipment and accessories used in the motion picture theatre.

Brought up to date as to new types of product and prices, the catalog describes all items fully and shows what they look like in well made photographic illustrations. Sizes and prices are given for all products.

Physically, the booklet is attractive, being printed on an enameled paper of medium weight in blue tone ink. There are 23 numbered pages, bound between durable paper covers.

High Intensity Lamps
- A very attractive brochure has just been issued by Hall & Connolly (New York) on its line of high intensity projection lamps. Every type of lamp and spot and their accessories is fully described in text and picture.

Besides the immediate descriptive data, sizes and weights are given, while new developments and models are explained with relation to previous designs of the same product.

Besides being expertly printed on enamel paper of good weight, each page is lined by a typographical device in color (and since we must have booklets, let's have 'em good-looking)! Covers are made of an especially heavy paper.

Rheostats, Meters, Etc.
- A new catalog has just been issued by Hoffmann-Soons, Inc. (New York), on its well known line of rheostats and electrical specialties for motion picture theatres. This edition contains 54 pages of descriptions, photographic reproductions and plates treating of rheostats, ammeters, voltmeters, meter panels, switches, etc., in a most comprehensive manner.

An instructive section consists in five pages of diagrams showing the wiring of Hoffmann-Soons rheostats, corrected for the current designs. The book also gives instructions for determining type of equipment to be coordinated with any present equipment that may be installed in the purchaser's theatre.

The book is built for reference over a long period, being printed on heavy enamel stock and bound flexibly instead of being stitched, so that forthcoming pages on any new developments may be properly inserted according to their respective classifications.

Is Your Theatre Up to Date and Ready for the Future?

Modern Motion Pictures need, for their most successful presentation, a screen of various picture sizes, automatically adjustable by the operator, to effectively portray the outstanding scenes of the picture. This new type of screen control is an absolute necessity for the showing of Magnascope, Grandeur, Spoor and Real-Life films, and will play an even more important role in the film developments of the future.

The PETER CLARK AUTOMATIC SCREEN ADJUSTOR fulfills all the demands of the present Motion Picture and has anticipated the needs of the future.

With over 200 successful installations to their credit, Peter Clark, Inc., are prepared to serve any theatre owner or manager who sees the trend of the times and desires to install a screen that will not only serve for the projection of any of the enlarged picture systems, but will also lend itself to almost instantaneous reduction to standard size pictures projected from 35 mm. film.

NOW that miniature golf has established itself as a pastime not to be denied its summertime popularity in the North merely because winter has come, it is timely to ask in what does the appeal of the indoor game principally consist—in its unique novelty as a game, or in the chance it offers to practice putting.

The answer, a check-up on a number of courses indicates, includes both of these characters, with the qualification that it all depends upon the community in which the course is located. In commercial districts of good-sized towns there is likely to be a rather cosmopolitan patronage made up of those who play golf at country clubs and also those who never have held a golf club in their hands. But even here distinction may be made, as between a course located on an ordinary business street, and one, for example, like that recently established by Miniature Golf Courses, Inc., in the Congress hotel on Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. The general significance of such a distinction lies in the assumption, which can be strongly supported, that the course situated so that its players more or less are not restricted to those having greater advantages in life, is likely to have an appeal emphasized in the chance it offers for putting practice, while the other type of course cited, with few of its patrons addicted to the rather expensive game of golf, quite probably appeals largely as a distinctly new game.

It is not necessary, of course, to point out that such distinctions are not absolute. They scarcely could be. But inquiry among proprietors and patrons of indoor miniature golf courses tends toward the support of these distinctions, and they are offered, not as facts, but as ideas that probably should be borne in mind in determining course layouts and the style of their operation.

Neighborhood districts probably offer more clean-cut distinctions, since residential sections are usually of rather definite character, populated by either what may be called the executive class, or the so-called working class—not, usually, by both. The former class is the one likely to be less interested in mere novelty (at least over a very long period), but it is generally interested in improving its skill at golf, readily avail- ing itself of an opportunity to "practice up" on the regular greens next summer. The "working class" district would probably have little or no such interests and would therefore frequent indoor courses for miniature golf itself.

Assuming this line of reasoning to be correct (merely for sake of offering possible factors that may be worthy of consideration), course layouts that emphasized conditions peculiar to the greens of regular golf, would be the type to install for locations in which patronage would be dominated by members of our so-called executive class—in other words, the golf players, and the converse would be true for the other type of location.

Again it is pointed out that this discussion is not offered as a formula. Formulas in any field are usually liable to sudden explosion by the accumulation of their own exceptions. But in planning an indoor miniature golf establishment, both manufacturers and prospective proprietors must bear in mind certain factors, and those indicated here are offered for the consideration, at least as representing a field for further- investigation.

Soda Fountain Service

In the United States, we have generally left our soda fountains to drug stores, which have more reason to be drug stores as they have invaded the domain once ruled by the candy kitchen. But in other lands, the soda fountain has also met with success in association with motion picture theatres, in direct connection or in a separate establishment adjoining. Particularly is this true in England, indicating that exhibitors over here may, in some cases, be missing a good chance to add to their income by leaving the ice cream business so disproportionately to the modern American "chemist."

The soda fountain as a source of added income for the exhibitor in England was given very interesting treatment in the November 5th issue of the British film trade journal, The Cinema, wherein it was declared that "there is not a cinema, whether a modern palace seating two or three thousand or smaller premises, where profits cannot be increased by adding a catering department."

Installation of soda fountains in connection with British theatres is being resorted to more and more. Indeed, many of the theatres which have been described in BETTER THEATRES during the past year or two have had this interesting feature, while it will be recalled that the Pathé Cinema in Bombay, India, published a few months ago, was similarly equipped in a small room, or "bar," just off the main foyer.

It is obvious, of course, that theatres offer most logical locations for soda fountains. People bent on entertainment usually include some kind of refreshment in their afternoon's or evening's program of pleasure.
The Market for American Motion Picture Equipment in the Far East

[The following is a compilation of reports on the markets in Asia for American motion picture equipment, following a survey conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce. The reports began in the August issue. The survey also included the markets of Africa and Oceania. This material on the Asiatic and African continent is a complete presentation begun in Better Theatres over a year ago, when government reports on similar markets in Europe and South America were published. The compilation of the reports is by Nathan D. Golden, assistant chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce.]

TURKEY (Continued)

German products are popular and have preference. They are generally considered to be of satisfactory quality, of solid construction, and cheap in price. Considering these factors, as well as the fact that they are obtainable at favorable payment terms from local stocks, and that, on the other hand, American generator sets are practically unknown and believed to be too expensive for local requirements, interested parties expressed the opinion that it would be extremely difficult to develop any worthwhile business in American generator sets. At any rate, it would be difficult to induce local dealers in electrical appliances to invest in American generators on a direct purchasing basis. In the event of low prices and liberal credit terms, local agents might possibly induce an interest in American generator sets, but even under such conditions only very small business in the sets may be expected.

Arc lamps and screens.—It is estimated that about 75% of all motion picture theatres in Turkey use mirror-reflector arc lamps. By far the greatest majority, probably 90%, use white linen screens, the other establishments projecting their pictures on the stage wall, which is coated with gypsum.

Visual education.—All matters pertaining to public education are governed by the Ministry of Public Instruction in Angora, which is represented in the various Provinces by directors of public instruction attached to provincial governments.

SYRIA

From a report by J. H. Koole, Jr., Beirut

Projectors.—Until about two years ago practically all of the cinema theatres in Syria used Pathe projectors, but now all the more progressive theatres, which cater to the higher-class clientele, employ a Krupp-Ernemann projector with a Zeiss lens. Only two theatres in Beirut, out of a total of seven, are known to be using Pathe projectors. In Damascus one theatre uses a Krupp-Ernemann and another uses a Pathé machine, while in Aleppo there are two Pathé and one Gaumont machine in use. During the summer only, a motion picture theatre at Aley, a resort in the Lebanon, uses a Gaumont.

The Krupp-Ernemann projectors are sold in Beirut for $500. The usual terms are 25 per cent with order and the balance against documents in Beirut, but shipment against documents has been made. Pathe sells for $521 against shipping documents in Beirut, while the Gaumont machines are shipped on consignment and are offered at $440.

Aside from the requirement that the projection should be clear, steady, and silent, no other quality is required. None of the theatres in operation in the territory under French mandate has more than one projector, which necessitates the almost perfect functioning of the machine in use if interruptions are to be avoided.

The market for projectors being relatively small, there are no dealers in the district specializing in such equipment. Some dealers in optical instruments have been selling a few portable projectors, such as the Pathé Baby. Several of the dealers have also brought in nontheatrical types for sale to local schools and missionary institutions. So far there has been very little demand for projectors for home use. Theatrical types of projectors are not carried in stock, but are handled by commission merchants, who show them to interested parties and book orders therefrom.

It is estimated that there are not more than 25 projectors in the whole territory under French mandate. Five of these are known to be of the latest model, while others are old. American makes of projectors are practically unknown in this market. The American University of Beirut recently bought an American projector, but it is understood to be a nontheatrical type and can not favorably compare with the latest models of German machines now in use in local theatres. With this exception, which does not react favorably to American machines, theatrical types of American projectors have yet to be introduced.

Generators.—All local theatres are already equipped with generator sets to convert alternating current to direct current. Local theatre owners would not consider replacing the sets they are using until they are no longer serviceable. They would then doubtless follow the usual practice of ordering a new set through a commission merchant, and European manufacturers would doubtless get such orders because they are able to deliver with less delay than are Amer-

1. Optical Device for Producing a Plurality of Complementary Images from a Single Object.
   - Apparatus for producing a plurality of complementary images from a single object comprising a right angle prism, a semi-reflecting semi-transparent layer coated upon the hypotenuse of said prism, a second right angle prism cemented to its hypotenuse by the hypotenuse of the first prism, the hypotenuses being arranged parallel to the axial ray of the incident beam, this ray striking the first prism at an angle of 45° reflected on to the hypotenuse and divided into two beams, two further prisms semi-reflecting, semi-transmitting surface layers coated upon adjacent faces to divide each half beam into two, one half of each half beam passing through the said layers and emerging parallel with the axial ray of the incident beam, a totally reflecting surface on one of the prisms parallel to the said layers the other half of each beam being reflected by the said layers and entering the parallel surface from which they are reflected so that they also emerge parallel to the axial ray of the incident beam, to give four images in square formation in the same plane.

SHERMAN.—George W. Spence, who operates the Gem and Washington Theatres, is erecting a new house, with seating capacity of 1,200.

LOUIS ANGELES—center of the motion picture industry and leader in the bazarre, the magnificent and the unusual in motion picture construction, bids for attention from the rest of the United States with the completion of the Los Angeles theatre.

The theatre, the work of Charles Lee, architect, who has designed many local playhouses as well as other buildings, will be opened to the public formally on January 1, 1931, and this opening will mark the world premiere of “City Lights,” Charles Chaplin’s silent product.

The theatre is in the heart of the city, being located on the West side of Broadway near Sixth street. It represents an investment, in total, of more than $2,000,000. It is said to provide, in addition to many innovations and improvements, the present day comforts and conveniences.

The decorative scheme of the entire building, which is modern in motif, folows the French Renaissance in the matter of decoration and equipment. The lighting system blends with the decorations. The work of equipping the theatre is estimated as having cost $500,000.

The seating capacity is 2,500.

Probably the most interesting innovation to be developed by H. J. Gumbiner, the owner, and his guests, is the projection of the identical picture being shown on an oversized screen on miniature screens located in the lounge rooms and nursery.

Gumbliner, also owner of the Tower theatre, will devote his time to operating the modernistic new playhouse. It brings to a culmination dreams of a “perfect theatre” which has been cherished.

Among the outstanding features are the limitation of seats between aisles, there being but six. This does away with the annoyance of late arrivals. There is an exhibition room for objects of art, as well as a mammoth club lounge with a dance floor; a French cosmetic room for women, with cosmetics and maids in uniform; two children, which are playrooms and nurseries and a model cafe.—Edward Churchill.

A Theatre Designed in Local Motifs

WALDRON is a small town in the heart of the southern Arkansas pine belt, and its new motion picture theatre, an addition to the Kemp-Hughes circuit, celebrates the beauty and industry of this region. It is, indeed, called the Pines.

Commenting on the efforts of the owners to create a fine little playhouse for this very small town and its sparsely settled countryside, John H. Forrester, Jr., the manager, states that he firmly believes that no theatre of this size, equipped and construction can be found in another town as small as Waldron. It is built of reinforced concrete and cut stone, with walls ranging in thickness from 18 to 24 inches. The dimensions of the building are 130x50 feet.

The decorative scheme of the auditorium is a realistic delineation of the pine tree country, celebrating the pine tree as it grows and as it serves man—especially as it did serve those who made the long, brave trek to settle this country. Throughout the theatre a wood-green color scheme prevails, and in the auditorium this is accentuated by the mellow glow of indirect lighting.

On the side walls of the auditorium, a landscape artist has portrayed the pine country panoramically, the murals reaching from floor to ceiling. There is a mountain stream, a forest path, and in the background, "Pilot" Mountain, a locality famous peak north of Waldron.

The effect at the proscenium is that of a mountaineer's home with a lean-to on either side. To complete the setting, the artist has painted a cave, a well and the other accessories to a homestead in the pine country.

The side walls curve into the ceiling, which has been painted in a sky effect. Set into the walls are hallowed logs, from which comes the indirect lighting. When pictures are being projected, the lighted logs emit a soft glow, as they would in a fireplace. Other lights are concealed behind a rock built into the wall in the midst of a campfire setting.

Like a watch tower on a frontier stockade, the projection room juts out high above the rear of the auditorium. It is 15 feet wide, 20 feet long, and extends five feet above the roof line.

Decorations in the foyer resemble those of the auditorium, except that the foyer has two recessed dome lights. A multi-colored chandelier, resembling an English forest lantern hangs in the lobby.—Howard Oiseth.

ican manufacturers. There is no prejudice against American generator sets, however, and if the local representative of an American manufacturer were to carry a few in stock he might easily monopolize the sale of replacement generators. The possibilities of the market are, however, very small.

Arc lamps and screens.—All local motion picture theatres are using high-intensity and mirror-reflector arc lamps and white cloth screens. Silver screens were once tried but were found to be unsuitable, the complaint being that the reflection was too great.

Visual education.—The following government representatives have under their supervision matters pertaining to education: Conseiller pour l’Instruction Publique, Haut-Commissariat, Beirut; Ministre de l’Instruction Publique, Beirut; Ministre de l’Instruction Publique, Damascus; and Directeur de l’Instruction Publique, Latakia.

In addition to these government representatives, who have general supervision of matters pertaining to education, the president of the Foreign Educational Institutions might be advantageously approached.

Visual education is not generally practiced in Syria. There is quite a long list of the large educational institutions which have projectors and which occasionally show some educational films.

PALESTINE

By Consul Oscar S. Heizer, Jerusalem

THE market in Palestine for amateur motion picture cameras is very small indeed. The country is not rich, and the greater part of the inhabitants are peasants who live in villages and have simple needs, although the inhabitants of the larger towns and cities, such as Jerusalem, Haifa and Tel-Aviv are more prosperous; in these towns are to be found a number of foreign residents, government officials and others.

Cameras were first introduced into Palestine several years ago by American and other tourists who visited the country and took pictures of the various points of interest. Later, some of the local camera and photographic apparatus dealers displayed in their show windows a few of the machines, with a view to making their use more familiar in Palestine.

For the convenience of the tourists who carried such machines with them, the local film dealers began to stock film for those cameras, and some of them have installed apparatus for developing the film and preparing a positive print from it. At present one can purchase in Jerusalem standard size film as well as 16-millimeter film. Amateur projectors are also sold.

The opinion of a local dealer in amateur cameras is that the demand for them is likely to increase.

“Building Theatre Patronage”

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS

TO-DAY audiences know good projection. They may not use technical terms in discussing it, but they do discuss it. They may not walk out on poor projection, but they avoid the theatre where it is permitted.

Good Projection in Many Cases Is the Deciding Element Which Determines Patronage at a Theatre

The theatre manager may not be responsible for the theatre site, for the quality of productions booked, for the equipment and decoration of the house, or even for the extent of advertising which is limited by an exacting advertising budget. But projection is something for which he is responsible. He cannot be efficient if he cannot supervise projection. There are instances where managers spend time complaining about the quality of photoplays available, when projection at their theatres is so defective that discriminating patrons would avoid the theatre no matter what was on the program. Good projection is demanded to-day from everyone—from executives at the studio who know that poor projection can ruin a good photoplay, right down to the patrons at the theatre.

Defective Projection Can Make Satisfactory Entertainment Impossible

Why is projection important? The very nature of motion-picture entertainment makes it so. During such entertainment patrons like to feel that they are part of the story, living the action—moving, fighting, fearing, thrilling, moving on and conquering with the characters on the screen. Thus they live what might be called an “illusion”. They are carried away to the scene of the action or, better still, find themselves right in the action. This illusion makes entertainment satisfactory. It cannot be satisfactory if something happens to spoil the illusion—something that reminds the patron that he or she is sitting in a theatre chair looking at a two-dimensional surface covered with light and shadow. Defective projection prevents the patron from slipping right into the story, and living through it with the characters. Defective projection can jerk the patron right out of the action of the story and spoil the illusion that is being lived through.

The quality of projection depends in some way upon the manager’s supervision. He is responsible for every detail of operation, and this includes projection. This does not imply that the manager should be blundering and interfering with the projectionist. The manager who tries to interfere without knowing what it is all about, is just as much at fault as the ignorant, overcautious manager who lets projection go on without any supervision because he is afraid to speak. The ideal condition exists when the theatre manager is familiar with the problems and can talk the language of the projectionist—and when the projectionist, taking real pride in his work, desires of putting the best possible projection in the same at the least possible cost, is capable and conscientious and thoroughly interested in the welfare of the theatre. Then the manager and the projectionist can discuss common problems, each confident in the practically common sense and the interest of the other. Poor projection has put theatres out of business and in many cases it was often someone else and not the projectionist who was responsible.

ECONOMIES

Careless Maintenance of Equipment Is the Cause of Many Wasted Dollars—Parts Should Be Ordered Long Enough in Advance to Prevent Emergencies and to Save the Expense Entailed by Telegrams

If the manager is properly informed, many economies can be practiced and projection can be properly supervised. The manager who can distinguish good projection from bad projection, watching it from different positions in the house, can help the projectionist whose opinion is based on what he sees only from the porthole of the projection room. When defects are noticed, inquiry should be made into the cause of the defect and provision made so that it will not happen again.

PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS IS A BUY-WORD WITH AUDIENCES for Speed, Enterprise and Real Pleasure!

Hundreds of additional theatres have gone modern during the past year and bought PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS. Our bookings are rising by leaps and bounds every week.

Our production methods are simple: Cover the world with cameramen, spare no money and energy grabbing REAL NEWS IN SOUND first, give it the spark of showmanship and get it on theatre screens fastest. The public says: "It’s great. Why can’t the others do the same?"

BIG SHOTS

PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS doesn’t yell about the world-famous celebrities it presents. When they’re news, we give them to you as part of our regular service.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, KING CAROL OF ROUMANIA and dozens of other “big shots” appeared in PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS recently in exclusive NEWS stories—not framed-up phonies. From the fire in Smith’s local department store to the world’s great, you get it first and best in PARAMOUNT SOUND NEWS.

Western Electric
NEW PROCESS
NOISELESS RECORDING

Noiseless Recording marks the greatest advance since the coming of talkies. This new delicate, scientifically developed apparatus for recording produces a result heretofore impossible—keeping out all noises resembling static—producing tones more clean-cut and life-like.

As part of the regular ERPI Service, Western Electric equipped theatres will have skilled engineering assistance at no extra cost to bring the apparatus up to these new high standards—to get everything possible out of pictures made by the wonderful new Noiseless Recording.

Your present Western Electric Equipment will successfully handle these new process films without any added parts—another evidence that best results are obtained when the same make of recording and reproducing apparatus is used.

Western Electric equipment—ERPI’s service—continued improvement in methods and apparatus—are all part of the policy of making available facilities that will make your investment in them pay real dividends.

To obtain the full benefits of the New Process, the most minute adjustments are required to silence the reproducing equipment and maintain high quality.

Next Week: Motion Picture Herald

In accordance with the announcement last week Exhibitors Herald-World will, in next week's issue, be consolidated with Motion Picture News. The first issue of the consolidated publications under the title, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, will be dated January 3, 1931.

Hence, Exhibitors Herald-World, and likewise Motion Picture News, will as individual publications cease to be issued commencing next week.

In their stead will appear MOTION PICTURE HERALD—a publication which will have assembled within its covers the chief and most important features of both the Herald and the News, together with many innovations and developments which will be made possible by the consolidation of the publishing resources of both institutions.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will be supplied to all subscribers to either the Herald or the News for the unexpired term of their subscriptions. In cases where there are subscriptions to both the Herald and the News, suitable extensions of such subscriptions, enabling the subscriber to receive MOTION PICTURE HERALD for a period totalling the terms of the individual subscriptions, will be made.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD has been planned and equipped to take its place in the fore rank of the outstanding business publications of the day. In the organization which will be responsible for the operation of MOTION PICTURE HERALD there will be included the persons of leading experience and accomplishment in motion picture trade journalism. This consolidated publication, representing a merger and continuation of all of the principal weekly publications of the motion picture industry, traces its record back into the earliest days of the motion picture. Its progenitor was "The Magic Lantern Weekly and Moving Picture World" which was founded as the first trade press of an infant business which was just struggling into existence.

The accumulated experience of twenty-three years in motion picture trade journalism stands back of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. The publications which have been merged into MOTION PICTURE HERALD have year by year since the start of the industry faithfully chronicled the activities of the business and have brought their support to bear on all matters calculated to advance the motion picture as entertainment and to enhance the prosperity of the industry.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will carry on. Remembering the fine traditions of the weekly trade press, it will seek always to safeguard those interests which have been defended by its predecessors and at the same time it will seek to deal with the new problems which will arise in a manner which will be uniformly constructive to the best interests of the motion picture and the industry which is responsible for it.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will enter upon its career with no entangling alliances whatsoever. It owes no allegiance except to the best interests of the motion picture and the industry. It is committed only to a policy of service to the whole business in all of its branches. It shall not deal in either prejudices or favorisms. Its course is plain: It shall provide a great organ of the industry and for the industry; it shall deal fairly and equitably with every phase and feature of the business from the smallest cross-road exhibition interest to the greatest theatre circuit; from Poverty Row to the greatest studio; from the single-picture state-righter to the greatest distribution system.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD will seek its reward, not in catering to any special interest, but in the satisfaction it shall be able to render to the whole industry.

This, then, is our pledge of performance.

For the performance itself, watch, commencing next week—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD.
Sound Film's Production Cost Near Ten Times That of Silent

40 Per Cent of Entire Output In 1929 Were Talking Pictures

Total Expenditures of Producing Plants Increased 34 Millions Over Preceding Year, U. S. Census Shows

By Washington Correspondent of the Herald-World

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—More than 1,000 sound films were produced in 1929 at a total cost of production of more than $100,000,000, while the 1,500 silent pictures turned out during the year cost less than $17,000,000, it is shown by figures just made public by the United States Census Bureau.

The total production of theatrical films during the year was 2,934 valued at $118,692,733, against $82,593,732 in 1927. Last year, for the first time, it was possible for the bureau to segregate the various types of theatrical films, analysis of the figures showing that 1,546 of films costing $34,186,010 were produced with sound, 869 costing $67,719,427 were produced with dialog, and 1,380 costing $16,772,296 were silent.

The total expenditures of the 143 establishments covered by the 1929 census were $180,864,319, compared with $134,347,387 reported by 142 establishments in 1927. The total cost of negative films was $125,175,421, against $96,048,017, being, in addition to the theatrical films, news pictures costing $2,923,286, against $2,499,660 in 1927; advertising films costing $617,160, against $617,466, and educational films costing $192,242, against $337,149. Expenditures on unfinished production during the year were $17,888,180, against $13,267,338 two years before.

In addition to the cost enumerated above were expenditures for laboratory work, including positive films costing $10,698,678, against $12,491,086 in 1927, and receipts for laboratory work done for others of $21,116,060, against $11,921,655. The value of other work done in 1929 was $1,617,698, against $615,526, and the cost of the studio facilities last year amounted to $34,388,282, this item not having been reported separately in 1927.

The bureau's survey showed an increase of 9.2 per cent in the number of salaried officers and employees, from 7,598 in 1927 to 8,186 in 1929, and an increase of 1.1 per cent in salaries, from $56,298,560 to $58,920,014. There was an increase of 28.2 per cent in the average number of wage-earners, from 841 to 1,078, and an increase of 32.7 per cent in the wages paid them, from $18,637,005 to $24,722,053.

The cost of materials, fuel and purchased electric current increased 9.5 per cent from 1927 to 1929, from $34,867,472 to $38,166,988, but the payments for contract work decreased 9.1 per cent, from $13,476,348 to $9,437,452.

The above figures are only preliminary, and are subject to revision before the final report is issued, and it is also explained by the bureau that they do not include distribution or projection in theatres.

Canadians Ask to Have U. S. Talent Barrred from Entry

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—The Hamilton Trades and Labor Council has petitioned the Canadian Government to refuse the entry of all theatre and dance orchestras from the United States because of the lack of employment among Canadian musicians. Labor unions in other cities have been asked to send a similar resolution to Ottawa.

Take $800 and Kidnap Manager's Wife as Well

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 26—Robbery was combined with kidnapping by four men who held up W. H. Wagner, local theatre manager, and his wife.

Wagner was forced to open the theatre safe, which yielded $800. His wife was kidnapped and released shortly afterward in another part of the city.

Evanston Court Says Council Ought to Settle Blue Law Tangle; No Shows Yet

Evanston's "civil war" for and against Sunday shows has advanced to another stage. And still citizens of the Chicago suburb are in the dark as to what the struggle will decide.

Circuit Judge Philip L. Sullivan was the man who fired this week's fusillade. After ponderous deliberation he came forward with the announcement that his court had no jurisdiction in the matter. Sunday shows, he suggested, will have to retain their present illegal status until the city council decides otherwise.

The Evanston Sunday ordinance, under which Sabbath films are banned, has been in effect for 2 years. Last April a referendum approved Sunday shows by a margin of 56 votes. But the city fathers put down both feet and said "No!" Later a master in chancery upheld the referendum.

Now it's the city council's move.
This Theatre Managers Club Shows What Teamwork Can Do!

Oakland Organization Helps Kill Daylight Saving, Marathon Dancing and Walkathon Contests, Stages Benefits—All in a Few Months

By Special Correspondent to the Herald-World

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Dec. 26.—Unique in the field of civic organizations and illustrative of the tremendous force for good in the community that the theatre man can be, the Theatre Managers Club of Alameda County is performing a service that could scarcely be achieved by any other body and is pointing the way for similar work by theatre owners and managers in other parts of the country, for united efforts to protect the interests of the motion picture industry and of the city as well.

ONE of the youngest organizations in the East Bay Field, its accomplishments have been such in the few months of its existence that it already has taken its place among the seasoned civic societies of Oakland and vicinity.

The Theatre Managers Club of Alameda County was organized primarily for social purposes and to bring theatre managers closer together in order that they might really become acquainted, and this is still the main object, but along with this has come work for the industry and the community which makes its appearance and immediate action is necessary. The matter is handled by theatre working as a unit, rather than by a few houses working independently with lost motion and probable duplication of effort.

Mayor Provides Contacts

The club was launched without any flare of trumpets by John L. Davie, of Oakland, was present at the organization meeting, forming the initial contact with city officials so very vital. Membership is open to theatre managers, assistant managers, publicity and exploitation men, and thirty-five are enrolled. Dues are nominal, amounting to about fifty cents a month, or sufficient to cover the cost of sending out notices of meetings.

Luncheon meetings are held each Tuesday at the Ambassador hotel, and so great is the interest taken in these that frequently the luncheon room is found so very full. The policy has been adopted of inviting an outside speaker each week, to speak on some subject having a theatre basis. The honor of being the first speaker went to Lynn Bradshaw, of Electrical Research, who spoke on "Acoustics." The New Daylight Saving

When the fight against the daylight saving plan was launched last fall, the Theatre Managers Club took charge of the campaign of publicity in Alameda county and enlisted the services of theatre employees in the work, with the result that the measure received a record drubbing in this territory. In appreciation of this willing assistance, the club tendered a banquet to about four hundred theatre employees in December, with Meyer J. Cohen as master of ceremonies.

The management of the Ambassador hotel, appreciating the importance of the organization, has set aside a room for the exclusive use of its members, and here they may gather at will. Word of the generosity of the hotel management has been broadcast by members, and this hospitality rapidly is becoming headquarters for visiting amusement men.

Bar Freak Contests

A recent feather in the cap of the club has been the passage at its request by the City Council of Oakland of an ordinance prohibiting marathon dancing contests, walkathon contests, and events of this description. It also has been active in assisting and in the presentation of benefit affairs for the unemployed and the relief of the destitute.

The officers of the Theatre Managers Club of Alameda County are: President, Phil Phillips, director of publicity for the East Bay theatres of Fox-West Coast Theatres, Inc.; vice-president, Charles Carroll, manager of the Fox Grand-Lake theatre; secretary-treasurer, Edward Stokes, manager of the Eastmont theatre; directors: Mr. Frank Nemeth, Oak; M. Rosenberg, Dimond theatre; A. C. Happen, Dimond theatre; M. Rosenberg, Dimond theatre; A. C. H. Chamberlin, of Crockett; A. C. Karski, Fox-West Coast Theatres; A. A. Richards, Neptune Palace theatre; C. C. Griffin, New Piedmont theatre; A. Blumenfeld, Fairfax theatre, and M. J. Cohen, director of exploitation.

Fox Expected to Open European Studio in Paris; All Foreign Versions but Spanish

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—Fox is expected to open a European studio in Paris early next year, where all foreign versions will be made in the future, with the exception of the Spanish. The latter units will continue to be made in Hollywood. Production conferences are being held at present to determine the extent of the proposed studio, though it is understood as possible that some plant may be leased for the present with the building postponed. Foreign versions in French, German and Italian will go into work immediately.

On the Coast, 36 features and shorts have been completed in Spanish, with French, German, Italian and Spanish versions of "The Big Trail" now ready. About a dozen films are now in preparation for shooting in Spanish.

Warner Completes Deals in Louisiana And North Carolina

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Through two important booking deals just completed, Warner, First National and Vitaphone product acquires representation in part of North Carolina and a large section of Louisiana. A. W. Smith, one of the Warner western sales managers, closed deals of the features of Warner and First National and the total output of Vitaphone shorts in the following cities: Greensboro, Raleigh, Winston-Salem, Durham, Burlington, Salisbury, Chapel Hill, Fayetteville, Hendersonville, High Point, Goldsboro, Rocky Point and Wilson.

Both deals are said to strengthen the position of Warners in the Southern territory, where they have been working on expansion plans for some time.

Changes Made in Eastern Division of Fox Houses

Canadian Business
Good, Says Lyon on Return from Survey
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 26—B. F. Lyon, Canadian sales manager for Warner and First National, just returned from a survey in his territory, reports conditions in excellent shape throughout Canada, with little talk of business depression in the cities he visited.

"Of course there has been a slump in business in recent months," he said, "but it has not been a great one. Canada did not experience the great boom of prosperity that we did in the States and consequently it could not suffer to the extent that people here have been suffering. The drop was not so deep. The business men are conservative and go into nothing unless they see their way out."

Lonsdale Turns Back On Plays, Favors Films; Galsworthy Scorns Them
English Dramatist Asserts He Will Never Write Stage Plays Again
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 26—The opinion in which the British film exhibitor holds is unaltered after striking contrast in two news items of the hour.

Frederick Lonsdale, English author, is on his way to the West Coast, but says he will not venture near Hollywood "unless it be to guard some brain child of his against talky pictures directed against him.

On the other hand, Frederick Lonsdale, London dramatist has come out with the statement that he is "never going to write another stage play."

I have just signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to write three scenarios," he announces. "One is for Greta Garbo, one for Norma Shearer and another for an all-star cast."

Lonsdale explains his transition from play writing to scenario writing in these terms: "The reasons are simple. First of all, if 300 poor people a day play it is a howling success. If only 500,000 see a talkie it is a rakerailure. Naturally, an author would sooner have 500,000 public of 20,000,000 than of 500,000. It is only human, especially if he is paid for a talkie as he is paid for a stage play.

"Another reason is that the talkie is a much more flexible medium. In a stage play you cannot have more than three acts. On the screen you can have 30 act*

"The proof of it all is that the best seats at the movies are now all occupied by the playgoers.

Fox Managers Ordered To Follow Hays Ad Code
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 26—Fox Eastern division house managers have received notification to the effect that only strict adherence to the Hays office code of advertising ethics should be followed in the preparation of copies. "An ad is either moral or immoral," the statement said.

Block Booking Aids Exhibitor As Well as Industry, Says Kent
Points to Fact That 85 Per Cent of Paramount's Accounts of Fifteen Years Ago Still Book Its Product, as Refutation of Charge That Wholesale Method Involves Use of Force
Eighty-five per cent of the accounts that used Paramount pictures fifteen years ago are still booking Paramount productions, says Sidney R. Kent, vice president of United Artists, Inc., in a discussion of block booking.

Kent, in his statement, made in reply to a letter from Rev. W. B. Bullen, of Lee, Maine, and printed in The Motion Picture Monthly, defines block booking as "nothing more nor less than an exhibitor assuring himself a steady supply of a reliable product just as the automobile agent assures himself a steady supply of a reliable car from his manufacturer.

Four general benefits cited by Kent are these:

1. It gives the patronage of the average neighborhood theatre an opportunity to see the best pictures there.

2. It creats a wider market for the better type of product.

3. It gives the industry an opportunity to take advantage of public's desire for pictures above the general level of "box office taste".

4. Effect of economies of benefit to the entire trade.

Rebuttal of the charge made by opponents of block booking that the use of wholesale methods in distribution is accompanied by the use of force is made by Kent in citing the experience of Paramount.

Pointing to the fact that 85 per cent of Paramount's accounts of fifteen years ago are still buying their pictures from that same company, Kent asks: "If we had forced pictures on exhibitors against their will, is it conceivable that we could have kept the good will of all these customers?"

Approaching the question from another angle, Kent says:

For each sound picture that our company makes, we have a possibility of 10,000 sales in the United States. A picture that is popular at the box-office may sell as many as 10,000 copies. If we had forced pictures on exhibitors against their will, is it conceivable that we could have kept the good will of all these customers?"

Sagalowsky's Tongue
Thwarts Robber and Saves Day's Receipts
(Special to the Herald-World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 26.—Confronted by a bandit as he entered his office in the Fountain Square theatre here, Bennett Sagalowsky, an official of the house, literally talked his way out of a holdup that would have cost him the theatre's receipts.

As Sagalowsky switched on the light the youth covered him with a gun and demanded the safe be opened.

"I don't know the combination," Sagalowsky countered, "and besides, do you know what happened to four other fellows that held up this place a few days ago?"

"No," said the bandit.

"Well, they're all in jail right now, and they'll be sentenced to prison before long. You ought to know you can't get by with this kind of a job. You'll get caught sooner or later, that's sure.

"But I need the money," argued the young man.

"Take this then," said Sagalowsky and he handed him $6. "You can leave and I'll not report the matter to the police."

"No, you've been pretty square and I'll not take it," the youth decided. He left empty-handed.

Outdoor Sports Now to Be Permitted on Sunday In Quaker State Capitol
(Special to the Herald-World)

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26—After a stormy meeting at which a deadlock was averted by a narrow margin, the special "Blue Law" Committee recommended to City Council an amendment to the present law, permitting baseball, football and other outdoor sports and recreations on Sunday, after 2 P.M. The next meeting of Council will be held on January 8th and William W. Roper, chairman of the Blue Law Committee announced that at that time he will submit a recommendation to legalize motion pictures and theatrical productions on Sundays.

Edmond Jose, One of Pioneer Film Directors, Succumbs in France
(Special to the Herald-World)

NICE, FRANCE, Dec. 26—Edmond Jose, American motion picture director, and one of the pioneers in the field, died here after a short illness.

Jose's first directing assignment was on "Poppa," starring Norma Talmadge. His next was "Fedora," with Pauline Frederick. Other pictures he directed were "La Tosca," also with Pauline Frederick; "My Cousin," featuring Enrico Caruso; and "Fires of Faith," a special film for the Salvation Army.

Saturday Morning Show Popular with Children
(Special to the Herald-World)

OTTAWA, Dec. 26—A policy intended to appeal particularly to juvenile patronage was adopted by Manager T. R. Tobman for the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, starting with a special morning matinee Saturday, December 20. The price scale had been reduced 10 cents and the program for the week comprised "Maybe It's Love," a football feature; the first episode of "The Lone Defender;" a Kat cartoon and a George Sidney-Charlie Murray comedy. Top price for adults is now 50 cents, to encourage family trade.

Southern Seas

In the cast are Ben Lyon, Raquel Torres, Thelma Todd, Robert Ellis, Al St. John, Allan Hale, Ocis Harlan, Marian Douglas, Dickie Moore, Rita Rey, Donald Reed, T. Roy Barnes, Marcia Harris, Phyllis Crane and Robert Edison. Al Rogell directed.
Benefits Help Mississippi to Cut Way Through Blue Law Fog

Crowds Attend Special Showings in Three Cities When Associations Realize Sunday Programs Provide Most Effective Means of Raising Necessary Funds for Unemployed

The state of Mississippi is emerging from the political fog that shut out Sunday shows, and unemployment has been the motivating force in routing the long-felt dominance of the blue law advocates. Recognition of the theatre’s rightful place as a center of community interest and activity has come through the realization that it constitutes one of the greatest means of raising benefit funds. And Sunday shows are pointing the way.

Theatre men see in this development a slaying of speculations that economic and civic justice demands that the theatre interests have a political as well as moral right to present entertainment seven days in the week.

Clarksdale Has First Sunday Picture Show
(Special to the Herald-World)

CLARKSDALE, MISS., Dec. 26.—The first motion pictures ever given on Sunday in Clarksdale were thrown on the screen at the Paramount theatre, owned and managed by Public Theatres Corporation of New Orleans. The shows are to be operated every Sunday throughout the winter months for the benefit of charity by the Clarksdale Charities Association, which was organized by a group of men and women who aim to provide additional relief at Clarksdale.

The first shows at the Paramount Sunday were crowded, large numbers of church people attending. A committee consisting of Medesame Oscar Bauers, Chauncey Smith, R. H. Crutcher, E. W. Still and Ed Smith will handle the charitable work for the Clarksdale Charities Association.

Permission of the attorney general of the state was granted before the Sunday picture shows were thrown open on account of the opposition to the movement.

Large Crowds Attend Greenville Sunday Show
(Special to the Herald-World)

GREENVILLE, MISS., Dec. 26.—Large crowds attended the first unincrements on Sunday moving pictures shown at a local theatre for unemployment relief in Washington county. A number of pastors condemned the plan from their pulpits at Sunday services, but no vigorous protest was made otherwise on the showing. Sunday pictures are to be operated under the direction of leading citizens, and the proceeds will be distributed by an executive committee of five, representing Associated Charities and composed of Mrs. Edmund Taylor, Sr., chairman; Will Percy, W. H. Negus, Sidney L. Moyse and Sam V. Anderson.

King’s Daughters to Operate Benefit Shows
(Special to the Herald-World)

TUNICA, MISS., Dec. 26.—The King’s Daughters of Tunica will operate moving picture shows to provide funds for the unemployed. A decision to utilize the Tunica theatre for Sunday pictures was made at a meeting of all relief organizations and members of the churches, as this was believed to be the only possible chance before the city of raising the necessary funds.

Four Texas Churches to Have Talker Services, Sermons and All, Jan. 12

HOUSTON, Dec. 26.—“Mechanical” church services will be conducted at four Presbyterian churches in this city January 12-15. H. Paul James, member of the division of visual aids, publication department of the board of Christian education, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. has already given a private show.

The equipment will be offered to churches throughout the nation, it is understood, if the demonstration satisfies the board.

The program includes an organ prelude—“The Angel”—the showing of the twenty-third Psalm, illustrated in color with musical background; a number of hymns, two talking pictures, in which Dr. William Ralph Hill, director of the department of home and church, and Dr. William Chalmers Covert, general secretary of the board, spoke—and a postlude.

Mayor Walker Warns Theatres to Clean House or Receive Aid from Outside
(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Mayor Walker has issued a warning to the theatres here to clean house themselves, or receive aid in doing so from outside sources. He said a similar condition exists today to that existing in 1926.

“I told them at that time to clean up from within, or, in my opinion, you will get censorship. And unless you men yourselves, act outside censorship will be forced upon you.” The mayor then added that the warning holds as true today as it did then.

New York Supreme Court Judge Holds Against Replacing Equipment

"Courts of Equity Do Not Enforce Doubtful Rights by Injunction."

New York Supreme Court Judge Givigan has granted an injunction plea to a sales promotion contest in which exhibitors give away approximately $900.00 in cash or merchandise. The prizes no doubt vary according to the size of the city.

"These promoters then get many people worked upon a proposition of selling Theatre Scrip books for the prizes offered. The catch comes in the fact these books, which have previously been B. K'd by the exhibitor with his signature across the back, are good for many votes if placed in ballot box either officially or unofficially. The promoters then evidently take the backs off these books and put them on others which they take and sell them to buyers who sell full books pocketing the money, leaving the exhibitor holding the sack for many books outstanding that he has received no money for."

A similar report came recently from Detroit.

Skouras-Warner Gives Receipts of Christmas Show to Charity Fund

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 26.—The Skouras-Warner circuit donated the total receipts of a Christmas performance at the Grand Central theatre to charity.

The program was given Christmas night by the Grand Central Players, a dramatic society in conjunction. The play was "It's a Wise Child."

Once operated as a motion picture house, the Grand Central was closed several months ago. Proceeds from the Christmas performance went to the St. Louis Community Fund.

California Speeds Up Remodeling and Theatre Building

Oakland Sees Start of Large Paramount House; Many Projects Underway

Films Made Political Football
In Berlin, "All Quiet" Ban Shows
Enthusiastic Approval by Police Officials and Prussian Prime Ministers Failed to Save Production from Nationalists
Now Opponents Await Their Chance
(Special from Berlin Correspondent of the Herald-World)
BERLIN, Dec. 16.—By Mail.—"Der Hetzfilm verboten" ("The Instigatory Film Forbidden") reads the headline in heavy type right over the front page of the widely circulated nationalist Lokalanzeiger, and the Nazi evening paper Angriff triumphantly exclaims, "We Have Forcéd Them on Their Knee!"

After lengthy deliberations the chief censor's Committee, composed of the chief censor himself, the editor-in-chief of a nationalist daily, who also represents his party in the Prussian Diet, a general's sister, two clergymen and a motion picture operator had a night before banned "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Prime Minister Deplores Veto
It had been asserted that the original version of the picture had anti-German sequences. Anxious to refute this slander the managing director of "Mozart Saal" had the original screened before the members of the Prussian Cabinet and other high officials. None of them is thought to have liked the picture. Police officials, who had seen the war right through, were deeply moved, and in an interview with the Berliner Tageblatt, the Prussian cabinet minister, Dr. Franze, by almost pathetic words describes the impression the picture made upon him, at the same time expressing his sympathy with his compatriots, whom the Chief Censor's Committee considers unfit to see the truth. Almost like a joke in a tragedy comes the news that the Police have banned "All Quiet" for being pro-Teutonic.

Films Made Political Football
Party politics have invaded the German motion picture industry since a few years ago when the UFA set up shop in Berlin. Almost every big publishing firm in Berlin was dickerin' for it, and Hugenberg-ScheiU won the game.

The radical Ulstein firm published Remarque's book as a serial. It was already a trysty then a motion picture that "All Quiet" would meet with opposition in the nationalistic ranks and that the UFA theatres would not dare book the picture. The story goes that the theatre has booked it for some of those theatres of which it holds a 50 per cent interest.

The Nazis, the noisy section of the ultra-nationalists, always ready to grasp the occasion for a disturbance, quickly saw their opportunity and the "Mozart Saal" and the Nollendorfplatz became their battle-field.

Wait for a "Verdun"
Incensed by this nationalist victory, their opponents clinch their fists and wait for their chance. It will not be long till a "Verdun" as "Patriotic the Great," tales to come out, and then the Reds are sure to mobilize their forces.

The Council of the German Exhibitors' Association has, in the meantime, adopted a resolution urging its members to refuse any picture which would turn their theatre into an arena of political strife.

Unfortunately this took place just when the trade press announced that "The Blue Angel" had been making record business in the UFA "Ritzler" and that it was starting a triumphant progress through the U. S. A.—of course including Maryland and Ohio.

Dupont Hits "Hell's Angels"
Herr E. A. Dupont, the producer of "Variety," etc., a few weeks ago denounced "Hell's Angels" as a thoroughly anti-German in a letter he wrote to a Berlin evening paper. Soon after, that same paper informed its readers that the German Foreign Office had asked the Embassy in London for full particulars about that picture and that the censorship of London might be expected. "Four Sons," the Fox production, had drawn the ire of the German military authorities.

The London Ministry of Information and Propaganda included all Fox Movietone operators from their.functions until the Fox Film Corporation made known that the picture had been withdrawn.

Tiffany in National "Third Alarm" Tieup
With 6000 First Chiefs
(Special to the Herald-World)
NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Tiffany has arranged a national tieup on "The Third Alarm" with 6000 members of the International Firemen's Association. Fred Shepard, headquarters manager and editor of Fire Engineering, a weekly magazine, reviewed the film and stated in a notice to the chiefs of the picture that he believed the picture the finest fire film produced to date, and asked that they cooperate in every way with local exhibitors.

Tiffany is distributing special exploitation material to all exhibitors showing "The Third Alarm," and requesting immediate cooperation with the fire department.

Exhibitors have already planned special benefit performance for the Fireman's Fund, and are securing the use of fire apparatus in the tieup.

Stoll and Pathe Consolidated in England
By New Anglo-American Film Agreement
(Special to the Herald-World)
LONDON, Dec. 26.—A new Anglo-American film agreement has been reached with the formation of a joint company to be known as the Associated Picture Productions. The two companies involved are the Stoll Picture Productions and the Producers' Distributing Company, the former being one of the oldest of the British firms, and the latter representing Pathe in the British Isles.

It is planned to produce three films at the recently enlarged Stoll studios, located at Cricklewood, and to distribute them through the new joint organization.
MGM Points to Story Successes as Evidence of Big Year Coming

"New Moon," Starring Tibbett and Grace Moore, Heads List with "The Great Meadow," Realife Production—Two for Marion Davies

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has acquired for the 1931 season a group of stories for picturization from which it expects real results. First on the list is "New Moon," just opened at the Astor here for an indefinite run, and starring Lawrence Tibbett, the opera singer, and Grace Moore. The Realife production of Elizabeth Maddox Robert's novel, "The Great Meadow," in which John Mack Brown and Eleanor Boardman are featured, also ranks top on the new list.

MARION DAVIES' vehicles include "The Bachelor Father" and the Broadway legitimate play, "It's a Wise Child." Greta Garbo has completed "Inspiration" and will next appear in the screen version of the novel "Susan Lenox." There is a possibility that she will follow that with the starring role in "Red Dust," a Cecil B. De Mille story.

Tibbett Finishes "Southerner"

Tibbett has finished his work in "The Southerner," following the completion of "New Moon." This is the fourth film scheduled for early 1931 release. Esther Ralston played the feminine lead. Joan Crawford is featured in "Dance Foos, Dance," directed by Harry Beaumont, who handled "Our Dancing Brides."

John Gilbert will be seen in "Gentleman's Fate," an original story by Ursula Parrott, and Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are starred in "Reducing," another comedy, with a second for the humorous pair later in the year. "The Easiest Way" will feature Constance Bennett, Robert Montgomery, Anita Page and Adolphe Menjou. Novarro is due in the "Song of India," and the "Big House" combination of director George Hill, scenarist Frances Marion and Wallace Beery are scheduled for "The Secret Six," with Jean Harlow in the feminine lead.

"Trader Horn" Appears in 1931

"Trader Horn" will make its film appearance during 1931, following a reported two years of preparation and camera work here and in Africa, where director Van Dyke spent six months.

Among the other stories set for film production are: the stage play "Grand Hotel," Joseph Hergesheimer's "Tampico," the "Naughty Marietta" of Victor Herbert, Wasserstein's "The World's Illusion" and Winston Churchill's "The Crisis."

Seymour Reports Close Of Three Big 4 Deals

OMAHA, Dec. 26.—A. B. Seymour, Big 4 sales representative working with the Capitol Pictures Corporation here, reports the closing of three deals involving 100 per cent booking on the company's 1931 product.

The Granada at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the Royal at Davenport, Iowa, and the Publix at Marshalltown, Iowa, took eight melodramas, 12 Westerns, and 12 two reel comedies. Seymour is continuing his swing through his territory.

Low Monthly Rent For Schools Using Powers Cinephone

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The Powers Cinephone Corporation has evolved a new sales plan whereby educational institutions will be able to rent the Powers portable apparatus at an extremely low monthly rental, which will enable them to use the little motion picture picture to greater advantage as a part of the school curriculum. The machine is said to incorporate the same features as the ordinary theatrical equipment but is more easily operated by reason of smaller size and reduced weight.

Far East Rapidly Taking To Talking Films, Says Writer for United Press

A story given a United Press representa- tive by sound engineers in the Orient says American manufacturers of sound equip- ment have installed talking picture appara- tus in numerous theatres throughout China, Japan and the Philippines. Shanghai has a dozen or more "talkie" theatres, Hong- kong two, and its sister city Kowloon, one. Hankow has one; Amoy, one; Canton, three; Peiping, three; Tientsin, three, etc.

The total investment in motion picture theatres alone in the Orient was estimated at more than $60,000,000. This does not include studios, of which there are a large number, especially in Japan. There are more than 1,300 motion picture houses in Japan alone, and the new Capitol theatre in Singapore was described as one of the finest houses of the Orient, completed at a cost of around $3,000,000.

Wherity Back After Stay in Mexico City
The sinister and foreboding character that pervades the Universal film “Dracula.” Bela Lugosi is here shown arrayed as he will appear in the part of the terrible vampire, living but dead.

Herbert Brenon bids Captain Louis Van den Ecker, former French Foreign Legion soldier, goodbye, after the big “army” gotten together for the filming of the sequel to “Beau Geste” broke up. He was Brenon’s technical advisor.

It hardly seems possible on a bottle of milk, but Lloyd Hamilton can do almost anything if there’s something funny to it. From the Educational-Lloyd Hamilton comedy, “Up a Tree.”

If this isn’t a happy group, we never saw one. Three is supposed to be a crowd, but there’s no crowd here. Robert McGowan, who has been directing Hal Roach’s MGM Our Gang for the past eight years is shown with two of his gangster proteges, Dorothy De Borda and Wheezer.

This “flivver” is full of expensive material, and though its looks may belie the fact, it is still in pretty good condition. Left to right are Sigmund Romberg, composer, Paul Gregory, leading man, Oscar Hammerstein II, librettist and Tom Patricola, dancer and actor, all of whom are devoting their talents to the fashioning of the new Warner Brothers production entitled, “Children of Dreams.”

The brother of a famous dancer and a famous musical comedy star. Marilyn Miller, star of the First National production, “Sunny,” is here shown with Joe Donahue, brother of Jack Donahue, who recently passed away.

Grace Moore, having completed work in MGM’s “New Moon,” in which she plays opposite Lawrence Tibbett, returns to New York where she will appear at the Metropolitan Opera before returning to the Coast for more pictures.

Almost on the deadline, and Joan Crawford and Cliff (Ukelele Ike) Edwards are stepping on it in order to catch the last edition. If it wasn’t for the paraphenalia in the background, we’d swear it was a regular newspaper office, and also that they had good taste in the matter of “sob sisters.” But it’s a scene from the MGM production, “Dance, Fools, Dance,” which is being directed by Harry Beaumont.
In an unguarded moment, Harry Gribbon does an Al Jolson on the battlefield, and for so doing receives a gentle reproof from his general. Patsy O'Leary evidently is getting a great kick out of the proceedings, but Harry's expression is certainly bonafide. This is a scene from the Educational-Mack Sennett comedy which goes under the title of "A Hollywood Theme Song." Yola D'Avril is also cast.

No. This isn't an oil well. It's one of the towers erected (there were five in all) for the filming of the land rush scenes in the Radio Pictures production entitled "Cimarron," a bit of American history, soon to be released.

There seems to be at least two very interested spectators in this picture, but they aren't the spectators at all. Buster and Oscar, M.G.M.'s "all-barkie" stars, look a bit disdainful as Zion Myers and Jules White attempt to give them their cues. As if anyone can tell us how to act? Anyhow, they are getting plenty of encouragement. The next "barkie" comedy will go under the title of "The Two Bark Brothers."

Dorothy Jordan evidently feels like we do sometimes when a really hard-boiled telephone operator gives us the wrong number. Dorothy was last seen in the M.G.M production, "Min and Bill," which George Hill directed.
Sentiment in Business? You Betcha! This Exhibitor Proves it, Too

Aaron Goldberg's Royal Treatment of Employees and Their Loyal Service Give Theatres Subroguit of "The Human Houses"

"It seems to me that theatre owners should be the last ones to place a clamp on expenditures. Times will get better when people begin to spend more freely, and those who depend upon the amusement business should set an example."—A bit of philosophy from Aaron Goldberg, operating five small downtown houses in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—Does sentiment have a place in modern business, particularly in times of stress and keen competition? Aaron Goldberg, owner of the Aaron Goldberg Theatres, operating a chain of five small downtown film houses, believes that it does and is not ashamed to so express himself. And what is more, he demonstrates his belief in the manner in which his business is conducted. His treatment of employees has made him almost idolized, and the loyalty of co-workers is reflected in the courteous handling of those who patronize his theatres, until these have become known to the public as "The Human Houses."EVERY employe here is given a vacation on pay during the summer season and the annual banquet in the Christmas period has become an event.

"The present year has been a difficult one in the amusement field," said Goldberg, "and especially for exhibitors like myself, who were called upon to make the change from silent pictures to sound.

"The suggestion was made that this was no time for annual dinner affairs, and so it seems to me that theatre owners should be the last ones to place a clamp on expenditures. Times will get better when people begin to spend more freely, and those who depend upon the amusement business should set an example.

"Instead of doing away with our annual banquet we have endeavored to have it larger and better than ever, feeling that this will help in its small way for increased prosperity.

This year's banquet, the fifth in the series, was held at the St. Francis Hotel. Fifty were in attendance, with forty-four of these employes of the five theatres and the central operating office. It was truly a family affair over which the genial host presided as a proud father.

An interesting expression of sentiment in business is to be seen in the private office of Goldberg in the Phelan Building. Here in a frame is the first ticket sold when the Peerless theatre was opened on Third street nineteen years ago, and beside it is the first nickel that came into the till. The purchase was made by a baby of ten months who was held up to the window by her mother, and her name appears with the ticket and coin.

Board of Review Will Hear Albert Howson

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Albert S. Howson, a member of the Warner scenario staff, will be one of the principal speakers at the annual meeting of the National Board of Review, to be held in Philadelphia January 22.

The conference will continue for three days and the general topic for discussion will be "The Motion Picture and the Community." This subject will be divided into four divisions. Howson will discuss the relation of the exhibitor to the community.

Charity Performances Given by 45 Toronto Independent Houses

(Special to the Herald-World)

TORONTO, Dec. 26.—A city-wide benefit drive was conducted in Toronto on the evening of December 24 when charity performances were held in no less than 45 independent moving picture houses simultaneously under the direction of a committee which worked with the Exhibitors Co-Operative Society. This committee comprised Harry Alexander, Nat. Taylor, George Lester, R. S. Ticknor, A. Polakoff and Ray Lewis.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. came in for some criticism when the company declined to arrange additional benefits shown in its local houses unless provision was made for rental charges. Loew's theatre has arranged a special city-wide benefit January 8 with all proceeds to be turned over to the fund in aid of the unemployed, it is announced by Manager Jules Berstein.

Publix Theatres on West Coast Go Under Fox Banner on Jan. 1

(Special to the Herald-World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 26.—It is understood the seven Publix theatres acquired by Fox West Coast in the recent $2,000,000 deal, will be taken over by the latter chain about Jan. 1. The theatres are located here, where there are three; in Oakland; two in Portland, and one in Seattle.

Editorial Comment on Fox-Publix West Coast Deal Expresses Favor

PORTLAND, Dec. 26,—In an editorial in the Portland Oregonian concerning the recent acquisition of Publix theatres by the Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., a deal in volving some $2,000,000 worth of theatre property, expression is made that is wholly favorable to the arrangement. To quote one paragraph from the editorial:

"Here is a concern (Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc.) whose operations are nation-wide and which knows conditions and is familiar with prospects therefrom, allocating to new operations in Oregon, California, and Washington a sum approximating to $2,000,000. This is not an outlay far from shortening its outlay here it increases that outlay materially. It is development that ought to hearten all of us here and confidence in what we have and in our future. Doubtless it will have that kind of an effect."
Know Your Exchange Managers

The exchange manager is the direct contact between exhibitor and distributor, and therefore it is to their mutual advantage to know each other. The Herald-World presents a series of brief sketches of exchange managers and their outstanding activities in the motion picture field.

G. C. PARSONS, San Francisco manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was born in Virginia in 1884 and entered the motion picture business 25 years later in Lynchburg, Va. He remained there two years, until 1911, when he became associated with Tom Moore at Washington, D. C. Parsons joined the staff of Mutual Film Company in 1914 and was sent to Cleveland. In the following year he was transferred to Buffalo but had resigned there only a few months when Triangle Film Company was formed and he was moved to Los Angeles to open a Triangle branch there.

HARRY MELCHER, Fox branch manager at Milwaukee, was born in the Middle-west—at Omaha—in 1899, attended grade school until he was 13 years old and then bided himself to Military Academy, at Lake Geneva, Wis., that beautiful spot where the parade ground overlooks a summer play center of Chicagoans.

It was in 1919 that Melcher entered the motion picture business, as an employee of Vitagraph. He remained with Vitagraph until 1920 and for the next two years was with Pathé. The years 1922 to 1924 found him with Holkkinson, then he joined Fox Film Corporation and has remained with that company up to the present time.

Completing his college work in 1914, Charles R. Gilmour, now manager for the centralized Warner-First National Vitaphone office at Denver, went on the road for World Film that fall and in December was made manager of the Salt Lake City branch. Later he returned to Denver as manager and in 1916 was sent to Minneapolis. In September of that year he went back to Denver as special representative for Pathé. Leaving Pathé, Gilmour went with United Picture Theatres and later with Selznick, his district being from Denver west.

PARIS, Dec. 26—Trade Commissioner George R. Canty, reports a definite trend toward the control of picture houses by renting concerns in Vienna. The present system, controlled by a number of suburban houses and the Schweden and Apollo in the West End of the city, has the Lustspiel theatre on the Prater, and has just secured Elite, one of the larger Vienna houses. Wirtschafter Brothers are stepping forward as leaseholders of numerous smaller theatres. The majority of the Vienna picture situations are equipped for sound.

Trade Commissioner Canty of Paris also reports that German dialog films are to be restricted in Alsace-Lorraine and that the French authorities have recently issued new regulations governing the exhibition of German talking pictures. As a result all such films must bear super-imposed French subtitles every 10 meters. Failure to comply will result in barring of the picture from exhibition.

The trade press insists, however, that the cost of placing these titles will amount to an automatic prohibition of the showing of the films. The regulations are directed to meet with great opposition, since it is understood that the German talkies have captured this section of the French market. The suggestion that features should be shown in both versions alternately has been tried, apparently with considerable success.

The German press reports an interesting proposition submitted by the editor of an Oslo daily, to the effect that the three Scandinavian national theatres in Oslo, Copenhagen and Stockholm should join forces in the combined production of Scandinavian talking pictures. The suggestion follows the recent banning of Norwegian legitimate actors from appearing in talking films. The same editor expresses the opinion that American made talking pictures should be barred from Scandinavia when they feature native artists. He predicts that such film production as he advocates "would be an interesting and economically sound venture."

A reorganization has taken place in the studio known as "Humna" in Budapest. Herr Ernst von Pesth is appointed director according to the new alignment, and has resigned his connection as vice president of the Film Fund. Herr Roland v. Szonvey replaced him in the Film Fund post by order of the Minister of Commerce.

Osso Films of France intend to make all future productions in both French and German languages. The latter have already been sold, it is understood.

Following the personal recommendation of Premier Mussolinii, Comandore Pittaluga, Italian film leader, has been named Grande Ufficiale of the Order of the Crown of Italy by Royal Decree.

Color Concern Charged With Violating Quaker State Securities Act

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 26—Hans Von Fraunhofer, president of the United Films Industry, Inc., a company promoting color photography, was held in $5,000 bail by an Upper Darby magistrate, charged with violating the Pennsylvania State Securities Act. It was brought in by Von Fraunhofer that the concern was worth $100,000. Williams testified that he was taken to a factory that the company operated last year in Ardmore, Pa., where exhibits of a color photography were arranged for his benefit. An investigator of the Pennsylvania Securities Commission testified that the company was not registered to sell stock in Pennsylvania.

Hollywood Legitimate Theatre Goes to Sound

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26—The Vine street legitimate house here has been acquired by a syndicate and will show talking pictures in the future. The theatre has been wired and completely redecorated.

Contracts have been made with RKO, United Artists, and Columbia whereby the house will show films of those companies.

Raymond Griffith to Write W B Scenarios

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—Raymond Griffith, former film comedy star, has been placed under contract by Warner Brothers as a scenario writer.

His first assignment has not been determined but D. F. Zanuck, associate executive, announces it will probably be comedy.

Liberty Productions Sign Up Cadwallader

NEW YORK, Dec. 26—Charles Cadwallader, formerly art director for Famous Players Lasky, Goldwyn and Cecil B. DeMille, has been signed by Herman M. Gum- man of Liberty Productions for a similar position.

He has already begun work on the settings for Liberty's first serial, temporarily titled "Women Like Men."

Daughter for Christmas

BERKELEY, CAL., Dec. 26—Claretce W. Laws, manager of the Fox California theatre, received a Christmas present in the form of a new baby daughter.
NEW PRODUCT

This department does not attempt to predict the public's reactions to pictures. It does, instead, present detailed and accurate information on product, together with the frank and honest opinion of the reporter.

CIMARRON

With beauty and fidelity born of painstaking care and infinite patience, "Cimarron" takes its audience through 41 years of expansion of Middle Western frontiers and at the same time reveals one of the most beautiful and dramatic love stories I ever have had the pleasure of witnessing on the screen.

The personnel charged with producing the epic for Radio Pictures, upon themselves the making of a picture complete to the finest detail and at the same time redolent with a loveliness of form and substance that it embellishes those who behold its unfoldment.

It would be a beautiful picture even if one should block out the elegant backgrounds, leaving only the performances of Richard Dix, the pioneer with God in his heart and guns in his belt; Irene Dunne, the Southern aristocrat who wins her hands to conquer Oklahoma; Ishai Jackson, the Negro boy who lives and dies for Dix; George Stone, the Jewish merchant who asks only the right to live, Roscoe Ates, the roaming printer who comes to stay; and of Estelle Taylor and Edna May Oliver.

And if one blotted out the characters there would be a production with a background of historical significance enthralling in its stark beauty from the sandhills in the opening scenes to the great city which time has built at the end. To attempt to give credit to any one person, whether it he Sarecky, Ruggles, Estabrook, Cronjager or anyone else, would be preposterous because of the perfection of the product in its entirety.

Dix reaches a tremendous peak in his characterization of YanKEY Cravat, the man of no past; the lawyer and editor with tolerance in his heart; the man who thrives on the dust of the high road, who carries life into the wilderness and, when civilization comes, turns to the high road again until there is none left.

Irene Dunne, as his wife, born a Virginian Venable, develops with the years through his influence into a tolerant, lovable woman who lives only to follow him over that great path which he cuts through history. Loving him as she loves life itself, she carries on during the empty years in which he heeds the call of the restless blood in his veins.

Estelle Taylor, propiress of a house of ill-repute and yet possessor of a human, understanding heart, also gives the finest portrayal of her career. Ishai Jackson, the young Negro retainer of Dix, worshipping him, idolizing him, plunges into gun fire to save Dix's son, dies with a bullet in his side, and does it with a reality which should live in film history.

George Stone, the little Jewish merchant whom Dix saves from the merciless, unreasoning torture of the town bully, comes to church as Dix preaches and asks if he may worship a gentle God with those others who have gathered beneath a gambler's tent, turned for a moment into a shrine.

Ates, the wandering printer, sets type for Dix down through the years, graying and bending with their passing—living the fiery life of his employer vicariously as he sets his type and hoping, as Miss Dunne hopes, that Dix will return to that which was a frontier but which now is a prosaic Middle Western city of streetcars, automobiles, tall buildings, law and order.

Dix, in these years, rides with Roosevelt in Cuba. He returns in time to plead successfully that Miss Taylor, branded a public nuisance and facing a jail sentence, be freed because she is not responsible for the life she leads—and because the man who first wronged her, as well as the townsfolk, are responsible.

As he weaves in and out of conventional life, he permits his boy to marry an Indian girl because they love each other. He battles for fairness in the treatment of the Osages who have been crushed and robbed by a heedless government. In this last fight, he loses a chance to be governor, but wins a place in history for his stand.

And, through these years, Miss Dunne carries on as the editor of the newspaper which bears his name and prints his Honor comes to her. She is elected senator. Old friends and new gather to pay tribute. Edna May Oliver, Stone, Ates and those others who have supported her, who have loved her, and who have loved the reckless, honest, tolerant as she has loved him, are there.

Proudly, she introduces her family—all save one, who is now only a legend.

Outside the hotel where all have gathered, a statue is being unveiled. She cannot pause for this, but must inspect the oil fields, growing, bustling and roughly romantic. These fields, developed by the restless brood, are the pioneer's last stronghold.

An ambulance call is sounded as she arrives. A worker tells her that a tube of nitroglycerin, being lowered to blast open a well, was driven out by rising gas—that it threatened the lives of scores if it struck the ground.

She tells him that the man who shot the man caught it and was crushed by it—although he averted the explosion. His name? Well, they called him "Old Yanee—."

With his wife's arms about him in the center of an oily field, Yancey Cravat dies. He dies with that old word of endearment for his wife, "Sugar," on his lips.

And, in the city, a few miles away, the statue of the pioneer is unveiled.

It is Yancey Cravat—Edward Churchill.

Hollywood.

ALOHA

"ALOHA" is the effectively handled story of a half-caste girl of the South Seas who loves a white man, marries him a child, and then takes her life because she does not feel she is worthy of him. Al Rogell's direction has whipped a splendid cast into line and December 27, 1930

has made a powerful picture of the original "Al Capone," produced by Thomas Ince in 1914.

Photography in the death scene is superb. The girl, Raquel Torres, plunges into a volcanic lava with a conviction that is exceptionally well done, the hissing of steam and the bubbling of molten lava being effectively portrayed.

Ben Lyon, as the white man who loves Miss Torres, is well cast. He is particularly effective in portraying his devotion to the woman and, at the same time, in revealing the weakness in believing insinuations that she is not all that she should be.

Miss Torres' performance is equally good. Her portrayal of the half-native, half-white girl who renounces her native life for the white man, and gives him not only her love but her wealth, is sympathetic.

Third on the list is Thelma Todd, sister of Lyon, who by her trickeries finally convinces Lyon that his girl is not what she says she is. Al Metcher has done much to make the sets realistic. Island scenes, bamboo hats and a native village are well reproduced.

Robert Edeson, playing the part of the father of the boy, Lyon, reads his lines well. The work of the others of the cast won favorable reactions from the preview audience.

The plot is convincing, not only because of its realistic ending, but because it is worked out logically from the first. It is compact and well-woven.

There was very little tendency to cling to the original script of Ince and Hawks.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

SHEER LUCK

"SHEER LUCK" turned out to be dramatic enough for the preview audience to hiss the villain, Philo McCallough, and cheer the hero, Nick Stuart. The story involved Stuart's and McCallough's attempts to win the hand of Jobyna Ralston.

Stuart plays the part of a milkman, and is assisted in his love-making by Bobby Vernon. The girl is the daughter of a wealthy man about to be elected mayor of his community, and McCallough is the suave, wealthy young man who heads a gang of crooks and cut-throats.

The picture rambles along at an entertaining rate through dancing sequences, love scenes, binding and gagging, kidnapping and unto chases and ends in a probation raid. Nick Stuart twice sacks McCallough very effectively and Vernon manages to be quite comic.

Jobyna Ralston returns to the screen after a long absence and ably handles the part assigned to her. Miss Ralston was once Harold Lloyd's leading woman and is the wife of Richard Arlen.

McCallough is a very villainous villain, and his gang of cut-throats are all good men.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

THE LOTUS LADY

If "The Lotus Lady" had been done in an entirely farcical manner it would have been an excellent, entertaining picture, but to call it to be serious detracts somewhat from its effectiveness.

The story is of a wealthy young American who goes to India to escape justice. There he meets and falls in love with a native dance hall girl, played by Fern Andra. The inevitable situations follow one after another and they are married.

Betty Francisco, the boy's two-timing sweetheart, comes to India and then he realizes he really loves Andra.

Fern Andra reads lines well but her pantomime does not attain the same height.

Betty Francisco and Lucien Prival, as the heavy, give the outstanding characterizations.

The dialogue explains much of the action and tends to slow up the tempo.

The cameraman has taken every advantage of the possibilities offered—the exterior shots of India are particularly interesting.—Louise Allen, Hollywood.

SEA DEVILS

THE production genius of Larry Darmour is quite in evidence throughout this little action-filled sea thriller, based on a story by Scott Littleton and directed by Joseph Levering. The Darmour influence is especially noted in the outstanding quality of production and showmanship methods so often neglected in this type of independently produced product.

Much is left to the imagination in telling the story, which probably accounts for its being so intensely interesting. Levering's direction is polished and demonstrates an ability to keep an audience on the edge of its seats during a preview showing.

It is rough and tumble action of mutinous cutthroats bound on a gold salvaging expedition with the captain's beautiful daughter at the center of the trouble. Some excellent underwater photography is revealed during the frenzied hunt for the lost bullion. Molly O'Day, prettier than ever, is seen as the daughter of the honest Captain and the chief cutthroat-maker with her constant refusals to the savage-like attentions of the first mate. A stowaway, Edward Burns, saves the day with his timely appearance from under cover just as the members of the crew start clubbing each other. Walter Long, as the bad man, does a fine job of the members of the cast are equal to their requirements and under the handling of Levering the film turns out to be first class material.

A word of praise may be said of the camera work, sound and settings, and the editing of "Sea Devils" is particularly fine.—Tom Hacker, Hollywood.

NO LIMIT

GEORGE MARION, JR., Viola Brothers Shore and Salisbury Field have given Clara Bow an excellent vehicle which involves gambling to work with. "No Limit" is smoothly directed and moves steadily with humor and pathos intermixed, to a clever ending.

Cameraman Victor Milner has done some exceptional work in making New York street scenes realistic and in giving Miss Bow some excellent backgrounds. Stuart Erwin, as a lumbering and dumb Swede, provides some of the laughs. Clara, as her part, is well cast. Harry Green also does effective work.

The story deals with Clara, the usherette, Erwin, who inherits a gambling resort disguised as an apartment and a Ruth Royce, and Norman Foster, a crook who eventually serves a jail sentence and goes straight for Clara. Clara, for her part, has given the use of the apartment by Erwin, a sailor, who immediately goes to sea. Clara, while he is gone, marries Foster.

The fact that the apartment is devoted to games of chance provides some unusual situations. The publicity which Miss Bow received at Calarna is brought back to the audience through lines in the play, and the audience laughs heartily. This personal touch is highly effective.

Green, as the theatre manager, gets over some good lines as the picture progresses. Foster, as the gold digging crook who falls in love with Clara, does well; never a crook, but a crook, and it gives an excellent account of himself. Thelma Todd, whose jewels are stolen, uses those eyes effectively.

The preview audience gave every indication of liking the picture immensely. The product stands out as a well directed, capably acted, and skillfully recorded product of business with action flowing in a steady stream.—Edward Churchill, Hollywood.

THE MAN WHO CAME BACK

GAYNOR AND FARRELL! Produced and distributed by Film Productions. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Stars: Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

Raoul Walsh has packed into this old story every ounce of feeling and showmanship that is possible in turning out real entertainment. It has had the disadvantage of having been done before on the screen. But it has the advantage of being a picture that is not recognizable to anyone who has ever seen the silent versions.

It is more than a program picture in many regards. It boasts of the best acting that Janet Gaynor has ever given. That to me is the finest thing about the picture. This turn in her acting is deserving of great praise.

Farrell at many times seems to be under-
HEROINE OF THE WEEK

CLAIRE BOW does her part capably in "No Limit," Paramount's excellent vehicle which makes home and pathos to reach a close ending.

THE INNOCENT FAMILY OF BROADWAY

SPARKLING dialog and clever acting combine to make this one of the finest sophisticated comedies of the new season. Fredric March, Ina Claire and Henrietta Crossman share acting honors, their work being of a brilliant character through the picture.

March, as the eccentrical son of the royal family of the stage, is at his best. There is Prey's hilarity ever minute he is on the screen. He is a comedian of high rank.

Henrietta Crosman, the proud mother to whom the stage is the supreme thing in life, gives a beautiful performance, as does Ina Claire. Mary Brian does her part.

"The Royal Family," generally understood to have been written around the Barrymore family, is in no sense a backstage picture. Rather, it presents the problems of the second and third generations in endeavoring to free themselves from the dominance of the theatre in their lives.

The picture proceeds as a comedy until the end when it takes a tragic turn in the death of the mother just before the curtain goes up on the second act of the play in which she is appearing. The daughter, ready to forsake the stage and marry a non-professional, goes on in the mother's role. The spirit of the theatre in her has won.

The picture represents an excellent job of direction.—Jay M. Shereh, New York Giv.

THE CRIMINAL CODE

COLUMBIA PICTURES and Howard Hawks, director, with the masterful assistance of Walter Huston, Phillips Holmes and Constance Cummings, have woven a remarkably fine, though lengthy, prison drama from the stage play, "Criminal Code," which was a high spot in last season's Broadway legitimate offerings.

There is no letup in the tense dramatic story of a boy who has been confined to San Quentin prison for an action on a pigeon, the skill of a brilliant and hard district attorney, played magnificently by Walter Huston, who again indicates his remarkable versatility as an actor. When an attempted jailbreak fails because of the "squeal" of a "stool pigeon," the convicts "get" the warden, and Graham (Phillips Holmes) is accused. In order to save his own political skin, the warden, who is the same district attorney of the conviction, tries to force the boy to reveal the name of the man who did the job. Graham refuses and is confined to the dungeon.

All this after the warden's daughter had fallen in love with Graham and had succeeded in persuading her father to obtain a parole for the boy. Eventually, Graham is saved through the intervention of the real murderer of the "stool," who kills the principal keeper and is himself killed by guards.

This is the bare outline of a fast moving, attention gripping drama of character, selflessness on the part of a man eager for power and a fascinating picture of the actions and reactions of men in prison, whose code of ethics and ideas of honor are portrayed as fine according to their lights.

Too much cannot be said for a cast which not only includes top star names, but is excellent down to the last man or woman. Huston, as the district attorney and then as the warden, is dramatically powerful; Phillips Holmes gives a flawless portrayal of a character which bends, straightens and comes close to breaking under the strain of six years in a prison jute mill.

Constance Cummings does well as the warden's daughter, giving her part just enough drama without overacting. De Witt Jennings as the cruel and merciless principal keeper, a part he has taken before, makes his part intensely real. Clark Marshall, playing the "stool pigeon," is conspicuous in only one scene, that in the warden's office just before he is given passage out of a knife. The manner in which he portrays helpless, cowardly fear by facial expression is noteworthy.

Boris Karloff, Mary Doran, Otto Hoffman as well as the other minor players are all decidedly capable in their respective roles.

The direction is powerful and complete, though it might have well to have added a note of humor now and again to relieve the intensity of the drama. Photography is equally fine, with several exterior and shots of the interior of the prison and the dungeon cells.

The conspicuous quality of story, cast, and adaptation, makes this run far and above the usual category of prison pictures, with a fine appeal which should be universal due to the manner in which the production has been handled. Charles S. Aronson, New York City.

THE SPIRIT OF THE SHO-GUN VAGABOND ADVENTURE SERIES NO. 18

Path-Talking

Japan is the scene of this particular motion picture voyage of Tom Terris, the "Vagabond" director. The Shinto priests parade in their fantastic dress in honor of the Sho-guns who were rulers of Japan for some 250 years. Terris takes his audience inland on what looks like a miniature of the old horse car of this country, then shoots down a winding and rapid flowing stream aboard the flat bottom boat which are expertly handled by the native oarsmen. The Japanese girls, boys, pictures in books, do their peculiar dances in the streets, and vendors of various items from dancing mice to flowers call their wares in the streets. Senace effects in the subject are excellent, which is usual with the numbers of this series. Costumes, scenery and the indication of the customs of the people of Japan, should appeal to picture audiences. Terris accompanies the picture with an interesting running fire of description.—Running time, 10 minutes.

"SEEIN' INJUNS" A WHOPEE COMEDY

Path-Talking

The youngsters probably will get a real kick and a great laugh out of this Daphne Pollard comedy, but the adults cannot be expected to get particularly enthusiastic over it. Miss Pollard plays a newly arrived Englishwoman, who pays a visit to a wild west show with her son, Harold, played by Ginger Connelly. The boy joins the Indians and the mother gets into all sorts of difficulties with the ticket taker, and a bull in the ring. There's a good deal of slap stick in the comedy, but the kid should enjoy it.

AUDIO REVIEW NO. 50

Path-Sound

Lotta Van Buren, musical instrument authority who has appeared in previous Reviews, describes the ophicleide, a forerunner of the piano, and plays a selection on it, to open this number of the Audio. "Design" is another example of the excellent camera work of Nicholas-Cavaliere, Patho photographer. He pictures the unusual pattern made by a group of dust blowers on top a large factory building. A number of flickering lights on the marquees of Broadway houses makes for an interesting picture. The Sue Hastings marionettes are amusing and colorful in a skit called "Marriage Made Easy." "Inferno" produces some remarkably fine effects in three varied numbers. Grotto, sunken caverns in the Italian Alps. The light from burning torches brings out the peculiar rock formations in weird shapes. Fireography makes this number more than fascinating. Usual appropriate music forms a good background to the Review.—Running time, 6 minutes.
J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

MY WISH FOR YOU IN 1931

As we come again to another year, I feel the urge to write each of you a personal note to express my thanks for the many kindnesses you have showered upon me in the past year. To write each of you personally would be an insurmountable task, so I am taking this means to convey my message of thanks and to express to each of you the earnest hope that you are enjoying the holiday season and that there will come to you much prosperity in the coming New Year.

Should I, in my Colyum, have said ought that could offend, I most humbly beg your pardon and assure you that it was an error of the mind and not a desire of the heart. Should I have failed to give credit where credit was due, it is but another evidence of the frailties of the human kind to which we are all heir. Let’s forgive and forget the past and go forward with renewed hopes and renewed energies for the future.

I am sure the HERALD-WORLD staff joins me in this greeting and the hope that there will come to you and yours in 1931 that future measure of happiness and prosperity which we feel sure your rightful destiny.—J. C. JENKINS.

OMAHA, NEBR.

Dear HERALD-WORLD:

We have got something we want to say to you exhibitors, so if you will draw your chairs up close and make yourselves comfortable we will proceed. If you were readers of this Colyum last spring while we were in Michigan, you will recall that we told you of the activities of the organization known as "The Copyright Bureau Association," and that this association was interesting itself in exhibitors regarding the holding-over of film for an extra day's run without writing the cinema exchange and without having this privilege embodied in the contract.

We told you that exhibitors were being penalized all the way through to as high as $1,500. You were told at that time to look out for this and to make sure that your contracts provided the exact number of days you were to play the picture, and to be sure not to exceed those days without the proper authority. We also told you that if this bureau was not already operating in your state, that it would be and that your accounts with the exchanges would be checked.

In Kansas a large number of exhibitors are listed for examination. Your state will be investigated, perhaps, and you had better get in the clear, for we now learn that this bureau is operating in Nebraska and that some settlements have already been made, and also that there is a large number listed for investigation, just how many we don't know.

We are not going to pass an opinion as to the legality of this procedure, for we are not a lawyer, but if we could be sent to the president for our opinion as to the justice of it, without having expressed our opinion, our great-great-grandchildren would be asking when they were going to let grandpa out.

We know from talking with a lot of exhibitors that the action has scrambled a lot of eggs out here, and these exhibitors are swearing vengeance, and there is already a move on foot to have the next session of the legislature of Nebraska pass a censorship bill, one that will have teeth in it. They are going to do this as a retaliatory measure. They claim that censorship will be a benefit to the small exhibitor because it will eliminate a lot of pictures they are required to play. It was suggested that passing a censorship bill might be a case of cutting off their nose to spit their face, and one exhibitor replied, "Well, our noses have been too damn long, anyhow."

When these shrillness get their necks howed, something is going to happen. Herefore, these same exhibitors have made a winning fight against with the Pudgy, and no good chance that the industry will have censorship saddled on it.

It has been a common trade practice for years that if an exhibitor wanted to hold a picture over for an extra day's run, he would, in most cases, get oral permission from the exchange to do so and he didn't know there was anything crooked about it. Some have done this without permission and without accounting to the exchange for the extra day, and this can be construed in no other way than dishonest, and for this the exhibitor is entitled to be punished. But the injustice comes in where no exception is made and where the innocent is punished with the guilty.

We have no sympathy for an exhibitor who knowingly violates his contract. We have no sympathy for a film salesman who will encourage an exhibitor to violate his contract by promising him an extra day's run on his picture not included in his contract, just to get his signature to a contract, and this has been no uncommon practice with salesmen. We have no sympathy for an exhibitor who signs contracts for more pictures than he can play. All of these things he has been warned against time and time and again.

And there's another thing, as Andy Gump says. Who knows but what some of the talking devices that are being operated over the country may not be an infringement on somebody's patent. And who knows but what some day some bureau may come along and demand an accounting, what then? You buy a patented threshing machine and you can thresh wheat for the Hoosiers or Jayhawkers, for the Badgers or Gophers, and it will be all right, but you buy a piece of music and play it without license and it is all wrong and just too bad for you.

Well, that's that, and that's all we are going to say about it at this time, except that if you want to run pictures beyond your contract dates without written permission, go ahead and run them and help yourself to the prunes. If you want to contract for more pictures than you have playdates for, go ahead and contract for them and then work yourself out of the jam. We have repeatedly warned you against these things and have tried to protect you the best we knew how, but maybe we don't know how. At least our advice hasn't helped some of you.

There is a law in Nebraska which provides that where deposits are required, the money must be placed in some Nebraska bank in escrow to remain until the completion of the contract. It also provides that each party to the contract must put up an equal amount. This being the case, it is quite likely that the proposed deposit system will not cut much of the alfalfa in Nebraska. Sounds like a good law, don't you think? What's sars for the goose ought to be sars for the gander.

We were talking with Sam Steinburg in the lobby of the hotel last night, when somebody called him on the phone and told him if he would come out to the corner of 24th and Ames streets and stand under the Christmas tree, a friend would bring him a bottle of Christmas cheer, and Sam said, "Say, what's the matter with you? Whoever heard of a Hebrew boy standing under a Christmas tree?"

Sam is awfully funny that way.

Radio Opens Laboratory for Sound and Camera Research

LeBaron Is Nominal Head of Pioneering Move—Two Producing Companies Reported Angling for “Men Without Women”—More Than Sixty Now in M G M’s Foreign Colony

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—Following in line with other motion picture producing companies and cooperating with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Radio Pictures had stepped into the field of research with an experimental laboratory to be used in the development of aids to better sound and clearer photography.

The laboratory, according to reports, will be independent of routine production and will be used solely for the materialization of ideas. Any feasible suggestion will be worked out under the direction of its author until success or failure is assured.

LeBaron to Direct Research

William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of production, will serve as the nominal head in the conduct of this pioneering research laboratory. It is his purpose to place machinery and technicians at the disposal of the studio’s would-be inventors.

The studio, LeBaron declared, already has pioneered several devices which have proved of inestimable value to production. Notable among these are the “beam” microphone developed by Carl Dreher, Radio Pictures sound director.

Angling for Play

Reports that two producing companies are angling for the film rights to “Men Without Women” by Lenore Coffee are current following the production of the play at 10 Writers’ Club under the direction of William Cowen, Miss Coffee’s husband.

Hot Dog!

Pursuing their policy of burlesquing current photoplay types in their all dog all talking comedies, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will produce “The Dog-on Foreign Legion.” Jules White and Zion Myers are the originators of the talking dogs. There will be four dog “leads” in the product, all male. Oscar, the dog-on impersonator, will play a feminine “lead.”

Set Back

Approximately $100,000 worth of genuine antiques are being used in the various scenes in George Archainbaud’s current directorial assignment, “Ladies of the Legion.” The adaptation is being done by Wallace Smith. Discerning audiences will be pleasantly surprised.

Invasion

The foreign invasion at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer grows apace, with nine more added to the colony this week. The total now is more than sixty. M G M is planning to produce one foreign picture for every English speaking product and now boasts of more foreign units than any other studio in the world. The latest group, five are from Spain, three from France and one from Mexico.

Back Again

Clara Kimball Young and Bryant Washburn, years ago stars of the first rank, are back in pictures again. Lloyd Bacon, the First National director loaned to Radio Pictures, will direct them with Dorothy Mackaill in “Kept Husbands,” which he is handling for Radio Pictures.

Too Much Dialog

Howard Estabrook, noted scenario writer, who recently completed his work on “Cimarron,” is concentrating on removing as much dialog as possible from “Madame Julie,” which he is preparing for Radio Pictures.

Mexico to Produce Spanish Pictures in Own “Hollywood”

LAREDO, TEXAS, Dec. 26.—Mexico will have a Hollywood of its own.

Construction has already been started on studios in Mexico City, within the shadow of Chapultepec, the hill on which the “West Point of Mexico” is situated. Talking pictures are to be made in the Spanish language, with Mexican stars taking the roles. The first studio is expected to be ready by April 1.

The plot for “Hollywood de Mexico” covers 8,000 square meters of ground. All buildings will be of Spanish architecture. Landscape gardening will be used to enhance the beauty of the little film metropolis, it is reported.

The Spanish pictures to be produced will be for consumption in Central and South America, Spain, Mexico and parts of the United States.

Aileen Pringle in Western

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—Aileen Pringle had a happy Christmas yesterday. She signed a contract just before the holidays with Columbia Pictures to play opposite Jack Buet in “Jaquin Murietta.” This is her first Western in years.

Rumor Automatic Shows for St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 26.—It is reported along the St. Louis radio that a number of automatic shows with a 10-cent admission charge to be operated on the chain store plan are to be installed in St. Louis and vicinity in the very near future. The Trans-Lux Corporation, headed by Courtland Smith, is behind the plan, according to the report in film circles here.

RKO “Air Theatre” at Omaha Gives 30 Minute Programs by Stage Stars

OMAHA, Dec. 26.—RKO’s RKO theatre of the air was established at 11:30 p.m., December 15, with a 30-minute broadcast by the artists of the week’s show. The program will include numbers by the RKO stars orchestra and a contest in which will be played old but popular songs. The contest will be the playing of a “mystery number,” this to be named by listeners-in on a postal card. The first 10 correct guessers will receive guest tickets to the theatre and for shows outside of Omaha guest tickets will be offered to the first 50 who guess correctly.

Gregor to Direct Spanish “Min and Bill” for MGM

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—Following completion of the German version of “Resurrection” for Universal, Arthur Gregor, well-known director, has transferred his activities to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, it was learned this week. Gregor has been assigned the task of writing the script and directing the Spanish version of “Min and Bill.” Gregor did the script on “Resurrection” and was to have directed it, but no German leading man could be found.

Caddo Offers $100 for Title for Jean Harlow

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Last week Caddo Productions offered $100 for a sobriquet for Jean Harlow, the blond star in Howard Hughes, “Hell’s Angels.” Several thousand were suggested within 24 hours. The contest will continue until March 1. The judges will be Wayne Pierson, of Caddo, Jean Harlow and Colonel Nolan, of United Artists.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 26.—John Barrimore has suffered a recurrence of jungle fever, an ailment he contracted several weeks ago while cruising in Central America. Friends report his condition is not serious.

Mabel Normand Estate Appraised at $73,835

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 26.—An appraisal filed this week reports that Mabel Normand, actress, left an estate of $73,835. Miss Normand died last February after a lengthy illness.

Report Restrictions On German Pictures

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—Information has been received from the Department of Commerce that German alloy pictures were to be restricted in Alsace-Lorraine and that the French authorities have just promulgated new regulations in Alsace-Lorraine in connection with the exhibition of talking films in German. Consequently, all German speaking films exhibited in this district must bear superimposed French subtitles every ten meters under pain of prohibition of public exhibition.

The trade press states on the other hand, that the price of superimposed titles amounts to something about 20,000 francs and that this additional charge would make the showing of German films unprofitable.

The proposition in Alsace-Lorraine is that it is clear that the German industry will resist this measure, since feature films of German dialogue had a large part of this market.

“Buddy” Rogers Operated Upon in Toledo Hospital

TOLEDO, Dec. 26.—Charles “Buddy” Rogers, motion picture star, making a personal appearance in the Toledo Paramount, was stricken with acute appendicitis early last Friday morning, several hours before his scheduled departure for Hollywood. He was removed to the General hospital, where he underwent an operation.

“Africa Speaks” Does Good Canadian Business

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—The Ottawa Journal published a special supplement for “Africa Speaks” during its engagement at the Regent theatre, Ottawa. This was followed up by the publication of a letter of thanks from Clarence Robson, Eastern manager for Famous Players Canadian Corp., in which he pointed out that “Africa Speaks” had done outstanding business in Canadian theatres.

Stars to Take Part in Rolph Inaugural Party

SACRAMENTO, CAL., Dec. 26.—Arrangements have been completed for the participation of moving picture stars in the three-day inaugural celebration for Governor-elect James Rolph, Jr. The Maskers Club, of Hollywood, made up of actors and producers, will handle this feature of the program and are expected to bring the 165-piece band of the University of Southern California.

“Hell’s Angels” Passed by Quebec Board of Censors

OTTAWA, Dec. 26.—“Hell’s Angels” was passed two months ago by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors but it has now been passed by the censors in the sister province of Quebec. The production will be presented in Hull, on the Quebec side of the river opposite to Ottawa, Ontario.

Vitaphone Varieties Celebrate Completion of 400th Picture

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Warner Brothers Eastern studio in Brooklyn is celebrating its second anniversary as the production center of Vitaphone Varieties short subjects. In that period 400 Warner one and two reelers have been turned out, with Murray Roth and the studio chiefs claiming that they have featured more Broadway stage celebrities in their shorts than any other company.

As a finish to the first two-year period, the studio has just completed “Angel Cake,” said to be the most complete and pretentious short ever turned out at the plant. It is a two-reel musical comedy affair, featuring among its importations from the Broadway legitimate the Paige Sisters, the Abbeys, Millers, and the fousomes from “Girl Crazy,” current musical hit on the big street. Also numbered among the players are, as well as the late Harold Randall and Jimmie Roy. Roy Mack of the staff directed the subject and Harold Levy wrote the special music score.

Ventriloquist in Latest Comedy

“Donkey Business” is the latest comedy to come out from the studio camera at the Brooklyn plant, and features the Warner specialty ventriloquist, Edgar Bergen. In the support are Racine Graber, Al Ochs and Charles MacArthur, Bergen’s well known dummy, Arthur Harley directed the show, which marks the third for the dummy speaker.

In preparation for shooting next week, the studio writers are completing script for a new comedy to feature Billy Jackson, George Jessel, stage and screen star, is making a new subject in which are included the Russian Choir, seen on the Broadway boards in the Vanderbilt Review and well known as radio specialists. Roy Mack also directed this one, which has not as yet received a title.

Nancy Carroll on Vacation

At the Paramount plant in Astoria, the personnel is concentrating on the present Clancy-Carr, movie, now titled “Sex in Business.” Dorothy Arzner is handling the megaphone on the feature, in which Charles Laughton, Fredric March and Ginger Rogers are featured, plus a considerable number of minor players in the cast.

Nancy Carroll, who has just finished “Stolen Heaven” at the Astoria studio, is off to Palm Beach for a vacation. She is due back in New York about January 16, to go into harness again shortly thereafter in “Up Pops the Devil,” screen version of the Broadway hit. Edmund Goulding will handle the direction. Fredric March and Charlie Ruggles will share the feature with Miss Carroll.

About January 20, Tallulah Bankhead, English legitimate star, will hit New York and the Paramount Eastern studio to begin work in “High Tide.” Cile Brook will have the lead opposite her.

Laemmle Increases U’s Budget
Three Millions for 1931 Films

Will Maintain Policy of Quality Production of Individual Pictures.

Sales President—Total Output Will Include a Few More Features, Same Number of Shorts

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 26.—Boosting Universal's budget three million dollars, Universal will expend $18,000,000 on its 1931 productions, Carl Laemmle announced today, in explaining that the company will continue its plan of dropping mass output for individual quality.

"Every picture on the new year's list will be given the finest and most accurate production possible," Laemmle stated. "There will be no stinting and no waste. We will make a concerted effort to make every dollar spent on a picture enhance its entertainment value and each picture will be budgeted individually.

Not Including Stage Unit

"Universal's product for 1930 has been consistent and of a higher standard than in preceding years. In 1931 we will make even greater advancement and our huge budget will be spent for the best stories available. The fact that Universal won three of the industry's highest awards this year is, in our judgment, and an inspiration for higher attainment during the year to come."

The $18,000,000 budget will not include the operation of a stage play producing unit in New York. No definite number of pictures for 1931 has yet been determined by Universal, but, according to Mr. Laemmle, Jr., in charge of all production, a few more pictures than this year's program are in contemplation, while short and serial production will, in all probability, remain equal to this year's schedule.

More Realism, More Comedy

"Universal will go in for realism, more comedy," he said, "and will give fair consideration to any author or playwright who has a story that might make a superior type of screen play. We are bringing a number of new personalities to the screen. To properly introduce them we are providing the best stories and productions possible."

"During the year Lewis Ayres has risen from obscurity to rank with John Boles as one of the most popular players of the screen. From the standpoints of production pictures. Genevieve Tobin has proved another real find—a very versatile artist, and Sidney Fox, Bette Davis and others who have recently arrived from the New York stage are to be given a real opportunity to win public favor by being employed to employ the talents which first brought them to our attention."

Foreign version films, in increasing number, in the Spanish, French and German languages will be made at Universal City during 1931.

Chaplin’s “City Lights” Opens in New York Feb. 1

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—“City Lights,” Charlie Chaplin’s first picture since the silent days, will have its world premiere at the George M. Cohan theatre here Feb. 1.

Chaplin has deferred a European trip to be present at the opening. The film has been nearly two years in the making and is said to have cost $1,400,000. It has sound effects, but no dialog.

SOUND REPRODUCTION

THE BLUEBOOK SCHOOL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 55

The question was: "Tell us all you know about the harm that loose connections, dirt, etc., on batteries will do. Also tell us exactly why it is not permissible to use batteries for sound amplification immediately after charging.

I AGAIN select the reply of Aubrey D. Hotaling, Orlando, Fla. Hotaling says: 'Think I covered the above quite minutely in my answer to Question No. 54, but it may do no harm to again say that for proper performance of any radio or talking picture installation requiring storage batteries, it is essential the battery be kept immaculately clean and free from dust and dirt, and that all connections be free from corrosion and that they be tight. If this is not done there will be trouble and plenty of it. The horns will tell you so, in no unmistakable terms.

The slime on a dirty battery top is a combination of electrolyte and dust, which causes leakage of current between the terminals, and has a tendency to slowly rob the battery of its available power. This leakage will become apparent to the ear in the form of crackling or frying noises in the loudspeaker, commonly known to sound engineers as surface noise.

'It is not permissible to use a storage battery for work immediately after a charge. The battery cells will continue to gas for from 30 minutes to an hour after a heavy continuous charge, and the bubbling of the electrolyte will make itself manifest in the loudspeaker. I have heard patrons remark on leaving a sound theatre that the picture was good, but there was quite a lot of static. Of course there was no static in the true sense of that term. They mistook a blundering projectionist's work for it."

NEW ADJUSTABLE SIMPLEX SHUTTER

The International Projector Corporation has developed a new shutter in which the blades are adjustable in the matter of width. It is designed for use on the Super-Simplex, or other Simplex models equipped with the rear shutter.

Examining the picture herewith presented, you will see that the improvement consists of a narrow vane, which may be rotated within the limits of the slot containing the screws, merely by loosening the aforesaid screws. The effect of such movement will, of course, be either to widen each of the two blades in equal proportion, or else to make them both more narrow, depending upon which way the vane is moved.

While this shutter is designed primarily for use in place of the regular stock Simplex rear shutter, it also may be substituted for an in-front-of-the-lens Simplex shutter by having a machinist bush the hole in the hub to fit the smaller shaft, and by constructing some sort of protective guard to prevent the fingers from coming into accidental contact with the shutter wings when it is in operation. There is no protective rim on this shutter, and while a finger coming into contact with such a shutter probably would not injure the shutter materially, it might make the finger look like a piece of badly chopped hash. Therefore DON'T use this shutter in front of the lens without a suitable protective guard.

The reason advanced for putting out this shutter is that the diameter of the light beam varies with different sizes of light source, which does not set forth the real facts. The size of the light beam at the shutter position is dependent entirely upon the size of the reflector or condenser, and its distance from the shutter. It may therefore be readily seen that there would really be considerable difference as between the diameter of a beam from a reflector type of light source using no condenser with a relatively small diameter reflector, and from a Peerless type using a large diameter condenser located relatively close to the shutter. That should be perfectly plain to you all, I think.

However, a leading Broadway projectionist with whom I was discussing this shutter said that the variation in beam width made no demands upon shutter blade width.

Such an argument has no basis in fact, for the reason that each and every pin point of a condenser or reflecting mirror sends forward to the spot, not a single ray of light, but an actual image of the light source. This image, of course, goes forward in the form of a converging beam. The images sent forward by the center of the condenser or reflector will all enter the aperture, unless the light source be a very large one. The outer zones of the condenser or reflector, however, will send forward images, which will fall partly upon the cooling plate and partly upon the aperture.

If you will study this proposition, examining Figure 38, page 168; Figure 38, page 169; and Figure 46, page 181, Volume I of your Bluebook, together with the accompanying text, I think you will understand that this Broadway projectionist is in error in his views.

However, I was just a bit amused by the reasons advanced for putting out this shutter. I have been demanding the production of exactly this sort of shutter for many years, and for exactly the same reasons—because the diameter of the light beam varies in front of the projection lens. And the proportionate variation is fully as great as it is at the rear of the aperture.
"NOISELESS RECORDING"

Western Electric System

By H. C. Silent

By regulating the density of the sound track on the recorder automatically, it is possible without distortion to increase the maximum percentage modulation applied to the film, and modulation becomes higher when we lighten the film to the point where it has the greatest possible carrying capacity. If this can be done without distorting the volume of sound reproduced by the film, then we shall have a condition where the ground noise from the film is low during periods of low sound. Thus quiet intervals in the sound will be quiet and the ground noise, even though it rises with the sound, will always be more or less drowned out by the increased sound so that there is an effect of considerably reduced ground noise.

There are a number of methods by means of which this variation in the transmission of the film can be effected. If we examine for a moment the light-valve employed in the Western Electric System of Recording, we shall see how one of these methods can be applied. In the past, this system has employed a light-valve in which two ribbons were normally spaced .001 in. apart. These ribbons were vibrated by the sound currents, but a slight distance on weak currents and a considerable distance on loud currents. The strongest currents would just bring the ribbons into contact as they vibrated. The space between them was therefore greater than necessary to permit the free vibration of the ribbons on weak currents. A sound track recorded under these conditions had a constant density corresponding to the one mil spacing between the ribbons and this density was caused to vary with the volume currents but maintained always its constant average.

Under the new system of recording an auxiliary electrical circuit is associated with the light-valve, so that when the sound currents are small the ribbons need vibrate over but a very small amplitude, they are brought close together and this small vibration almost entirely fills the space between them. Then, as the sound increases in loudness, so that the ribbons are required to vibrate with a greater amplitude, the spacing is automatically increased by the electrical circuit, so that it is always just a little more than sufficient to permit this vibration of the ribbons. This is equivalent to altering the average spacing of the ribbons, so that it is at all times proportional to the envelope of the sound currents. Now, if we regard the amount of light which passes through the average spacing of the ribbons to the film, we find that this light is considerably reduced during moments of silence or of low sounds which results in a dark sound print. As the ribbons open up for increased sound currents, the amount of light correspondingly increases and a lighter sound print results. Since the actual vibration of the ribbons under the action of the sound currents has been undisturbed in this process, the amount of change of light which reaches the film and in turn the reproducing photoelectric cell has been unaltered even though the total amount of light has been decreased. Since the amount of change of light is unaffected, there is no volume distortion on reproduced sound as a result of this method of recording.

The extent to which the light-valve ribbons may be closed during quiet intervals is necessarily limited. They must not be completely closed, because it is not possible to construct a device which can instantaneously sample the amplitude of the sound...

Heavy Advertising and Tieups at Low Cost
Keep Film Second Week in Milwaukee

Again it has been proved that a big campaign, crammed full of tieups, will do wonders for the box office.

One of the biggest and most diversified exploitation programs Milwaukee has seen in recent months, brought attendance in such proportions that the Alhambra theatre had to hold over “See America Thirst” for a second week.

Fred S. Meyer, manager of the Alhambra and Midwest director of exploitation for Universal, superintended the campaign. The engagement was advertised as the world premier. Receipts of the first showing, a midnight preview, were turned over to the Christmas fund of a local newspaper, the Wisconsin News. Stories in the paper heralded this event a week before it occurred.

In connection with the fund tieup, telegrams were sent to 20 of Milwaukee’s leading hotels two days before the premier, announcing the premier showing and stating that all proceeds from the midnight show would be turned over to the Wisconsin News Christmas fund. These wires were conspicuously displayed by the hotel management.

Factories Get Wires
Twenty-five similar wires were sent to the city’s leading industrial plants two days before the premier, also asking that they be posted on bulletin boards for employees to read. A wire from Carl Laemmle commenting favorably on the Wisconsin News Christmas fund idea was prominently displayed in every Western Union window and every one of its branch counters throughout Milwaukee. Wires from Lupe Velez, John Boles, Harry Langdon, Slim Summerville, Bessie Love and Lewis Ayres were read from the stage of the Alhambra on the night of the premier and subsequently displayed in the Western Union branches.

Advance exploitation included a cut-out in the theatre and in front of the box office capitalizing on a statement made by Mayor Daniel Hoan in which he blamed the dry laws for crime. Several signs six feet high by thirty inches wide were also displayed in the Milwaukee Auditorium at the time of the debate between Clarence Darrow and the Rev. Wilson on prohibition.

Brewing Company Gives Puzzles
Muslin lobby streamers measuring four feet by 48 feet were placed on display clear across the entire lobby of the theatre. Seven thousand “Ace High” magazines were furnished gratis which were distributed at the theatre with an advance announcement concerning the picture. Five thousand jib saw puzzles were given out with the compliments of the Schlitz Brewing Company, the only cost to the theatre being the stickers announcing the picture which were pasted on the envelopes.

Red buttons with the phrase, “Why See America Thirst?” and envelopes bearing the caption “Inside Information, An Eye-opener to the Great American Tragedy, ‘See America Thirst!’” with the name of the theatre and opening date were also distributed. These envelopes contained cork screws.

Outside advertising included fifty 24

The kind of exploitation that made them thirst to “See America Thirst” in Milwaukee. Fred S. Meyer, Western exploitation director for Universal, is the man who engineered the campaign for the Alhambra theatre, where he is manager. One view shows the front and box office, with the Stein effect. The other picture portrays a real oldtime “thirst” wagon.
George Brown, publicity director for RKO in the Midwest, had another opportunity to demonstrate his stellar exploitation ability on Pathé's "Her Man." Here he has obtained a fetching effect in block lettering on the front of the State-Lake theatre, Chicago.

News Story of Two Citizens Who Saw "Big Trail" Made Gets B. O.

William Freise, assistant manager of the Rivoli theatre, LaCrosse, Wis., in his campaign for "The Big Trail," showed some of the ingenuity which every live-wire exhibitor should have at his finger tips.

Recalling that two local citizens had told him of their visit to Hollywood during the summer and of seeing "The Big Trail" in the process of production, Freise planned a spurge for the newspapers. And what success he had! One of the papers gave more than a column of space to the story, giving complete details. The film was mentioned in the two-column headline, and the story itself announced that the picture was coming to LaCrosse.

In his letter, Freise explains another clever idea: "I enclosed please find one of the stunts we used on Harold Lloyd's 'Feet First.' It has caused a lot of comment and therefore a lot of advertising. The stunt is inexpensive and can be used anywhere.

"As you will see, we made cutouts of Lloyd and placed them at odd angles on automobiles, giving the impression that a man had been struck by the car. This makes a rather stunning flash while the automobiles are moving, as it looks as if the man had actually been hit.

"Also enclosed find a writrep I had on 'The Big Trail.' I remembered that some of the townspeople had been on a trip to Hollywood and had seen this picture filmed. All people like to talk about their travels, so I tipped off the reporter who writes the feature stories for the Sunday paper. The story was the answer."

This is the type of exploitation which goes especially well in the small town. And it certainly is not beyond the reach of the exhibitor, although they may not all have home town citizens to tell of trips to Hollywood.

Indianapolis Neighborhood Houses Give Benefit Shows

Six neighborhood theatres in Indianapolis are cooperating with the Guardians' Association of Camp Fire Girls to collect toys for needy children.

Children with either old or new toys are admitted free to Christmas parties at the houses. The theatres cooperating are the Rivoli, Strand, Savoy, Granada, Zaring and Irving.

Newsboys Get Reward

Newsboys on a San Francisco paper who were credited with giving perfect service on their routes for one week were guests at a matinee performance of "Playboy of Paris" in the St. Francis house there.

Department Store's Mail Advertising Boosts Film

When "Night Work," a department-store comedy, came to the Fox Campus theatre, Berkeley, Cal., Donald Baldwin, manager, tied up with a local department store for some effective mail advertising.

Post cards bearing information on "Night Work" and advertising a special sale of dresses were sent out to the store's private mailing list.

Incidentally, Baldwin is a new man at the Fox Campus, having been transferred from the Fox T&D in Oakland, Cal., where he was assistant manager.

William Clark with Loew

After serving nearly 10 years as director of advertising and publicity for the Libson-Heidingsfeld theatre interests in Cincinnati, William Clark, who resigned when RKO acquired the chain, has become affiliated with the Loew circuit and is directing the advertising for the Penn theatre, Pittsburgh.

Connors Helping Jobless

Bill Connors, manager of the Indiana theatre, Marion, Ind., has joined the movement for relief to the unemployed by staging a children's matinee at which articles of clothing were the admission ticket. A relief committee distributes the garments.
Two-for-One Shows Successfully Used By 2 Montreal Men

Two Montreal exhibitors successfully used the plan of offering two shows for the price of one early this month in connection with a midnight preview.

Patrons at the regular evening show were invited to stay for the midnight performance at no extra charge. This was advertised several days in advance, the idea being that the evening attraction would receive considerable advance publicity without hurting the current show.

George Rotsky, manager of the Palace, ran a double show consisting of ‘Laughter’ and ‘Morocco’. A similar arrangement was made by Joe Lightstone, manager of the Princess, where the current attraction was ‘Raffles’, then in its second week, and ‘Up the River’ came at the preview.

At both theatres the attendance took a sudden jump. Both Lightstone and Rotsky agree that the idea is worthwhile.

3 Oil City Theatres Aid Salvation Army In Helping Jobless

Three houses in Oil City, Pa., are cooperating with the Salvation Army in that city to provide aid for the needy. Matinees are given for children, at which the only admission requirement is a small quantity of food or clothing.

The theatres cooperating are the Drake, managed by M. Marle; the Latonia, directed by Fred Johnson, and the Lyric, in charge of Herman Stahl.

Johnson obtained some valuable publicity for the Latonia theatre when he offered free passes for his shows to the unemployed. The only requirement was that those receiving the passes be registered at the employment bureau.

The show tickets were placed in the hands of the head of the employment bureau, who in turn, distributed them.

Cincinnati Children Snap Photos of Lincoln Statue in Park for ‘Abraham Lincoln’

Make use of local angles on a picture, or what’s exploitation for? That is what Bill Rotsky, director of RKO publicity in Cincinnati thinks.

When ‘Abraham Lincoln’ was booked into the RKO Lyric, Dan Zinger decided to utilize a statue of Lincoln in one of the local parks for exploitation. He announced a photography contest. Children under 16 years were eligible. They were to snap the statue from odd angles to get unusual photographic effects.

Ten turkeys were given for the 10 best snapshots. The next award was 10 ducks, and the next, 10 chickens. Theatre passes to ‘Abraham Lincoln’ were given to 1,000 other boys and girls.

Children Buy Christmas Seals at Gettier’s Matinee

The Capitol theatre, Grand Island, Neb., entertained approximately 2,000 children at a Saturday morning matinee which featured the personal appearance of Santa Claus.

A local department store helped sponsor the show. Vogel Gettier, manager, gave a brief speech from the podium urging the youngsters the need of selling Christmas seals. These were sold at the door.

Envelopes Filled With Sand from ‘Morocco’ Given Patrons of Texas

A few promotion stunts well done are better than a whole bagful half finished. Take, for example, the case of I. A. Victor, publicity director for the Texas theatre, San Antonio.

He employed a couple of comparatively simple ideas for his showing of ‘Morocco’ yet they brought more box office than a lot of more elaborate campaigning might have done. Understand, we are not knocking big campaigns; we are only citing one instance where two or three clever ideas were just as effective.

Victor has a standing agreement with a number of grocery stores in his community, whereby he has the current program at his house printed on all paper bags used in these stores. This has been done for several weeks, and the popularity and drawing power of the gag has shown no signs of waning.

Another stunt brought a radio set, which was given away from the stage of the Texas to the winner of a contest.

One of the best stunts of the campaign was this: several thousand small envelopes were partially filled with sand. On the outside of each was the copy: “Sand from ‘Morocco’ where the legions of lost men and women meet and love—Gary Cooper in ‘Morocco’ with Marlene Dietrich.”

Several thousand bookmarks were distributed at the theatre along with the small envelopes of sand.

At the present time, Victor is running a classified ad contest in conjunction with a local newspaper. It’s object is to aid the unemployed in finding jobs. So far, the plan is eminently successful, it is reported.

He Has a Timetable

Endeavoring to stimulate interest in his morning matinées, Howard Conover, manager of the Imperial theatre, Montreal, publishes a timetable in his newspaper ads. The schedule gives the starting time for each feature on the program, as follows: 11 a.m., overture; 11:30, news; 11:15, cartoon; 11:28, Screen Snapshots; 11:38, comedy; 11:53, feature.

Tickets Put at Convention Headquarters Bring Box Office for Omaha Orpheum

During the first week of December, Omaha entertained a number of state conventions and L. R. Pierce, manager of the Orpheum, saw to it that his house received its due amount of the business.

Tickets were placed at the convention headquarters of each group and proper arrangements made for their distribution.

This idea will work anywhere. If the exhibitor can make the necessary contacts, he will have little trouble carrying out the idea.
You've Got to Advertise—Here's Your Help

Theatre ads gleaned from here and there. Somewhere on this page there should be at least one idea you can use. The displays are numbered in this order: 1, United Artists, Portland, Ore.; 2, Orpheum, Chicago; 3, Columbia, Louisville; 4, RKO houses, Cincinnati; 5, Fillmore and Mission, San Francisco; 6, Downtown, Detroit; 7, Rialto, Louisville; 8, Fox Fifth Avenue, Seattle; 9, State, Dayton, Ohio; 10, California, Petaluma, Cal.
One Children’s Party a Month
Is Policy of the Omaha Orpheum

The last Saturday of every month is party day for hundreds of youngsters in Omaha who come to the Paramount theatre. All juveniles whose birthdays fall in the month are given free passes to the show. This includes all under 12 years of age.

A tieup with the Omaha Herald-World, a newspaper, makes the birthday parties possible, and they get a lot of news space.

The Omaha Orpheum is also doing its share to encourage child patronage. During the week before Christmas, the theatre gave a matinee and all youngsters, as well as grown-ups, were asked to contribute whatever they could to a fund for the needy.

Through hookup with a department store, which also deals in groceries, the Orpheum had a potato matinee. Another department store tied up to sponsor an “old toy show.” For the latter, old and broken playthings were collected for poor children.

At another matinee, held on a Saturday, the Orpheum collected old macaroni boxes. These served as admission tickets and a macaroni concern financed the entire show.

Brides and Grooms
Of Kankakee Guests
At Picture’s Opening

There were blushing brides and embarrassed grooms, too, at the showing of “Our Blushing Brides” in Kankakee, Ill.

H. E. Webster, manager of the Majestic theatre, made arrangements to have all newly-wedded couples in the city attend the show. He paid a visit to the city clerk and obtained from him a list of all couples who had made application for marriage licenses. All of these people were sent tickets to see “Our Blushing Brides.” Newspapers carried several stories on this stunt.

Webster also tied up with a local furniture store for a complete window display of modern furnishings for the bride. Cutouts of Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery were used in this display, along with a number of stills. Huge cutout letters spelled out the words “Gifts for the Blushing Bride.” These were attached to ribbons and suspended from the ceiling. Window cards told the rest of the story.

Dan Stearns Ties Up with Chamber of Commerce to Give Passes to Unemployed

Dan Stearns, manager of the Willoughby theatre, Willoughby, Ohio, is helping the unemployed in his town through a hookup with the chamber of commerce.

Stearns obtained a list of the jobless from the commerce organization and has issued a pass to each of the families. This pass is good for a period of two months, on Wednesday and Saturday nights.

The Willoughby theatre was recently turned over for a benefit program. Stearns provided the program and the house and the proceeds went to the needy.

Identification Gag
In Cooperative Ad

A full page of cooperative ads in a Madison, Wis., newspaper was promoted by Charles Loewenberg, manager of the Fox Strand theatre there for “The Big Trail.”

The cooperative section was built around an identification contest. Each ad carried a cut of a film star. The face of every actor was partly obscured by a star in black ink. Cash prizes and tickets were awarded the winners. The campaign cost Loewenberg nothing but a bit of brain energy.

Each merchant’s ad carried the photograph of a wellknown star, who appeared in “The Big Trail” or had been in some other picture recently screened at the Strand.

In the center of the page layout was a display on the picture. A time limit was set for the submitting of answers to the contest. An additional plug appeared in every individual ad.

Merchants Trample Each
Other in Haste to Assist
In Theatre’s Style Show

Dick Gaston, manager of the Granada, Nufolk, Neb, seldom has trouble getting merchant cooperation in his town. The businessmen have learned that his exploitation is not solely a plug for the films but that it helps them as well.

He recently put a style show and had the merchants fairly running over each other to be first in tying up with him.

In all, Gaston obtained 115 inches of cooperative advertising on his current program, and that’s a lot of space in a town like Norfolk. The Granada theatre was mentioned in every ad and each merchant had his signature cut in his display.

Changes Showing Policy

CLEVELAND.—The R.K.O. Hippodrome here has inaugurated a new showing policy, with pictures opening hereafter on Friday instead of Saturday.

Members of a Fanchon and Marco stage troupe turned frontiersmen for exploitation of “The Big Trail” in Milwaukee. Large letters on the canvas of the covered wagon told about the Fox picture.
A Few Tunes for Your House Organ

[Use the articles below in whatever form you desire for your house organ. They may be lifted as a whole or in part and reprinted to suit your individual theatre.]

Greetings

Front Royal's newest theatre greets you with the sincerity of true friendship. It is our fervent hope that this institution may deserve your future confidence, respect and patronage by serving you with many happy hours of delightful photoplays and entertaining novelties.

Ours is the business of furnishing amusement that will make you happy by affording relief from the monotony of your daily business cares, provide wholesome and interesting diversions and to furnish you with a great playhouse where you may entertain your dearest associates in magnificent surroundings.

Only when you have enjoyed your visit to this theatre have we served our true purpose.

We dedicate this institution:
To the advancement of the art of the silent drama, which has furnished inspiration to create an edifice of such glorious magnitude.
To the great stars, idealized by a loving public.
To the producers who are constantly striving upward.
To directors responsible for productions which meet with public approval.
To writers gifted with the power to originate worthy screen stories.
To the Warren Rappahannock Company in appreciation of their efforts in bringing this new theatre to Front Royal.
To the Whitmore Lumber Company, creators of the new theatre.
To OUR FAITH IN FRONT ROYAL TO CONTINUE TO PROMOTE PROGRESS.
To these we dedicate and consecrate this newest temple of the cinema.

Even Traffic Rules Are Tied Into This Man's Exploitation

Even traffic ordinances can be made exploitation vehicles, if the right tactics are used. Manager Stewart of the Majestic Theatre, Abilene, Texas, proved this in his campaign for "Inside the Lines."

He obtained permission from the city to paint, in water colors, the words "Inside the Lines" in all reserved parking spaces throughout the city.

The coloring of the notices attracted plenty of attention. And the cost was practically nil.

Gives Indoor Parking

Free indoor parking goes with all admissions to the RKO Palace-Orpheum house in Milwaukee. Through a tieup with a nearby garage, the theatre is able to offer this service. The patron leaves his car at the garage designated, receives his check, and goes to the theatre where he has it punched by the cashier when he purchases his ticket.

Harry Dahn Promoted

Harry Dahn, manager of the Montreal Capitol, was the guest of honor at a banquet when he was promoted to district manager for Famous Players. He had been in charge of the Capitol for eight years.

Artful Postering

Lou Jones, manager of Loew's Vendome theatre, Nashville, got results with these posters for two MGM pictures. The staid art decorations are good. The candle with its shadow effect is especially impressive in the drawing of Marie Dressler for "Min and Bill."

sheets, ten of them illuminated; 500 window cards displayed in Schlitz dealers' windows; 100 hangers distributed by the theatre and displayed in soft drink parlors and 150 street car dash cards.

Tieup Brings Results

The feature tieup was in connection with the Schlitz Brewing company. Milwaukee is known as the brewery city and the Schlitz name is nationally famous, consequently this tieup was especially timely in view of the present strong drive for the return of beer.

The entire waiting room of the theatre was converted into a replica of a Palm Garden at no expense to the Alhambra. Schlitz erected a bar where beer and pretzels were served free to everybody, all of this was paid for by the brewery. The theatre's sole expense was the barmaids who were used to wait on table. Marlboro cigarettes were also furnished free to the theatre and no limit was placed on the quantity of refreshments or cigarettes.

Palms and ferns were used to give the room a real Palm Garden atmosphere and old time saloon pictures were displayed on the walls of the room. Eight tables were attended by attractive barmaids in Dutch attire. On display in the lobby of the theatre was the last bottle of beer brewed by Schlitz before prohibition. This bottle is insured by the firm for $25,000.

Get 4,000 Window Stickers

The brewery also erected a very attractive arch calling attention to the Palm Garden. They also supplied every employe of the theatre with a silk ribbon on which was printed "See America Thrift—Drink Schlitz Famous Brew." Four thousand window stickers, furnished by the Alhambra, were circulated by the brewery among their dealers who displayed them in their windows. In addition the brewery distributed souvenir buttons and colored folders to the theatre patrons, as well as 10,000 recipe books with Alhambra stickers attached.

Three candy stores gave over an entire window to the "Palm" bottles, chairs, etc., while five and ten cent stores and the toy departments of downtown stores featured camels in their displays with a card about each animal's neck reading, "A camel can go eight days without a drink—but who the heck wants to be a camel? SEE AMERICA THRIFT at the Alhambra theatre."

Drug stores displayed their own streamers reading: "Try Our Malted Milks Soon, So—SEE AMERICA THRIFT" at the Alhambra theatre." Filling stations carried muslin banners reading: "SEE AMERICA THRIFT" at the Alhambra theatre. Let us quench the thirst of your car with Wadhams 370."

Still in All Stores

Universal's special exploitation 8x10 stills were prominently displayed in jewelry stores, flower shops, cigarette and soft drink parlors and beauty shops. Every truck of the Schlitz Coca Cola company carried a 3x5 foot banner and there were 25 of their modern delivery trucks covering every part of the city at all times.

Shades of the past—a brewery wagon forty years old, was on the streets of Milwaukee throughout the first week of the exploitation and created no end of favorable comment and curiosity. The wagon was authentic to a T and succeeded in crashing several local parties with the free space as did the beer garden stunt.

A tieup was also promoted with a local pie dealer, who for a limited number of free ducats, plugged the pictures in his advertisements in the daily papers. He also had printed 1,000 cards which advertised his product and the pie and which were displayed by all dealers.

Traveling Electrician Gets 'Em

Street ballyhoo included a man equipped with an ordinary suitcase, which contained batteries and a push-button concealed in his hand. At night the lighted letters read: "See America Thrift! Alhambra," while in the day time liquid was seen to leak from the case in a suspicious manner. A placard on his back read: "I am going to See America Thrift at the Alhambra."

In addition 150 Checkers, heavy wall mounted street clock covers advertising the picture.

The outer lobby was rigged up in fine fashion during the showing of the picture. The box office proper was completely enclosed by paper mache resembling a large stein of beer. On top of the box office, right in back of the foam coming out of the stein, a lamp post was erected with Langdon hanging on one side and Summerville on the other. The lamp post was erected on a motor driven revolving table and was illuminated.

Picture Stays Second Week

Despite strong opposition and bad weather, the picture held the No. 2 spot for a second week. Working under Meyer's direction in the exploitation of the picture, and who deserve credit, were L. J. McDaniels, window displays and art work; Anne McDo-ogh, advertising and publicity; C. Werdhoff and R. Searing, revolving lamp post and canopy, and Harry Glazer, general exploitation.

The canopy itself was outstanding with large metal strips under each letter of the theatre name so that from a block away there could be seen "World Premiere Showing Universal's Keg of Fun—SEE AMERICA THRIFT." On the marquee there was erected on one side a large cutout of Langdon and on the other one of Summerville.

Flock to Second Run

Although "Dawn Patrol" had recently completed a two-weeks run at the Palace theatre. San Antonio, crowds waited in line both afternoon and evening when the picture opened for a second run in the State there. G. M. Purcell is manager of the State.

Creasey Goes to Chilliwack

Harry Creasey, assistant manager of the Capitol, Calgary, Alberta, has been named manager of the Strand in Chilliwack, B. C. Both houses are operated by Famous Players.
Here Is Another Letter Full of Ideas from "Sonny" Shepherd

Give the newspapers the right kind of publicity and they will make news out of it. That's the slogan of "Sonny" Shepherd, manager of the Bilmore theatre, Miami, and he backs up his contention by sending clippings from local papers. One of the stories is a two-column spread with the heading, "Theatre Talk Proves Costly."

Under this heading, the article goes on to explain that talk wasn't "cheap" in the Bilmore; bad acoustics made talk costly. The management went to work and expended a lot of money remodeling this situation and then the story winds up, "Talk is cheap again at the Bilmore."

Anyway, it made a clever news story. A cut, showing Manager Shepherd receiving the Exhibitors Herald-World plaque for the high grade of its sound reproduction, was run along with the story.

"Sonny" Shepherd summarizes his exploitation in a letter we think is inspiring. Read it and see for yourself:

"During my visit to Chicago last summer as part of my vacation jaunt, I spent an interesting hour or so in the Herald-World office. I shall always remember that visit.

Avoids Stereotyped Stuff

"I am attaching some clippings that show if a theatre manager gets news into his publicity articles they will get into the papers. Newspapers, I have found, like news but hate the stereotyped stories from press sheets and the like. I try to avoid that as much as possible. The stories I have inclosed will explain themselves. And I also want to say at this writing that, although I wear the same size hat as ever (for here in Miami we have cut out overhead expense, a lesson learned by staying here through the dull summers) due to the fact that I never wear one, I feel mighty proud of the Award of Merit for sound which you gave me and have quite a modernistic frame made to display it. It is quite different from the ones in your pictures of.

My house is the third in Miami to receive this award and I venture to say that none of the others have received the same amount of publicity. They may have, but I did not see it.

Must Plan Ahead, He Says

"During the last few years I have been managing colored theatres and have now graduated into the white houses, but the job is the same, always the need of planning a long time ahead and scoring plugging to draw the lines to the box office.

"I now have a neighborhood house, a nifty little place, with deluxe service, and modestly advertising that I shall succeed and that can be found anywhere. We lined the entire house with balsam wool and covered it with decorative draperies and decorative scarf, there is not a bad spot in the theatre.

"The entire staff is dressed in uniform. Even the porters are dressed in white. He sweeps the cigarette butts and trash from carpets and sidewalks regularly.

Schools Cooperate With Him

"I work with the schools and get considerable good publicity out of the school papers. I made a special price to all biology and science students for the picture 'Africa Speaks.'"

"I staged a potato matinee which went over big. I gave away over 1,500 pounds of spuds to the Salvation Army for Thanksgiving dinners. They sent me a nice letter which I am saving for another crash on the newspapers.

"I got front page mention in the largest daily by just sending a pass to a kid who was working from morning to night and making only $18 a week. The youth was supporting a family of eight. He had no money for amusements, according to the newspaper story. I immediately offered him a pass to our shows for one month. This got into the papers.

Suggests Selling Seals

"Another idea that should work well right now is a stunt to help fight tuberculosis. Stage a matinee and get all the kiddies to buy five seals each from a nurse stationed in the lobby. Let this be their admission to the show. Such matinees cost very little and they bring publicity you can't buy. Think of the men and women of tomorrow getting in the habit of helping fight T. B. And will the schools, the newspapers and the community boost you? Well, just try it and see! I have not been able to use the idea yet but plan to soon.

"I am taking a few hours off my sleep to write this, as it is pretty late. The last show has been over for a couple of hours, and I have just completed getting copy for my Christmas program already. Now I am ready to start on the New Year's exploitation.

"Many thanks for the plaque and tell the boys I saw there this summer hello from me."

Takes Over Dayton Salem

The Salem theatre, Dayton, closed for several weeks, has been taken over by W. C. Cheborough, who has installed Western Electric sound, together with other extensive improvements. The house has reopened with a split-week policy.
Children Who Stay Out of Mischief Get Free Show at Glackin’s House

More than one exhibitor has scratched his head, and maybe torn his hair, over the problem of getting and holding child patronage. The question has puzzled W. M. (Bill) Glackin, manager of the California theatre, Sacramento, Cal., but it doesn’t any longer.

At his children’s matinee, Glackin distributes miniature photographs of film stars. The youngsters save them and when they have collected 25 they are admitted to a show free. This is only one of the methods he uses to draw child attendance.

One of the most valuable stunts in a community way, we believe, which a theatre could use was the one employed by Glackin for his Hallowe’en program. Bill can tell it best himself. We reproduce his letter in full:

Children on Good Behavior

“Well, here we are again with our annual Hallowe’en matinee for children who are good on this particular night. If you remember, we started this stunt three years ago and have continued it ever since. The first year I sent you good office all the information as regards this stunt and you very kindly gave it some fine publicity with the result that other cities have taken up the idea. That was my purpose in sending it in, in the first place, for I felt of all the stunts that are pulled this is one in which SO MUCH GOOD can be accomplished for the entire city. In other words, the theatre accomplishes some really constructive work—something that is appreciated way down deep by the merchants.

“A word about how children get into this annual matinee. Other years they had to clip a pledge out of a local newspaper, fill it out and bring it to the theatre. This year I changed that. I made all children get a note from their parents or guardian, stating that they had done no harm on Hallowe’en. Some of these notes were comical, but all were sincere. By this system, the kiddies were placed on good behavior, so to speak. We admitted only those who had written evidence from their parents to show they had done nothing wrong on Hallowe’en night.

Employees Read the Notes

“We got a tremendous kick out of reading these notes. It was great. You can imagine what it was like, with all of us taking time, as the children arrived, to read their credentials from their parents and then to comment on them, etc. I never got such a kick out of anything in my life.

“Requiring the youngsters to get a note from their parents or guardian brings the stunt into the family more. The older members of the family become interested, too. It is an extremely serious matter with the children, thus the idea of being good on Hallowe’en gets over bigger.

“As I was reading some of these notes, it struck me that it would be a good idea to have some of the merchants come over and go along the line and read some of these notes and let the children see that the merchants were paying some attention to their good acts. It went over big with the businessmen and the children got a thrill out of it, too.

No Rough Hallowe’en in This City

“Through this plan, ‘ruff stuff’ on Hallowe’en has practically been eliminated in the city and we have many letters of appreciation from merchants. One was particularly enthusiastic; it was from the secretary-manager of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce.

“And did we get a crowd? Well, there were children lined up for a block on each side of the theatre, and we had to give two shows to accommodate them all.

“I want to especially call your attention to the Mono-Vee-Star photo idea, which was originated by Morgan Walsh, branch manager of Warner Brothers in San Francisco. It has gone a long way toward bringing the children back to the theatre. Every child is given one of the miniature photographs each time he comes to our house. This was our third annual Hallowe’en matinee for children.

“So, as I say, we have another year on this Hallowe’en idea, and if you can see your way clear to give it some of your valuable space, I know that a lot of good can be accomplished and a deed well done by you. Please accept my compliments of the season.”

Thanks to you, Bill, for an interesting story of a really progressive exploitation idea.
Robert Woolsey’s double entertained throngs on the streets of Corbin, Ky., for the Woolsey theatre’s showing of “Half Shot at Sunrise,” a Radio picture.

George Myers Tells His Ideas for Small Town Exploitation

“The smalltown exhibitor often has a real problem finding something unusual for his exploitation,” says George B. Myers, manager of the Kentucky theatre, Corbin, Ky.

So Myers has offered a suggestion. The suggestion is a photograph of a stunt he used for “Half Shot at Sunrise.” This is reproduced above. He obtained a man who as nearly as possible resembled Robert Woolsey, star of the film.

In army uniform, the man paraded the streets, pulling a little wagon containing a huge bottle. On the bottle were comic drawings of Wheeler and Woolsey. The ballbath man’s spectacles, his long cigar and his clowning antics attracted a lot of attention.

Myers also sends copies of some of his advertisements. He points out that the smalltown exhibitor has nothing but mats and type to work with, and for that reason is handicapped in his work on layouts. “However,” he says, if the small theatre manager will take his time and see that the printers follow his layouts, he will be able to get some attractive ad.”

San Antonio Empire Plugs
“Adios” with Hookup on Barthelmeas Dog Trophy

The Empire theatre, San Antonio, has carried out a good piece of advance exploitation on the new First National picture, “Adios,” by exhibiting in its lobby a silver trophy purported to have been donated by Richard Barthelmess, star of the film, to a San Antonio woman for first prize in a dog contest.

Barthelmess had offered the trophy for the best Chihuahua dog in the annual show of the Texas Kennel Club. Banners announced that he was donating the cup as a result of experience while making “Adios” in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico.

20 Indianapolis
Theatres Cooperate
In Matinee Benefits

Twenty neighborhood houses in Indianapolis are cooperating with the Indorsers of Photoplays in that city to sponsor apple and potato matinees. This plan is an annual affair; the first was given 11 years ago. At that time three theatres were in the hookup.

Any Kind of Vegetable

More and more houses have joined in the project each year. The matinees are not restricted to apples and potatoes. Almost any kind of vegetable serves as a pass to the show. The Salvation Army, the Welfare Society and other charity organizations aid in distribution of the food.

Society women serve as hostesses at each matinee.

Airplane Trip to Hollywood

Loew’s Palace in Indianapolis is now conducting a contest in which patrons write reviews of “Hell’s Angels.” The comments are restricted to 50 words. Tieup with a newspaper is bringing ample publicity prizes include an airplane trip to Hollywood and a tour of the United Artists studio there.

Along the line of benefit shows, the Strand in Orange, Texas, recently conducted a Sunday morning matinee at which the admission charge was one orange and one apple. The fruit was given to the Salvation Army.

20 Years Ago Was Dubious

Oliver Wallace, Veteran Organist
Recalls Those “First Days”—
10 Cents Was Too Much

Looking back some 20 years, when the installation of an organ into a moving picture theatre was unheard of, and when the idea of paying 10 cents for admission to a picture show was a grave problem among the patrons, is a most interesting pastime, according to Oliver Wallace, veteran organist, who at the present time is engaged at the Fox Broadway theatre in Portland. Comparing the early struggles of both organists and the owners of the moving picture “palaces” of those days with what is to be found in the world of amusement of today is somewhat of a revelation. Changes do occur, and the metamorphosis that has taken place in the realm of the organ as the theatre knows it is rather complete, as things go.

About that time (20 years ago), when James Clemmer was pioneer showman, announced that he would install a pipe organ in his Dream theatre in Seattle, and would raise his prices from five to ten cents, the townsfolk were truly startled. The organ, which cost the immense sum of $2,500, was the cause of some controversy with churches and churchmen. Many of the latter considered that organ music in a theatre, particularly a motion picture theatre, was nothing less than outright sacrilege. Incidentally, according to Wallace, the organ that was installed in the Dream theatre is reputed to be the first installed in any picture house in the country.

Wallace was engaged to play “Clemmer’s Folly,” as the instrument was called, but he quickly proved its worth as an aid to the theatre program, and it became very popular. In comparison with his early efforts, Wallace has but recently returned to his present location, having played in theatres in Los Angeles. One instrument on which he played cost $72,000, which compared to the cost of “Clemmer’s Folly,” gives a short story on the rise to popularity of organs among theatre patrons.

BY BOBBY MELLIN

Leon Bloom, WBBM musical director, says music is one sound element in his show creation. Therefore, all musical programs at this station must be built with numbers that best express the dominating elements of the program. Which accounts for the featuring variety in WBBM musical programs. Leon does not write much, but lets music speak for him in tones of loud praise, for who can deny the fact that from his violin emanates an alluring music.

The kind of music that changes a well known voice to "The more you hear, the more you want."

Leon Bloom

The Ashley Sisters, popular National Broadcasting Company traveling team, in the person of their Choe Frolles, are rapidly winning nationwide recognition among radio listeners for their dynamic personality and clever harmony arrangements. These beautiful girls sing many types of music, and do them well enough to please the most jaded of listeners.

These girls also cook delicious spaghetti; at least, that’s what they tell me. (I hope some time I may be tempted by a sample.)

Tom, Dick and Harry, a marvelous trio heard from the Chicago studio of the National Broadcasting Company and station WGN, are three likable chaps who can really ring a note. This station was made to me by an official of the N. B. C., who also said that their voices are adaptable to the microphones, which faithfully transmit the harmonious quality of fine voices. This accounts for their popularity and the reason they were chosen for many NBC features.

The most excellent saxophone tone heard during many of the broadcasts emanates from the instrument of Wayne King, who was featured with his orchestra at the Aragon Ballroom. The radio work of this superb saxophonist has earned him to the position of a sort of definite radio helmsman. These saxophone sounds are the foundation of Wayne’s success.

George Redman, continuity editor of the Chicago NBC studios, has another claim to fame beside the fact that at the age of twenty-five he holds one of the most coveted positions in radio today. His second bid for honors comes from the fact that a few years ago he was attached to a radio station as a substitute announcer for Bill Hay, and among his duties in this connection was that of making the announcements for a pair of character actors who have since won their way into the hearts of America’s millions under the name of Amos ‘n Andy.

George Redman

J. Paul King, popular NBC announcer whose voice is heard in every corner of the nation daily in feature NBC broadcasts, made a real bid for announcing fame in this latest feature. In this program, Jean was called upon to pronounce three tongue twisters—particularly appropriate, “inimitable,” and “indistinguishable.” If you don’t think these words are hard to say rapidly and naturally, try it out on your own vocal cords. And the fact that Jean got them through all without stuttering, he himself says, is one of his outstanding triumphs.

Joe Parsons, huss with the Chicagoans male quartet heard in NBC broadcasts, has an exciting and versatile voice of which few singers can boast. While appearing in vaudeville several years ago, Parsons was chosen from a theater by a real live lion. The lion was scheduled to appear in a trained animal act and in being transferred to the cage on the stage for a rehearsal, escaped and went roaming through the theater. Chorus girls fled to the alley in their flimsy costumes and Parsons went, via the fire escape, to the roof. After the lion was safely back in the cage, the janitor emerged from the garbage can, Joe relating—or let me think—was it Joe that was coming out of the garbage can?

New Orleans Saenger

Week Ending December 26

One of the outstanding events of the year, not only in this theatre but in the city as well, is the “Riddle Revue,” staged by Helena Stratke. It is a sparkling fantasy of dance, song, music and color, presented in the striking strains of the Navy. The Saenger Grand Orchestra, augmented to its full strength, heralds the coming of the opening curtain and to the soothing strains of the “Skater’s Waltz,” a lovely little ballet, dressed in white trimmed with snow, appear a jet black velvet curtain with only a sparkling silver crescent moon to stand out from the depths of the black. Snow is falling and the ballet gives an interpretation of the snowflakes drifting. With exceptionally well maneuvered soloists and ensembles the number comes to a fast close by forming a tableau.

The next scene is a futuristic setting in Candyland, with a queer stick candy, toy soldiers and all that sort of thing painted on the scenery. Two huge Dutch hatted candles are placed on the sides, while a mazy way of gold stars sweeps across the sky. The scene opens with a chorus of about 20 singing “If I Had a Boy (or Girl) Like You.” Quickly following this, a flock of jive Santa Clauses rush on and perform acrobatic features, which culminate in a thunder-storm

WESLEY LORD (Omaha Paramount), "There Is a Santa Claus" was the theme of his organ program. Projected on the screen during the organ concert were words for the audience to follow. The screen setting was in a blue color motif, with evergreens covered with snow as a background. A hit of verse was first offered, the initial letters of which spelled P-D-O-N-E, done as a neat advertising stunt and apparently received with open arms by Paramont, sponsored the week of the world, generally. Giving presents to the theater's permanent patrons, cut the songs in which the audience was asked to join. Because of its humorous vein, the song response from the audience was good. So the music at this week's show "sang" their presents to the ushers, to the motion picture audience, but not least, cause the request upon the screen from Mr. Lord, "Now sing me a present and make it a good one." This song was "You Can't Get Anything But Love."

MILTON CHARLES (Mastbaum Philadelphia) at the organ, which was decorated with a huge, illuminated Christmas wreath, sang and played "Hallelujah Night" and "Adante Fideles," with a stage presentation in color of the latter as the words were sung by the Mamastbaum Singing Ensemble. In the center were Milton Charles played and sang into the mike "Baby's Birthday Party." The audience was promptly a surprise and drawing aside the center of the wreath above the organ, disclosed a small girl of about three years, who "wants a present from Santa Claus" in the most appropriate Helen Kane style, singing as an encore "I Have You."

LEONARD SMITH (Avalon Chicago), who must each week be heard to be believed, played a very original and novel stunt this week. It was entitled "My Name Is Smith," with clever material and pages father Smith Brothers and Al Smith and calling himself the Songsmith. On the console of the organ in large letters in a box the length of the console the name of the audience and the words to the tune "sang "Sunnyside Up" (It's Right), "It Happened in Montgomery" the M. C. Stowe's, "I'd Kiss Waltz the T. and "Happy Days" the H. Very cleverly executed and the audience's appreciation was shown by the applause. Leonard has been at the Avalon since it first opened three years or so ago, and is more popular today than ever before. Each of his solos is originated by himself and each satisfies the audience.

LEO WEBER (San Antonio Texas) played the following song slide numbers for the Fourth Anniversary Show recently held at the Grand. Weber lead the Piano House: Dardanello, "Washington Post March," "Hallelujah, The Kiss Waltz, St Louis Blues," "Song of a Poor Man How You Darlin'," a slide preceding those selections announced Leonard Smith and featured these solos on the organ. All in all this was a clever idea of his and he put it over in the usual well liked manner.

ARTHUR GUTOW (Public Fisher Detroit) has been shifted from the Michigan this week to the Ode- ing house, and as his organ number offers "Who Lied That Lied Chords," The slide start out with "Good Evenin'" and swing into "Sweetheart of My Stud- ent Days," with a vocalist singing from the or- gan cabinet, causing the audience to look every- where except at the screen, "Make You Happy is the final song offered. The number is not up to Gutow's usually outstanding specialties.

HARVEY HAMMOND (Kansas City Midland) is the bringing up the organ music back to Kin- nas City in such a big way that the management at Loew's Midland has been called daily from patrons congratulating the theatre upon the re- turn of the feature. No orchestra or audience sin- ner have been missed downtown for two or three weeks, despite the popularity of this feature in other cities, but the Midland hopes to stage a return to favor with Harvey Hammond. Harvey has several good parodies prepared for this week, particularly one on "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Can You Remember," in order to entice the audience into warb- ling with him. He called for contributions from patrons in the way of parodies upon popular songs, the best of which he promised to use. After the show. The show fell back upon some of the real old favorites of days gone by, such as "School Days," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Swances," and "Smiles." Given a few weeks time to get folks brushed up, he should have us all singing again out here in Kansas City.

JOHNNY MITCHELL (Warner's Enrich Phila- delphia) at the organ, played several "Gold Diggers," and starts out with a parody on "Go Home and Tell Your Mother," with the boys and girls alternating on the song lyrics. This is followed by "I Remember You from Somewhere" (an old favorite here). Next comes another parody on "That's All It Takes to Make Me Happy." And still another parody called "The Gold Digger's Theme Song," the words being written with jokes and built on the tune of "Three Blind Mice." Johnny finished with the three numbers in the present time and had the audi- ence singing in perfect fashion. These numbers were: "I'm Yours," "Little Things in Life" and "Three Little Words.

JESSE CRAWFORD (New York Paramount) pre- sented his usual and profoundly in the words of an admirer, a wondrous, wondrous, wondrous, wondrous, wondrous of Organizer. Opening with "Marche Slov" as a pre- lude, Crawford then played, "Andante Contabile," "Bravado," "March of Flowers," "Maquerade," "Chaste Triple" (or the "Song of Sadness") and "Me and My Gal" with the "Marche Sloan," most difficult of all of them. Crawford does not speak to his, but a full stage scene E-Pet slide on which all the characters are superimposed takes care of this end of the role. The audience (by the amount of applause) appreciated Mr. Crawford's effort in this line of presentation, much more so in his usual type of work.

DON MILLER (Public Riviera Detroit) celebrates his birthday with the full cooperation and assistance of the audience. The organ console is fully deco- rated with ribbons and banners, on which are de- ceptively colored spots throughout the number. Against a black background is a large birthday cake capped by tall candles the slides are projected. Special lyrics open the presentation, with an off-stage voice singing and inviting the audience to join in on Don's party. "I'll Be Blue" and "Kiss Waltz" start the ball rolling, with "I'm Way Over There" and "Old Grey格格" the climax show a couple of "Those Awful Neckties" to the tune of "Loves sick like a dog" The and the singing star makes an appearance and sings "Peach of a Song" and "Maybe It's Love," showing the slide in a big way. The final number is "I Still Get a Thrill Thinking of You." The offering is unique and nicely stayed, with Miller at his best. There is no Glaubing inawful as the birthday thing is con- cerned, for Daily cake, an 8-foot bit of temptation, is on display in the lobby of the theatre, and the gifts he has actually received from his admirers will take care of most of his Christmas problems this year.

DALE YOUNG (Circle Indianapolis) presented a solo entitled "A Variety Concert," it opened with a patern on "Letters redded me every day, from certain young lady which called daily from patrons congratulating the theatre upon the re- turn of the feature. No orchestra or audience sin- ner have been missed downtown for two or three weeks, despite the popularity of this feature in other cities, but the Midland hopes to stage a return to favor with Harvey Hammond. Harvey has several good parodies prepared for this week, particularly one on "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Can You Remember," in order to entice the audience into warb- ling with him. He called for contributions from patrons in the way of parodies upon popular songs, the best of which he promised to use. After the show. The show fell back upon some of the real old favorites of days gone by, such as "School Days," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Swances," and "Smiles." Given a few weeks time to get folks brushed up, he should have us all singing again out here in Kansas City.

introduced by letters on the screen, which were played to the tune of "Gallagher and Shean." The next letter introduced Jean and Lou, a harmony team, who were also introduced orally by Dale, who informed the audience that the girls were gaining much popularity as a radio team. Then they sang "Three Little Words," accompanied on each side of the console, and a novel arrangement of "Dinah." Their beautiful voices and their exceptional singing brought them a very gratifying reception. As a finale, Dale played "Some of These Days," imitating a jazz band, while Jean played the accordion and Lou the saxophone. The audience certainly enjoyed these letter novelties like those each week, as they know they'll get something good, and it's always a surprise.

LEO WEBER (San Antonio Texas) is still pleasurable and going over in a big way at this Publix house where he is featured organist. He recently offered an original idea of his own that he entitled "Letters," which he put over in a novel way. Leo read several letters from various kinds of music lovers. In reply to these messages, Weber answered with the following as the title of each piece was flashed upon the theatre screen in the form of song slides: "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," from Samson and Delilah; "I'm Always Awe" and "This Is The Age," from I Am Blau; and last but not least "I'm Yours" for which he received a nice hand from the patrons. This wonderful organist seems better from time to time for when he tells the audience "sing" he means SING, and he gets a good response, too.

GEORGE LATCH (Hoboken, Pa.) has recently returned from an extended tour of Europe, has just been installed at this theatre as featured organist. His first solo is entitled, "And They Call It Love." Latch's fine playing and entertaining novelty pleased the audience and management so much that he was requested to be held over for a second week. Opening his special introduction, explaining the solo, and following with a popular swimming tune, called "Maybe It's Love." The balance of the program, to which the audience sang very well, consisted of "Loving You The Way I Do," "Moonlight on the Colorado," and finishing with "Here Comes the Sun."" (Robbins, No. 7.)

"Sing Something Simple"—(Harms) "Somewhere in Old Wyoming"—(Joe Morris).

"Sweetheart of My Student Days"—(Festi.) "I'm Alone Because I Love You"—(Wm. & K., No. 8.) "Kiss Waltz"—(Wm. & K.) "I'll Be Blue Thinking of You"—(Festi.) "Come to the Rockies"—(Robbins, No. 8.) "Kiss Waltz"—(Villa) "Here Comes the Sun"—(Robbins.) "I'll Be Blue Just Thinking of You Farewell." "Maybe It's Love"—(Remick.) "Betty Co-ed"—(Carl Fischer.) "Little White Lies"—(Robbins.) and Sid Borman, who is chairman of the membership committee, and who natures "Sid Says." The club meets once every month, at some chosen place, and the next dinner will be held at the Balto Gardens, where Heni Gendron holds forth with his delightful orchestra. In time, the group expects to become affiliated with the National Sheet Music Club.

Brin House to Feature Acts From Publix Circuit; to Have Pit Orchestra

(Special to the Herald-World)

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 26—L. K. Brin, operator of the Majestic theatre, local downtown house, has announced a change of policy for the theatre effective Christmas Day. At that time the theatre will feature stage acts provided by the Publix Paramount circuit, augmented by a stage and pit orchestra under the direction of Buddy Wagner of the Chicago and Carla Torrey dancing of Milwaukee.

The Majestic formerly featured Orpheum circuit vaudeville until two and one-half years ago, when Brin leased the house and installed a sound picture policy. The stage acts will come to Milwaukee from the Chicago and Orpheum circuits in the stage. The Majestic will close for three days, Dec. 22, to prepare for the inaugural opening and Brin also operates the Garden, local downtown theatre.

Brin has been responsible for a number of innovations. Milwaukee went, among others, including the introduction of sound pictures at his Garden theatre. According to Mr. Brin, the change in the trend of amusements makes the return of vaudeville and stage presentations to the Majestic necessary.
Valuable to Entire Industry

CETAINLY NO ONE THING SINCE
the advent of sound could have stimulated so many exhibitors throughout the nation towards attainment of sound perfection as had your plaque idea. Its value to the industry as a whole and especially to those theatres fortunate enough to receive the plaque, is inestimable.

We sincerely thank you and highly value its presentation to the Colonial, but I first wish to compliment the HERALD-WORLD in conceiving this splendid idea, and the great amount of benefit which has accrued through its execution.—W. B. MCDONALD, Colonial theatre, Inc., Eugene, Oregon.

Recommending—

WE JUST PLAYED DAWN PATROL (F N) the other day and want to reservedly recommend it to all exhibitors. It is quite a wonderful picture that will please and should do good business if boosted hard in advance.

It has no women, yet they will not be missed. The story tells the ruthlessness of war, its homely tragedies, great heroism; the aviation corps in face of terrific odds and risks. The story is fine, the cast is perfect, photography wonderful, sound good, dramatic approach personal. Be sure and get it.

Thelmess, Neil Hamilton, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., do fine work.

Other recent fine plays are Montana Moon (MGM), with Joan Crawford; Top Speed (F N), with Joe E. Brown's great big mouth (which can also do comic everything); The Unkoly Three (MGM), Chaney's last, which will draw: Road to Paradise (F N), Way Out West (RKO), A Great Moment (MGM), and Scarlet Pages (F N).

They Learned About Women (MGM) failed to draw. Chasing Rainbows (MGM) was a disappointment to us. We played it for best nights, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, but it flopped. Not as good as we expected. Probably a good picture once, but we got a print all chopped up, which spoiled the continuity and gave a half-finished picture. "They Learned About Women" is not a big picture. It has a poor ending and poor vaudeville acts. Sons of the Saddle (U) with Ken Maynard, who is not an all-around actor (but he can ride and shoot well) is a pretty fair picture. We tried out Universal's first comedy in Parake Forest. It's a knockout! If they have more like it, it will be grand.

Metro's Our Gang in Bear Shooters is pretty slow but went over fairly well. Metro's Colortone, Shooting Gallery, a musical toy doll act, is very pretty and pleases. Educational does not seem to give us just what we want. Match Play, a golf comedy, is fair. Bulls and Bears is fairly funny. The trouble is with their action. It is slow, and the stunts are booked up better in a slow, forced manner. Too much talk, not enough speed.

Andy Clyde is in nearly everyone, and we out here do not think Andy is a bit funny, which is just too bad for us. We wish Educational would put Lupino Lane in more of their comedies, for he is fine. People seem to like them.

Business in November took a nosedive, and we are having a hard time to get by. The three actors in the last two months to please my tastes most were Walter Huston in The Bad Man (F N), Ramon Novarro in Devil May Care (MGM), and Joe E. Brown in Top Speed (F N).

No actresses have pulled for us of late, what's the matter? Are there no drawing cards among the women anymore? Nancy Carroll is the last to register, and now that she is going in for society drama, she will cease to draw soon. I have Bebe Daniels in "Our Ritz" this week. Maybe she will bring 'em in.—PHILIP RANK, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Most of 'Em Went Over

HERE ARE A FEW PICTURES I would like to report on. Trouper Three (T). Did good business on this and everyone was pleased. Lots of laughs but too much Rex Lease singing and love-making. Border Romance (T). Very weak picture. Classed by some as the weakest talkie every played here. The Unkoly Three (MGM). Excellent and did extra good business for this week. Broadway Hooper (Col.). Seldom has a picture drawn such consistently good reports as this. Unfortunately it was not known in this territory and I did not do the business the picture warrants. Women Everywhere (Fox). Some liked it, some didn't. Would class it just as a picture and it just paid out wages.—B. R. JOHNSON, Orphenum theatre, Kerrobert, Canada.

Book Shop and Reviews!

DO PEOPLE IN THE MOTION PICTURE industry ever read a book, even a book that may contain extremely valuable information, pertaining to their own business? And what does your company, the leading periodical in the field, do to encourage them in the habit of dipping their noses between the leaves of a book?

The answer to the above are "no" and "nothing."

I read in the December number of the Journal of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, of which I am a member, a notice stating that the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. had brought out a volume No. 8 of the Harvard Business Reports containing descriptions of sixty-six (66) actual problems in the motion picture industry and the methods with which they had been met and solved. Having a soft spot in my heart for the motion picture industry (reasons too lengthy to bore you here) and being, like a goodly percentage of electrical engineers today, unemployed, thought I, I would read this volume and perhaps write a review for one of the leading papers in the field and thus turn an honest ten or twenty dollars. So I perused all of the papers available at the New York Public Library, and horror of horrors, none of them had anything that resembled, in the slightest degrees, a book column, and most of them didn't even carry advertisements of books pertaining to the industry.

How do you account for this condition? And don't you think that it is incumbent upon you and the other papers to do a little more than merely carry blurs and long trains of adjectives coupled together describing latest film production. (Golly, I bet some of those advertisement writers don't know of the existence of such books of Roget!, Thesaurus, which would help them in describing that latest pet.)

I don't know whether I will ever again be employed in the motion picture industry, but I tell you that the volume in question made intensely interesting reading. It contains some six hundred and eighty (680) pages and describes cases ranging from the economic studies made in selecting sites for prospective theatres to such subject as "marketing studies in film distribution" and "consumer advertising: motion picture.

And the book has been made possible by the financial assistance of Mr. J. P. Kennedy of the Pathe Co. Yes, verily, a prophet is not without some honor save in his own country. Yours truly.—LOUIS MACKLER, Mem A.I.E.E., 33 West 39th St., New York.

N. Y. Acoustical Concern Opens New Philadelphia Branch

A complete sales, servicing and engineering unit has been opened at 1754 Ridge avenue, Philadelphia, by Kendall and Dasseville, Inc. of New York.

The new branch office will handle acoustical equipment for Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

Twenty houses in the Comerford circuit have already contrasted for the Kendall and Dasseville equipment, while Lewen Pizar will use it in 11 of his theatres. Nine houses of the George Klein chain are to get similar improvements. Five theatres of the Ridge, Grand, Jackson, Diamond and Ritz have already been acoustically corrected by the Kendall method.

Proving again that

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD Classified Ads are the shortest and surest distance between two points—The SELLER and The BUYER.
It's too late in the day, and also, in the year, to write a Christmas Carol. For the past half hour we've been dreaming of a sandwich, a tantalizing little sheaf of dough that will dance gayly on its earthen stage before—we thought we saw one dancing through the doorway a minute ago, but we are so tangled up in this machinery that we couldn't chase it. And we're somewhat doubtful as to the efficacy of attempting to write an appropriate comment about cherubs and new years and things—of worldly interest, no doubt, but to us—we'll be back for a concluding paragraph in about fifteen minutes, unless we find that one sandwich will be lonesome.

We're back, and we'll finish this New Year's business in a hurry. We hope that throughout the year 1931 you can go out and get a delectable sandwich, a steaming cup of coffee (perchance a streaming stein of bier) and then pull at the fragrant weed—any time you feel like it.

The past year has been a pleasant one. The many acquaintances that we have made along the Row have made our weekly jaunts along that famous avenue delightful, and the verbal repasts that we have enjoyed give the year a luster that cannot be duplicated merely because another year is coming to superecede it.

Again we must commend the ushering forces of the theatres within the Loop, and if we had time to attend those located in the communities, we feel sure that the commendation would include them also. It is the courtesy that is shown by these young gentlemen, and especially the way in which they aid in alleviating the hardships that attend the wearing of overcoats. It certainly is bountiful to anyone's spirit to find that the heavy piece of tailoring is slipping up onto one's shoulders as though by magic. None of that shifting and struggling that seems to be required to get a recalcitrant muffler in place. And turning to see where the magic originated, one finds a—smiling, trim figure that bows politely and goes back to its duties.

Ernie Pickler, who has been with United Artists for the past five or six years in the capacity of salesman, special representative and manager, is now working in the city territory. Sometimes we think we'll push through the crowd of exhibitors that jam his office just to throw in a friendly "hello," but when we see him talking to them, and see the satisfied and contented expressions on their faces (he is a whale of a good salesman) we just haven't got the heart to do it.

Fred S. Meyer dropped us a pretty card from Milwaukee, and the verse on it was different, and that's saying something, but—that is what you'd expect from Fred. We won't put it into verse form, but even if it is written in a "pressric" style, you'll get the rhythm. Here it is: "The same to you. And when you awake on the first to the shouts of "Happy New Year"—add mine too." Thanks, Fred. You bet we will.

Charlie Loewenweg—we haven't written about him for so long that we're somewhat ashamed of the fact—has gotten out about the noeted little Christmas card that we've seen in a long time. At last you all know, the destinies of the Fox Strand in Madison are under his tender guidance, and although he has added a little book (with an occasional song) to his list of duties, he still had time to create a masterpiece that "admits no defeat. And if we should ever be defeated into a cut, we shall try to give you the gist of the affair, and still try to maintain some of its pristine dignity.

It's a manager's pass, sent out by the Joy Theatres corporation from its Happiness theatre. Santa Claus is president (there must be one) and for the last year, including Saturdays, Sundays and All Days, Charlie's manager, and—well, there's not much more to be said. The Happiness theatre must be all the name implied and just a little bit more.

Sono Art-World Wide's "Costello Case" is scheduled to open at the Wood's theatre sometime in the near future.

Having mentioned the Filmack company, we should also mention that an expansion is taking place, not as far as space is concerned, but in the matter of equipment. Irving Mack now has the rear room of his "suite" fixed up so that it looks almost like a printshop, with the exception that the press is bright and shiny, and the desks, in which artists are busy lettering, belle the fact, but one thing was particularly noticeable. There was a rush of business in the air.

J. Paley, who has been in the exhibiting business for—well, we won't make any conjectures, seems to have a pretty sound idea concerning so-called "bum business." And it's this. If exhibitors would only take the time to study and seek remedies, for their individual theatres, instead of wondering what the other fellow is doing, things might be different. We think it's a good thought. Jim, and he is the one, has the Empire, Imperial and Indiana, and we hope he favors us with a chat some other day.

And now,
